INTRODUCTION.

The Vedânta Sûtras of Badarâyana are contained in four Adhyâyas or books. Among the six schools of philosophy, the Vedânta is the most popular and the best studied. The Sûtras of Bâdarâyana are about 560 in number, and so concise and abstruce, that without a commentary they are hardly to be understood. It is difficult to find the connection between the successive Sûtras, merely from the Sûtras themselves. Being a work of exegetics one would expect them to give reference to the passages which are being explained; but there is hardly a single Sûtra which gives unmistakeable reference to any passage of the Upanisad. The result is that the various commentators have tried their ingenuity in finding out the passage or in imagining the text which is the subject of discussion in any particular Sûtra. That they have not been consistent even on this broad point, will be clear to any one who will study the various commentaries, the translations of which are before the public. In my opinion, the the sage Badarayana intentionally constructed the Sûtras in such a way that they may be of universal application, and may not be confined to the exposition of any particular religion or text. They contain universal principles of religion and philosophy, true for all times and ages, and not confined to the sacred literature of the Hindus alone. An interpretation of the Sûtras in this light is a desideratum.

Baladeva, the author of the Govinda Bhasya, was a follower of Sri Chaitanya, the last of the Avatâras. He wrote this commentary under the command of Lord Krisna at Vrindavana and called it Govinda Bhasya, because the Lord, as Sri Govinda, told him in a dream to compose it. It is a theistic Bhasya and in his tîkâ on it, said to be written by himself, Baladeva thus gives the guru-parampārā (or the apostolic succession) of the great teachers from the Lord Krisna down to Chaitanya.

तत्र स्क्युक्परंपरा यथा— भीकृष्यक्रादेवर्षिवादरायवसंबक्षत् । भीमष्यभीपक्षनामभोमकृहरिमाधवान् ॥ ब्रह्मोम्य जयतीर्थ भीवानसिन्धुद्यानिधीन् । भीविचानिधराजेन्द्र जयधर्मान् क्रमाह्रयम् ॥ पुक्षेत्रमम्बद्धाव्यासतीर्थां श्च संस्तुमः । तता स्क्मीपतिं भीमन्याधवेन्द्रं च मक्तितः ॥

The succession of the Gurus is as follows:-

Śri Krisna, Brahma, Narada, Badarayana, Śri Madhva, Śri Padmanabha, Nrihari, Madhava, Aksobhya, Jayatirtha, Sri Jñanasindhu, Dayanidhi, Vidyanidhi, Rajendra, Jayadharma, Purusottama, Brahmanya, Vyasatirtha, Lakemipati, Madhavendra. He had three disciples Śri Iswara, Adwaita, Nityananda, these are all teachers of the world (Jagat-gurus), we pay our reverence to these all; and lastly, to the Lord Śri Chaitanya Deva, who was the disciple of Śri Isvara, and who saved the world by the gift of the love of Śri Krisna.

As regards the history of this commentary the same glossator writes thus:—

भाष्यमेतहिर्वितं बरुदैवेन भीमता ।
भीगोविन्दनिदेशेन गैविन्दाक्यामणचतः ॥
भ्रभीत्य सर्वान् वेदान्तान् गुरोर्रुश्मीभवप्रियान् ।

भारतस्यादमनृत्तिः स्यात्युंसां यद् प्रन्यविस्तरे ।
गौविन्दभाष्ये संक्षिता टिप्यबीकियतैऽव तत् ॥
भाष्यं यस्य निदेशाद्रचितं विद्याभूवकेनेदम् ।
गौविन्दः स परमात्मा ममापि स्वस्मं करोत्वसिन् ॥
भाष्यं यस्य निदेशाद्रचितं विद्याभूवकेनेदम् ॥
भाष्यं स्वरं स परमात्मा ममापि स्वरं करोत्वसिन् ॥

Baladeva, the wise, composed this commentary under the command of Sri Govinda and hence it is called the Govinda Bhâşya. Having studied all the Vedântas from his Guru and all the Upanisads so loved by the Lord of Laksmi, one should study it after having read the Sankhya texts and the Sâstras allied to them. Having bathed and performed the morning duties, the teacher and the pupil should study this Bhâşya, reciting Sânti at the beginning and at the end. As through laziness men are not inclined to study voluminous books, therefore I have composed this concise gloss on the Govinda Bhâşya called Sûksma Tikâ. That Lord Govinda under whose command the Vidyâbhûşana (Baladeva) composed this commentary, may He help me in this my undertaking also. May the lovers of Vedânta and the worshippers of the lotus-feet of Sri Kriṣṇa have their compassion on me.

In modern times, no book is considered authoritative unless it belongs to some particular Sampradâya or school or Church. Among the Vaisnavas, four such schools are recognised as authoritative, namely, those of Rāmānuja, Madhva, Viṣṇu-Swāmī and Nimbārka, as will appear from the following extract from the same gloss:—

सम्मदायविद्दीना ये मन्त्रास्ते विफला मताः ।
स्रतः कलैः भविष्यन्ति चत्वारः सम्प्रदायनाः ॥
श्रीत्रह्मस्त्रद्भसनका वैष्णवा सितियावनाः ।
चत्वारस्ते कलैः भाव्या झुक्तले पुरुषेचमात् ॥ इति
रामानुत्रं भीः स्वीषके मध्याचार्यं चतुमु बः ।
श्रीविष्णुस्वामिनं रहो निम्बादित्यं चतुः सनः ॥

All mantras not belonging to any Sampradâya or school are considered as fruitless. Hence in this Kali age there will arise four founders of schools, namely, Śrî, Brahmâ, Rudra, and Sanaka, the four great Vaiṣṇavas, purifiers of the world. All these four will incarnate in Kali under the influence of the Supreme Lord of Utkala. Śrî inspired Râmânuja, the four-faced Brahmâ inspired Madhvâchârya. Rudra inspired Viṣṇu-Swâmì, and the four Kumâras taught through Nimbârka.

Baladeva based his commentary mainly on the teachings of these four schools of Vaisnava authors. Sri Chaitanya never wrote any commentary on the Vedanta Sûtras, nor did his immediate disciples. According to them, the Bhagavata Purana is the best commentary on the Vedanta Sûtras. Baladeva, who had written many works on 'aisnavism, and was perhaps the most learned among the followers of Sri Chaitanya, has written this theistic commentary and his explanations are in many places really an improvement upon those of his predecessors.

The text of the Baladeva Bhâsya, with the gloss called the Suksma Tikâ, was first published by Pandit Syâma Lâl Goswâmî, a descendant of Lord Nityânanda. The edition being, however, in Bengali character, is not available to the whole of India and it is intended to bring out a revised text in the Sacred Books of the Hindus series in Devanâgarî character.

This translation of the Govinda Bhasya is more in the nature of a paraphrase than a literal translation. I have not hesitated in expanding the author's arguments, and supplementing his short references by fuller quotations from the sacred texts.

THE VEDANTA-SUTRAS

WITH THE

COMMENTARY OF BALADEVA.

FIRST ADHYAYA.

FIRST PADA.

THE BLESSED KRISNA IS EVER VICTORIOUS.

We bow with reverence to the Blessed Govinda, the Faultless, the Inconceivable, the Cause of all, the True, the Self-luminous and the Infinity, the Brahman praised by Siva and others, who is worshiped in manifold forms by his devotees.

Vyšsa, the son of Satyavati, is verily Hari and is ever victorious, all-pervading and loved by His devotees. He by the rays of his Vedánta Sútras, has dispelled the darkness of ignorance and revealed the Truth of things.

During the Dvåpara age, when the Vedas were forgotton, Vienu, the Supreme Person, being invited by Brahma and other limited intelligences, incarnated Himself in the form of Kriena Dvaipayana. He restored the Vedas and divided them into four parts, and composed the Brahma Sûtras in four books, to explain the Vedas. It is so written in the Skandapurana.

Some persons of little intelligence, but wise in their own conceit, misunderstanding the sense of the Vedas, began to propound such mistaken theories as, that the Vedas teach that the performance of the ritualistic worship and sacrifices was the highest end of man; that Visnu was no Supreme entity but subordinate to Karma: that the heaven, &c., and the fruits of Karmas were eternal: that the (Jiva or) Soul and matter (or Prakriti) were independent in their activities and not subordinate to Isvara; that Brahman itself was the Jiva (or human soul), and its manifestation as Jiva was only a reflection or illusion or illusive appearance or limitation; that the wheel of birth and death is of the Jiva who was not separate from Brahman itself in pure intelligence—the Jiva being nothing but portion of Brahman called Buddhi, and that release is attained by the meditation on this truth.

All these theories have been put forward as pûrvapakes and set aside in the Vedanta Sûtras, and it is established therein that the Supreme Visnu is independent, is the Creator of all, has lordship over the whole creation, is Omniscient, is the Highest Goal of man, and is pure consciousness. The Sûtras speak about the five tattvas or eternal principles, (1) Isvara or God, (2. Jiva or Soul, (3) Prakriti or Matter, (4) Kâla or Time, and (5) Karma or Action. Of these the consciousness of Isvara is infinite, that of the Jiva is partial. However both are eternal and have knowledge, &c., and are connoted by the word 'I.' Consciousness cannot be separated from Self-Consciousness, as luminosity cannot but reveal its own form: so there is no conflict in the proposition that God is pure consciousness, and at the same time Self-Conscious.

- (1) Isvara creates the universe, entering into matter and controlling it; and He ordains the suffering and release of the souls in it, because He is Independent and All-powerful in His essential form. Though He is one, He has many aspects; though He is indivisible, He becomes the object of knowledge to the wise as having substance and attributes, and as having a form and the spirit within it; and though He is unmanifest, He becomes manifest to His seekers through pure devotion. And though He is one essence, in and out, yet He distributes Supreme bliss of His essential form to the Jivas.
- (2) Itvaturans are many and are in different conditions. They are in bondage, which consists in turning its face away from Isvara. When the Jiva turns its face towards God, then its bondage falls; and it realises the form and attributes of God. The bondage is of two kinds: that which conceals the essential nature of God, and that which hides His attributes: both kinds of bonds fall off, when the soul turns its face towards God, when there is direct vision of the Supreme.
- (3) Prakriti is the equilibrium of the three states in which matter exists, namely of Sattva or rhythm, Itajas or activity, and Tamas or stability. Other names of Prakriti are Tamas and Mâyâ. Fertilised by being glanced at by Îsvara, she is the mother of the universe in all its variety.
- (4) Kâla or time consists of three states—present, past and future; and words like 'simultaneous' and 'quick,' 'slow,' &c., are used to denote time. It is measured by seconds, minutes, hours, days, years, cycles, yugas up to Parârdha. It is in constant motion like a wheel, and is the cause of creation and destruction. It is an unintelligent substance, a jadam.

The four substences, Isvara, etc., are eternal, as says the Svetssvatara Up. VI. 13.

निस्तो निस्तानां चेतनश्चेतनानामेको बहुनां वा विश्वाति कामान् । तत् कारबं साक्ययागाविगम्यं कात्वा देवं मुख्यते सर्वपादीः ॥

"He is the Eternal among the eternals, the Thinker among thinkers, who, though one, fulfils the desires of many. He who has known that cause which is apprehended by Sánkhya (Philosophy) and Yoga (religious discipline), he is freed from all fetters."

Note.—To the same effect is the following text of the Bhalva voyas:—"Vorily the Spirit, Matter, the Souls, and the Time are eternal. The non-eternals are Prana, Sraddha, the elements and their compounds. Those which are products are non-eternal. Those which are never produced are eternal."

So also in the Chulika Upanisad (verse 5):-

गैरनाइवती सा तु बनिवी भूतमाविनी। प्रसिता सितरका च सर्वकामदुवा विभाः ।

"Prakriti is like a cow but voiceless, the creatrix of all beings, black, white and red are her colours, and she is the cow of desire, belonging to the Lord."

Being (Sat) alone was in the beginning, as we find Chhândogya Upanisad (VI. 2-1).

Though one of the eternals, the Lord is the ruler of the other three namely the Jivas, &c., as they are controlled by Him, as says the Svet. Up. VI. 16.

स विद्यक्रक्रिद्वविदात्वयोगिषः काककारा गुकी सर्वविद्यः । प्रचानक्षेत्रप्रपतिर्थे वेद्यः संसारमाक्षरियतिवन्तदेतः ॥

"He makes all, He knows all, the Self-caused, the Knower, the Maker of time, (i.e., the Destroyer of time), who assumes all qualities and knows everything, the master of nature and of man, the lord of the three qualities (guṇas), the cause of the bundage, the existence and the liberation of the world."

(5) Karma is non-intelligent and its synonyms are Adrista, fate, etc. It is beginningless, but not everlasting, because it is subject to destruction.

The last four, i.e., Jiva, Prakriti, time and fate all possess energy, because of the energy of Brahman. The power that works within them is the power of the Lord. Therefore, Brahman alone is the one that has power. Hence the texts showing that Brahman alone exists' also become harmonious; as there is no other force but that of Brahman alone. All these will be fully explained as we proceed.

The Vedanta Sûtras, or Chaturlakṣaṇi are so called, because they possess four characteristic marks or lakṣaṇas or Adhyāyas or books. As it is described in Sri Bhāgavata (Book I., Ch. VII., Verses 4 to 6), which in fact is a commentary on the Sûtras:—

"Vyasa, in his meditation, while his heart was pure, mind concentrated, spirit full of devotion, saw at first the Supreme Lord as all-pervading; and he next saw the Maya as subordinate to the Lord. He saw too the great round of Samsara and how deluded by this Maya, Jivas consider themselves as consisting of three Gunas, and not as portions of the Lord and how they fall into great calamity. He further saw means of destroying this calamity which was entire, selfiess devotion to the Supreme God. Hence Vyasa composed this Bhagavata Purana in order to teach ignorant mankind that devotion." "The Substance, the Karma, the Time, the Svabhava and the Jiva have their potencies to produce effect because of His grace—they have no power of their own, if He withdraws His energy from them."

That Bhagavata is a commentary on Brahma Sûtras is expressedly stated in Garuda, Purana, where it says:—

"The Sri Bhágavata is an explanation of Brahma Sútras. It is also the commentary of Mahábhárata. This contains as well the commentaries of Gáyatri and the Vedas. The place of Sri Bhágavata amongst the Puranas is similar to that of the Sáma Veda amongst the other Vedas."

In the First Book, the author shows that all the Vedic texts uniformly refer to Brahman and find their samanvaya (reconciliation) in Him. In the Second Book, it has been proved that there is no conflict between Vedanta and other Sastras. In the Third Book the means of attaining Brahman are described. In the Fourth Book is described the result of attaining Brahman.

As regards the Adhikari. A person, who is of tranquil mind and has the attributes of Sama, (quietude) Dama, (self-control), etc., is full of faith, is constantly engaged in good thoughts and associates with the knowers of Truth, whose heart is purified by the due discharge of all duties, religious and secular, without any idea of reward, is the Adhikari or one competent to understand and study the Sastra. Secondly, the Sambandha is the description of Brahman by this Sastra. Thirdly, the Vişaya or subject matter of this Sastra is the Sapreme Puruşa, Being, Intelligence and Bliss, whose power is infinite and inconceivable, and who possesses innumerable attributes, and who is all pure. He is the subject treated of in this Sastra. Fourthly, the necessity (prayojana) of this Sastra is to obtain realisation of the Supreme God, by the removal of all false notions that prevent that realisation.

This Sastra consists of several Adhikaranas or topics or propositions. Every proposition consists of five parts:—(1) Thesis or Visaya, (2) Doubt or Samsaya, (3) Anti-Thesis or Pûrva Paksa, (4) Synthesis or right conclusion or Siddhanta, and (5) lastly Sangati or agreement of the proposition with the other parts of the Sastra. Sangati or consistency shows that there is no conflict in what proceeds and what follows. It is of three sorts:—

(I) Consistency with the scripture called Sastra Sangati, (II) consistency with the whole book or Adhyaya Sangati, (III) consistency with the whole chapter or Pada, called Pada Sangati. Thus in the whole book of the Vedanta Satras Brahman is its main theme, it is the subject matter of discussion. Therefore, an interpretation of any passage, in order to fulfil the condition of Sastra Sangati, must not go away from the subject matter of Brahman. Secondarily, with the Adhyaya or portion of the book of the Vedanta Satra, each Adhyaya has a particular topic of its own and a passage must be interpreted consistently with the topic of that Adhyaya. Similar is the case with Pada Sangati. Besides these three sorts of Sangatis, there is a certain relation between Adhikaranas themselves. One Adhikarana leads to another through some particular association of ideas. In a Pada there are many Adhikaranas and they are not put together at hapharard. The Sangati which binds one Adhikarana with another is of six sorts:—

(1) Åksepa Sangati or objection, (2) Drisțânta or illustration, (8) Prati Drisțânta or counter-illustration, (4) drasanga Sangati or incidental illustration, (5) Utpatti Sangati or introduction, (6) Apavâda Sangati or exception. All these various kinds will be shown in their proper place in explaining these Sûtras. An Adhikarana or topic is also called Nyaya.

Adhikarana I.—The enquiry into Brahman.

The first Adhikarana or topic is that of Brahma Jijaasa or enquiry into Brahman. The Adhikarana may be shown in its five parts, thus:—

(1) Vivaya or Thesis. Brahman or God ought to be enquired into. The following texts show that Brahman ought to be enquired into. As Chhandogya Upanicad (chapter VII, 25: 1.) says:—

या वै भूमा तत् सुखं नास्ये सुकामस्ति भूमैव सुकं भूमा त्वेव वित्रिवासितव्य इति भूमानं मगवा वित्रिवास इति ॥

"The Infinite (Brahman) is bliss. There is no bliss in anything definite. Infinity only is bliss. The infinity, however, we must desire to understand."

Again it is written in the Br. Up., II. 4:5.

बात्मा वा चरे द्रवयः भ्रोतन्यो मन्तन्यो निविष्यासितन्यो मैत्रेय्यात्मने। वा चरे व्यक्तिन भवनेन मत्या विवानेनेव्छ सर्वे विवितम् ॥

"Verily, the Self is to be seen, to be heard, to be perceived, to be marked, O Maitreyi, when we see, hear, perceive, and know the Self, then all this is known."

The word Nididhyasitavya in the above, which has been translated as "to be marked" means really "to be enquired into." These two texts therefore, show that Brahman is to be enquired into.

(2) Samsaya or doubt:—But there are other texts which show that Brahman is not to be enquired into. A person who has studied the Vedas and knows the Dharma Sastra, should be enquire into Brahman? or should be not? The texts that give rise to doubt are the following:—

चपाम साममस्ता सभुमागम्म ज्योतिरविद्याम देवान ।

"We have drunk Soma and become immortal; we have attained the light, the Gods discovered"—Rig Veda VIII, 48. 3.

Again until a digratevallar: and well 'Verily the reward of those who perform the four-months ceremonies is unending, eternal.' These texts show that by drinking Soma or performing Chaturmasya ceremony, immortality and unending rewards are obtained.

- (3) (Antithesis): —Therefore, the Purvapakes or Antithesis is: 'Brahman need not be enquired into, Dharma is every thing.'
- (4) (Siddhanta):—To this, the author Badarayana replies by the first Sûtra of his Aphorisms, saying:—

श्रयातो ब्रह्मजिज्ञासा । १।१।१॥

Word meaning .— we Atha, now. wat Atah, therefore. - mg-lawrent Brahma-Jijñāsā = enquiry into Brahman.

Now therefore enquiry should be made into Brahman.—1.

BALADEVA'S COMMENTARY.

The word 'atha' means immediate sequence: 'atah' means therefore. The sense of the sûtra is that enquiry into Brahman should be made now.

The immediate sequence is the acquisition of the following qualifications. A person, who has properly studied the Vedas, who has understood their meaning in a general way, who has performed his duties in the proper stage of life or Aframa, who is truthful, &c., whose mind has been purified by such actions, who has the good fortune of coming into contact with a knower of truth, should then commence to enquire into Brahman. Why should he do so? Because he realises that all kâmyakarmas or religious duties performed for getting certain desires, produce fruits which are transitory and limited; while the Supreme Brahman, realised through knowledge, is the cause of eternal happiness, unending mental joy, and eternal true knowledge. Thus convinced, he renounces all kâmyakarmas, and enters into the enquiry and study of the Vedânta Sûtras called Chaturlakṣaṇi.

(Objection):—An objector may say, "by the mere study of the Vedas, one can understand Brahman; for the study of the Vedas means not merely parrot-like utterances of the Vedic mantras, but understanding their sense also. Therefore, there is no necessity for the study of the Vedanta Sûtras, as the study of the Vedas will refine the heart and incline the mind towards the knowledge of Brahman."

Answer:—To this we reply, true, he will have the general understanding of the senses of the Vedas; but when doubts will arise in his mind, his intellect will be clouded and his faith will be shaken. Therefore, the study of the Vedanta Sûtras is necessary, so that by proper arguments and reasoning, he may strengthen his position and be firm in his understanding.

The sense is this. The duties of one's Adrama properly performed go to refine the heart, &c. Thus they become indirectly means of attaining knowledge; as the following text shows:—

तमेत' वेदाञ्जनमन प्राह्मका विविद्यन्ति यहेन दानेन तपलाध्नाराकेन ।

'The seekers of Brahman try to know Him by the study of the Vedas, by sacrifice, by gifts, by penances, by fastings.' (Br. Up., IV. 4; 22).

The following texts show that truth, prayer and austerity are also essential qualifications:—

सत्येन क्रम्यस्तपसा क्षेत्र चात्मा सम्यन्तानेन महाचर्जेच नित्यम् ।

'This Self is to be obtained by Truth, by Penauce, by perpetual celibacy and complete knowledge '(Mund Up., III. 1; 5).

क्रयंत्रेय तु संस्थितचर् ब्राह्मको नाम संस्थः। कुर्वादम्बन्ध वा कुर्यानीको ब्राह्मक रूपस्ते ॥

'But undoubtedly a Brahmanar eaches the highest goal by reciting prayers only; whether he performs other (rites) or neglects them, he who befriends all creatures is declared to be the true Brahmana.' (Manu. II, 87).

The association with those who know Brahman (the truth) also produces Brahma-knowledge. As we see that Narada and others, by their association with Sanat Kumara and others, first came to enquire into Brahman and ultimately understood it. As says the Gita: (IV. 34).

तक्रिक् प्रक्रिपातेन परित्रकोन सेवया । उपदेश्यन्ति ते वार्ग वानिनस्तक्ववृद्यिनः ॥

'Learn thou this by discipleship, by investigation, and by service. The wise, the seems of the essence of things, will instruct thee in wisdom.'

The fruits of Kamyakarmas are transitory and non-eternal as we find from the following text:—

तचयेह कार्म जिता बोकः सीयत प्रमामामुच पुण्यक्रिता बोकः सीयते तच इहाला-नमनदुविच मजन्येताश रूप सत्वान् कामाश लोगाश सर्वेषु कोकेष्यकामचारो मक्त्यच य इहारमानमदुविच मजन्येताशस्य सत्वान् कामाशस्तेषाश सर्वेषु बोकेषु कामचारा भवति ॥

'And as here on earth, whatever has been acquired by exertion perishes, so perishes whatever is acquired for the next world by sacrifices and other good actions performed on earth. Those who depart from hence without having discovered the Self and those true desires, for them there is no freedom in all the worlds. But those who depart from hence, after having discovered the Self and those true desires, for them there is freedom in all the worlds.' (Chh. Up., VIII. 1: 6).

The Brahman is comprehended by Jñana alone and not by Karma, as says the Mundaka Upanişad:

परीश्य क्रोकान् कर्मिकतान् प्राह्मको निर्वेदमायाकारतकृतः इतेन । तक्रिकानार्ये स गुरुमेवामिगच्छेत् समित्वाचिः भोषिनं प्रदावित्रम् ॥

'Let a Brahmapa after he has examined all these worlds which are gained by works, acquire freedom from all desires. Nothing that is eternal (not made) can be gained by what is not eternal (made). Let him in order to understand this, take fuel in his hand and approach a Guru who is learned and dwells entirely in Brahman.' (Mund. Up., I. 2: 12).

The Brahman gives, moreover, undecaying and infinite happiness, as says the Taittiriya Upanişad: सार्व द्वावसकतं कहा।

'Truth, the knowledge, the infinity is Brahman.' (Tai. Up., II. 1:1).

सामन्द्रो ब्रह्मति व्यञ्जानात् । "he understood that Brahman was bliss."

The Lord possesses Eternal Knowledge and other such attributes as we learn from the following texts of the Svetasvatara Upanişad:—

न तस्य कार्यः करवं च विचते न तत् समझ्वाम्यधिकस्य हस्यते । परास्य शक्तिर्धिवयैव भ्रयते स्वामाविकी शानवस्रक्रिया च ॥ ८ ॥

"He has neither body nor sence organs; no one is found equal or superior to Him. His various powers are sung in the Vedas. His deeds of windom and deeds of strength. natural to Him." (VI-8).

सर्वेन्द्रियगुवामासं सर्वेन्द्रियविवर्जितम् । सर्व्यस्य प्रभुमीशानं सर्वस्य शरवं सुद्वत् ॥

"They know him to be the source of the power of all the senses, but Himself devoid of all senses; the Lord and Guide of all, the Great, Refuge, and Friend of all." (III. 17.)

भावप्राह्ममेगीडाच्यं भावाभावकरं दिवस् । कहासर्गकरं देवं ये विदुस्ते जहुस्ततुम् ॥

"Those who have known the God who is to be obtained by truth, whose name is the Incorporial, who is the cause of creation and destruction, the Good, the maker of the parts (that form the body), have abandoned the body." (V. 14).

He is the giver of eternal joy, as we find from the following text of the Gopala Upanisad:—

तं पीडलं ये तु यजन्ति घीरास्तेषां सुर्व शास्त्रतं नेतरेषाम् (another reading is केञ्चमजन्ति | Gopâla. Pûrvatâpani verse 5.)

"The wise who worship the Lord seated on the throne (of the heart) have the joy eternal and not the others." (Thirty two Upanisads, inandiframa Sereis p. 295.)

The worthlessness of acts performed through a motive of obtaining rewards (Kâmya Karmas) will be described in the third book.

Thus to sum up. One who has mastered the Vedas, along with their six auxiliary sciences and the Upanisads, and has obtained a general knowledge of their meaning, who through associating with the knowers of truth has acquired the faculty of discriminating between the permanent and the transitory, and is disgusted with the impermanent things of the world and wishes to know the permanent more in detail, enters into the study of the Vedanta Sûtras called the Chatur Laksani, (in order to understand in detail and more comprehensively that which he had understood in a general way before).

It is not possible here to say, that the enquiry into Brahman should be undertaken after one has acquired the knowledge of the Karma Kanda (by the study of the Pûrva Mimansa) and that one who has mastered Karma Kanda naturally enters into the enquiry of Brahman. For it is seen, that those who do not associate with the good, and are deprived of the benefit of their company, are not found to enquire into Brahman; while on the contrary those who do not know Karma Kanda, but who are purified by truthfulness, prayer, &c., and have the merit of associating with the good, naturally enter into such enquiry. Nor is it right to say that, the sequence alluded to by the word Atha, refers to the acquisition of the four qualifications, (namely, the right discrimination, right dispassion, right conduct and right earnestness to know Brahman). For these four qualifications are impossible to get prior to the association with the holy; and it is well-known that these come after such association with the holy, and after getting (knowledge) and teaching from them: for then these qualifications (Viveka, Vairagya, Sat Sampatti and Mumuksuttva) arise in man.

Those who have acquired such knowledge, by associating with good people, and who are devoted to their teacher, are divided into the three classess called Sanistha, &c. The Sanistha or devoted is he who performs all acts with zeal and faith (Nişthā). The higher devotee or the Parinisthita is he who performs all works, merely for the sake of the good of humanity (and as an example to others). The third class is the dispassionate sage, ever immersed in meditation; uninfluenced by any thing. All these reach the Supreme Brahman, through Divine wisdom, according to their nature; all this will be made clear further on.

But says an objector: -- "the word 'atha' is a term denoting auspiciousness, for says a Smriti:-" The words Om and Atha came out of the throat of Brahma in the beginning, hence both these are auspicious words." "All good men employ these words in the beginning of every Scripture, in order to destroy all obstacles." To this we reply, "it is not so." There can be no apprehension of danger to the Lord (and the Vedanta Sûtras being the production of the Lord in His incarnation as Vyasa, are not open to any adverse obstacles). That Vyasa is the Lord incarnate, we learn from the following text:--" Know that Krisna Dvaipayana Vyasa is the Lord Nârâyana Himself." Still he has employed the word 'atha,' as the first word of the Sûtras, because it is an auspicious term inherently, as the sound of a conch shell is naturally auspicious. Therefore, if it denotes auspiciousness here, there is no harm. The author has followed in it the usage of ordinary people. Therefore, a person whose heart is purified, by the performance of Niskama Karmas, and by Sat Sanga or association with holy men, and by being taught by them, should enter into an enquiry into Brahman.

Adhikarana II.—Brahman defined.

Objection: —An objector says:—"the word 'bhûmâ' is applied in the Chh. Up. (VIII. 23: 1.) to Jiva or Soul"

या वै भूमा तत् सुवं नारपे सुवामित भूमैव सुवं भूमा खेव विश्विश्वासितव्य इति भूमानं भगवो विश्विश्वास इति यत्र नान्यरप्रयति नान्यरकृषोति नान्यद्विज्ञानाति स भूमाऽप यत्रान्यरप्रयत्यन्यरकृषोत्यन्यद्विज्ञानाति तद्वरं या वै भूमातद्वृत्वय्य यद्वरं तन्मर्थेश्च स भगवः करिमव् प्रविश्वित इति स्वे महिद्धि यदि वान महिद्योति ॥ १ ॥

"The Infinity (bhûman) is bliss. There is no bliss in anything finite. Infinity only is bliss. This Infinity, however, we must desire to understand. Sir, I desire to understand it." "Where one sees nothing else, hears nothing else, that is the Infinite. Where one sees something else, hears something else, that is the finite. The Infinite is immortal, the finite is mortal."

Because the context of that chapter shows that the Jiva is the topic of discussion there. As this 'Bhûmâ' is to be enquired into and as the first Sûtra refers to this text of the Chhândogya Upanisad, therefore Brahman of the first Sûtra must refer to the individual soul and not to Brahman.

Note:—The full text of the Bhûmā passage is given below in order to understand the full argument of the Půrvapakşin who says that the word bhûmā refers to the jiva and not to the Supreme Spirit.

प्राची वा प्राशाया भूयान्यथा वा परा नामा समर्थिता प्रवम्हमन् प्राचे सर्वछ समर्थितं प्राचा प्राचेन याति प्राचा भावं ब्हाति प्राचाय ब्हाति प्राचो ह पिता प्राचो माता प्राचो भाता प्राचा प्रश्चा प्राच प्राचार्यं प्राचो माह्यकः ॥ १॥ स यदि पितरं वा मातरं वा भातरं वा स्वसारं वाचार्यं वा माह्यकं वा किम्बद् भूशमिव प्रत्याह विक्शवा-अतीत्येवनमाहुः पितृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि स्वसृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि स्वसृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि स्वसृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वै त्वमसि मातृहा वे त्वमसि मातृ

Spirit (Prana) is better than hope. As the spokes of a wheel hold to the nave, so does all this (beginning with name and ending in hope) hold to Spirit. That Spirit moves by the Spirit, it gives Spirit to the Spirit. Father means Spirit, mother Spirit, brother Spirit, sister Spirit, tutor Spirit, Brahmana Spirit.

For if one mays any thing unbecoming to a father, mother, brother, sister, tutor or Brahmana then people may, Shame on thee! Thou hast offended father, mother, brother, sister, tutor or a Brahmana.

But, if after the spirit has departed from them, one shows them together with a poker, and burns them to pieces, no one would say. 'Thou offendest thy father, mother, brother, sister, tutor or a Brahmana.

'Spirit then is all this. He who sees this, perceives this and understands this, becomes an Atividin. If people say to such a man Thou art an Atividin, he may say, I am an Atividin; he need not deny it.'

Similarly the text, "Atmavare Drastavya," 'Self must be seen.' The word Atma refers to the individual soul, and not to God. The context there also shows that the individual soul is referred to. Because we find it stated there, 'Not for the sake of wife, is the wife dear but for the sake of the Self the wife is dear.'

Note. - The full text is given below :-

'And he said: 'Verily, a husband is not dear, that you may love the husband; but that you may love the Self, therefore a husband is dear.'

'Verily, a wife is not dear, that you may love the wife; but that you may love the Self, therefore a wife is dear.'

'Verily, sons are not dear, that you may love the sons; but that you may love the Self, therefore sons are dear.'

'Verily, wealth is not dear, that you may love wealth; but that you may love the Self, therefore, wealth is dear.'

'Verily, the Brahmana class is not dear, that you may love the Brahmana class; but that you may love the Self, therefore the Brahmana class is dear.'

'Verily, the Kaatriya class is not dear, that you may love the Kaatriya class; but that you may love the Self, therefore the Kaatriya class is dear.'

'Verily, the worlds are not dear, that you may love the world, but that you may love the Self, therefore the worlds are dear.'

'Verily, the Devas are not dear, you that may love them; but that you may love the Self, therefore the Devas are dear.'

'Verily, creatures are not dear, that you may love the creatures; but that you may love the Self, therefore creatures are dear.'

'Verily, every thing is not dear, that you may love every thing; but that you may love the Self, therefore every thing is dear.'

'Verily, the Self is to be seen, to be heard, to be perceived, to be marked, O Maitreyi! When we see, hear, perceive, and know the Self, then all this is known.'

Moreover the word Brahman has several meanings, according to lexicographers. It means any thing big, the Brâhmanical caste, the lotusseated Brahma and the Vedas. Therefore, when the first sûtra says that Brahman should be enquired into, the doubt arises does it mean something big that should be enquired into? or the Brâhmanical caste should be enquired into, or the lotus-seated Brahma must be enquired into or the Vedas?

(Answer):—To remove this doubt the next sûtra has been formulated by Badarayana. It is based on the following verse of the Taittfriya Upanisad:—

भृतुर्वे वार्यकः । वर्ष्यं पितरमुपससार । प्रधीदि भगवो महोति । तस्मा पत-स्त्रोबाच । वर्षं मानं वश्वः भोषं मना वार्षमिति । तश्च होबाच । यता वा हमानि भृतावि स्नावनी । वेन जातानि जीवन्ति । यस यन्यभिसंविदान्ति । तक्किकासस्य । तदुन्द्रोति ।

- "Bhrigu went to his father Varuna, saying: 'Sir, teach me Brahman.' He told him this, wis... Food, breath, the eye, ear, mind, speech."
- "Then he said again to him: 'That from whence these beings are born, that by which, when born, they live, that into Which they enter at their death, try to know that: that is Brahman."

(Doubt):—Now the doubt arises. Is the Brahman that is to be enquired into Jiva (individual soul) or Isvara (Clod)?

(Pursapaksha):--The Brahman is Jiva (individual soul) because we find in that very Taittiriya Upanishad the following:-

विद्यानं ब्रह्म वेह्नेद् तस्माञ्चेच प्रमाचति । शरीरे पायानो हित्वा सर्वान् कामान् समस्तत इति ।

"If a man knows understanding (vijilana) as Brahman and if he does not swerve from it, he leaves all evils behind in the body, and all his wishes." (Taitt. Up. II. 5.).

Here the word Branman is applied to vijāāna, which is a name of the Jiva; and that very text also shows that this vijāāna is to be meditated upon. And moreover a Jiva may acquire the power of creation, by the suprame force of some invisible cause.

(Siddhanta):—To this doubt and purvapakes the next sutra gives answer by describing the peculiar attributes of Brahman who is the topic of discussion of the Vedanta Sutras.

SÛTRA I. 1. 2.

जन्माचस्य यतः । १ ।१ । २ ॥

बल Janma, birth. चारि Adi, and the rest, i e., sustenance and dissolution. वस्य Asya, of this (universe). वतः Yataḥ, from whom; from what Lord.

Note.—The Sangati is akpepiki.

2.—He, from whom proceeds the creation, preservation, and reconstruction of the universe, is Brahman—2.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'janmadi' of the sûtra is a Bahu-brhi compound of the kind, called 'Tat gûna sam vijñana.' It literally means creation, maintenance, &c. The word "&c." includes preservation and destruction. The word 'asya' means of this: namely, these fourteen planes or 'lokas,' peopled by the various jivas beginning with the highest Brahma and ending with the humblest grass, where the souls enjoy or suffer the rewards or punishment of their actions: this mysterious universe whose deeper depths, no human intellect can fathom; this wonderful world of strange construction. The word 'yatah' means "from whom:" namely, from that Supreme God, whose power is inconceiveable, who Himself is the agent of creation as well as the material cause, from whom proceeds this universe, He is Brahman. He is the subject to be enquired into by the Vedanta Sûtras.

The words 'bhûmâ' and 'âtmâ' principally apply to the Supreme Lord, because both etymologically mean 'all-pervading.' This will be fully explained in Bhûmâdhikaraṇa (I. 3:7.) and in Vâkya Anvaya Adhikaraṇa (I. 4:19.). Therefore the word Brahman applies only to God, as it denotes the possession of unlimited and unsurpassed attributes, and is valid only with regard to God, (who is the Lord of creation and destruction).

In the Vedas the word Brahman means, "in whom all the attributes reach to the infinity." Brahman primarily means Supreme God; secondarily, the word applies to those beings other than God, because they also manifest some of the god-like qualities. Thus as the word king may be applied in its secondary sense to the servants of the crown. So God alone, who is the ocean of compassion and love towards his devotees, should be the object of enquiry, in order to get release, by all beings who are searched by the three-fold sorrows of existence and are panting to obtain peace. Therefore, the object of enquiry is the Supreme Being only called Para Brahman. Nor can we say that these attributes are superimposed on Brahman, and that consequently the Jiva may be called Brahman in the sûtra. Therefore, even according to the literal meaning of the word Brahman, namely, 'He in whom all the attributes reach to infinity,' this term is applied to God and not to Jiva, (for etymologically the word Brahman cannot be applied to man).

The word 'jijñasa' means 'the desire to know, to acquire jñana,' Jñana is of two sorts: (1) direct or intuitive (2) indirect or inferential.

As we know from the śruti : 'Vijnsya Prajnam Kurvita' 'Having known Him, let him practice meditation' (Br. Up. IV 4: 2.). Here vijnaya refers to indirect knowledge. Prajñam is direct or intuitive knowledge. The first is merely the gateway, while Prajnam or meditation is the direct means of acquiring knowledge. It will be explained more fully Knowledge of one's own individual self is a great help in further on. obtaining a knowledge of Brahman. Hence the sruti teaches: 'Know the understanding (Jiva) as Brahman.' He who knows himself is on the high road to the knowledge of the Supreme Self. The text 'know the understanding (Jiva) as Brahman' does not mean that Jiva is Brahman. because it is clearly established in this distra that the Jiva is separate from Brahman. Thus see sûtras I. 1:16, I. 1:17, I. 3:5, I. 3:21, I. 3: 41. These five sûtras explain that Brahman is separate from Jiva. Even in the state of release, the Jiva is never one with Brahman, but remains separate from him, as will be explained later on.

An Important maxim of Interpretation.

In interpreting a text there are certain maxims to be observed. One of those is laid down in the following verse:—

उपक्रमापसंदारावस्थाताञ्चर्वता प्रक्रम् । पर्यवादोऽपपचीच किन्नं तात्वर्ये निर्वये ॥

"The beginning (upakrama), the conclusion (upakamhāra), the repetition (abhyāsa), populiarity (apārvatā), the object (phalam), the explanation of purpose (arthavāda) and suitableness (upapatti) are the six indeations, by means of which the purport of a doubtful text may be arrived at."

Applying all these six marks of interpretation to Upanisad texts, we find that they all lead to the conclusion that Jiva is different from Brahman. As we find in the Svetasvatara Upanisad (IV. 6:7.):

द्वा सुपर्का समुजा सकाया समानं वृक्षं परिचरवजाते । तथारम्यः पिज्यसं स्वाह्यस्य-नसक्यां अभवाकशीति ॥ ६ ॥ समाने वृक्षे पुरुषो निमग्नोऽनीशया शोषति मुद्धमानः । जवः यदा पृद्यसम्बन्धीशमस्य महिमानमिति बीतशोकः ॥ ७ ॥

"Two birds inseperable friends cling to the same tree. One of them eats the sweet fruits, the other looks at it without eating.

"On the same tree a man sits grieving, immersed, bewildered, by his own impotence (anisa). But when he sees the other Lord (isa) contented, and knows His glory, then his grief passes away."

Now in these two verses the upakrama or the opening words are two birds (showing there is duality and not monism); the conclusion or upasamhāra is anyam Isam "the other who is the Lord" (which shows that the Lord is anyam or different from jiva), the repetition is "the other looks on without eating;" and "when he sees the other lord; ' the apurvatā or peculiarity consists in this that the difference between man and God could not have been known but through the sastras, and this passage teaches such difference; a fact which could not have been known but through revelation. The object (Phalam) is "his grief passes away." Arthavada is "He who knows his glory," while suitableness is "one remains without eating."

Thus applying all these six marks to the above passage of the Svetādvatara Upanisad, we come to the conclusion that the druti in all its parts, teaches difference between Jiva and Brahman. The same maxim may be applied to other texts also.

(Objection):—An objector says that the object of every sastra is to teach something which is not known; and the knowledge of which leads to some great result. Therefore, the sastra teaches the unity of Jiva and Brahman. For what was the necessity of teaching that the Jiva and Brahman are two separate Beings, when every one knows it by his ordinary consciousness and such a knowledge is of no great use. Therefore, Adwaits or the ideal Monism is the reel doctrine taught in this sastra, and not Theism or Dwaits. Therefore, the verses that describe the difference between the Jiva and Brahman are merely the reassertion of a well-known popular fact, and not a teaching of something rare and unknown.

(Answer):—To this objection we say, that there is no force in this argument, for there are other verses also in the Upanisads which show the same duality or difference between Jiva and Brahman. Thus in Svetāsvatara Upanisad (I. 6.):

सर्वाजीये सर्वसंस्ये वृद्ते तस्मिन् इंसी श्वान्यते महायके । पृथमासानं प्रेरितारम्य सत्वा ज्ञास्ततस्तेनासृतस्यमेति ॥ ६ ॥

"When he sees himself as different from the Lord of the world, then he is blest by Him, then he gets immortality."

Moreover the whole world knows generalically that man is different from God, yet it does not know that man and God are differentiated from each other by having contrary attributes. (One is almighty, the other is of limited capacity; one being all-pervading, the other is atomic; one being controller, the other is controlled). (Nor does this world know by mere common sense, unillumined by revelation, that the Jiva and Brahman, though possessing these diametrically opposite attributes, yet have a certain co-relation to each other). Therefore, arises the necessity of teaching Dwaita, while adwaita is something inconceivable, even according to its expounders; and so is not a true doctrine. It is a non-entity like the horn of a hare. The adwaits is a state of no fruitions the holders of this theory maintain that the soul in release is in absolute isolation. And since the adwaitins do not acknowledge the existence of conciousness in the state of moksa, that state is as good as non-existent.

Those few texts of the Upanishads which apparently teach an adwaita doctrine, have been construed by the author, Bêdarâyans, himself in a dwaita sense. He explains the phrase that 'everything is Brahman' in the sense that everything is under the control of Brahman and pervaded by Him. This would be explained fully later on. The same view is taught by the author in the sûtra I. 1:30.

Adhikarana III.—Scripture is the source of God-knowledge.

(Vienga):—Now the author wants to teach that the Supreme Lord, who is the preserver, destroyer and creator of this universe, is not to be thought out by the intellect alone, but being inconceivable is understood by the Vedanta revelation; and not by any argumentation, but by intuition. We find the following texts of Goptla Pûrva Tâpani Upanisad:"—

सिव्यानम्बरपाय इच्चायाक्तिश्कारिये। नमा वेदान्तवेद्याय गुरवे दुविसाहिके ॥

"Salutation to Krispa who is true Being, All-intelligence and Eternal Bliss, who is the Saviour of everything, who is known by the Vedanta alone, who is the Supreme Teacher and who is the witness of Buddhi."

Again, in the Br. Up. (111. 9: 26.):-

तं स्वीपनिष्यं पुरुषं पृष्कामि ।

"I now ask thee about that person who is taught in the Upaniaad."

(Doubt):—Now arises the doubt: Is the Lord who is to be adored, as the saviour, known by inference or by revelation (Upanişad) alone?

(Pûrvapakea):—The Philosopher Gautama and others of his school hold that God can be known by inference, and they take their stand on the word 'mantavya' (to be reasoned out), as is used in the śruti "ATMAVÂRE MANTAVYA" (Br. Up. IV. 5.); and since God is the object of thought, he can be known by dialectic reasoning.

(Siddhanta):—To this the author replies. No, God can not be known by reasoning alone. Hence the third sûtra runs as follows:—

SUTRA I. 1. 3.

शास्त्र योनित्वात्। १।१।३॥

श्राप्त Sastra, the Scripture, the Revelation, the upanisad. चोनिया Yonit-vât, because of its being the proof or source. The word "yoni" (literally womb) means that which causes or produces the knowledge of a thing.

Note.—The Sangati is akeepiki.

3. (The existence of Brahman cannot be inferred), because he is to be known only through scriptures.—3.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'not' is to be read in this sûtra from the fourth sûtra of this pada. Brahman is not an object of inference to the seeker of truth. Why? Because the scriptures or Upanisads are the source or the cause of understanding Him. So Brahman can be known only through the teaching of Upanicads. If it were otherwise, the designation' 'aupanicada' (the etymological meaning of which is "He is known through the Upanisads alone)," as applied to Brahman, would be meaningless. As regards the objection that the word, 'mantavya,' means that the existence of Brahman can be reasoned out, we explain that the reasoning may be resorted to, so far as it is consonent with the Upanisad or scriptures, to demonstrate the existence of God. So we find (in Mahabharata Vanaparva as well as in Kûrma Purâna) "Uha or right reasoning is that by which we find out the true sense of a scriptural passage, by removing all conflicts between what precedes and what follows it. But one should abandon mere dry discussion." Moreover the worthlessness of mere dry discussions, as carried on by Gautama, &c., is shown in sûtra II. 1:11. This shows that mere dry discussion like that of Gautama, &c., should be abandoned, because they are not based upon revelation.

The conclusion is that Brahman is to be known from the Vedanta and then meditated upon. This is explained further on in the sutra II. 1 27. Where it will be further explained and demonstrated that the best proof of the existence of Brahman, free from all objections, is revelation. This also proves that the saviour Hari has the form of the Self, that He is a witness of all experiences of all souls, that He possesses all good attributes which form His essential nature, that He is without modification yet the creator of the universe, and that He should be worshipped in this way.

(Objection):—An objector may say: how can it be said that scripture is the means to know the Brahman? The Vedanta texts are not capable of being employed as commands and prohibitions, because they teach something which is already in existence, and therefore they are of no use. They are something like mere descriptive passages of the Vedas or other subjects: such as the sentences 'the world consists of the seven continents,' &c. Only those passages of the Vedas are relevant which direct something to be done or something not to be done. The Vedas teach action. As in ordinary life, an imperative sentence conveys the notion of something to be done; "Let a man desiring wealth, go to the king." "Let a man suffering from dyspepsia, not drink water at the time of eating." Similarly, in the Vedas we find commands and prohibitions, such as "Let a man who desires heaven, perform sacrifice," "Let no man drink wine." In fact, no one employs speech without any object in view; and that object is either something to be attained by doing an act, or which is to be avoided by abstaining from an act. But Brahman is an existing object. Therefore passages like 'Brahman is true, intelligence,' &c., are useless, because they do not teach or aim at teaching any particular action. Such passages can only be relevant, when they are employed in connection with other passages that direct some action. Thus, the description of a sacrifice or of a particular deity or of a sacrificer, becomes relevant, in as much as these passages are connected with the act of sacrifice. As says Jaimin:—

षामायस्य कियार्थस्यादानर्थस्यमतदर्थानाम् ।

"As the purport of a scripture is action, those scriptural passages whose purport is not action, are purportless." (P. M. I. 2: 1).

तद्भृतानाम् कियार्थेन समाज्ञायार्थस्य तकिविद्यालाद् ।

Again, "The constituent words of a sentence are pronounced with the word which expresses action; the senses of the constituent words are the efficient cause of the senses of a sentence (as a whole)" (P. M. I. 1:25)."

(Answer):—To this objection we reply, that it is an erroneous nction to think that the Vedânta text is useless; simply because it does Though there is no direct teaching of any not teach any action. command or prohibition in it, yet in as much as it teaches the existence of God, who is the highest end of man; it has a utility of its own; like the sentences 'there is weaith in thy house, &c. As a man who thought that he was a pauper and so felt miserable, gets happiness when some trustworthy person tells him that there is a great hidden treasure in his house; and as the attainment of that treasure then becomes the object of his life. And as the information "there is a treasure in your house," is not at all useless; similarly is the case with the Vedanta texts. They certainly do not teach any action, but declare the highest truth, namely: that there exists a Being who is the Supreme end of man, whose form is intelligence and inexhaustible bliss, who is perfect purity and who is friend of all, who has sacrificed himself for humanity, who is mine. who is self of my self, whose part I am. Such a declaration can not be useless, because it produces a conviction of the existence of a Supreme The Vedanta texts are, therefore, not useless, but produce Being. certain effect in the shape of happiness and the removal of fear, just like sentences 'a son has been born to thee,' 'this is not a snake but a rope.' Moreover the utility of Vedanta is clearly explained in the Vedanta texts themselves. Thus we are told in one place that 'He who knows.Brahman as true Being, intelligent and infinite, as hidden in the depth of the heart he enjoys all blessings' (Tait. Up. II. 1). So the knowledge of Brahman is not useless, as it leads to the enjoyment of all blessings.

Nor can it be said, that since the Vedanta texts teach the attainment of certain fruits; therefore, they teach action also. The whole context of the Vedânta is against such a view. It teaches knowledge (jñana) and not action. On the contrary, it decries karma or action, and its fruit: as something to be discarded. Therefore, to suppose that the Vedanta teaches action is to imagine something which is totally irreconcilable with it. Nor can we reasonably interpret that Vedanta teaches anything but the truth about Brahman. It teaches that God is the cause of the rise and fall of infinite universes, that He is eternal, allintelligence, that He is the ocean of infinite auspicious qualities, and that He is the abode of Lakemt. Every text exhausts its probative force with the teaching of its particular doctrine that it sets itself to Thus the Vedenta has its scope and authority in matters relating to Brahman and not action. Nor should it be said on the authority of Jaimini, that the Vedas teach action only, and the passages that do not teach action are redundant, and therefore, the Vedanta passages are redundant. As a matter of fact, the two sûtras of Jaimini quoted above, should not be interpreted in this sense. For Jaimini himself was the disciple of Bâdarâyana, and must be presumed to be a devotee of Brahman, and could not have taught a doctrine in conflict with that of his great master. In fact all that he has done in his school of Mimansa is to show that certain apparently redundant passages in the midst of texts that teach karma described in the whole chapter should be interpreted as applying to karma, and that their literal meaning should be abandoned in favour of teaching karma.

Thus in a chapter teaching sacrifice and karma occurs the sentence 'He wept' (Tait. Up. I. 5. 1). Either this sentence is redundant as it does not teach any karma; or it must be interpreted to teach some action: namely, that at a certain stage the sacrificer must weep or shed tears. But as one cannot weep at will, therefore the above passage must be interpreted as a redundancy.

In fact those two sutras of Jaimini mean that passages teaching karma must either command something to be done or prohibit something not to be done.

If there be a sentence which does not fulfil the condition, it is either superfluous (P. M. I. 2: 1.), or they must be interpreted to teach some action (P. M. I. 1:25). In fact Jaimini does not deal with Jäänarandya texts: texts with which Vedânta specially deals. His scope is in that portion of the Vedas which deals with karma and his sûtras refer to that portion only. It does not refer to Vedânta, and his sûtras should not be interpreted as such.

THUS THE VEDÂNTA TEACHES SUPREME BRAHMAN.

Adhikarana IV.—The Samanvaya.

(Visaya):—Now in order to strengthen the above view, the author teaches that Brahman is the object of knowledge taught in all the Vedas—all the Vedas declare Brahman. Thus we find in Gopála Upanisad: "He is sung by all the Vedas." Trus we find in Gopála Upanisad: So also in the Katha Upanisad (I. 2: 15).

सर्वे वेदा वरपदमामनन्ति तपार्शास सर्वाचि च वहदन्ति । यदिच्छनो ब्रह्मचंडचरन्ति तस्ते पद्ध सरमहेच ब्रवीम्यामित्येतत् ॥ १५ ॥

"That Supreme whom all the Vedas recall, whom all penances proclaim, whom men desire when they live as a religious Student."

(Pareapakea):—It is wrong to say that the Vedas teach uniformly about Brahman. For we find that they teach karma also, about sacrifices and many other things. Thus some portions teach that by performing kariri (sacrifice)—rain falls, and that by performing Putryakamyaişti—a son will be born, and that by performing Jyotistoma Yajña, one will attain heaven. The Vedas further teach various methods of performing sacrifices. Therefore, it is not quite accurate to say that all the Vedas uniformly declare Brahman only. For passages teaching karma find their full scope, and exhaust their meaning, by teaching the performances of certain sacrifices and nothing more. Hence they cannot be applied to Visnu.

sotra I. 1. 4.

तत् तु समन्वयात् ॥ १।१। १॥

न्य Tat, that, namely the fact that Vianu is the chief topic of knowledge in all the Vedas. द्व Tu, but, a word removing doubt. स्वक्षां Samanvayat, by concordance: by right discussion, and interpretation.

Nors :- The sangati is akpepiki.

4. (But Viṣṇu is the subject matter of all the Vedas), because such is the appropriate interpretation of all texts.—4.

The word 'tu' means 'but,' and is employed to rebut the above purvapakes. It is proper to say that Visuu is the uniform topic taught in all the Vedas, whether of karmakanda or Juanakanda. Why? Samanvayat. Anvaya means construing a passage according to the six maxims mentioned above. Samanvaya, therefore, means the complete construction of a passage after full discussion of the pros and cons thereof, When the above is applied to a passage, the proper sense of a scripture comes out. That sense is that Visuu is really taught even in those passages which apparently teach performance of karma or ritualistic ceremony: otherwise how can we say that the text of the Gopala Upanisad is valid which says, 'Visuu is sung in all the Upanisads.' Even Lord Himself says so expressedly in the Gita:—

वेदैश्य सर्व रहमेथ वेची वेदांतह्य देविदेव बादम् ॥ १५ ॥

"I am that which is to be known in all the Vedas. I, indeed, the knower of the Vedas and the author of the Vedanta" (G. XV. 15).

Similarly in the Bhagavata Purana, we find :--

किं विषये किमायरे किमतुच विकल्पयेत्। इत्यस्या हृदयं कोके नान्योमपुषेद् करूवन ॥

"None except me knows what is really taught by the commands and prohibitions as laid down in the karmakāṇḍa; what is really expressed by the mantras in the Devatā-kāṇḍa, or what is the purpose of the passages to be found in the Jūānakāṇḍa. All the karmakāṇḍas refer to me because I am the great sacrificer; all the mantras praise me because I am the highest Devatā; and all the Jūānakāṇḍa refers to me because I am the creator of the world and withdraw it again to myself. Verily, I am this all."

Again,

मां विवर्षेऽभिवर्षे मां विकल्यापाद्यते हाहम्।

"Scriptures enjoin duties as my worship, use Indra and all other names as my appellation, the texts that prescribe, as well as prohibit acts, point to me; so, in such a state none other than myself understand their true meaning."

That it has been said :-

साकात् परम्पराभ्यां वेदा ब्रह्मांच प्रवर्तन्ते ।

"Either directly or indirectly, all the Vedas teach Brahman." Brahman is directly taught in the Jäänakända, where His essential nature attributes, etc, are fully described. He is indirectly taught in the karmakända, for sacrifices and ritualistic ceremonies are subsidiary to Jääna and thus indirectly lead to Brahman."

This is also the purport of the text already quoted:—

तं स्वीपनिषदं पुक्तं पृष्कामि ।

"I ask thee about that Person who is taught in the Upanipads." (Br. Up. 8. 21). Again,

तमेतं वेदाहाचचनेन श्राद्धाका विविद्यन्ति।

Him the Brahmanas seek to know by the study of the Vedas, by the sacrifices, &c." (Br. IV. 4. 23).

As regards the objection that the Vedas teach the attainment of phenomenal things, like getting rain, procuring a son or acquiring Heaven, we answer thus: These are taught in the Vedas, as incitement to the acquirement of divine wisdom by baby souls; and to produce a faith in mankind. For when one sees that the Vedic mantras have the efficacy of producing rain, &c., then he gets faith in them and has an inclination to study them, and thus comes ultimately to discriminate the real and the transitory, the permanent and the illusory things of the universe, and thus gets love of Brahman and disgust with the phenomenal. Therefore, all the Vedas teach Brahman. Moreover, sacrifices, &c., taught in the Vedas produce phenomenal results like rain, &c., only then when Kama or strong will force is joined with the mantras. Those very sacrifices lead towards the purification of mind and illumination of the soul, when performed without such a desire for phenomenon.. Thus Karmakanda itself by teaching the worship of various Devatas, becomes part of Brahmaiñana and is really the worship of Brahman, when the element of desire is excluded. Such a worship purifies the heart and gives a taste for Brahman enquiry and does not produce any other phenomenal desire.

Adhikarana V.—Brahman is knowable.

(Vieaga):—By the above reasoning and by the proper construction of Vedic passages, it will now be shown that Brahman is not inexpressible or undescribable by words.

There are however some texts which apparently teach that Brahman is unknowable by mind and inexpressible by words. As we hear in Taitt. Up. (II. 4:1):—

वता बाबो निवर्चन्ते बताय मनसा सह।

" From whom all speech, with the mind turns away, unable to reach Him." So also,

बद्धाचानम्युदितं वैन वागभ्युद्धते । तदेव प्रद्धातं विद्धिनेतं यदिवसुराद्धते ॥

- "He who is not expressed by speech and by which speech is expressed, that alone know as Brahman, not that which people here adore" Kena. Up. 1. 5.
- 2. (Doubt):—Now arises the following doubt. Is Brahman expressible by word or is He not expressible?

3. (Ptreapakea):—According to above Srutis and many other texts Brahman is unexpressible by words. For had He been so expressible; He could not be said to be self-manifest. Moreover we find in the Bhagavata Purana also the following:—

"That divinity whom mind and speech not attaining, fall back, from; whom I and even these Devas know not, salutation to that Lord." (The speech of Maitraya in the Bhágavata).

4. (Siddhanta):—To this the author replies by the following Sidhanta sûtra:—

8ÛTRA L 1. 5.

ईच्चतेर्नाराज्यम् । १ । १ । ४ ॥

र्मुक्तेः Îkșatch, because it is seen. च Na, not. चारावन् Asabdam, inexpressible.

5. Brahman is not inexpressible by words, because it is seen that he is so expressly taught in the Vedas.—5.

Note.—Here also is Akşepa-sangati.

COMMENTARY.

The word wasters 'asabdam' of the sûtra means that in which or about which, the word cannot penetrate or express. Brahman is not 'asabdam.' On the contrary He is 'sabdam' or expressed by words. Why? Ikeateh "because it is seen." Because we see in the Upanicad itself that the suggestive designation of 'aupanicada' is given to Brahman. Which means, Brahman is known through the upanicad words. As we find in the Brihadaranyaka upanicada.

तनवीपनिषदं पुरुषं पृष्कामि।

"I ask thee about that person whom upanisads teach." (Br. III. 9. 26). Here the person to be enquired into is called aupanisada—known through upanisada.

The word 'fksateh' is formed by the affix 'tip' with the force of passive (bhava). (The proper affix 'te.') The anomaly is Vedic.

That Brahman is expressible by words, we find from the following Srutis also:— सर्वे बेदा यत् पदमामनन्ति । 'whom all the Vedas declare, &c.' (Katha Il. 15.)

True, Brahman is said to be "asabdam," "ineffable," only in this sense that He is not completely expressible by words. Thus, as the mountain Meru is said to be invisible, in the sense that no one can see all its parts, but does not mean, that it is entirely invisible, so Brahman is said to be indescribable or inexpressible, in the sense that He is not completely describable. For had He been totally unknowable, then in the Kena Upanisad we would not have found it said, "know Him to be as Brahman;" for how could one know the unknowable. Moreover in the phrase unit tradition, &c., "from whom the speech turns back, &c.," the word yatah shows that the speech does reach Him after realising Him a little; the same idea is expressed by the word aprâpya "not attaining."

Moreover Brahman reveals Himself through the Vedas. This idea does not conflict with the notion of Brahman being self-revealed. For the Vedas are in a way the body of Brahman. Consequently Brahman is describable by words.

(Doubt):—May it not be so that Brahman is unexpressible by words. The being who is describable by words and who is referred to in the Vedas by theati is Saguna Brahman. Such a Brahman, the Vedas reveal, as they are expression of His powers. While as regards the pure infinite Brahman, those passages refer to Hun only figuratively. To this the next sûtra answers thus:—

गौणश्चेन् नात्मशब्दात् ॥ १।१।६॥

नीय: Gauṇaḥ, saguṇa, Brahman च Chu, and. बृत् It, if. ज Na, not. चाल-वजाब Âtma-Sabdat, because of the word atman.

6. If it be said that the Creator of the world is saguna Brahman, we say, no; because the word Âtman is used in connection with it.—6.

COMMENTARY.

The being, who is described as Brahman and is expressible by words, is not Saguna Brahman which has the highest portion of Prakriticalled Sattva, as its vesture. Why do we say so? Because the word atman is used in reference to Brahman in these texts:—

चारमैवेदमम चालीत् पुरुषिधाः। "The Atman alone was in the beginning as a person." (Br. up. ) चारमा चा इदमेक प्वाम चालीत् नान्यत किंचनमिष्त् स देशत केकान् दु सुजा इति (Ait. Âraṇyaka).

"The atman verily alone existed before the creation of this universe. Nothing else was manifest then. He willed: "Let me create the worlds."

Both these texts show that the being which existed prior to creation has been designated by the term Atman. This term atman primarily applies to the infinite Nirguna Brahman, as we have already explained it in commentating on the Sûtra I. 1. 2.

Moreover, in the Bhagavata Pûrana we find:—"The wise call Him Brahman, Paramatman, Bhagavan, Who is true intelligence and without duality."

So also in the Vighu Purana, we find:—"Oh Maitreya! The word Bhagavân is applied to the Cause of all the causes." All these Purana texts also show that the infinite Pure Brahman is the one expressible by words. Had the infinite Brahman been indescribable, He would not have been expressed by words.

SÛTRA I. 1.7.

तन्निष्टस्य मोस्रोपवेशात् ॥ १ । १ । ७ ॥

तम् Tat, to that. शिक्षस्य. Nisthasya, of the devoted. शिक्ष Moksa, release. व्यवसाय: Upadesat, because of the teaching.

7. (The Creator of the universe is Nirguna Brahman and not Saguna), because the devoted to Him attains salvation, according to the teaching of the scriptures.—7.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'not' is understood in this as well as in the next three Sûtras. In the Taittfriya upanisad we find (II. 7.)

ग्रसद्वा रवमग्रभासीत् तता वै सवजायतः । तदात्मानं स्ववमञ्चयतः ।

"This world before creation existed verily in the state of asat or subtle, thence verily the gross was born. That Brahman himself made His self."

The upanical then goes on to say:—यदाहा वैच प्रतस्मिन्द्रश्येश्नात्वे धनिरुक्ते धनिरुक्ते धनिरुक्ते धनिरुक्ते धनिरुक्ते धनिरुक्ते धनिरुक्ते अप तस्य अयं अवित ॥ यदाहा वैच प्रतस्मिन् चुद्रमन्तरम् कुरुते धण तस्य अयं अवित ॥

"When verily this Jiva places fearless reliance (entire devotion) on This seer, (who is other than all these objects which are seen) on This Enjoyer (who is other than all these objects of enjoyments), on This Ineffable (for His Infinite attributes cannot be fully described), on This Self-Luminous (who has no nilayana or light to illumine him), then he reaches fearlessness (release). But if this Jiva has the slighest doubt (and if his devotion has the slightest taint of hypocrisy) then there is Fear for him."

This shows that he who is devoted to the supreme Brahman, who transcends all phenomenal universe, who is described by the Vedas, and is the Creator of the world, finds freedom from fear and rests in that invisible, incorporeal and undefined Supreme Brahman. This Brahman could not be Saguna Brahman. For then the text would not have said that His dovotee would get release. The Paramátman is Nirguna and Moksha is attained by the worship of Him alone. As we find in the Bhàgavata:—

"The Saviour Hari is Nirguna (untouched by the gunas); He is the supreme Person (by worshiping Him there is release). He is above Prakriti. He is the wisdom of the wiscat. He is the witness of all. By worshipping Him, one gots the highest reward and becomes himself free from all gunas."

BÛTRA I. 1. S.

डेयत्वावचनाश्व ॥ १ । १ । ८ ॥

8. The Creator is not saguna Brahman, because the text nowhere teaches its abandonment in favour of some one higher.—8.

COMMENTARY.

Therefore, Nirguna Brahman alone is described in the Vedas. He is the creator of the universe. He should be the object of meditation to His devotees who want emancipation.

SÛTRA L 1. 9.

स्वाप्यात्॥ १।१।६॥

9. The Creator is not Saguna Brahman, because He merges into Himself. (Not so the saguna which merges into something other than Himself.)—9.

COMMENTARY.

We find in the Brihadaranyaka Upanişad :-- पूर्वमदः पूर्वमिदं पूर्वात् वृत्तमुख्यते । पूर्वस्य पूर्वमादाय पूर्वमेवातिशिष्यते ।

(The above) That is infinite, this below is infinite. From that infinite proceeds this infinite. On taking away this infinite from that infinite, the remainder is still infinite. (Br. V. 1: 1.)

Now the infinity which is the manifested Brahman enters into the infinite, which is the manifested Brahman; and thus we see that Brahman enters or merges into Himself. Had it referred to Saguna Brahman, the text would have said that saguna enters into Nirguna, and not that it enters into itself. Moreover saguna is never said to be infinity.

The literal meaning of above verse is this. 'Adas' (that) refers to the Root—form; the unmanifested; 'Idam' 'this' refers to the manifested form. Both these forms are Infinity. The manifested form of God, shown in His incarnations and when He acts as in Rasa, &c., comes out of the unmanifested root-form which is called Purna or infinite. The word uduchyate means 'becomes manifest.' By taking away from that infinite Root-form, the manifested form; that is, by merging this manifested form into the unmanifested Root-form, the remainder is that Root-form, which remains unmerged. The Purapas also tell us the same about the Saviour.

That God creates and becomes manifold, but still remains Nirguna and the Supreme Person. He destroys and reabsorbs the manifested into Himself and still is infinite and free from all faults.—"Hari the first cause."

(Objection):—But Brahman has two forms Saguna and Nirguna. The Saguna Brahman has Sattva for his limiting adjunct or vesture, it is He who is Omniscient, Omnipotent and the cause of the universe. The second the Nirguna Brahman,—is pure existence and consciousness, Infinite and perfect Purity. The Saguna Brahman is the Shakti or energy underlying all the Vedas (the laws of nature). The Nirguna Brahman is the sense of the Vedas, the unity of all diverse Laws. So these are different. The Nirguna Brahman cannot create. The Creator is always Saguna.

BUTRA I. 1. 10.

गतिसामान्यात् ॥ १ । १ । १० ॥

नशिः Gatih-avagatih or knowledge, the conception. जानाना Samanyat, because of uniformity.

10. Saguna Brahman is no where taught in the Vedas, which uniformly describe the Nirguna Brahman only.—10.

Knowledge or information given by all the Vedas has this thing in common, that they unanimously describe that there is a Being who is intelligence personified, who is omniscient, omnipotent, perfectly pure, the Supreme Self, and the cause of the universe; and that by worshipping Him, He gives salvation to all. This knowledge is common or uniform in all the Vedas. That being so, one Brahman is described in them. The division of Brahman into Saguna and Nirguna, has no authority in the Vedas. In the Gftå also we find the same. Says Srt Krisna:—"Oh Dhananjaya! there is no one higher than Myself." (VII. 7). Was Srt Krisna Saguna or Nirguna?

This idea is more clearly expressed in the next Sûtra, where direct Vedic texts are quoted, to show that Nirguna Brahman is the subject matter of all the Vedas.

SĈTRA I. 1. 11.

श्रुतखाच ॥ १ । १ । ११ ॥

श्रुतत्वाव Biutatvar, because of a Bruti text प Cha, and.

11. And there is direct text (to show that Nirguna Brahman who is creator of the universe is the giver of salvation.)—11.

COMMENTARY.

In the Svetadvatara Upanișad we read:-

पको देवः सर्वभूतेषु गृहः सर्वव्यापी सर्वभूतान्तरात्मा । कर्माच्यक्षः सर्वभूताचि-वासः साक्षी वेता केवलो निर्णु वहव ॥

"He is the one God, hidden in all beings, all-pervading, the Self within all beings, the witness, the perceiver, the only one, and Nirguna (free from qualities)" (Sv. VI. 11).)

Here the word Nirguna, free from all qualities, is expressly stated with regards to Brahman. Thus we know that the Nirguna Brahman is the Creator and is so described. We cannot, therefore, say that Nirguna Brahman is ineffible and inexpressible. Those who say that we can know Nirguna Brahman merely by inference and not directly, that Nirguna Brahman cannot be the Creator, because He has no desire, and that creation can proceed only from a being that has a desire, are wrong. Because, if Nirguna Brahman can not be described by any words, then nor can He be suggested by the indirect implication of any word (lakshanā). For Laksanā or suggested force of implication or secondary significance of a word can only apply to those things, which are capable of being described by words. In fact, as the Vedas say that Brahman is invisible, &c., so they also say that Brahman is Nirguna. They do not convey the idea that Brahman is indescribable.

(Objection):—But how can you say that He is Nirguna and at the same time possesses the attributes described in the Upanisad that He is all-powerful, &c. For Nirguna and Saguna are mutually exclusive. Either Brahman has qualities or He has no qualities.

(Answer):—This is not so. The contradiction is apparent only. Those who do not understand the occult meaning of the word Nirguna think that there is contradiction. The words Nirguna, &c., apply to Brahman, by excluding from Him certain qualities included under the term guns. &c. This is the negative side of the definition: while the words Omnipotent, &c., apply to Brahman certain qualities which He possesses as His positive side. Therefore, when we say that Brahman is Nirguna, we mean thereby that He does not possess the three gunas or qualities of Prakriti:-Sattva, Rajas or Tamas. But He possesses certain qualities, which form His essential nature, such as Omniscience. Thus there is no contradiction. So we also find in the Purapas:-"The material qualities such as Sattva and the rest do not exist in the Lord. He is the store house of all auspicious qualities. Therefore, He is infinite and perfectly pure. Hari the saviour is the subject matter of all the Vedas." When the Sruti says that "He is nameless, &c." those words simply mean that He cannot be fully defined by any name, because he is infinite. They also mean that all names, so far as they denote material qualities, are not applicable to Brahman. Those who say that the words. Nirguna, &c., must be taken in their literal sense, and that Brahman is devoid of all qualities should be asked, "do these words convey any idea to you of Brahman or not?" If they say "They do convey the idea of Brahman:" then he is described by those words, and so can not be said to be avachya. But if those words do not convey any idea about Brahman, then it was useless to have commenced a description of Brahman by the use of those words, when they define nothing and describe nothing and convey no idea.

Here ends the commentary of the eleven sûtras which form a subsection by itself.

VERSE.

Let us have faith in that Pure, All-knowledge, All-bliss, All-pervading, Anandamaya Brahman, in whom all words find their true significance.

Adhikarana VI.—Ânandamaya is God.

Having proved, in the previous adhikaranas, that Brahman is describable by words, now the author Bâdarâyana takes up the topic of Samanvaya, and shows that several words of the Vedas which are apparently ambiguous, realy apply to Brahman. He begins with the word ânandamayam, and takes up other words one after another till the end of the adhyâya. In the first Pâda, those words are taken up, which generally apply to a Being other than Brahman, and the author shows that by proper construction of the text, where those words occur, they must be taken to apply to Brahman, though in other places, they may apply to anything else than Brahman.

(Visaya):-In the Taittiriya Upanisad we read the following:-

After reciting this, the Upanisad goes on to describe the Annamaya Purusa, the Pranamaya Purusa, the Manomaya Purusa, and the Vijnanamaya Purusa in due order. The last Purusa described by the Sruti is the Anandamaya, in these terms:—

तस्माद्वा पतस्माद् विद्वानमयावृत्पोऽतरात्माऽनन्त्मयस्तेनैव पूर्वः। स वा पप पुरुष विद्या पद, तस्य पुरुषविद्यताम् चन्वयं पुरुषविद्यः, तस्य प्रियमेवशिरः, मोदो दक्षिकः पदाः, ममोद उत्तरः पक्षः चानन्द चात्मा, बद्धा पुण्कम् प्रतिष्ठा ।

"Different from this Vijfianamaya is another inner self which is ananadamya. The former is filled by this. It also has the shape of man. Like the human shape of the former is the human shape of the latter. Joy (Priyam) is its head. Satisfaction (moda) is its right arm. Great satisfaction (Promoda) is its left arm. Bliss (Ananda) is its trunk. Brahman is the tail or support."

- 2. (Doubt):—Is this Anandadamaya a Jiva (or human soul) or Para-Brahman?
- 3. (Pûrva Pakṣa):—The ânandamaya is Jîva, because the Śruti says "like the human shape of the former is the human shape of the latter." It is also called Śārira Atmā, (or embodied self) "The embodied self of this is the same, &c." Therefore it refers to Jīva.
- 4. (Siddhanta):—The Anandamaya refers to Brahman and not to Jiva. So the author says:—

SÛTRA I, 1 12

म्रानन्दमयोऽभ्यासात् ॥ १ । १ । १२ ॥

चानन्त्रयः Anandamayah, the full of bliss. चन्यासात् Abhyasat, because of repetition.

12. The Anandamaya is Para Brahman, because of the repeated use of the word Brahman in connection with it—12.

Note: - This is an example of pratyudáharana Sangati. FIRST ANUVÂKA.

He who knows the Brahman attains the highest (Brahman). On this the following verse is recorded: "He who knows Brahman, which is (i.e., cause, not effect), which is conscious, which is without end, as hidden in the depth (of the heart); in the highest Ether, he enjoys all blessings, at one with the all-enjoying Brahman."

From that self, (Brahman) sprang Ether (Akida), (that through which we hear); from ether, air; from air, fire; from fire, water; (that through which we hear, feel, see and taste); from water, earth; (that through which we hear, feel, see, taste, and smell). From earth herbs, from herbs food, from food seed, from seed man. Man thus consists of the essence of food. This is his head, this his right arm, this his left arm, this his trunk (4tman), this the seat (the support).

'From food are produced all creatures which dwell on earth. Then they live by food, and in the end they return to food. For food is the oldest of all beings, and therefore, it is called panacea (sarvauşadha, i. e., consisting of all herbs, or quieting the heart of the body of all beings). They who worship food as Brahman obtain all food. For food is the oldest of all beings, and therefore it is called panacea. From food all creatures are produced; by food, when born, they grow. Because it is fed on, or because it feeds on beings, therefore it is called food (anna).

Different from this, which consists of the essence of food, is the other the inner Self, which consists of breath. The former is filled by this. It also has the shape of man. Like the Luman shape of the latter. Prana (up-breathing) is its head. Vyana (backbreathing) is its right arm. Apana (down-breathing) is its left arm. ether is its trunk. Different from this, which consists of breath is the other, the inner Self, which consists of mind. The former is filled by this. It also has the shape of man. Like the human shape of the former is the human shape of the latter. Yajus is its head. Rik is its right arm. Saman is its left arm. The doctrine (Ade-ia, i.e., the Brahmana) is its trunk. If a man knows Understanding as Brahman, and if he does not swerve from it, he leaves all evils behind in the body, and attains all his wishes." The embodied Self of this (consisting of understanding) is the same as that of the former (consisting of mind).

Different from this, which consists of understanding, is the other inner Self, which consists of bliss. The former is filled by this. It also has the shape of man. 'He who knows the Brahman as non-existing, becomes bimself non-existing. He who knows the Brahman as existing, him we know himself existing.' The embodied Self of this (bliss) is the same as that of the former (understanding).

Thereupon follow the questions of the pupil:

'Does any who knows not, after he has departed this life, ever go to that world?'
Or does only he who knows, after he has departed, go to that world?'

The answer is: He wished, may I be many, may I grow forth. Ho brooded over himself (like a man performing penance). After He had thus brooded, He sent forth (created) all, whatever there is. Having sent forth, He entered into it. Having entered it, He became SAT (what is manifest) and TYAT (what is not manifest), defined and undefined, supported and not supported, (endowed with) knowledge and without knowledge (as stones), real and unreal. The Sattya (true) became all this whatsoever, and therefore the wise call it (the Brahman) Sat-tya (the true).

In the beginning this was non-existent (not yet defined by form and name). From it was born what exists. That made it Solf, therefore it is called the Solf-made. That which is Solf-made is a flavour (can be tasted), for only after perceiving a flavour can any one perceive pleasure. Who could breathe, who could breath forth, if that bliss (Brahman) existed not in the other (in the heart)? For he alone causes blessedness. When he finds freedom from fear and rest in that which is invisible, incorporeal, undefined, unsupported, then he has obtained the fearless. For if he makes but the smallest distinction in it, there is fear for him. But that fear exists only for one who thinks himself wise, (not for the true sage).

(1) From ter.or of it (Brahman) the wind blows, from terror the sun rises, from terror of it Agni and Indra, yea Death runs as the fifth. Now this is an examination of (what is meant by) Bliss (ananda): Let there be a noble young man, who is well read (in the Veda), very swift, firm, and strong and let the whole world be full of wealth for him, that is one measure of human bliss.

One hundred times that human bliss is one measure of the bliss of human Gandharvas (genii), and likewise of a great sage (learned in the vedas) who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of human Gandharvas is one measure of the bliss of divine Gandharvas (genil), and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of divine Gandharvas is one measure of the bliss of the Fathers, enjoying their long estate, and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of the Fathers is one measure of the bliss of the Devas, born in the Ajana heaven (through the merit of their lawful works), and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of the Devas born in the Ajana heaven is one measure of the bliss of the sacrificial Devas and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of the sacrificial Devas is one measure of the bliss of the (thirty-three) Devas, and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of the (thirty-three) Devas is one measure of the bliss of Indra, and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of Indra is one measure of the bliss of Brihaspati, and likewise of a great sage whe is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of Brihaspati is one measure of the bliss of prajapati and likewise of a great args who is free from desires.

One hundred times that bliss of prajapati is one measure of the bliss of Brahman, and likewise of a great sage who is free from desires.

(5) He who is this (Brahman) in man, and he who is that (Brahman) in the sun, both are one. He who knows, when he departs from this world, reaches the Self of food, the Self of breath, the Self of mind, the Self of understanding the Self of blies.

From whom words with the mind, return, not finding him,—he who knows the bliss of that Brahman, fears nothing. Verily this thought does not afflict him —"Why did I not do the good? Why did I do the evil?" He who knows this pleases his saif with both these. Yes, with both these does he please his self. This is the Upanizad.

COMMENTARY.

The Anandamaya is the Supreme Brahman. Why do we say so? Abhyâsât-because of repetition. In the passage just following the above, where is described the ânandamaya; we find the following in the Taittfriya Upani;ad II. 6.: 1.— असचेव समवति असद् अस्ति वेद चेत् यस्ति अस्ति वेदद सन्तिमें तती विदुः ।।

"He who knows the Brahman as non-existing becomes himself non-existing. He who knows the Brahman as existing, him we know existing." In the above passage, we find twice the repetition of the word Brahman. Abhyasa or repetition means uttering a word again, without any qualifications. Nor can it be said, that this Brahman which has been repeated, refers to the Brahman occurring at the end of the above passage, where Brahman is said to be the tail or support. For in the previous passage, we find one sloka each given after Annamaya, Pranamaya, &c. Thus the sloka of Taittfriya II. 2. 1:—

"They who worship food as Brahman obtain all food. For food is the oldest of all "things, and therefore it is called Panacca. From food all creatures are produced, by food, "when born, they grow. because it is fed on, or because it feeds on beings, therefore it is called food (anna)."

This is given after annamaya; and refers to the whole annamaya, and not to the tail or support of annamaya. Similarly, the sloka of Taittlyia II. 3.

"The devas breathe after breath (prana) so do men and cattle. Breath is the life "of beings, therefore it is called sarvayusha (all-enlivining)."

This is given after Pranamaya, and does not refer merely to the tail or support. Similarly, the sloke of Taitt. II. 54.

"He who knows the bliss of that Brahman, from whence all speech, with the mind, turns away unable to reach it, he never fears." The embodied self of this (consisting of mind) is the same as that of the former.

This is given after the Manomaya and refers to the whole of it, and not to its tail or support. Similarly, the sloka of Taitt. II 5:-

"Understanding performs the sacrifice, it performs all sacred acts. All devas worship "understanding as Brahman, as the oldest. If a man knows understanding as Brahman, and "if he does not swerve from it, he leaves off all evil behind in the body, and attains all his "wishes. The embodied self of this (consisting of understanding) is the same, as that of "the former (consisting of mind)."

This is given after Vijnanamaya and refers to the whole of it and not to its tail or support. Therefore, the sloka 'He who knows', &c., refers to the whole of Anandamaya, and not to the tail or support. Therefore, Anandamaya is Brahman.

Though the Anandamaya occurs in a series of words refering to Jiva, yet it does not refer to it, because of its impossibility; and because there is a difference of name also. This will be fully described under the sûtra III. 3:13, where it is explained what is meant by joy being the head of Brehman, &c.

(Objection): ---How can "Anandamaya" here refer to Supreme Brahman, when it is a member of a series of terms, like annamaya, &c, which refer to jiva, who is certainly not anandamaya, but full of miseries?

(Answer):—There is no fault in this. Because Brahman is read in such a series, in order to make it easily understandable by men of small intellect. The Vedas, like a great philanthrophist, describe the Supreme Self, by first describing the non-self; this by constant approach towards the true Brahman, by words which refer to something more and more interior and finer; and ultimately they show Brahman. It is something like a person trying to point out the small star Arundhati. He, points out at first some big star near it, and says this is Arundhati; and thus leads unto the true Arundhati. So the scuti first points out the various non-Brahmans, and ultimately points to the true Brahman, the Anandamaya, the inmost.

The passage does not mean that Brahman is taght in these Upanisads merely as a secondary object. But He is the primary object of teaching here. Moreover in the next Chapter of Taittiriya Upanisad, i. e., in the third Chapter called Bhrigu Valli, Varuṇa, on being asked by his son to teach him what is Brahman, first defines Brahman as the Cause of the Creation, &c., of the universe, and then teaches him, that all material objects are Brahman, such as food is Brahman, Prâṇa is Brahman, Manas is Brahman, &c. He says this in order to teach that they are the materials, with which the universe is made; and ultimately he finishes his teaching with "Ananda," declaring that "Ananda" is Brahman. Here he stops and concludes by saying "this doctrine taught by me is based on Brahman the supreme." (Taitt. Up. III. 6. 1). Further, in the conclusion also he says: --

"He who knows this, when he has departed from this world, after reaching and com"prehending the Self which consists of food, the Self which consists of breath, the Self
"which consists of mind, the Self which consists of understanding, the Self which consists of "bliss, enters and takes possession of these worlds, and having as much food as he likes,
"and assuming as many forms as he likes, he sits down singing this saman (of Brahman):
"Havu, Havu, havu!" (Taitt. III. 10. 5)."

This passage also shows that anandamaya is the supreme Brahman. Moreover in the Bhagavat Purana we find;—'पुरुषियोऽसमयोऽस स्प्रोत्स-मयादिस यः सरस्तः परं त्यमय यदेष्यकोषस्तम ॥

"The annamaya has the shape of man. In this series beginning with annamaya, the last one (namely the anandamaya) is one which is beyond Being and Non-being—thou O Lord art that. Thou art the final torm of this series—the True."

Nor is there any contradiction in applying the epithet "Sarira" (embodied) to Brahman. For we find the sruti declaring that the whole universe is the body of the Lord; as the well known Antaryami Chapter of the Brihadaranyaka Upanizad shows (Br. III. 7. 3): • बहुद्य कृषिकी सुरीहरू "whose body is the earth."

Nore.—The whole passage is given below.

"He who dwells in the earth, and within the earth, whom the earth does not know, whose body the earth is, and who pulls (rules) the earth within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the water, and within the water, whom the water does not know, whose body the water is, and who pulls (rules) the water within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the fire and within the fire, whom the fire does not know, whose body the fire is, and who pulls (rules) the fire within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the sky, and within the sky, whom the sky does not know, whose body the sky is, and who pulls (rules) the sky within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Inmortal."

"He who dwells in the air (vayu), and within the air, whom the air does not know, whose body the air is and who pulls (rules) the air within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler; within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the heaven (dyu), and within the heaven, whom the heaven does not know, whose body the heaven is, and who pulls (rules) the heaven within, He is thy fielf, the puller, (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the sun (aditys), and within the sun, whom the sun does not know, whose body the sun is, and who pulls (rules) the sun within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the immortal."

"He who dwells in the space (disah), and within the space, whom the space does not know, whose body the space is, and who pulls (rules) the space within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the moon, and stars (chandra-tarakam) and within the moon and stars, whom the moon and stars do not know, whose body the moon and stars are, and who pulls (rules) the moon and stars within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the other (āktia), and within the other, whom the other does not know, whose body the other is and who pulls (rules) the other within, He is thy Self, the puller (rules) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the darkness (tause), and within the darkness, whom the darkness does not know, whose body the darkness is, and who pulls (rules) the darkness within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

"He who dwells in the light (tejas), and within the light, whom the light does not know, whose body the light is, and who pulls (rules) the light within, He is thy Self, the puller (rules) within, the immortal."

In fact, these Vedanta Sûtras are called "Sariraka mimansa," for this very reason, because it deals with Para Brahman, the sarira (the embodied).

Those who explain the sûtra by saying that the Ânandamaya is not Brahman, but the Brahman mentioned as the tail of anandamaya is the Pure Brahman, are mistaken. The explanation is against the whole drift of the context, as well as against the expressed teaching of the author Badarayana and Varuna of the upanisad.

Note:—Sankara gives an alternative explanation of this sûtra, by which it would appear that the ânandamaya is not Brahman, but the word Brahman mentioned as tail is the Brahman. The Pûrvapaksa then is: the Brahman mentioned as the tail of the ânandamaye is not the supreme, for it is mentioned as a subordinate member of another. The siddhants view then is that the Brahman mentioned as the tail of ânandamaya is the Pure Brahman, because of the repetition of the word Brahman in the subsequent verses. This explanation is repudiated by our author.

(Objection):—The word anandamaya is formed by the affiix 'Mayat' which has the force of modification or vikara (Panini Sûtra IV. 3. 143). Therefore, anandamaya means a being which is a modification of ananda. Therefore it cannot be applied to Brahman, who is all ananda, and not any modification of ananda. To remove this doubt the author says:—

SÛTRA I. 1. 18.

विकारशब्दान् नेति चेन्,न प्रापुर्व्यात्॥ १।१।१३॥

Plane Vikara, modification. श्रव्यान् Sabdat, because of the word (mayat affix denoting modification). ज Na, not. श्रास Iti, thus. जेल Chet, if. ज Na, not. श्रास्त्रीत् Prachuryat, because of abundance. The term maya in anandamya denotes here "abundance," and not "modification."

13. If it be objected that anandamaya is not Brahman, because the affix mayat has the force of modification; we say, no, because the affix here denotes abundance.—13.

COMMENTARY.

The Anandamaya does not mean "Who is a modification of Ananda" Why? Because the affix mayat has also the force of denoting abundance (see Panni V. 4: 21). Therefore, anadamaya means He who has abundance of bliss. Moreover the word Anandamaya occurs in the Taittiriya Upnaisad, which is a portion of the Vedas, and so it is a Vaidie word. Now even according to grammar, the affix mayat can never come in the Vedas with the force of modification, after a word of more than two syllables. The word Ananda consists of three syllables. Therefore according to Vedic grammar, mayat can never be applied to this word with the force of modification. (Panini IV. 3: 150).

The word Anandamaya does not mean absence of sorrow. It is a positive attribute of Brahman and not a mere negative of pain. Says the Subala Upanisad:—"He is the inner self of all, free from evil, the divine one, the one God Nârâyaṇa." So also the Vishnu Purâṇa, "He is the highest of the high, the supreme God, in whom there are no pains." Therefore the affix mayat which has the force of abundance, shows here the real essence of the thing denoted by the word to which is is added, that is to say ânandamaya means "He whose essential nature or svarâṇa is ânanda." Thus as we say 'The sun has abundance of light,' it really means, the sun, whose essential nature is light is called Jyotirmayaḥ. Therefore Ânandamaya is not Jiva but Isvara.

Note.—The fact is that anadamaya is equal to anadasvarapa, "He whose essential nature is joy." Similarly, vijiianamaya is vijiiana svarapa, manomaya is mano svarapa atc., except in the case of Pranamaya, where maya has the force of Vikara. Manas also is a word of two syllables and the affix ought to have the force of modification or Vikara. But as the Vedas are said to be the various 'limbs of the manomaya (see the description of manomaya) we cannot say that they are modifications of manas.

तखेतु व्यपदेशात् ॥ १ । १ । १४

तर्-देश Tad-lietu, the cause of that; namely the cause of ananda. व्यवदेशाङ् Vyapadesat, because of the statement or declaration.

14. The Anandamaya is not jiva, because He is described as the cause of ananda.—14.

COMMENTARY.

It is written in the Taittfriya Upanishad (II. 1).

रसी वै सः रस्छ होवार्य सञ्चाधनन्ती भवति । को होवान्यात्कः माण्यात् । यदेव साकाशसानन्तो न स्यात् । एव होवानन्त्रवाति ।

"He verily is sweet. For only after perceiving the sweet, can any one perceive blies. Who could breathe, who could breathe forth, if that blies (Brahman) existed not in the other (in the heart)? For he alone causes blessedness."

This shows that the Anandamays is the cause of the blessedness of the Jiva, because the Anandamays is declared as the giver of joy to the Jiva. Therefore, it must be different from the Jiva, for the donor and donee can not be one and the same.

In the above passage, the word ananda is used, but it means anandamaya.

SÛTRA I. 1: 15.

मान्त्रवर्णिकमेव च गीयते ॥ १ । १ । १ ४ ॥

बाक्स Mantra, of the mantra. वार्षिकं Varnikam, described : mantra-varnikam is a compound word meaning "he who is described in the mantra portion." एव Eva, alone, even. च Cha, and. बीवते Giyate, is sung (by the Brahmana portion).

15. Moreover the Being, described in the Mantra portion of the text, is again referred to as Anandamaya in the subsequent portion of the above passage.—15.

COMMENTARY.

The above passage opens with the declaration of star unantiful "Satyam, Jūānam, Anantam is Brahman."

The Brahman so expressly mentioned in this mantra portion, is subsequently described as Anandamaya in the Brahmana portion. Therefore, Anandamaya is not Jiva. The sense is this. The Taittfriva Upanisad commences with the declaration, ज्ञानिकामोति परम "The Knower of Brahman obtains the highest." This shows that the worshipper Jiva obtains the worshipped Brahman. This object of attainment by the Jiva. which was mentioned in the opening passage, "Brahmavit Apnoti Param." is further fully described in the mantra "Satyam, jñanam, &c." The same Brahman alone should be taken to be referred to by the word Anandamaya. The subsequent portion of Taittiriya Vallt commencing with the word "Tasmat va etesmat atmana, &c." is an exhortation and exposition of the Therefore, Brahman who is the object Brahman mentioned above. attained, must be considered as different from the Jiva who obtains. because the obtained and the obtainer can not be the one and the same. Therefore, the Anandamava is not Jiva.

(Objections).—If the Brahman described in the above mantra were really different from the Jiva, then by proving that Brahman is Anandamaya, the Jiva could not be Anandamaya. But Jiva and Brahman are not different. The essence which forms the Jiva when it becomes free from Avidya or Nescience is really one with Brahman, and the effect of this is that the Jiva is Jiva, so long as it is over-powered by maya. The mantra, therefore, asserts that a Jiva who is free from maya is Brahman. Therefore, the term Anandamaya may apply to Jiva, when the latter transcends all limitations of Avidya.

(Answer).—The author answers this objection, by the following Sûtra declaring that Jiva can never be Brahman even when Mukta or released.

SÛTRA L. 1: 16.

नेतरोऽनुपपत्तेः ॥ १।१।१६ ॥

न Na, not. इतर: Itarah, the other: i.e., the Jiva. श्रहपुरक्तेः An-upapatteh, because of the impossibility, non-reasonableness.

16. The Jiva is not the being referred to in the Mantra "satyam, &c.," because of the impossibility of such a construction.—16.

COMMENTARY.

The "other" 'itara' of the Sûtra refers to the Jiva. The Jiva, even in the state of mukti, is not referred to by the Mantra "Satyam Jñanam &c.." because such a construction can not be put upon that verse. For the Mantra says :--सोअन्ते सर्वान् कामान् सहम्रह्मा विपिष्टियता "He who knows Brahman who is Satyam and Jñanam and Anantam, &c., enjoys all blessings, at one with the all-enjoying Brahman." Here the Jiva and the Brahman are distinctly shown as separate, for they both enjoy blessings together and concurrently. The word 'Vipaschità' is used in the above Mantra. It literally means "He whose chit or mind sees (Pasyati) diverse (Vividha) objects." [The word 'Pasya' has become Pas by Prisodaradi Gana (Panini VI. 3. 109). The word 'vi' is applied to Brahman, because He is the past-master in the art of enjoyment. The Jiva when free from Avidva enjoys all blessings along with Brahman; namely, in the matter of enjoyment he becomes almost a peer of Him. The word 'Adoute' in the above text is a vaidic anomaly. It is derived from the root 'ad' to eat, and the vikarana sna ought to have been used along with it: but by anomaly it has taken the Vikarana enu, and is declined in the Atmanepada: instead of 'Asnati,' we have 'Asnute'. This anomaly is according to Panini Sûtra III 1:85.] Though the Jiva, when mukta is a companion of Brahman, in the matter of enjoyment, yet superiority is to be given to Brahman even here.

The devotee does not become superior to Brahman, though Brahman becomes the friend and the lover of the Jiva. As says the Bhagavata:--

बद्दो कुर्वेन्ति मां भक्ताः सत्तियः सत्पतिं यथा ॥

"My devotees bring me under their control as the devoted wives bring their loving husbands under their control."

भेवव्यपदेशात्॥ १।१।१७॥

17. 'The being described in the mantra portion "Satyam jffanam" is not Jiva, though mukta, because there is a declaration of difference.—17.

COMMENTARY.

We find in the same vallt (Taitt. Up. 7: 1 see sûtra 14); "That which is self-made is the most sweet. Only after tasting the sweetness of that sweet one, does one perceive what is Ananda." This shows that after tasting the sweetness of that Anandamaya, who is referred to in the mantra portion as Brahman, the Jiva comes to perceive the real nature of Ananda. This also shows, that even in the state of mukti, the Jiva is the perceiver and Anandamaya is the perceived; and thus there remains a difference between a perceiver and perceived even in that condition.

Though the texts like these man are married "even becoming like Brahman, he attains Brahman, "&c., (Br. IV. 4: 6) apparently show that Jiva and Brahman become one, yet as a matter of fact, they do not declare the non-separateness of the Jiva and Brahman. The sense of these passages is this that the Jiva becomes like Brahman and not actually Brahman, for the attainment of Brahman means the attaining of similarity with Brahman, for a being merged in Brahman is included in the term Brahma-blidya 'one who has become Brahman.' (In other words the phrase Brahma-bhûya means brahmapya one who has reached Brahman.) Thus save the Sruti :- "Niranjanam Paramam sâmyam upaiti" (Mand. III. 1:31) "shaking off good and evil, he reaches the highest similarity." So also in the Gita XIV. 2, we find: - "Having taken refuge in this wisdom and being assimilated to my own nature, they are not reborn." The word 'Eva' denotes also likeness. As we find in the following:-"The words "Vava," "Yatha," "Tatha," 'Eva,' and 'Iva ' have the meaning of similarity." Therefore brahma eva means "like Brahman."

(Objection):—The Sattva guna of Prakriti causes bliss (ananda). It is light and the cause of luminosity or knowledge. This Sattva guna, by modification, becomes the cause of bliss. Therefore, the Pradhana or Matter is Anandamays and not Brahmau.

कामाच्य नानुमानापेका ॥ १ । १ । १८ ॥

सानाय Kāmāt, because of desire or willing. च Cha, and, च Na, not. सहनाय Ânumāna, the inferred one, i.e., the Pradhāna. चीचा Apekṣā, necessity.

18. Because of wishing, the Anandamaya is not Pradhâna.—18.

COMMENTARY.

In the Taittfriya Upanişad (II. 6. 5.) we find, distance us care sand II "He wished may I be many, may I grow forth." Thus creation proceeds by the mere wish (Kâma) of the Ânaudamaya. Now, according to Sâtikhya, Prakriti is non-sentient, and can have no Kâmanâ or wish.

Therefore, the Âuandamaya, with regard to which the word Kâma is used, can not be Prakriti.

SÛTRA I. 1: 19.

चारिन Asmin, in him, in the person called Anaudamys. चार्च Asys, his, of the Jiva. च Cha, and. त्यू Tat, that, (fearlessness.) चेन Yogam, union. चारित dasti, teaches (druti).

19. The Anandamaya is not Pradhana, for the additional reason that the Sruti teaches two-fold Yoga of the Jiva with it.—19.

COMMENTARY.

When a Jiva is fully devoted to this Being of Bliss, he obtains fear-lessness; while if he is not fully devoted, he is met with terror. For so says the Sruti (Taitt. II. 7. 2).

यदा होवैच प्तस्मिकहृत्येऽ नारुचेऽनिरुक्तेऽनिरुक्तेऽनिरुक्ते। प्रयातहा विन्द्ते । प्रयसोश्मयं गता भवति । यदा होवैच प्तस्मिकुद्रमन्तरं कुस्ते । प्रयातस्य भयं भवति । तस्येव भयं विदुचो मन्यानस्य ।

"When he finds freedom from fear, and rest in that which is Invisible, Incorporeal, Undefined, unsupported, then he has obtained the Fearless. For if he makes but the smallest separation from It, there is fear for him. But that fear exists only for one who thinks himself wise, (not for the true sage)."

This teaching has no bearing with regard to Pradhana, for according to Sankhya, it is the separation from Pradhana that gives fearlessness, while it is union with Pradhana which is the cause of bondage and all fear. Thus Pradhana has all the attributes diametrically opposed to those of the Anandamaya; for union with the Anandamaya produces fearlessness, while the slightest separation from Him, is the cause of all fear. Thus it has been established that the Saviour Hari alone is the Anandamaya, etc., and neither Jiva nor Prakriti is so.

Now that which is the white light of the sun that indeed is Rik, again that which is the blue, exceeding dark light of the sun, that verily is Saman; thus Saman (darkness) is refuged in that Rik (brightness); therefore, the Saman is sung as refuged on the Rik. Now the Sa is the white light of the sun; and the blue and deep dark is Ama, and that makes Sama.
- 6. Now that (Being residing inside Vayu and Sarasvati) which is seen in the sun, (in meditation) as full of intense joy, with joy as beard, joy as hair, joy all together to the very tips of his nails.
- 7. His two eyes are like fresh red lotus. His (mystle) name is Ut, for he has risen (Udita) above all sins. He also, who knows this rises verily above all sins.
- 8. Rik and Sama (i. c., Sarasvati and chief Vâyu) are the ministrels of the Lord; therefore he is called Udgitha. (He who is praised as Ut) and therefore, he also who sings Him is called Udgitri. He, (the Lord, called Ut) is the Ruler of the worlds above that (above the heaven plane). He rules those worlds and awards the desired objects to the Devas. This is Adhidaivata or cosmological.

SEVENTH KHANDA.

- Now the psychological. The Rik is Speech, and the Saman is the organ of respiration. Thus respiration is seen to rest the organ of speech. Therefore, the Saman is sung as resting on the Rik. Sa is the organ of speech, and Ama is the organ of respiration. That makes Sama.
- 2. The eye is the Rik, and the Jîva is the Slman. This Slman is seen to rost on the Rik, therefore the Saman is sung to rost on the Rik; St is the eye, and Ama the Jîva; and that makes Sama.
- 3. The ear is the Rik and the mind is the Saman; this Saman is seen to rest on the Rik; therefore, the Saman is sung as resting on the Rik. St is the ear, Ama is the mind. That makes Sama.
- 4. Now the white light of the eye is indeed Rik, and the blue exceeding dark light of the eye is Saman. This Saman is refuged on that Rik. Therefore the Saman is sung as refuged in the Rik. Sa is the white light of the eye, Ama is the blue exceeding dark light, and that makes Sama.
- 5. Now the person that is seen in the eye is the all-wise, all-harmonious, and uplifter of all. He is all-adorable, He is all-full. The form of that person in the eye is the same as the form of the other person in the sun, the ministrels of the one are the ministrels of the other, the name Ut of the one, is the name of the other.
- 6. He is the Lord, who rules the worlds beneath the physical, and awards all the wishes of men. Therefore all, who sing any sing sing really to Him, and thus really from Him they obtain all wealth.
- 7. Now he who knowing this sings a Saman, sings to both, he really sings as if inspired by Him, and obtains the worlds beyond that and the wishes of the devas.
- 8. Now through this alone he obtains all the lower worlds and the desires of human beings. Therefore, the Udgatri who knows this should say:—"To accomplish what particular desire of yours, O Yajamana, shall I sing out?" For he, who knowing this, sings out the Saman, is able to accomplish the desires of his Yajamana through his song, yea, through his song.

(Doubt):—Now arises this doubt. Who is this wonderful person, seen in the orb of the sun and in the orb of the eye? Is it some Jiva, who by his extraordinary sanctity and wisdom, has attained the position of a divine personage, and resides in the solar sphere, and in the human retina? Or is it supreme Brahman?

(Parmpakea): -The being above described is a Jiva who, owing to his good deeds and wisdom, has attained this position, because he is described as possessing a body. Because he is supremely wise and holy, therefore he possesses the power of ruling the worlds and awarding the fruits of action and desires of the gods and mankind; and, therefore, the above passage teaches the worship of some highly evolved Jiva.

(Siddhanta):-To this the author answers by the following Satra:-

SÛTRA I. I : 20.

अन्तस् तद् धर्म्भोपदेशात् ॥ १ । १ । २ • ॥

dharma, His attributes, the attributes of the Supreme. The Gruti gives to this Person in the sun and the eye, attributes which solely belong to God: therefore this Person must be Brahman.

Note:—This is drietants sangati.

20. The being inside the sun and the eye is Paramatman, and not any Jiva, because the attributes of the Supreme Brahman are taught therein.—20.

He who is inside the sun and the eye, is verily the Supreme Self, and not any exalted Jiva. Why? Because in this chapter of the Clih. Up. we find attributes which are applicable to Brahman only and not to Jiva. He is said to be "apahatapapma," "above all sins:" no Jiva can be so described, for rising above all evils and destroying all karmas is the attribute of Brahman, in Him there is no trace of sin or bondage of karma, while we know that Jiva is bound by karma, and tainted with sin. No doubt, highly evolved Devas and Jivas take up the offices of ruling over the lower spheres, and fulfilling the desires of the other Jivas, and awarding the fruits of actions to them. But such evolved souls are not primary rulers of the world. Their power and action are derived from that of Brahman and are the results of their meditation on Him. Moreover meditation on those exalted Beings is not equivalent to the moditation on levara. No doubt He is described in the above passage as having a body, but merely from such a description, we are not entitled to conclude, that He is a Jiva. For in the Vedas we find.

(such as in the well-known Purusa Sükta of the Rik-Veda X. 90.) that the God is described as an Almighty Man-like being. Similarly we find in the other Upanisad passages, the same (anthropomorphic) description:—"I know that great person (purusa) of sunlike lustre, beyond the darkness, &c." All these passages of the Vedas and Upanisads show that the Supreme Brahman has an immaterial, non-Prakritik divine body of His own

SÛTRA I. I. 81.

भेवव्यपवेशाचान्यः ॥१।१।२१।

भेष Bheda, difference. - व्यक्तिकास Vyapadesat, because of declaration. Cha, and. श्राप: Anyah, another, other than the Jiva.

SÛTRA XXI.

21. The Being above-mentioned is other than Jiva. Because there is a declaration of its being separate from Jiva.—21.

COMMENTARY.

It must be admitted that the Inner Ruler, the Supreme Self is described there, and it is separate from the individual Jiva whose body is the sun: that is to say, the above passage describes Brahman and not the solar Deity. Thus in the Brihadaranyaka Upanisad, we find that a distinction is drawn between the Jiva whose body is the sun and the Inner Ruler, the Brahman, who rules even the solar Deity:—

य बादित्ये तिष्ठकादित्वादम्तरा यमादित्वो न वेद यस्यादित्वः शरीरं य कादित्वकत्तरो यमप्रत्येव त कात्वाम्तर्वाम्यस्तः।

"He who dwells in the sun (Aditya), and within the sun, whom the sun does not know, whose body the sun is, and who pulls (rules) the sun within, he is thy self, the puller (ruler) within, the immortal." (Br. Up. III. 7:9)

Therefore the Being here described is not any exalted Jiva but Braliman Himself: because the Being described in the Chhândogya, and that described in the Brihadaranyaka should be one and the same, as the texts are similar.

Adhikaraṇa VIII.—The Ákâśa of Chh. Up. I. 9. is Brahman.

(Vişaya):-In the Chhândogya Upanişad we find:-

बस्य सोकस्य का गतिरित्याकाश इति होषाच सर्वाचि ह वा हमानि भूतान्याका-शाहेब समृत्यवन्त बाकाशं अत्यस्तं वन्त्याकाशो होवैभ्यो स्यायानाकाशः प्रायका ॥ १॥ स प्य परोवरीवासुद्रीयः स प्योजनतः परोवरीयोशस्य मवति परोवरीयसे। इ कोकान् अवित य पतदेवं विद्वान् परोवरीयाधः समुद्रोधमुपास्ते ॥ २॥ तथः दैतमतिषन्या शैनक उत्रशाण्डित्याये। स्वाच्या पत्रं प्रजायामुद्रीयं वेदिष्यम्ते परोवरीये। दैश्यस्ता-वद्गिन्नोके जीवनं मध्य्यति ॥ ३॥ तथामुष्यि ज्ञोके जोक इति स य पत मेवं विद्वा-सुपास्ते परोवरीय पंच हास्यास्मि ज्ञोके जीवनं मवति तथामुष्यि ज्ञोके जोक इति कोके जोक इति ॥ ४॥

- 1. Then Sålåvatya asked "What is the goal of Brahmå?" "The All-luminous Vişņu," replied Pravåhana "For all these (mighty) Beings take their rise from the All-luminous and have their setting in the All-luminous. The All-luminous is greater than these, the All-luminous is their great refuge. He indeed is higher than the highest, the Udgitha, the infinite.
- 2. He who meditates on Udgitha as the Greater than the Great, knowing it thus to be the Supreme goal, the Greater than the Great becomes his protector, and he obtains the worlds which are greater than the Great (such as Valkuntha, &c.)
- 3. "Those among mankind who will know this Udgitha," thus said Atidhanvan, son of Sunaka, to his disciple Udara Sandilya, "will live for the entire length of the age in which they get this knowledge and for them the Supreme Brahman will be their life in this world, for that length, and also in the other world. He who knowing thus meditates on Him, the Supreme Brahman becomes his life in the uext world, yea in the next world."

(Doubt):—The doubt arises here, what is alluded to by the word Akada? Is it the primeval element ether, or Brahman?

(Pûrvapakşa):—The word âkâsa here, is 'protyle' or the primeval element, from which all other elements have come out, for the current meaning of âkâsa denotes the parent of all the elements. And we are taught that from âkâsa evolves vâyu (or all gaseous elements). Thus âkâsa, being the source of all physical elements, can not mean Brahman, but ether.

(Siddhanta: - To this objection the author answers by the following sutra: -

द्याकारास् तिक्कात् ॥ १ । १ । २२ ॥

Nors :- This is pratyudaharana sangati.

22. The word âkâśa here denotes Brahman, because the characteristic marks of Brahman are found in the above passage.—22.

The word akasa here refers to Brahman, because the characteristic marks of Brahman are found here, such as, creating all elements, sustaining all creatures, and absorbing them back into Himself. The word

"Sarva," 'all" is used in the above passage; where it says sarvani ha va imani bhûtani, verily all these beings, so it can not refer to the material akasa from which all beings do not come out. For at least the material akasa can not come out of itself. For the material akasa has come out of something else, and so it can not be the cause of its own production, therefore, the akasa above-mentioned can not be the material akasa.

Moreover, in the above passage, the word 'Eva,' 'alone,' is used in connection with akasa, showing that from akasa alone and from no other cause, come out all this universe. Thus it is an additional reason to hold that akasa here does not mean the material akasa. For we see that clay, &c., are causes of pots, &c., and so the material akasa is not the sole cause, but there are other causes also. But with regard to Brahman, all this is consistent. He is the sole cause, because He possesses all power and everything is His form. Though the word akasa in its ordinary significance means the material akasa, yet here owing to the stronger indication of the context, it applies to Para Brahman.

Adhikarana IX.—Prâna is Brahman.

(Vişaya): - In the Chhandogya Upanişad we read as follows:-

षय हैनं प्रस्ते।तोपससाद प्रस्ते।तयां देवता प्रस्तावमन्वायता ताक्ष्वेद्विद्वान्त्रस्तो-ण्यसि मूर्जा ते विपतिष्यतीति मा भगवावोत्तातमा सा देवतेति ॥ ४ ॥ प्राव इति होवाब सर्वािब ह वा इमानि भूतािन प्रावमेवाभिसंविद्यान्ति प्रावमभ्युजिहते सैवा देवता प्रस्ता-वमन्वायत्ता ताम्बेदविद्वान्त्रास्तोच्यो मूर्जा ते व्ययतिष्यत्तयोक्तस्य मयेति ॥

Then the Prastotri approached him, saying: "Sir, you said to me 'Prastotri, if you without knowing the deity which belongs to the prastava, are going to sing it, your head will fall off,' which then is the deity?"

He said:—"Breath (prana). For all these beings merge into Breath alone, and from Breath they rise again. This is the doity belonging to the prastava. If without knowing that deity, you had sung forth your hymns, your head would have fallen off, after you had been warned by me."

The whole passage is given below, for the full understanding of the argument.

- When (the crops in the land of) the Kurus were destroyed by hall stones, Uśaśti Chakrayana lived a-begging with his young wife, at Ibhya-grama. Seeing the Lord of Ibhya eating beans, he begged some from him.
- 2. (The master of the elephants) said to Usasti "I have no more except these, which are placed before me for eating." Usasti said, "give me then some of these." He gave him some of those and said, "Here is some water to drink, in this bag." Usasti said, "I shall drink impure water, if I drank what has already been drunk by another." The master of elephants said, "are not these beans also impure, as I am eating of them?"

- 3. Usasti replied "No, (these beans should not be considered unclean) because without eating them I cannot live; while the drinking of (your) water (is not an absolute necessity and) depends on my pleasure, (for it can be obtained everywhere)." Usasti having eaten himself, brought the reminder to his wife. But she had already eaten before, therefore she took them and put them away.
- 4. Usasti next morning, after leaving his bed, said to her "alas! If we could get a little of food, then we should get much wealth, for that king there, is going to offer a sacrifice: he may choose me for all the priestly posts."
- 5. His wife said to him "Alas! O husband! (There is nothing else in the house) but those (stale) beans (which you brought yesterday)." Usasti having eaten them, went to that big sacrifice (which was being performed). There he sat down near the Udgātrins who were singing hymns in the Âstāva ceremony: and then said to Prastotar priest.
- 6. Oh Prastotar! if though, without knowing the Devata invoked in the particular Prastava, art going to sing it, thy head will fall off.
- 7. O'Udgatar! if thou, without knowing the Devata invoked in the particular Udgiths, art going to sing it, thy head will fall off.
- O Pratihartar! if thou, without knowing the Devats, invoked in the particular Pratihara, art going to sing it, thy head will fall off. They indeed stopped and sat down silent.

ELEVENTH KHANDA.

- 1. Then the Sacrificer said to him "I desire to know who you are, Sir." He replied, "I am Uńasti, the son of Châkrâyana." The king said, "I had made up my mind, Sir, to appoint you sione to all these priestly offices; but not having found you, I have appointed others (priests) to these offices. (But now that I have found you) Sir! I elect you for all these priestly offices."
- 2. "Very well," said Usasti, "(These should not, however be sent away), but let them indeed sing the sacred hymns under my direction. And promise that you pay me as much wealth, as you give to all these (collectively)." The Sacrificer said, "Let it be so."
- 3. Then the Prastotri priest approached him respectfully, and said "Sir, you said to me, 'O Prastotar! if not knowing the delty related to Prastava, thou shalt sing him, thy head will fall of,' which is that devata?"
- 4. Châkrāyana said, "(Viṣṇu the Great Breath, or) the Chief Prāna is the deity of creation. Verily all these creatures merge into Prāṇa (at pralaya), and they come out of him (at creation). He alone is the deity belonging to creation (prastāva). Hadst thou sung without knowing this Lord, thy head would have fallen off, by my saying (by my warning)."
- 5. Then the Udgatri priest approached him respectfully and said, "Sir, you said to me, 'O Udgatri I if not knowing the deity related to Udgitham, thou shalt sing him, thy head will fall off I 'which is that Devata?" He said "the sun."
- 6. Chakrayana said "(Viṣṇu residing in the sun is the deity of Udgitha) verily all these singing creatures chant His praises, because he is the best and the Highest. He alone is the delty belonging to Udgitha. Hadst thou sung without knowing this Lord, thy head would have fallen off, as I had warned thee."
- 7. Then the Pratihartri aparoached him respectfully and said, "Sir, you said to me,
  'O Pratiharta, if not knowing the deity related to Pratihara, thou shalt sing him, then thy head will fall off,' which is that Devata?"
- 8. He said, "(Vianu residing in the) food (is the delty of Pratihāra). Verily all these creatures est Food, and live thereby (because Vianu dwells in food and thus maintains them). He alone is the delty belonging to Pratihāra. Hadst thou sung without knowing this Lord, thy head would have fallen off, as I had warned thee."

(Pûrvapakşa):—The Prana mentioned here is the air that circulates in the lungs. For such is the ordinary acceptance of this term, and the arising and menging of all beings in the Prana, mean that all living beings exist so long as this breath is in them, they perish when this breath goes out.

sùtra I.1.28. अतएव प्रायाः ॥ १ । १ । २३ ॥

धार्य Ata eva, for this reason, hence also, आव: Pranah, the breath. Nore:--Pratyudaharana Sangati.

23. The word prâna here refers to Brahman, for a reason similar to that given in the preceding sûtra.

COMMENTARY.

This Prâna of the Chh. Up. I. 11. 5, is the Supreme Lord and not the air of the breath. Why? Because the characteristic marks of Brahman, namely, the creation of all creatures and re-absorption of them into Himself, are attributed to this Prâna.

Adhikarana X.-The Light is Brahman.

(Visaya):—In the Chh. Up. (III. 13:7) we read:—

त्रथ यदतः परो दिको ज्वेतिर्दीप्यते विश्वतः पृष्ठेषु सर्वतः पृष्ठेष्यतुष्ठमेषुष्ठमेषु डोके-

Now that light which shines above this heaven, higher than all, higher than everything, in the highest world, beyond which there are no other worlds, that is the same light which is within man.

TWELFTH KHANDA.

- 1. The Lord called Gâyatrî is verily this All-Full, in whatever form (He may be.) Gâyatrî is speech, because (the Lord as) Speech (c. trols and commands) all beings. He sings out (the Vedas) and gives salvation to all, hence He is called (Gâyatrî).
- 2. That very Lord (who is in the sun and called) Gayatri, is indeed (the very Lord who is in the earth and called) Prithivî, the Broad. In this (form) are all these beings established. None excels this form.
- 3. That very Lord who is in the earth and called Prithivî, is indeed the very Lord who is in this soul and called Sarîra, the Joy, bliss-wisdom. In this form rest indeed these senses. None can excel this form.
- 4. That very Lord who is in the soul and called Sarira, is indeed the Lord who is in the innermost part of the soul, and called the heart. In Him rest indeed these senses. None excels this form.
- That very six-fold Gâyatrî has four feet; and that very fact is declared by a Rik Verse (Rig Veda X. 90. 3).
- 6. "Such is His greatness, yea the Lord is even greater. All souls constitute one quarter of Him. His immortal three quarters are in Heaven."
- That Gâyatrî-form of the Lord is indeed Brahman, the All-pervading. This indeed is the All-luminous Which is outside of the soul (in the physical heart).
- 8. That All-luminous, who is outside the Jiva (in the external heart) is verily the All-luminous who is inside the Jiva (pervades the soul).
- 9. That All-luminous, who is inside the Jîva, is verily the All-luminous who is in the heart of the Jîva.
- 10. That All-luminous who is in the heart, is verily the Full, the Self-determined. He who knows thus, obtains happiness, fall and independent.

THIRTEENTH KHANDA

- 1. Of this Supreme Brahman called the Heart, there are verily indeed five divine gate-keepers. He who is His eastern gate-keeper is the presiding deity of Prana, of the eye and is the sun. Let one meditate on him (as sun) as physical energy and health. He who meditates thus becomes energetic and healthy.
- Now he who is His southern gate-keeper is the presiding delty of Vyana, of the ear, and is the moon. Let one meditate on him (as moon possessed of) beauty and fame. He who meditates thus becomes artistic and famous.
- 3. Now he who is His southern gate-keeper is the presiding delty of Apana, of the organ of speech: and is Agni. Let one meditate on him (as Agni possessed of) intellectual energy and sanity. He who meditates thus becomes intellectual and sane.
- 4. Now he who is his northern gate-keeper is the presiding delty of Samana, and of wind, and he is Indra. Let one meditate on him as Indra, possessed of renown and lordliness. He who meditates thus becomes renowned and lordly.
- 5. Now he who is the central gate-keeper is the presiding deity of Udâna and the chief Vâyu and is Âkâśa. Let one meditate on him as the Principal Vâyu possessed of spiritual energy and greatness. He who meditates thus, becomes spiritually energetic and great.
- 6. These verily are the five servants of Brahman, the gate-keepers of the world of Pure wisdom and joy (also). He who knows these five servants of Brahman thus, (as) the gate-keepers (of the heart as well as) of the world of Pure wisdom and joy, gets a virtuous son born in his family; and himself enters that world of Pure wisdom and joy; because he knows those five servants of Brahman, the gate-keepers of the world of svarga.
- 7. Now the LIGHT which shines above this heaven, in the worlds higher than those of Brahms, higher than all, beyond which there are no higher worlds, (and which themselves are) the highest worlds (of their respective planes); that is verily the same LIGHT which is within the heart of) man. And of this the direct proof is this:—
- 8. Namely, the warmth which one perceives through touch here in the body. Of Him is this praise, which one hears as existing in the ears, namely, the sound like the roar of an ocean, or that of thunder, or of the burning fire. Let one meditate on Brahman, as if thus seen and heard. He who knows this thus, becomes clear seeing and celebrated; yea who knows this thus.
- (Doubt):—What is this Jyotih or light referred to here? Is it the physical light of the sun, &c.? Or is it the Supreme Brahman?

(Pûrvapakşa):—The light is the physical light of the sun, &c., because there is no mention of Brahman here in connection with it, or immediately preceding it.

(Siddhanta):—To this the author replies by the following satra:—

SÛTRA I. 1. 24.

ज्योतिश्वरणाभिधानात् ॥ १ । १ २४ ॥

ज्योतिः Jyotih, the light (mentioned in the Chhandogya is Brahman). प्रव Charaña, foot. प्रतिपानास् Abhidhânat, because of the mention.

Nore:-Pratyudaharana Sangati.

24.—The Jyotis of Chhândyogya Upanisad II. 13. 7 refers to Brahman and not to Material Light: because it is described as having (four) feet.—24.

COMMENTARY.

By the word Jyotis, we must take Brahman and not material light. Why? Because of the mention of feet. For in the Chh. Up. III. 12. 6 we read—

वाचानस्य महिमा ततो व्याचाश्चरच पूरवः पाष्ठीऽस्य सर्वा भूतानि विपवस्यायुतं विचीति ।

"Such is the greatness of it (of Brahman, under the disguise of Gâyatrîı; greater than it is a person (puruşa). His feet are all things. The immortal with three feet is in heaven (i.e., in himself)."

This shows that all creatures form but one foot of Brahman

The real sense is this. In the Chh. Up. III. 12. 6, Brahman has been described as having four quarters or feet, that very Brahman is referred to by the relative pronoun 'yat,' "that," in the subsequent passage (Chh. Up. III. 13. 7). Thus there is no break of continuity between the Brahman mentioned in the Chh. Up. III, 12. 6 and III. 13. 7. Because they are connected by the relative pronoun 'yat.' Moreover in both these passages, the word (dyu) "heaven," is mentioned; that also connects these passages. Therefore the Lord Hari of infinite glory, is the light referred to in this passage, and not any physical light of any celestial body, like the sun and the rest.

(Objection):—The feet mentioned above may refer to the feet of the metre Gayatri, which is mentioned immediately before, in the above passage; where it is said that Gayatri has four feet. (Chh. Up. III. 12. 3.)

(Answer):—To this the author answers in the following sûtra, by stating the objection in the first portion of the sûtra, and the answer in the second portion.

SÛTRA I. 1. 25.

Chhandas (of) a metre, the metre Gayatri. जिल्लामास् Abhidhanat, because of the description. न Na, not. मुद्दी Iti, thus. नेस् Chet, if. न Na not. समा Tathâ, thus; (therein, in the Brahman incarnated or in the Gayatri or symbolised in the metre). नेस् Chetas (of) mind. सर्वेश Arpana, of concentration, giving. शिवसाम् Nigadât, because of the teaching. समा Tathâ, thus, that being so, by such an interpretation. दि Hi, because, only. व्यापस् Dardanam, consistent, rational, intelligible. The phrase "the Gâyatri is all this" becomes intelligible when Gâyatri is taken as a symbol of God. The metre called Gâyatri is certainly not "all this."

25. If it be objected, that the word Jyotis does not refer to Brahman, but it denotes the Metre Gâyatrî, we reply not so; Gâyatrî there is only for the purposes of concentrating the mind in Brahman who is meditated upon as Gâyatrî. And by this explanation all becomes consistent.—25.

COMMENTARY.

But—an objection is raised—how can the four feet of Jyotis refer to Brahman, when we find that it refers to the four feet of Gâyatri? For in the above quotation, it will be seen that after mentioning that "Gâyatri is everything whatsoever exists," the text shows that Gâyatri is the speech, the earth, the body and the heart. The four-footed Gâyatri is taught in the verse five expressly as having four feet. And with regard to this Gâyatri, which has four feet, and is sixfold, a Rik is mentioned:—"Such is the greatness of it, greater than it is Purusa, &c." Now this mantra contains reference to four feet and it refers to Gâyatri and not to Brahman. How then can you say that the reference to four feet is to light (Jyotis) which is Brahman, and not to Gâyatri which is immediately referred to here.

To this objection, we reply that this Gâyatrî itself so referred to, does not mean the metre Gâyatrî, but Brahman as conceived in this symbol: for Gâyatrî is figuratively spoken as having four feet, &c., in order that meditation on such Gâyatrî may be performed. The symbolic meditation is for the sake of instructing one how to meditate. If Gâyatrî meant metre, then it would be impossible to say of it that "Gâyatrî is everything whatsoever here exists." For certainly the metre is not everything. Therefore the sûtra says 'Tathâhi Darsanam' 'so we see'—here the word Darsanam means "consistency." For by such an explanation alone, the above passage gives a consistent meaning; otherwise we are landed into the absurdity of holding a metre to be everything. Therefore, through Gâyatrî is shown the meditation on Brahman. Moreover, the author gives another reason for holding that Gâyatrî here is Brahman and not a metre.

SÛTRA I. 1. 26.

भूताविपादव्यपवेशोपपत्तेश्चेवम् ॥ १ । १ । २६ ॥

श्रुतारि Bhûtadi, the beings, &c. पाद Pada, (of) foot. व्यवदेश Vyapadesa, (of) mention, (of) declaration. यपपे: Upapatteh, because of the possibility, reasonableness. प Cha, and. एवस Evam, thus.

26. And thus only it is possible to declare that the beings, (speech, earth, &c.) are its feet.—26.

COMMENTARY.

Thus Brahman alone should be understood here as Gayatri. Why? Because beings, earth, body, and heart are referred here with regard to Gâyatri, and the four feet of Gâyatri are these four things. If the Gâyatri here did not mean Brahman, then these four things could not form its four feet, for it is absurd to speak of a metre Gâyatri that beings, earth, &c., are its feet. Therefore, the whole passage of the Chh. Up. opening with 'The Gâyatri is everything whatsoever exists," really opens with the declaration that 'Brahman is everything whatsoever exists, &c.' Thus Brahman is referred to by the relative pronoun ..... 'yat,' "that" in Chh. Up. III. 13 7. Moreover the word "heaven" also is a significant word. Its use in connection with "Light" reminds us of its use in connection with the "Gâyatri" also. Therefore the "Light" shining above heaven, is the same as the "Gâyatri" that has three of its feet in heaven.

(Objection):—But reference to Heaven with regard to Gâyatri is in the locative case, namely, heaven is the Adhâra or the support of Gâyatri. For Chh. Up. III. 12. 6 says 'Tripldasyâmritam divi.' The word 'divi' is in the locative case; and the sentence means 'immortal with three feet is in heaven.' While with regard to Jyotis, the Chh. Up. III. 13, 7, uses the ablative case, and says that "the light which shines above this heaven." Thus Jyotis is not in heaven, but above heaven, while Gâyatri is in heaven. Thus there is a difference of teaching with regard to the relation of Gâyatri and Jyotis to heaven. Therefore, these two words do not refer to the same object.

(Siddhanta):—To this we reply, this is not so. Because in both places, there is nothing contrary to the recognition. This objection and answer, the author has put in the following sûtra—

SÛTRA I. 1. 27.

उपदेशभेदात्, नेति चेन्, नोभयस्मिन्नप्यविरोधात्॥१।१।२७॥

स्पोदा Upadesa, of teaching, of grammatical construction or cases. जेदास Bhedåt, because of the difference. ज Na, not. चेस् Chet, if. ज Na, not. सम्बाधित् Ubhaysamin, in both, (whether in the ablative case or in the locative case). जाप Api, even. जापिरोधान् Avirodhât, because of the want of conflict or contradiction.

27. The objection that Brahman of the former passage cannot be recognised in the latter on account of the difference of case-terminations is not valid, because in either case, there is nothing contrary to the recognition.—27.

COMMENTARY.

The locative 'divi' and the ablative 'divah,' that is, 'in heaven' or 'above heaven,' are not contrary. For the force of the ablative in 'divah' really is that of locative. Just as in ordinary language, a parrot, although in contact with the top of a tree, is not only said to be fon the tree,' but also 'above the tree,' so Brahman also, although being in heaven, is here referred to as being beyond heaven as well.

Adhikarana XI.—Prána is Brahman.

इति वृतीये।ऽच्यायः ॥ ३ ॥

1. Pratardana, forsooth, the son of Divodása (King of Kási), came by means of fighting and strength to the beloved abode of Indra. Indra said to him: Pratardana, let me give you a boon to choose. And Pratardana answered: Do you yourself choose that boon for me which you deem most beneficial for a man. Indra said to him: No one who chooses, chooses for another; choose thyself. Then Pratardana replied: That boon to choose is no boon for me.

Then, however, Indra did not swerve from the truth, for Indra is truth. Indra said to him: Know me only; that is what I deem most beneficial for man, that he should know me. I slew the three-headed son of Tvaştri; I delivered the Arunmukhas, the devotees, to the wolves (Salavrika), breaking many treaties, I killed the people of Prahlada in Heaven, the people of Puloma in the sky, the people of Kalakanga on earth. And not one hair of me was harmed thereby, and he who knows me thus, by no deed of his is his life harmed, not by the murder of his mother, not by the murder of his father, not by theft, not by the killing of a Brahman. If he is going to commit a sin, the bloom does not depart from his face.

2. Indra said: I am prâna, meditate on me as the conscious self (Prajñatman), as life, as immortality. Life is prâna, prâna is life. Immortality is prâna, prâna is immortality. As long as prâna dwells in this body, so long surely there is life. By prâna he obtains immortality in the other world, by knowledge true conception. He who meditates on me as life and immortality, gains his full life in this world and obtains in this world immortality and indestructibility.

(Pratardana said): Some maintain here that the pranas become one, for (otherwise) no one could at the same time make known a name by speech, see a form by the eye, hear a sound with the ear, think a thought with the mind. After having become one, the pranas perceive all these together, one by one. While speech speaks, all pranas speak after it. While the eye sees, all pranas see after it. While the ear hears, all pranas hear after it. While the mind thinks, all pranas think after it. While the prana breathes, all pranas breathes after it.

Thus it is indeed, said Indra, but nevertheless there is a pre-eminence among the pranas.

8. Man lives deprived of speech, for we see dumb people. Man lives deprived of sight, for we see blind people. Man lives deprived of hearing, for we see deaf people. Man lives deprived of mind, for we see infants. Man lives deprived of his arms, deprived.

of his legs, for we see thus. But prana alone is the conscious self (prajfiatman), and having laid hold of this body, it makes it rise up. Therefore it is said, let man worship it alone as uktha. What is prana, that is prajfia (self-conciousness); what is prajfia (self-conciousness), that is prana, for together they (prajfia and prana) live in this body, and together they go out of it. Of that, this is evidence, this is the understanding. When a man, being thus asleep, sees no dream whatever, he becomes one with that prana alone. Then speech goes to him (when he is absorbed in prana) with all names, the eye with all forms, the ear with all seunds, the mind with nil thoughts. And when he awakes, then, as from a burning fire sparks proceed in all directions, thus from that self, the pranas (speech, &c.) proceed, each towards (ts place; from the pranas the gods (Agni, &c.) from the gods, the world.

Of this, this is the proof, this is the understanding. When a man is thus sick, going to die, falling into weakness and faintness, they say: His thought has departed, he hears not, he sees not, he speaks not, he thinks not. Then he becomes with that prana alone. Then speech goes to him (who is absorbed in prana) with all names, the eye with all forms, the ear with all sounds, the mind with all thoughts. And when he departs from this body, he departs together with all these.

4. Speech gives up to him (who is absorded in prana) all names, so that by speech he obtains all names. The nose gives to him all odours, so that by seent he obtains all odours. The eye gives up to him all forms, so that by the eye he obtains all forms. The ear gives to him all sounds, so that by the ear he obtains all sounds. The mind gives up to him all thoughts, so that by the mind he obtains all thoughts. This is the complete absorption in prana. And what is prana is prajaa (self-consciousness), what is prajaa (self-consciousness) is prana. For together do these two live in the body, and together do they depart.

Now we shall explain how all things become one in that prajna (self-consciousness).

- 5. Speech is one portion taken out of prajiii (self-consciousness, knowledge), the word is its object, placed cutside. The nose is one portion taken out of it, the odour is its object placed outside. The eye is one portion taken out of it, the form is the object, placed outside. The ear is one portion taken out of it, the sound is its object, placed outside. The tongue is one portion taken out of it, the taste of food is its object, placed outside. The two hands are one portion taken out of it, there action is their object, placed outside. The body is one portion taken out of it, its pleasure and pain are its object, placed outside. The organ is one portion taken out of it, happiness, joy, and offspring are its object, placed outside. The two feet are one portion taken out of it, movements are their object, placed outside. Mind is one portion taken out of it, thoughts and desires are its object, placed outside.
- 6. Having by prajñā (self-conscious knowledge) taken possession of speech, he obtains by speech all words. Having by prajñā taken possession of the nose, he obtains all odours. Having by prajñā taken possession of the eye, he obtains all forms. Having by prajñā taken possession of the ear, he obtains all sounds. Having by prajñā taken possession of the tongue he obtains all tastes of food. Having by prajñā taken possession of the two hands, he obtains all actions. Having by prajñā taken possession of the body, he obtains pleasure and pain. Having by prajñā taken possession of the organ he obtains pleasure and offspring. Having by prajñā taken possession of the two feet, he obtains all movements. Having by prajñā taken possession of mind, he obtains all thoughts.
- 7. For without prajīta (self-consciousness) speech does not make known (to the self) any word. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive that word. Without prajīta the nose does not make known any odour. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive that odour. Without prajīta the eye does not make known any form. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive. Without prajfis the ear does not make known any sound. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive that sound. Without prajfis the tongue does not make known any taste. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive that taste. Without prajfis the two hands do not make known any sot. Our mind was absent, they say, we did not perceive any sot. Without prajfis the body does not make known pleasure or pain. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive that pleasure or pain. Without prajfis the organ does not make known happiness, joy or offspring. My mind was absent, he says, I did not perceive that happiness, joy or offspring. Without prajfis the two feet do not make known any movement. Our mind was absent, they say, we did not perceive that movement. Without prajfis no thought succeeds, nothing can be known that is to be known.

8. Let no man try to find out what speech is, let him know the speaker. Let no man try to find out what odour is, let him know him who smells. Let no man try to find out what form is, let him know the seer. Let no man try to find out what sound is, let him know the hearer. Let no man try to find out the tastes of food, let him know the knower of tastes. Let no man try to find out what action is, let him know the agent. Let no man try to find out what pleasure and pain are, let him know the knower of what pleasure and pain are. Let no man try to find out what happiness, joy, and offspring are, let him know the knower of happiness, joy, and offspring. Let no man try to find out what movement is, let him know the mover. Let no man try to find out what mind is, let him know the thinker. These ten objects (what is spoken, smelled, seen, &c.) have reference to praifit (self-conciousness), the ten subjects (speech, the senses, mind) have reference to objects: if there were no objects, there would be no subjects; and if there were no subjects, there would be no objects. For on either side alone nothing could be achieved. But that (the self of prajita, consionsness, prana, life) is not many, (but one). For as in a car, the circumference of a wheel is placed on the spokes, and the spokes on the nave, thus are these objects (circumference) placed on the subjects (spokes), and the subjects on the prana. And that prana indeed is the Self of Prajita (the Self-conscious Self), blessed, imperishable, immortal. He does not increase by a good action, He does not decrease by a bad action. For He makes him, whom He wishes to lead up from these worlds, do a good deed and the same makes him, whom He wishes to lead down from these worlds, do a had deed. And He is the guardian of the world, He is the king of the world, He is the lord of the universe,—and He is my (Indra's) self, thus let it be known, yea, thus let it be known !

In the above we see that 'Pratardana' by his great valor in war went to the abode of Indra: and there a boon was granted to him. Pratardana asked the boon by the question, 'tell me that which is the best and which you deem most beneficial for a man.'

To this Indra replies by saying 'I am Prana, the intelligent-self meditate on me as life, immortality.'

(Doubt):—Is this Indra who refers to himself as prana, the intelligent-self and the object of meditation, the Jiva-Indra, the ruler of heaven? Or is he the Supreme Brahman?

(Pûrrapaksa):—The word Indra is a well-known designation of a Jîva. Therefore the prâna, read here as the synonym with Indra, also refers to Jîva. And Indra here teaches worship of himself as being most beneficent for man.

(Siddhanta):- To this the author replies by the following sutra:-

SÛTRA I. 1. 28.

प्राणस्त्रयानुगमात् ॥ १ । १ । २८ ॥

वास: Pranah, the Breath, (as used in the Kausitaki) is Brahman. तथा Tatha, appropriate to Him, thus, so. चनुन्तम् Anugamat, because of being understood.

Note. Pratyudiharana Saugati.

28.—Prâna is Brahman: that being understood from a connected consideration of the passages referring to it.—28.

When Indra refers to himself by saying 'I am prana: meditate on me as conscious-self, as immortality,' he refers to Brahman by prana and not to any Jiva or his individual self. Why?

Because the whole context of the above passage shows that the prana there means Brahman. It is said to be 'Prajnatma,' 'conscious-self.' It is said to be the bliss, the immortal, the undecaying. All these are attributes of Brahman: and cannot apply to any Jiva.

(Doubt). - But Indra is the speaker here and he refers to himself as prana. He very positively says 'know me only, I am prana'. How can then prana refer to Brahman? He further says 'I slew the threeheaded son of Tvateri. I delivered the Arunmukhas, the devotees, to the welves (Salavrika); breaking many treaties I killed the people of Prahlada &c.' All these show the Jivahood of Indra, and that he teaches his worship in this passage. Therefore in the concluding passage also. though bliss, &c., are used there, should be so interpreted as to refer to the Jiva Indra, and not to Brahman, for references to Jiva are many in this Upanisad. In fact, when Indra says "I am Prana," he teaches the worship of the Devata Indra alone in reality; just as when the Upanisad save "worship the speech as cow" (Br. Up. V. 8. 1). which teaches actually the meditation on speech. Similarly Indra teaches his own worship, as Prana; for it is the presiding deity of all power. As the Upanisad says "The Prana verily is power" (Br. Up. V. 14. 4). As Indra is very powerful, he indentifies himself with Prana, the deity of power. Therefore it teaches really the worship of a Jiva.

This objection is raised and answered in the following sûtra:—

SÛTRA XXIX.

29.—If it be objected that Brahman is not referred to here, because the speaker refers to himself: we say not so. Because we see in this passage, multitude of connections with the inner self, (which is possible only if the speaker is viewed as Brahman.)—29.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'Adhyâtma Sambandha' means having connection with the Inner self, that is to say, has reference to the attributes which are possessed only by the Supreme Self. The word 'bhûmâ' of the sûtra means 'many' or 'multitude.' In this chapter of Kaus. Up., we find with reference to Prâna many attributes which are consistently applicable to the Paramâtmâ alone: and not to any Jiva.

Firstly: Pratardana asked for the boon which was mest beneficial for man: that is to say, he asked for the means of attaining 'Mukti' (Release). The answer to this is "worship me as prana," which can only refer to Brahman. For the worship of Brahman alone can give Mukti.

Secondly: -It is said of this prana, "For he (prana) makes him, whom he wishes to lead out from these worlds, do a good deed." This shows that the Prana is the great cause that makes every activity possible. This also is consistent only with Brahman and not with Breath or Indra.

Thirdly: It is said of this Prana:—"For as in a car the circumference of a wheel is placed on the spokes, and the spokes on the nave, thus are these objects (circumference) placed on the subjects (spokes) and the subjects on the Prana." This also shows that all objects, sentient or non-sentient, are contained in the Prana. This is only possible if Prana meant Brahman.

Fourthly: -It is again said that: - "Prana indeed is the Self of Prajāa (the individual Jiva). He is the blessed, imperishable, immortal." "He is the lord of all the worlds. He is the God of all." These attributes also show that Prana refers to Brahman. Thus all these multitudes of attributes, mentioned in connection with Prana are consistent with the view that Prana means Brahman, and not any other object.

But if Indra really meant to teach the worship of Brahman, why does he say "worship me." It is really misleading. To this the author replies by the following Sûtra:—

BÛTRA I. 1. 30.

शास्त्रहष्ट्या तूपवेशो वामवेववत् ॥ १। १। ३०॥

चान्तरमा Sastra-dristya, from the view-point of Scriptura: through insight based on scripture: as a technical method of scriptural saying. The scriptures generally speak of the organ as identical with the function, such as the eye with the function of seeing. Similarly, the Jiva is spoken of as the Lord: though the soul is merely an organ of God. This mode of expression is called Sastradristi. तु Tu, but. उपरेश: Upadesah, teaching, instruction, वानरेग्य Vamadevavat, like that of Vamadeva.

SÛTRA XXX.

30. The instruction given by Indra about himself, is to be understood as spoken from that point of intuition (or ecstasy) as in the case of Vâmadeva.—30.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' of the sûtra meaning 'but' is used to remove the doubt. Though Indra describes himself as a Jiva by certain attributes, such as the killer of Tvaştri, &c, yet when he says 'worship me,' he refers to the Brahman who is the real Ego of everybody; and it is from this standpoint of Sastra or scripture that he says so.

The Sastra or scripture teaches by the method of 'identity;' namely, by identifying the function with the agent whose function it is. Thus Chh. Up. writes that

न वै वाको न वक्षूं वि न श्रोत्राधि न मनांसीति, श्रावशते, प्रावेश हो वैतानि भवति ॥

"And people do not call them, the tongues, the ears, the eyes, the minds, but the breaths 'prana, the senses). For breath are all these."

Thus we see that the Chh. Up. identifies the functions of seeing, hearing, thinking, &c., with the life whose functions they are; for prana (life-breath) is the support of the other functions of the body.

Similarly, we find in the Prasna Upanisad:-

तान् वरिष्ठः प्राच उवाच । मा मोहमापयथाञ्डमेवैतत् पञ्चधात्मार्ग प्रविभव्यत-दुवाचमवद्यय विचारयामीति ॥ ३ ॥

"Then prays (breath, spirit, life), as the best, said to them: Be not deceived, 1 slone, dividing myself fivefold, support this body and keep it." (Pr. Up. II. 3).

Now Indra had realised that the highest Self was the Controller within him and that his 'I' was only of secondary importance. This idea of self-realisation he wanted to impart to Pratardana, who was still in the meshes of his lower 'I;' and who thought that there was no higher controller within his 'I.' Indra says 'worship me as prâṇa' meaning thereby "I who function merely because of the Will of Brahman, worship Him." This is the method by which the scriptures constantly teach. Thus Vâmadeva also spoke of himself as having become everything;

मद्भा वा द्वमप्र चासीत् तदात्मानमेवावेदाहं मद्भास्मीति तस्माचत् सर्वमभवत् तची या देवानां प्रत्यवुच्यत स एव तद्भवचथर्षीचां तथ। मनुष्याचां तद्धैतत्पद्यकृषिर्वामदेवः प्रतिपेदेऽहं मनुरमव १९ स्ट्यांक्वेति ।

"Verily in the beginning this was Brahman, that Brahman knew its self only saying, 'I am Brahman.' From it all this sprang. Thus whatever Deva awakened (so as to know Brahman), he indeed became that Brahman; and the same with Risis and men. The Risi Vamadeva saw and understood it, singing, 'I was a Manu (moon), I was the sun.' Therefore, now also he who thus knows that he is Brahman, becomes all this, and even the Devas cannot prevent it, he himself is there Self." (Br. Up. I. 4. 10).

Here also Våmadeva speaks of himself, 'aham' or 'I' as Brahman. But by 'I' he really means Brahman who is the impeller of the functions of Våmadeva's "I" as well as of the "I's" of Manu, &c. It is from this point of identification that Våmadeva calls himself Manu, while Indra calls himself Pråna.

This identity of the pervader and the thing pervaded, we find stated in the Puranas also. Thus the Devas addressing Vinnu say: (Vinnu Purana I. 9.69):—

याऽयं तवागतो देव समीपं देवतागवः। स. त्वं पव जगत् स्नद्दा यतः सर्वे गतो भवान् ॥

"O Lord! This host of Devas that has come in Thy Presence is indeed Thou, because Thou O Creator! pervadest all."

So also in the Gita we read :-

सर्वं समाप्रोषि ततोसि सर्वम् ।

"Thou holdest all, therefore thou art Thyself all" (XI:40).

In ordinary language people also say that two things are one, when they are both in the same place or when there is an unity of opinion. Thus cows all become one in the evening, i.e., they are all resting in the same cow-pen, while in the day time they are grazing all over the field. This shows the unity of place. Similarly, disputing antagonists have become one, i.e., they have arrived at a concensus of opinion. Therefore, the unity between the Jiva and Brahman, as shown in the speech of Indra, is a unity of this nature, and not absolute identity.

But—an objection is raised here—admitting that there are multitudes of allusions to the attributes which exclusively belong to Brahman in the above Kausitaki passage, yet it is not possible to explain the above passage as applying to Brahman; because there are equally multitudes of indications to the contrary. Such as, "let no man try to find out what is speech, let him know the speaker." (Kaus. Up. III. 8) 'I slew the three-headed son of Tvaştri, &c.;' these are marks showing that by prâṇa is meant the life-force of the Jfva. So long as this vital force remains in the body, the man is alive. This life-force or prâna is Self-consciousness. For we find it is so stated in the following:—"As long as prâṇa dwells in this body, so long surely there is life" (Kau. Up. II. 2).

"But prana alone is the conscious-Self, having laid hold of the body makes it rise up" (Kau. Up. II. 3). Passages like these show that the prana here refers to the vital force in man. Similarly, "what is prana that is praja (Self-consciousness). What is praja that is prana. For together they live in the body and together they go out of it." (Ibid). This also shows that prana here either means the Jiva or the vital force. They are identified here in this passage—both are one as active or latent. Thus in the above chapter of the Kausitaki Upanisad we find all the three indications, namely:—1. The prana refers to Brahman. 2. It refers to Jiva also. 3. It refers to vital force as well. Therefore, all these three should be worshipped, i.e., God, Soul, and Breath. To remove this doubt the author says:—

जीवमुख्यप्राणिक्कान्, नेति चेन्, नोपासा त्रैविध्यादाश्रित-त्वादिह तद् योगात् ॥ १ । १ । ३१

जीव Jiva, the human Soul, the individual Self. हुवस्त्राच Mukhya praṇa, the chief Breath, the chief vital air. सिद्वाच Lingât, because of the characteristic mark. ज Na, not. इति lti, thus. जेक् Chet, if. ज Na, not. इत्ताचा Upāsā, meditation, worship. विश्वाच Traividhyât because of the three-foldness. जान्यत्राज् Ágritatvāt, because of being met with (in other places also), because of such texts taking shelter with or applying to Brahman in other places also. इत् Iha, here in this Kausitaki passage. तत् जोगाव Tad-yogāt, because of its appropriateness.

31. If it be said that Brahman alone is not meant there, for we find there marks of the individual Soul (Jiva) and the chief vital air (Mukhya Prâna): we say no; because then the meditation taught would become threefold (which is absurd). Therefore the marks of Jiva and prâna should be applied to Brahman, for such an application is met with in the other texts also, and of its being appropriate here too.—31.

COMMENTARY.

Though there are characteristic marks of Jiva (individual soul) and vital air in the above Upanişad, yet these two are not to be worshipped or meditated upon. Why? For then there would be three sorts of worship. When Indra says, 'Meditate on me as prana,' he uses only one sentence; and one sentence can not be used to mean three different sentences; for this goes against the maxim, "one sentence must be interpreted in one way only." The sense is this, that because in the above passage we find the characteristic marks of the human soul and the life breath; are we to interpret the other marks which apply to Brahman as applicable to the Jiva and the breath? Or are the three to be taken separately and independently? Or are we to apply the marks of Jiva and the life breath to Brahman? Thus there are three alternatives, i. a., take them all as applicable to Jiva and breath: 2. take them all separately: 3. take them all as applying to Brahman. The first alternative has already been set aside. For the marks of Brahman cannot be applied to Jiva. The second has the fault of ordaining three sorts of meditation, which is contrary to the maxim of interpretation. Now remains the third alternative. That is, are we to take the characteristic marks of Jiva and prana as applied to Brahman. To this the author says, yes. The marks of Jiva and vital air found in the above Upanisad should be applied to Brahman: because the words like Jiva and prana are applied to Brahman. Therefore, the author uses in the above sûtra the word 'asritatvad' meaning 'such is met with in other texts also.'

If it be objected that in other texts, the characteristic marks of Jiva and breath have been applied to Brahman; because there were contrary indications in those texts showing that Brahman alone was meant there. What is the indication in this chapter?

To this we reply. Here also there is such indication; for Partardanz asks "what is the most beneficial meditation for man." The reply to this is "the meditation on prana." This is an indication that Brahman is meant. Therefore, here also there is appropriateness. Therefore the author uses in the above sutra the words 'iha tad yogat' meaning "here also it is appropriate" (to use prana and Jiva indications as applying to Brahman.)

But—an objection is raised again—how can you reconcile simultaneous dwelling of the prana and prajaa, in Jiva and their going out of Jiva, in the case of Brahman. To this we reply, that the above passage means that Brahman and the energy of action (Kriya-sakti) represented by the vital prana, and the energy of consciousness (jñaña-sakti) represented by the Jiva, all three simultaneously dwell in the body and simultaneously leave it.

It is again objected, the words like prana, &c., denote certain substances having certain attributes; how could they be taken here to mean attributes and not the substances. This is not so: though certain attributes are mentioned here yet the attributes denote and include the things also. For the attribute and the substance in which they inhere are the same. Thus when Indra says 'I am prana,' 'I am conscious-Self (Prajña),' he means that he (Indra) possesses these two powers or attributes: vital energy and conscious energy, as also the substance of those energies. Therefore he says that "what is prana that is prana: what is prana that is prana." The right interpretation is that Brahman alone is to be understood by the words Indra, prana, prajña, &c., there.

But another objection is raised. What is the necessity of this adhikarana again, "meditation on prana" and identifying prana with Brahman, when in the preceding sutra, I. 1. 23, it has been shown that prana means Brahman?

To this we answer: this adhikarana is not a redundancy. In the sûtra I. 1. 23, the doubt was only with regard to the meaning of the single word prâna. In this adhikarana the doubt was not about the meaning of the word prâna, but about the whole passsage, in which there are words, and marks or indications that would have led a person meditating, to think that Jiva and breath were also meant to be meditated upon. To remove this doubt, it is declared that Brahman alone is the topic of discussion in this Kau. Up. and not Jiva or vital breath.

Therefore this adhikarana has been separately stated by the author.

Here ends the first Pada of the first adhyaya of the commentary of the holy Brahma Sûtras.

FIRST ADHYAYA.

SECOND PADA.

Adhikarana I.—The Manomaya is Brahman.

May Srî Krişna illumine my heart. He whose praises are sung by words like Manomaya (intelligent), &c.

In the First Pâda, it has been taught that the Supreme Brahman should be enquired into. He is the Cause of the whole world and is termed the Highest Person. Further it has been shown therein that certain words like Âuandamaya, Jyotis, Prâna, Âkâşa, &c., which prima facie apply to some thing else, should be construed to mean, and do mean, Brahman; because such is the samanvaya or logical construction of the sentences in which those words occur. While now in the second and third pâdas, will be shown that certain other words and sentences, in which the characteristic marks of Brahman are not so apparent, as in those of the first pâda, apply also to Him.

(Vişaya).—In the Chhândogya Upanişad in the chapter relating to the Sândilya Vidyâ (III. 14. 1) we read as follows:—

FOURTEENTH KHAŅDA.

- 1. This Brahman is indeed the Full. Let one meditate with devotion on Him as the Mover-on the-water. (Such meditation leads to faith). Next because a man is a creature of faith, as is his faith in this life so will be his condition in the next, after death. So let him generate full faith (in the Lord).
- 2. (The Lord is) Omniscient, Omnipotent, Glorious, Resolute, All-wise, the Agent, the Ordainer, the Heart's desire, the most Sweeet-scenting, the Supporter of all this, the Silent Impartial Witness.
- 3. This my Self within the heart is smaller than a corn of rice, smaller than a corn of barley, smaller than a mustard seed, smaller than a canary seed or the kernel of a canary seed. He also is my Self within the heart, greater than the earth, greater than the intermediate region, greater than the Heaven, greater than all these worlds.
- 4. He is the enjoyer of all works, all desires, all sweet odours, and all tastes. He embraces all this, and is the silent impartial (witness). This my Self within the heart is that Brahman. (Let one meditate on Him, with this idea) "when departing from this body I shall reach Him." He who has this faith (verily obtains Him), there is no doubt in it. Thus said Śaṇḍilya, thus said Śaṇḍilya.

(Doubt).—Now arises this doubt:—Is this Manomaya mentioned above, as the object of worship and meditation, the Jiva or the Param-âtman?

(Pârvapakṣa).—The words manas and prâna are used in the above passage, and we are all aware that these are the organs of the Jiva, and therefore they apply to the Jiva and not to Brahman, for He has no organs like manas or prâna. For says the Śruti:—"aprâna hy amanah subhrah" (Mundaka II. 1. 2.) "He is without manas and prâna, He is pure."

Thus prana and manas have been excluded regarding Brahman. Therefore the being referred to in the above passage is a Jiva, and not Brahman.

Though the word Brahman occurs in the opening sentence of the above passage, yet that Brahman is not to be taken as the object of meditation described as Manomaya, because the sentence "sarvam khalvidam Brahma" is really an injunction teaching santi, the person meditating must first quieten all his faculties, and in order to get this peace, he is taught to imagine every thing as Brahman. Thus it being ascertained that Manomaya, &c., refers to Jiva, the word Brahman occurring at the end, in the phrase "he my Self within the heart is that Brahman," also refers to the Jiva.

(Siddhanta).-To this the author answers:-

BÛTRA I. 2. 1.

सर्वत्र प्रसिद्धोपवेशात् ॥ १ । २ । १ ॥

श्चेष Sarvatra, everywhere, in every Vedanta passage. प्रतिद्ध Prasiddha, (of) the well-known (Brahman possessing the attributes of creation, &c.) उपरेशान् Upadeáat, because of the teaching.

1. The Being referred to in the above is the Param-Brahman, because here also is taught the well-known attributes or definition of Brahman, viz., Creator, &c., in the phrase tajjalân.—32.

COMMENTARY.

The Being referred to is verily Brahman and not Jtva, why? Because the attribute, which exclusively belongs to Brahman, which is taught in all the Vedântas, namely the Cause of the creation, &c., of the universe, is taught here also, in the formula tajjalân. Though in the upakrama (or commencement, i.e., in the passage "sarvam khalvidam Brahma.") the Brahman is taught not primarily for its own sake, but as a means of acquiring santi or mental quiessence, yet in the subsequent passage, "Manomaya, &c.," Brahman is referred to and not Jiva. The word "kratu" in the above passage means upassans or meditation. The word "manomaya" there means "he who is to be grasped by pure manas or higher intuition," as we find in the following:—manasaivanudrastavyam (Br. Up. IV 4. 19.) "He is to be seen by mind alone." As regard the passages which declare that Brahman is not to be apprehended by the mind, such as "yato vacho nivartante aprapyo manasa saha,' &c., they really mean that Brahman is not apprehended at all by the mind of the scoffer, and not totally comprehended even by the mind of the knowers of wisdom also.

He is called prâna-sartra, or prâna-bodied because he is the controller of prâna, just as the Jiva is the controller of the physical body, so the Brahman is the controller of Prânic body of the universe. Others say that the word prâna-sartra means 'He whose body is as dear to His devotees as the life is dear to all mankind. His divine form is the most dear object to his worshippers.' He is said to be without prâna, in the sense that His existence does not depend on prâna as those of ordinary creatures. He is said to be without manas, because His knowledge does not depend upon mind. Or the prohibition aprâna and amanas may apply to the non-possession of the prâkritic prâna and manas by Brahman; and not that He has no life or mind of His own. In other Srutis He is called "possessed of mind," (निवाद:). He is also said to breathe without air in some Srutis, (आविद्वादं) âtdavâtam, &c.

Others say that Manomaya refers to Brahman, because this appellation has been frequently applied to Him in the Upanisads. Thus Manomaya prâna sarira netâ (Mund. II. 2. 7). "He assummes the nature of the mind, and becomes the guide of the body of senses." Similarly in the (Taitt. Up. I. 6. 1) we find the word Manomaya applied to Him. "There is the ether within the heart, and in it there is the Person consisting of mind, immortal, golden."

So also in the (Kath. Up. VII. 9) "He is conceived by the heart, by wisdom, by the mind. Those who know this, become immortal." He is also "pranaya pranah," life of life. (Br. Up. IV. 4.18). Thus the well-known Manomaya applied in all the above passages to Brahman is referred to here in the Chhandogya also. Therefore it refers to the Supreme Self.

COMMENTARY.

The attributes like 'prâṇa-sarîra' whose body is prâṇa, whose form is light, &c., are possible in Brahman only and not in a Jîva, where they are out of place.

SÛTRA I. 2. 8.

3. The embodied one is not the Manomaya (Chh. III. 14. 2.) because those qualities are not possible in a Jiva. —34.

COMMENTARY.

The Jiva is like a glowworm before the luminosity of the Brahman, who is like a sun when compared with it. The high attributes described in that passage are not possible in a Jiva.

4. And because there is a distinction drawn therein between the agent (Jîva) and the object Brahman.—35.

COMMENTARY.

The text says.—"When I shall have departed from hence, I shall obtain Him." Here the word "Him" refers to the above-mentioned Manomaya, in the objective case, while the agent is the Jiva who says "I shall obtain." Therefore the object Manomaya is, and must be different from the agent (Jiva) who obtains it. Therefore the Manomaya is the Supreme Lord. The obtaining here is like that of a river falling into a sea.

SÛTRA I. 2. 5.

5. Because of the difference of declensions of the two words, the Manomaya is Brahman.—36.

COMMENTARY.

"He is my Self within the heart." Here by using the word 'my' in the genitive case is denoted the embodied self, the worshipper, while Manomaya is the worshipped; and is employed there in the nominative case. When in the same sentence, two words are used in two different cases, these words always denote two different objects. Therefore the Manomaya is different from the Jiva, the embodied self, the former is the worshipped, the latter is the worshipper.

BÛTRA I. 2. 6.

स्मृतेश्च॥१।२।६॥

erit: Smriteh, because of a smriti text. Tha, and.

6. So also the Smriti.—37.

COMMENTARY.

So also we find in the Gita (XVIII 61):-

र्श्यरः सर्वभूतानां हृद्देशेऽर्ज्जुन तिष्ठति । म्रामयन् सर्वभूतानि वन्त्राक्रहानि मायया ॥

'The Lord dwelleth in the hearts of all beings, O Arjuna, by His illusive power, causing all beings to revolve, as though mounted on a potter's wheel.'

Now an objection is raised, that the Manomaya of the Chhandogya cannot be Isvara, but is Jiva, because the description there is more applicable to an individual soul than to God. The text says:—" He is my Self within the heart, smaller than a corn of rice, smaller than a corn of barley, smaller than a mustard seed, smaller then a canary seed or the kernel of a canary seed." This shows that the Manomaya occupies very little space, in fact it is atomic and so cannot be God.

To remove this doubt the author says:— SUTRA I. 2. 7.

श्चर्भकौकस्त्वात् तद् व्यपदेशाच् च नेति चेन्, न, निचाय्य-त्वादेव व्योमवद्य ॥ १ । २ । ७ ॥

सर्गक Arbhaka, small. भोकस्थान् Okastvåt, because of dwelling place or abode. तद् Tad, that, of that. व्यवस्थान् Vyapadesat, because of the description or denotation. च Cha, and. न द्वति Na iti, not so. चेन Chet, if. न Na, not. निचायनसङ्ग्र Nichayyatvåt, because of meditation (in the heart). एप Evam, thus. चोनवन् Vyomavat, like space. च Cha, and.

7. Should it be said that the Manomaya can not refer to Brahman on account of the smallness of the abode, and on account of the denotation of that; we say no, because Brahman has thus to be meditated upon, and because in the same passage it is said to be infinite like space.—38.

COMMENTARY.

It is not proper to say, on the strength of the above two reasons, that the Manomaya is not Isvara, because in this very passage, it is declared to be infinite like space, and all-pervading like ether, "Greater than the earth, greater than the sky, greater than heaven, greater than all these worlds." How then do you reconcile these two conflicting statements about Manomaya? To this the author replies by saying that "It is described as minute for the sake of meditation only." This limitation or measuring the infinite Brahman is for the sake of meditation, so that one may conceive the Lord in his heart. (The highest Person, for the purposes of meditation, abides in the hearts of the meditating devotee; though he is really not so). The sense is that the all-pervading, supreme Brahman, when described as atomic, or of the size of a span, is so described sometimes, merely figuratively, and sometimes directly and truly so. Where it is figuratively so described, it means that when the devotee thanks of his heart, and of the God residing in that heart, he naturally ascribes to God, the limitations of the place where God is imagined to be. This is purely figurative. But there is another aspect, in which minuteness ascribed to Brahman is not figurative, but actually true, for though God is infinite and all-pervading, yet owing to His supreme kindness on his devotees, he through His inconceiveable power, presents Himself in their hearts actually and directly. Though He is essentially one and has one essential form, yet in the hearts of Ilis devotees, He appears in many forms. Sruti :- 'Though one He manifests Himself as many.' Though He is all-pervading, yet He becomes atomic, &c., through His mysterious inconceiveable power. This will be further explained in Sûtra 25, in the section treating on Vaisvanara. The all-pervadingness of the atom and the span-sized Brahman consists in this, that in this very form He appears simultaneously everywhere, wherever His devotees are. This simultaneous appearance of the atomic or the span-sized Brahman everywhere, thus establishes His all-pervadingness even in His manifested form.

If it be objected that if the Supreme Lord is inside the body of a Jiva, then like the Jiva, He would be subject to experience of pleasure and pain, such experiences springing from connection with bodies: to this the author replies by the following Sûtra:—

सम्भोगप्रासिरिति चेन्, न, वैशेष्यात् ॥ १ । २८ ॥

सञ्जोष Sambhoga, commensality of enjoyment. Sam =common, and blioga =enjoyment: jointness of enjoyment. आहे: Praptib, attainment, resultant. श्री

Iti, thus. The Specific cause on account of which one suffers pleasure or pain is not mere connection with body, but his Karmas done in the past.

8. If it be objected, that there will be the connection with experience of pleasure and pain, were Brahman to abide in the same body as the Jiva, we reply not so, because there is a difference peculiar with regard to this connection.—39.

COMMENTARY.

Adhikarana II.—The Eater is Brahman.

(Vişaya).—In the Katha Upanişad we find the following verse:—
यस्य ब्रह्म व सम्बन्ध उसे सवत चोवनम् । सृत्युर्यस्वीपसेचनं क इत्या देद यत्र सः ॥

"He for whom the Brahmanas and the Kastriyas have both become the food, and Death is whose sauce, who then knows where He is." (Kath. Up. I. 2. 25.)

(Doubt).—Here the words "Food" and "Sauce" indicate that there is an eater. The doubt arises who is this Eater? Is it Fire or is it the Jiva or is it the Supreme Self.

(Pûrvapakṣa).—The Fire is the Eater meant here, because there is nothing specific in that verse which would show that it is not the Fire referred to there, and the question and answer also would indicate the same thing. There is a well-known Sruti that Fire is the Eater. (Br. Up. I. 4. 6.) আলিবার্ড: ॥

Or the Eater may be the Jiva, because eating is an action, and action is appropriate to the individual soul, and not to the Supreme Self, who is free from all actions. Moreover the Sruti itself in another passage declares that the Jiva eats the sweet fruit, while the Supreme Self looks on without eating. (Mund. Up. III. 1. 1, Kath. Up. III. 1.)

द्वा सुपर्का सयुजा सकाया समानं वृक्षं परिषक्षजाते । तयारम्यः पिष्पकं स्वा-इत्यनभक्तम्यो सभिकाकशीति ।

Therefore the Eater is the Jiva.

(Siddhânta).—To this objection the author answers by the following Siddhânta Sûtra:—

SÛTRA 1. 2. 9.

श्रता चराचरप्रहणात् ॥ १ । २ । ६ ॥

चना Attå, the Eater is the Supreme. चराचर Charachara, the moveable and immoveable. पद्यान Grahanat, because of His seizing or containing, or taking up as food.

9. The Eater is the Highest Self, because the moveable and the immoveable are taken as food.—40.

COMMENTARY.

The Eater can be the Highest Self only, because the eating of the whole universe of moveable and immoveable is possible only in the case of Brahman. The words Brahmana and the Ksatriyas are merely illustrative, and the whole universe sprinkled over by Death is referred to here as the Food. Such food can have no other Eater than the Supreme Self, for no Jiva can eat the whole universe. The word "sauce or condiment" is a thing which, while itself being eaten causes other things to be eaten. Therefore while the Death itself is consumed, being a condiment as it were, it makes other things palatable. Therefore the Eater of the whole universe made palatable by Death, can mean only the Lord in His aspect of Destroyer; when at the time of Pralaya He withdraws all things within Therefore, the Supreme Self must be taken here to be the Eater. Nor is there any validity in the objection based on the text of the Mund. Up, which says that the Lord does not eat and the Jiva alone cats, for the prohibition of eating there refers to the eating of the fruit of actions. The Lord does not eat the fruit of actions of the Jiva. The Jiva alone eats such fruit. That text does not mean that the Lord has no specific eating of His own, for the Lord has His own particular objects of enjoyment; as has been explained in the commentary on that verse of the Mund. Up.

SÛTRA I. 2. 10.

प्रकरणाच्च ॥ १ । २ । १० ॥

प्रकारकार् Prakarņāt, because of the context. च Cha, and.

10. And on account of the context also the Eater is Brahman.—41.

COMMENTARY.

In the Kath Upanisad we read:-

भवारकीयान्महता महीयानात्मास्य जन्तोनिष्टिता गुहायाम् । तमकतुः पश्यति वीतशोक्षे भातुः प्रसादान्महिमानमात्मनः ।

"More subtle than the subtle, greater than the great, the Atmi is hidden in the heart of that creature. A man who is free from desires and free from grief, sees the majesty of the Self through the grace of the Creator."

This shows that the topic is that of the Supreme Self. The force of the word "And" in the Sûtra is to indicate that the Smriti is also to the same effect, as says the Gitâ—

प्रश्वासि क्षेत्रस्य पराषरस्य त्वमस्य पृज्यश्य गुरोर्गरीयान्।

"Thou art the Eater of worlds, of all that moves and stands; worthier of reverence than the Guru's Self, there is none like to Thee."

Adhikarana III.—The associate in the cave is Brahman.

(Visaya).--In the same Upanisad, valli 3, verse 1, we read :-

ऋतं पिक्ती सुद्धतस्य छोके गुहाम्प्रविष्टी परमे परास् । स्रायातपी ब्रह्मविद्धी बद्धित पञ्चाप्रयो ये च त्रिकाचिद्धेताः ॥

"There are the two, drinking their reward in the world of their own works, entered into the cave (of the heart), dwelling on the highest summit (the ether in the heart). Those who know Brahman call them shade and light; likewise, those householders who perform the Trinachiketa sacrifice."

(Doubt).—Now this text clearly refers to the Jiva who enjoys rewards of his works together with an associate coupled with it. And is this associate either Buddhi or the Prana or the Supreme Self.

(Pûrvapakṣa).—The associate must be either the Buddhi or the Prâṇa for they being the organs of the Jîva and the instruments of the enjoying, it is possible for either of them to drink the "rita" and thus share in the enjoyment of the fruit of works of the Jîva, while such enjoyment does not suit the Highest Self and in fact such enjoyment is prohibited with regard to the Highest Self. Therefore this associate of the Jîva must be either the Buddhi or the Prâṇa, which somehow have been brought into connection with the enjoyment of the fruits of works.

(Siddhânta).—To this prima facie view, the author of the Sûtra answers by the next aphorism, stating that the associate of the Jîva is the Supreme Self.

SÛTRA I. 2, 11.

गुह्राम् प्रविष्टावात्मानौहि तद्दर्शनात् ॥ १ । २ । ११ ॥

शुद्धान् Guham, in the cavity, in the heart. प्रविद्धी Pravistau, the two who entered चालानी Atmanau, the two selfs. द्वि Hi, because. तह Tat, that. वर्णनाव Darsanat, because of being seen (in the other texts also.)

11. The two who have entered the heart, are the Jiva-Atman and the Paramâtman, because such is seen in other texts also.—42.

COMMENTARY.

The two found in the cavity of the heart are the Jiva and the Lord, and not the Buddhi and the Jiva or the Prana and the Jiva. Why do you say so? For this is seen. Namely, it is seen, that in that section, the Individual Self and the Highest Self are spoken of as having entered into the heart. Thus Kuth. Up. I. 4. 7 shows that the Jiva is in the heart:—

या प्राचेन सम्भवत्विद्तिर्दे बतामयी । गुद्दां प्रविद्य तिष्ठन्तीं या भूतेमिर्व्यजायत । यसद्वे तत् ॥

"She who is co-born with the spirit, She the Infinity full of Divinity, concealed in the cavity of the heart and abiding therein, manifests herself also in the elements. This is that. (Aditi or Jiva is the spirit side or pole of creation—manifestation is from matter)."

While Kath. Up. I. 2. 2 shows that the Supreme Self is also in the heart:—

तन्युर्वेशकग्रहमञ्जाबिष्टं गुहाहितकुद्धरेष्ठम्युराबम् । अध्यास्मयागाधिगमेन देवं मत्वा बीरो प्रवेशोकी जहाति ॥

"The wise leaves behind joy and sorrow, having known the God by the yoga of concentration of Self,—Him who is difficult to be seen, who pervades the universe, who is in the heart of all, who dwells in the Muktas, the Ancient of Days."

The word "hi" or "because" in the Sûtra indicates that it is a well-known tradition of the ancients that the Jiva and the Supreme Self are in the heart. The word "pibantau" is in the dual number meaning "the two drink;" while as a matter of fact, the Jiva only drinks the fruit of its works and not the Supreme Self. The dual case is, therefore, to be understood in the same way as the phrase "There go the umbrellabearers," one of whom only carries the umbrella. Or else this may be explained that both are agents with regard to the drinking, one is the direct agent; the other is the causal agent, i.e., to say the Individual Self directly drinks, while the Supreme Self causes the individual self to drink. The phrase "shade" and "light" indicate the difference between the infinite knowledge of the Lord and the finite knowledge of the Jiva, or that the Jiva is bound down to the chain of samsara, while the Lord is above samsara.

विशेषणाच्चा। १।२।१२॥

12. Moreover on account of distinctive qualities, the associate of the Jiva in the heart is the Supreme Self.—43.

In this section of the Katha Upanisad we find distinctive attributes of the Jiva and the Lord alone, such as the Jiva is represented as the one who meditates, and the Lord as the object meditated upon, Jiva as the person attaining and the Lord as the object attained. Thus from verse I. 2. 12, quoted above it is clear that the Jiva is the subject meditating and the Lord is the object of meditation. Even in the present text also, the words "light" and " shade" distinctly point to the fact that the Jiva is possessed of small knowledge and the Lord as having all knowledge. Moreover the text I. 3. 3, declares in the passage "know the self to be sitting in the chariot" and the body to be the charioteer and the passage "But he who has understanding for his charioteer and holds the reins of the mind, he reaches the end of his journey and that is the highest place of Visnu." This refers to Jiva as that which attains. and the Paramatman as that which is to be attained. These distinctive attributes show that the associate of the Jiva is neither Prana nor Buddhi, but the Supreme Self.

Note. - We give the whole of the first nine verses of the third valli here :-

- 1. There are the two (aspects of the Lord) the drinkers of truth, existing in the body obtained by good works, both dwelling in the cavity of the heart, in the most highly splendid Param (ie., Vâyu). The knowers of Brahman and those who perform the five great sacrifices and observe the triple Nâchiketa Fire, describe these as shade and the sun.
- 2. I know the Lord Visnu, both as the Spirit in the Nachiketa Fire, and as the refuge of all His womhippers, the imperishable Supreme Brahman, the Giver of security, to the frightened voyagers on the ocean of Samsara,—the Lord dwelling in the shore opposite to Samsara (as the World-Spirit directing the Muktas).

- 5. But he who is without discrimination, and with Manas out of harmony, his senses are always uncontrolled like the unbroken horses of a driver.
- But he who discriminates, and has Mauss always harmonised. his senses are controlled, like the good horses of the driver.
- 7. He who is without discrimination, and the Manas uncontrolled, being always impure, never reaches the place, but returns again to the world.
- 8. But he who discriminates, with the Manas always harmonised and (senses) pure, verily he (reaches) that place from which he is not born again.
- 9. But the man who has reason for his charloteer, and holds the reins of Manas, he reaches the end of the road, that highest place of Visnu.

Adhikarana IV.—The Person in the eye is Brahman.

(Visaya).—In the Chh. Up. (IV. 15, 1-4) we read:—

FIFTEENTH KHANDA.

- He said: This person who is seen in the eye is the Seif, (called Vamana). This is the Immortal, the Fearless. This is Brahman. Nothing clings to this. Because (such a person resides in the eye), therefore, if any one drops melted butter or water on it, it runs away on both sides (and does not cling to the eye).
- 2. The wise call Him the Samyadvama (the most beautiful), because all objects of beauty enter into Him. All beautiful objects enter into him who knows Him thus.
- 3. He verily is called Vamani (the Giver of beauty), because He alone gives beauty to all. He who knows Him thus gives beauty to all (beings inferior to himself).
- He is also Bhāmani (Resplendent), for He shines in all worlds. He who knows this thus, shines in all worlds.
- 5. Now when such persons die, whether (their relations) perform their death ceremonies or not, they go to the plane of the Ray, from the Ray-plane to the Day-plane, from the Day-plane to the Bright-fortnightly plane, from the Bright-fortnightly plane to the Northern six-monthly plane, from the six-monthly plane to the Solar plane, from the Solar plane to the Lunar plane, from the Lunar plane to the plane of Sarasvati, (from that they reach to the plane of the chief Vâyu) who is her Lord and the beloved of God,
- 6. He leads them to Brahman. This is the path guarded by the Devas, the path that leads to Brahman. Those who proceed on that path, do not return to this round of humanity, yea, they do not return.

(Doubt.)—The doubt here arises, whether the person abiding within the eye is the reflection of the Self or some Divine Being presiding over the organ of sight or the Jiva or the Supreme Self.

(Pûrvapakea).—The Pûrvapakea maintains that it may be the reflection of the Self, for the text refers to the person seen as supported by the eye, and as directly perceived by a person in the retina of another, therefore, it must be the reflection of that person as seen in the mirror of the eye. Or it may be the presiding Deity of the organ of the eye, for we find in Bri. Up. 5. 5. 2, such a being described.

तचन्त्रससत्त्वसी स चावित्वी य यच पतस्मिमण्डके पुष्ची वधायं दक्षिजोऽस-गुरुवस्तावेताचन्याऽपस्मिन्प्रतिष्ठिती र्राह्ममिरेचोऽस्मिन्प्रतिष्ठितः प्राकेरयममुष्पित् स यदोत्कमिष्यन्मवति शुक्रमेवैतन्त्रण्डकं पद्यति नैनमेते रहमयः प्रत्वावन्ति ॥ २ ॥

"Now what is true, that is the Âditya (the suu), the person that dwells in yonder orb, and the person in the right eye. These two rest on each other, the former resting with his rays in the latter, the latter with his pranas (senses) in the former. When the latter is on the point of departing this life, he sees that orb as white only and those rays (of the sup) do not return to him."

Or it may be the individual soul or Jiva, for when the soul perceives an external object through the eye, it for the time being comes in contact with the organ of the eye, and so the person in the eye spoken of in this Chhandogya text can not be the Supreme Self, but may be any one of these three.

(Siddhanta).—To this the author replies by the following Siddhanta Satra, demonstrating that the person within the eye referred to in this text is the Lord.

SÛTRA-L 2.18.

भ्रन्तर उपपत्तेः ॥ १ । २ । १३ ॥

13. The being within the eye is the Lord, because it is more reasonable to construe the passage as applying to the Supreme Self than to anything else.—44.

COMMENTARY.

The person within the eye can be nothing else than the Supreme Self. Why? Because the description is more suitable to the Supreme Self than to anything else. Because the attributes like "being the Self of all," "being Immortal," "being supremely great" (Brahmatva) being untouched by sin," "being samyadvama," &c., are applicable only to the Supreme Self.

Norm:—The attributes of being Vámani or the leader of all and Bhámani, the Ali-Refulgent, applied to the person in the eye are appropriate in the case of the Lord alone. SÛTRA L 2. 14.

14. And because there is statement in another Upanisad, mentioning that the Supreme Self has His abode in places like the eye, etc.—45.

COMMENTARY.

In the Bri. Up. (III. 7. 18) we read that the Supreme Self has his abode in places like eye, ear, &c.

यदवस्ति तिष्ठवश्चभुवोऽन्तरो यं वसुर्न वेद यस्य वसुः शरीरं यदवसुरन्तरो यमयस्येव त वात्मान्तर्याभ्यसृतः ॥ १८ ॥

"He who dwells in the eye, and within the eye, whom the eye does not know, whose body the eye is, and who pulls (rules) the eye within, he is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the Immortal."

Now the puller within the eye, ear, &c., by taking His abode in those organs, cannot be any one else, but the Supreme Lord.

8ÛTRA I. 2. 15.

सुखविशिष्टाभिधानादेव च ॥ १ । २ । १५ ॥

हुन्स Sukha, happiness. विशिष्ट Visista, qualified by or possessing. अविधानास् Abhidhanat, because of the description. एव Eva, alone. च Cha, and.

15. And because the text refers only to that person who possesses joy, therefore it must refer to the Supreme Self, and not the Jîva, who has not joy but misery.—46.

COMMENTARY.

In a previous passage of the Chh. Up. (IV. 10. 5.) it has been said that joy is Brahman and space is Brahman. The Brahman who is described in that passage as possessing unlimited joy or bliss, is again referred to in this passage, as the person dwelling within the eye. Therefore, the context refers to Brahman, and it would be doing violence to the context, if the person within the eye is interpreted to mean a being other than the Supreme Self. No doubt, that between the passage stating that Brahman is Infinite Joy, and the present passage, there intervenes the subsidiary vidyå called the Agni Vidyå or the science of fire, but as this Agni Vidyå is subsidiary to Brahma Vidyå, it cannot be said to break the context. Therefore, the text Brahman is joy (IV. 10. 5.) is connected with the present text under discussion, (IV. 15. 1.) in spite of the intervening text of Agni Vidya.

By using the word Visieta in the Sûtra, it is indicated that attributes like Intelligence, Infinity, &c., refer to Brahman.

कुत Sruta, heard. उपनिषद् Upanisatka, Upanisad. गति Gati, way; course. प्रतिपानास Adhidhanat, because of the statement. प Cha, and.

16. And because there is description given in this passage, of the same sort of salvation, obtained by the person who worhips the person in the eye, as is obtained by persons who have heard the Upanisad and worship the Supreme Brahman.—47.

COMMENTARY.

In other texts of the Upanisad we hear of the path called the Devayana, on which go the souls of the liberated, who have heard the Upanisad and have understood the mystery of Brahman. This path by which the knowers of Brahman go to salvation, is the way by which the knower of the person in the eye also goes, for the Teacher Upakosala describes that the knower of the person in the eye goes by Devayana. For he says:—"They go to light, from light to day, &c." Since the result as regards Mukti is the same, both of the person who knows Brahman and of him who knows the person in the eye, therefore, the person in the eye and Brahman are one and the same.

The next Sûtra shows that it is not possible for the above text to mean either the reflected Self or the presiding deity of the eye or the Jiva

म्रनवस्थितेरसम्भवाच् च, नेतरः ॥ १ । २ । १७ ॥

सनपरियते: Anavasthiteh, on account of non-permanency of abode. सत्त-नवाम् Asambhavat, on account of impossibility. च Cha, and. न Na. not. इतर: Itarah, the other.

17. No other being like the reflected Self, &c., is meant by the person in the eye for two reasons:—First, because they do not have their permanent abode in the eye, and secondly, it is impossible for them to possess the attributes described in that passage.—48.

COMMENTARY.

The reflected Self, &c., do not always abide within the eye, as a rule, nor the attribute like "conditionless Immortality" is applicable to them.

Norm:—The reflected Self is seen in the eye, only when another person is near the eye, so this has not permanent abode in the eye. Similarly the Sun, the delty of the eye, does not dwell in the eye, but his rays only dwell therein. So he also has not his permanent abode in the eye. While the Jiva has his permanent abode in the heart, and not in the eye. Thus none of these three can be the person in the eye, for none of them has his permanent residence there. Similarly the attributes like Immortality, &c., do not apply to these. Therefore it must mean the Supreme Self.

Adhikarana V.—The Internal Ruler is Brahman.

(Viçaya).—In the Bri. Up. we read (III. 7. 18.) "He who dwells in the eye, whom the eye does not know, who rules the eye from within is the Self, the Internal ruler, the Immortal." In that chapter, this Internal ruler is mentioned as dwelling in the earth, the water, &c., and ruling them all from within.

यः पृषिणां तिष्ठम् पृषिणां जन्त रो यं पृषिषी न वेद् यस्य पृथिषी द्वारीरं यः पृषिषीमन्तरो यमक्तेष त जात्मान्तर्याभ्यस्तः ॥ ३ ॥ वे।असु तिष्ठज्ञस्चोऽन्तरो यमापा न विदुर्यस्वापः द्वारीरं वे।अपेऽन्तरो यमयत्वेष त जात्मान्तर्याभ्यस्तः ॥ ४ ॥ वे।ओरन्तरो वमक्तेष त जात्मान्तर्याभ्यस्तः ॥

'He who dwells in the earth, and within the earth, whom the earth does not know, whose body the earth is and who pulls (rules) the earth within, he is thy self, the puller (rules) within, the Immortal.'

'He who dwells in the water, and within the water, whom the water does not know, whose body the water is, and who pulls (rules) the water within, he is thy self, the puller fruler) within, the Immortal.'

"He who dwells in the fire, and within the fire, whom the fire does not know, whose body the fire is, and who pulls (rules) the fire within, he is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within the Immortal."

(Doubt).—Now arises the following doubt:—

Is the ruler within, mentioned in the above and similar verses in the Bri. Up., the Pradhans or the Jiva or the Supreme Self.

(Parvapakes).—The Pürvapakein says: "The ruler within is Nature, for she controls the whole universe within, and because the cause is always found in the effect as interwoven with it. Therefore, the cause is the controller of the effect and as the universe has for its cause the Pradhana or matter, therefore Pradhana is meant in this passage. Moreover, this Pradhana, though non-intelligent, is said to be the Self or Atman, because it is the giver of all happiness, and so figuratively is called Atman, or because it is all-pervading therefore, it is called Atman; and as it is Eternal, it is very appropriately called the Immortal. Or this ruler within may be a Jiva. Some highly evolved yogt, who enters easily into the hearts of others, and with equal ease vanishes therefrom, through his occult powers, and so he may very well be called the Invisible Inner Ruler, and the words "Atman" and "Immortal" may also be very appropriately applied to such a Jiva, without recourse to figure of speech. Therefore, the Ruler within is either Pradhana or a highly evolved yogin.

(Siddhânta).—This objection the author answers by the following Siddhânta Sûtra, declaring therein, that the ruler within is the Supreme

Self and not Prakriti or Jiva:-

SUTRA I. 2. 18.

म्रन्तर्याम्यिषदेवादिषु तद् धर्मव्यपदेशात् ॥ १ । २ । १८ ॥

चलकी Antaryami, the ruler within. चिषेषादिश्व Adhidaivadişu, in the Devas, &c. तम् Tat, His. धर्न Dharma, attributes व्यवस्थात् Vyapadesat, because of the statement.

18. The ruler within referred to, in the Upanisad, in respect to the Nature Forces like earth, &c., is the Supreme Self, because His attributes are distinctly pointed out in that Chapter of the Upanisad.—49.

COMMENTARY.

The ruler within spoken of in the Bri. Up. verses as ruling from within, the Nature forces, like the earth, air, water, &c., and the psychic forces like mind, senses, &c., can be none else than the Supreme Lord, for the attributes of the Inner Ruler, mentioned in that chapter, belong only to the Lord. For the Lord alone dwells within these natural forces, but is not known by them, while He knows these forces, controls them and prevades them and is supremely wise, and full of wisdom and bliss. All these are the attributes of the Lord, and cannot belong to matter or to any individual soul how high soever.

SÛTRA I. 2. 19.

न च सार्त भ्रतद् धर्माभिकापात् ॥ १।२। १६॥

म Na, not. च Cha, and. स्मानं Smarta, taught in Smriti only, namely the Pradhana and the Jiva, all that is not Éruti is Smriti, namely everything else than Antaryamin. सत्त् पूर्व A-tad-dharma==not-its-qualities, i.e., not Pradhana's qualities. स्विकायात् Abhilapat, because of the declaration.

19. The Antaryâmin is not the Pradhâna or Jîva, &c., because there is a declaration of qualities not belonging to them.—50.

COMMENTARY.

For the reasons already given, the Smarta, the thing not mentioned in the Sruti passage of the Bri. Up., but in the Smriti, namely, the root of matter &c., is not the Inner Ruler, because the text describes attributes which cannot belong to matter or Jiva. The attributes like the following are mentioned therein: which cannot possibly belong to matter or Jiva:—

चहुन्नो प्रकारमुकः स्रोताऽमते। मन्ताऽविद्याते। विद्याता नान्योऽते।ऽदित स्रोता नान्यो-तोस्तिमनः। नान्योऽतोऽदित वृद्या विद्यातेष त स्रात्मान्यर्थाम्यस्तोऽतोऽन्यदार्थम् ।

"Unperceived but perceiving, unheard but hearing, unknown but knowing." "There is no other seer but he, there is no other hearer but he, there is no other perceiver but he, there is no other knower but he. This is thy Self, the Ruler within, the Immortal. Every thing else is of evil." (Br. Up. III. 723). Every thing else than the Antaryamin is smarta, namely, a thing not specifically mentioned in the above antaryamin passage. For the attributes like the hearer of all, &c., cannot belong either to the Pradhana or the Jiva.

COMMENTARY.

The word "not" of the preceding Sûtra is understood here also. For the reasons already given, the soul of an advanced Yogin also, cannot be the Antaryâmin of this passage. Because both the Kânvas and the Mâdhyandinas read, in their respective recensions, this Antaryâmin, as different from the soul of the Yogin. The Kânvas read "yo vijñânam antaro yamayati": "He who dwells in the Vijñâna, namely, the Jîvâtman, and controls the Jîva." The Mâdhyandinas read:—"Yah âtmânam antaro yamayati," "he who dwells in the Self, and controls the Self.' Therefore the Ruler within is Hari alone. The Subâla Up., moreover, states directly that the Pradhâna and the Jîva, constitute the body of the Highest Lord. For it cays that he has the earth, water, fire, wind, ether, the Avyakta (Pradhana) and the Akara (Jiva) as his body:—"He, the Inner Self of all, the divine One, the One God Narayana." The text of the Subala is:—

कतःशरीरे निहितो गुहावां यज पके निस्तो यहन पृथिकी शरीरं यः पृथिकीमन्तरे संबर्द यं पृथिरी न केट है

"Within the body, placed in the cavity, the Unborn, the One, the Eternal, whose body is the earth, who moves within the earth, whom the earth does not know, &c."

Adhikarana VI.—The aksara is Brahman.

(Vigaya).—In the Mundaka Up. we read:—

चथ परा यया तद्शरमधिगम्यते । यखदृष्ट्रप्यममाश्रामगोत्रमध्यमध्याचे तद्पाक्षिपाइं निर्वं विश्वं सर्वंगतं सुस्कृतं तद्याक्षिपाइं निर्वं विश्वं सर्वंगतं सुस्कृतं तद्याक्षेत्रं पर्यकृतवेति परिपद्यन्ति धीराः ।

"The higher knowledge is that by which the Indestructible is apprehended. That which cannot be seen, nor selsed, which has no genus or species, no eyes nor ears, no hands nor feet, the eternal, the omnipresent, the infinitesimal, that which is imperishable, that it is which the wise regard as the source of all beings. (Mund. Up. I. 1. 6.)

दियो समूर्यः पुरकः स वासाम्यन्तरे। समः । प्रमाचा समनाः शुप्तो संस्रात् परतः परः ॥ २ ॥ -

That heavenly person is without body, is both without and within, not produced, without breath, and without mind, pure, higher than the high Imperishable. (Mund. Up. II. 1. 2.)

(Doubt).—Here arises this doubt: are these two sentences descriptive of the Prakriti and the Purusa of the Sankhyas respectively, or whether both denote the Highest Self, only.

Pûrvapakça.—The Pûrvapakçin maintains that the first refers to the Prakriti, because it enumerates attributes all of which are applicable to matter, and none of them contain attributes such as seer, &c., which would denote an intelligent being. Moreover the word Yoni, translated as source, denotes also the material cause of anything; and therefore the Imperishable or akçara of that passage is pradhâna or Prakriti. While higher than the high Imperishable of the second passage is the Individual Self, which is higher than Prakriti, which is also called Imperishable, but undergoes all modifications. Therefore, the two Imperishables of these two passages, denote the Pradhâna and the individual soul respectively.

SÛTRA I, 2. 21.

Adrisyatva, invisibility. Wiff Adi, and the rest, beginning with.
g: Gunakah, one who possesses the quality. Adrisyatvadi-gunakah, being that which possesses the qualities of invisibility, &c. wife: Dharmokteh, because of the mention of attributes.

21. The being possessing the qualities of invisibility, &c., is no other than the Highest Self, for the text declares attributes which belong to the Highest Self only.—52.

COMMENTARY.

In both these passages, that which possesses the attributes of invisibility, &c., must be understood to be the Highest Self, because they mention qualities which belong to Him alone. Thus Mund Up. I. 1. 9. says:—

वः सर्वेषः सर्वेषियस्य द्वानमयं तपः । तस्मादेतद्व्या नाम रूपमञ्च्य जायते ।

"From him who perceives all and who knows all, whose brooding (penance) consists & knowledge, from him (the highest Brahman) is born that Brahman name, form and matter (food)."

The attributes like All-knowing, &c., belong only to the Highest Self alone. Similarly, the attributes like "heavenly," "formless person" of II. 1. 2. are appropriate regarding Him alone.

The section also, in which these passages occur, relates to the Highest knowledge or para vidya, so also it must refer to Brahman and not to Pradhana or Jiva.

8ÛTRA I. 2. 22.

विशेषणभेवव्यपवेशाभ्याञ्च नेतरी ॥ १ । २ । २२ ॥

विशेष Visesana, distinction, qualifying attribute, such as Omniscient, &c. केंद्रप्याचीयाच्यात् Bheda-vyapadesabhyam, by pointing out of difference, such as the Heavenly Person, &c. प Cha, and प Na, not. पत्री Itarau, the other two, vis, the matter and the souls, the Prakriti and the Purusa of the Saukhyas.

22. The distinctive attributes (like Omniscient, &c., differentiates the Highest Imperishable from the Lower Imperishable called the Pradhâna), while the pointed references to him (as the Heavenly Person, without body, etc.) differentiates Him (from the other person called the Jîva), therefore, none of these two is intended in those two passages.—53.

COMMENTARY.

In those two passages, the reference is not to the Prakriti and Puruşa because there is a distinction as well as a difference mentioned therein. The section distinguishes the Aleara which is the source of all, from the Pradhane, by the specific epithets of Omniscient, &c., and differentiates this Akara from the individual soul, by the attributes like "Heavenly Person, without body," etc. Therefore in both these passages, the Highest Self, the Cause of all, has been described, and must be so understood.

SÔTRA I. 2. 23.

रूपोपन्यासाच ॥ १ । २ । २३ ॥

23. And because a form has been declared, with regard to this Imperishable, therefore, it must refer to the Lord and not to the Jiva.—54.

COMMENTARY.

In verse III. 1. 3. of the Mundaka Up., a form has been described which is the specific form of the Lord; therefore, the Aksara, the source of all beings, whose form is so described must be the Lord. That verse is as follows:—

यदा परयः परयते दक्तमवर्जे कर्जारमीशं पुरुषं अद्योगिम् । तदा विद्वाद् पुण्यपापे विभूय निरक्षनः परमं साम्यमुपैति ॥

"When the seer sees the golden coloured Creator and Lord of all the world, as the person who is the source of Brahmā, then he is wise and shaking off good and evil, he reaches the highest similarity free from passions."

The form thus described is neither of Prakriti nor of the Jiva.

But how do you know that this golden coloured form is of the Lord alone, and not of anything else? This question is answered by the next Sûtra:—

8ÛTRA I. 2, 24.

प्रकरणातु ॥ १ । २ । २४ ॥

जन्मजा Prakarnat, because of the context.

24. The context also shows that the form above described, is that of the Lord and not of any inferior entity.—55.

The Smriti also explains this text as referring to the Lord. Thus the Visnu Purana (VI. 5. 65. &c.) says:--

हे विश्व वैदिताने इति वावर्षकी भृतिः। परवा त्यसरप्राप्तिः सम्मेदादिमयापरा ॥ यत् तद्यक्रमञ्ज्ञातिन्यमञ्जनव्यम् । स्वित्रेद्यमरूपम्यः पाकिपादायसंयुत्तम् ॥ विश्वं सर्वगतं नित्यं भृतवेशिमकारकम् । स्वायव्याप्यं यतः सर्वं तद् वै पद्यन्ति स्र्यः ॥ तद् अश्च परमं थाम तद् प्रयेषं मे भक्तिकाम् । भृतिवाष्योदितं स्रमं तद् विष्काः परमं पद्म । तदेव मगवद् वाद्यं स्वक्षं परमात्मनः । वायके मगवद्यस्त्रायस्यासरात्मनः ॥ पदं निगदितार्थस्य सतस्यं तस्य तस्यतः । वायते येन तज्ञवानं परमन्यत् प्रयामयम् ॥ "The Sratis of the Atharvanas in the Mundaka Up. declare that two sciences ought to be known, the highest or the part vidyt by which the Imperishable is reached, and the apart vidyt consisting of Rigreda, &c. This Imperishable is unmanifest, without decay, Inconceivable, Unborn, Unchangable, Indefinable, without hands and feet, without form, All-powerful, All-pervading, Eternal, Source of all beings, without cause, pervading everything else, not pervaded by anything, from whom every thing proceeds; that verily the wise see; that is Brahman, that is the supreme goal, that ought to be meditated upon by all, who desire emancipation. That which the Sruti declares as the highest seat of Vianu is this subtle Brahman. He is known by the term Bhagavat, and this Imperishable is the essential form of the Highest Self. The term Bhagavat denotes this first Imperishable Self. Thus the essence of the human soul has been described. The Jiva that knows this Supreme Truth, knows the Highest Truth, all other Truth is lower knowledge and falls under the head of Traividys."

Adhhikarana VII.—Vaisvânara is Brahman.

(Vişaya.) In the Chhandogya Upanişad, Fifth Adhyaya, we read as follows:—

- 1. Prāchīnašāla, son of Upamanyu, Satyayajāla, son of Pulusa, Indradyumna, son of Bhallava, Jana, son of Sarkarākṣa, and Bu.ila, son of Asvatarāva, these five great sacrificers and great scholars met once together and held a discussion as to "who is our Self (the Lord to be worshipped) and what is Brahman."
- 2. They decided (to So to Uddálaka, saying): "Sirs, there is that Uddálaka, son of Aruna, who at present knows best this Âtman called Vaisvánara. Well, let us go to him." So they went to him.
- 3. But he decided: "those great sacrificers and scholars will put questions to me and I cannot tell them all: therefore let me recommend another taucher to them."
- 4. He said to them: "Sirs, Avvapati, King of Kekaya, knows at present best this Atman called Vaiévinara. Well let us go to him." They went to him,

- 5. When they arrived, the king caused proper honors to be paid to each of separately. In the morning after leaving his bed, he said to them: "(What makes you come here? Are you troubled by bad men? But there are no such people in this land). In my kingdom there is no thief, no miser, no drunkard, no irreligious nor illiterate person, no adulterer, much less an adulterers. (But if you have come to get wealth, then stay for) I am going to perform a sacrifice, sire; and I shall give you, sire, as much wealth as I give to each Ritvij priest. So stay here, please."
- 6. They replied: " May (your honor) tell (us) through what means a man may attain (release); You know at present the Supreme Self Vaisvanara. Tell us that."
- 7. He said to them "I shall give you an answer to-morrow." They went again to him next morning, with sacrificial fuel in their hands. And he without ceremony, said this to them.

He who, not knowing this Lord Vaisvanara offers an Agnihotra, he is like unto that person who removing the live-coals, offers libations on dead ashes.

- 2. But he who knowing that Lord, thus offers an Agnihotra, he offers in fact oblation to all the souls animating all bodies in all worlds.
- 3. As the tuft of the lahika reed entering into the fire is quickly reduced to ashes, thus indeed are burnt all his sins, who knowing the Lord, thus offers an Agnihotra.
- 4. Therefore, indeed, if such a knower gives what is left of his food to a Chandala even, it would be offered in the Valávánara Self of the Chandala.
- 5. On this is the following stanza:—As here the hungry infants cluster round their mother, so do all beings have recourse to Agnihotra.

In the Chh. Up. V. 11. 1 we read "what is our Self, what is Brahman" and again V. 11. 6, "You know at present that Vaisvanara Self tell us that" and further on V. 18. 1, "But he who meditates on the Vaisvanara Self as span long, he eats food in all worlds, in all beings, in all Selfs," (Chh. Up. V. 11. 6 and V. 18. 1. Further on we find a description of this Vaisvanara fire in the following terms (Chh. V. 18. 2, &c.).

"Of that Self called Vaisvanara the head is called the Sutejas, the eye is Visva-rapa, the breath is Prithakvartma, &c."

(Doubt).—Now the doubt arises, what is this Vaisvanara fire. Is it the fire, by which the food that is eaten is digested, or is it the Divinity called Agni, the presiding deity of fire, or is it the elemental fire, or is it Lord Vişnu. For Vaisvanara is used in all these four senses, and since it is a common term, its meaning is not well defined, and may mean any one of these four things. To this objection the next Sûtra gives the following reply:—

वैश्वानरः साधारणशब्दविशेषात् ॥ १ २ । २५ ॥

वेरसन्तर: Vaigvanarah, the (God called) Vaigvanara. The term Vaigvanara denotes Brahman. He who contains all men. सुर्भारस Sadharana, common सम्बद्ध Sabda, term or word विशेषान् Vigesat, because of the distinction.

25. The term Vâisvânara in the Chhândogya passage V. 11. 6., and 18. 1., denotes the Supreme Self, because this common term Vaisvânara is qualified by epithets which are distinctive attributes of the Lord.—56.

COMMENTARY.

The Vaidvanara of the Chh. Up. passage denotes Vignu, because the common term is qualified there by the attributes of Vignu. The sense is this, that though this word Vaisvanara is used in those passages as a general term, yet it denotes Visnu. Because common terms like "heaven is its head," &c., when qualifying this Vaisvanara, restrict its scope to Visnu. As the common terms Atman and Brahman are restricted to Moreover, the result which a person gets from the knowledge of Vaisvanara is such which can only be obtained from the knowledge of Thus that text says " As the fibres of the Isika reed when thrown into the fire, are burnt, thus all his sins are burnt" (V. 18. 1. & 24. 3). Now the burning of sins, is a distinctive mark of Visnu, for no one can burn away sins but He. Therefore, Vaisvanara means Vișnu. Moreover, etymologically also, the word Vaisvanara may mean Vienu; for it is composed of two words Visva meaning "all," and nara meaning "men;" namely, "He who contains all men within himself" and such a Being is Vienu. BÛTRA 1. 2. 26.

स्मर्यमाणमनुमानं स्यादिति ॥ १ । २ । २६ ॥

26. The Smriti text may also be an inferential mark of the Vaisvanara being the Highest Self.—57.

COMMENTARY.

The word "iti" denotes a reason. In the Bhagavad Gttå (XV. 14) the word Vaisvanara is expressly applied to the Lord. The land of the land of the land of the land of the bodies of breathing things." Here a truth about Visnu is declared, in a Smriti passage, and from it we may infer that the Vaisvanara Vidya taught in the Chh. Up. also refers to this mystery of Visnu. Hence Vaisvanara is Visnu.

In the next Sûtra, the author removes the doubt, that the Vaisvanara may denote the gastric fire.

BÛTRA L 2. 27.

27. If it be objected that Vaisvanara cannot be Visnu, because there are express words stating otherwise, and because it is described as abiding within the body of man, we say, no; because meditation on Visnu is thus taught: because it is impossible that it should denote anything else in this passage; and lastly, because they describe Him as having the shape of a man.—58.

COMMENTARY.

An objector says: Vaisvanara cannot be Visnu, for two reasons, first there is an express text saying that Vaisvanara is fire; and secondly, it is described as abiding within the body, and performing some functions therein. For says the text:—"Ayam Agnir Vaisvanara," this Fire (is) Vaisvanara. Here the two words "Agni" and "Vaisvanara" are shown in case of apposition, moreover in the section under discussion we find "the heart is the Garhapatya fire, &c." (Chh. Up. V. 18. 2.). It represents the Vaisvanara fire as abiding within the heart, and constituting a triad of sacred fires. Moreover, further on, it is shown that this Vaidvanara is the fire on the altar of the heart, in which internal offerings to Pranas are made. It is also represented as shaped like man and abiding within man, in a Vedic passage. For all these reasons Vaidvanara is not Visnu.

Next the author sets aside the view, that Vaisvanara of this passage means the devata called Agni, or the elemental fire.

BÛTRA I. 2. 28.

म्रतएव न देवता भूतञ्च ॥ १ । २ । २८ ॥

चार पूर्व Ata eva therefore, for this reason also. न Na, not. देवता Devata, the presiding deity of fire. चतन Bhûtam, the element of fire. च Cha, and.

28. For the same reason Vaisvanara is not the presiding deity of fire, nor the element fire.—59.

COMMENTARY.

An objector says: The presiding deity of fire is a mighty being, possessing great lordliness, power and heaven, &c., may very appropriately be its head and other members, and therefore the passage may very well apply to him. It may also apply to the elemental fire also. Thus the following mantra of the Rig Veda shows that Agni also possesses the same attributes:—(Rig Veda X 88. 3):—

वा भावना पृथिवी चामुतेमामावतान रोवसी चन्तरिक्षम् ।

"Who in the form of sun pervades the earth, the heaven and the interspace, that Fire, &c."

To this objection, we reply, that for the reasons already given, Vaisvanara is not the deity of fire, nor the elemental fire, but the Supreme Brahman. No doubt, in the mantra above quoted, Agni is spoken of in very high terms, but they are more words of praise and should not be taken in their literal sense.

NOTE: - We rather think that Agui praised in hymn 88 of Book X of the Rig Veda may very well mean the Supreme Lord or His first begotten, the Anointed, the Primal Secrifice.

The word Agni itself directly and primarily denotes the Supreme Brahman also, just like the word Vaisvanara. This is the opinion of Jaimini and the author mentions it in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA I. 2. 29.

साम्बादप्यविरोधम् जैमिनिः॥ १।२।२६॥

वाषाच् Saksat, directly. चपि Api, also. चिरिष्ण् Avirodham, no objection; no contradiction. वैभिष्: Jaiminib, the sage Jaimini.

29. Jaimini is of opinion, that the word "agni" directly may denote the Supreme Brahman, without any contradiction.—60.

COMMENTARY

As the word Vaisvanara literally means "He to whom belong all men," or "who is the leader (nara) of all (visva)," so the word agni and similar other Vedic words denote etymologically the Supreme Brahman. Agni is derived from the root "agi" to go; with the suffix 'ni.' अवनि: अस्ति: Agni thus means:—"He who leads others" or "who gives birth to all others." Angayati iti agniḥ: "the producer or generator of all," or agre nayati iti agniḥ: "the producer or generator of all," or agre nayati iti agniḥ. Therefore etymologically the word agni means Viṇṇu, and so there is no contradiction in the phrase "agniḥ vaisvanara;" for both mean the same thing.

In the above passage of the Chhandogya Upanizad under discussion, agni vaisvanara is described as having the size of a span. How can the non-limited Brahman, be limited by the measure of a pradesa or a span? To this objection the author answers by the following Sûtras:—

BÛTRA 1. 2. 80.

श्रमिव्यक्तेरित्याश्मरघ्यः ॥ १ । २ । ३० ॥

श्वभिष्यक्तेः Abhivyakteh, because of manifestation. वृति Iti, thus. श्वास्त्रपद्धः Asmarathyah, the sage Asmarathya.

30. The sage Asmarathyah is of opinion that Vaisvanara is represented as having the measure of a span, because thus He manifests himself in the heart of His devotees in meditation.—61.

COMMENTARY.

The devotees who meditate on Brahman in their heart as having the size of a span, see him of that size, because He manifests himself to them in that form. This is the opinion of Asmarathya.

SÛTRA L 2. SL

अनुस्मृतेरिति बादरिः ॥ १ । २ । ३१ ॥

बहुरहो: Anusmritch, because of remembering or meditating. इति Iti, thus.

31. The sage Bâdari is of opinion, that this measure of a span is a mental device, to facilitate meditation.—62.

COMMENTARY.

The size of the heart is that of a span, and as Brahman is meditated as abiding in the lotus of the heart, the man involuntary associates him with the size of a span. This mental association or suggestion or anusmriti is the cause why Brahman is called prades matra, the measure of a span. This is the opinion of Badari.

SÛTRA L 2. 22.

COMMENTARY.

By giving above the opinions of several sages, like Asmarathya, &c., it is not to be understood that there is any conflict between their opinions and that of Vyasa. The sage Vyasa holds all those opinions. They but reflect a portion of his mind. As says a text:

व्यासिककिताकाशाद् विच्छित्रानि कानिवित् । याने व्यवहरतयेततुरीहरू वदावियत् ।।

"Other sages severally take up as their own, a few of the judgments that form part of the spacious mind of Vyiss and make use of them, even as houses, &c., enclose portions of space." (Skanda Purāṇa).

Here ends the Second Pada of the First Adhyaya of the Vedanta Sûtras and of the Govinda Bhasya of Baladeva Vidyabhûşana.

ADHYÂYA FIRST.

PADA THIRD.

May the king of the Devas, who out of His great compassion, supports this whole universe of helpless beings, be propitious to me: may that Govinda, Lord of Supreme Bliss, draw my heart towards Him.

Adhikarana I.—The abode of heaven, &c., is God.

In this third pads or chapter, some texts will be discussed, in which there are express indications that may apply to the Jiva or Pradhans, but which however are to be construed as applying to Brahman.

Vipaya: Thus,in the Mund. Up. (II. 2. 5.) we find:—
यहिमन् थीः पृथिकी चान्तरिक्षमातं मनः सह प्रावेश्य सर्वै: ।
तमेवैकं जानय चात्मानमन्या वाचो विमुख्यय चमृतस्यैव सेतः ।

"He in whom the heaven, the earth and the sky are woven, the mind also, with all the vital airs; know Him alone as the Self, and leave off other words, He is the bank (Setu) of the Immortal."

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, whether the being spoken of as the abode of heaven, earth and so on, is the Pradhana or the Jiva or the Supreme Brahman.

(Parapakea).—The Pürvapakea maintains, that it refers to the Pradhâna, because it is the cause of all effects; therefore, it is more appropriately said to be the abode of heaven and earth, &c. And it is very rightly called the Bank of the Immortal; just as milk comes out of the udders of a cow in order to nourish the calf, so the Prakriti, though Unintelligent, engages to bring about the release of the individual soul or Purusa, and is rightly called the Bank of the Immortal. The word Âtman or Self is metaphorically applied to Prakriti, either because she gives everything pleasant to the individual soul, or because she is All-pervading. Or the above passage may refer to the Jiva, who, as enjoyer of all experiences, may well be said to be the abode of heaven and earth, for the abode of heaven and earth refers to the things experienced by the soul. Moreover it is a well-known thing that the mind and the vital airs (mentioned in the above mantra) abide in the Jiva and are characteristic attributes of the Jiva.

8ÛTRA I. 8. 1.

युभ्वाद्यायतनं स्वराब्दात् ॥१।३।१॥

- कु Dyu, heaven. सू- Bhû, earth. आदि Adi, &c., and the rest. आसतमा Ayatanam, abode. स्प Sva, peculiarly its own. श्राच्यास Sabdât, because of the word.
- 1. The abode of heaven, earth, &c., (mentioned in the Mund. Up.) is verily Brahman, because the peculiar term used about Brahman occurs therein.—65.

The peculiar term designating Brahman is the phrase "the bridge of the Immortal," a phrase which is never applied to Prakriti or Jiva. The word Setu translated as Bank or bridge, comes from the root sinoti, meaning to bind and so the phrase Amritasya setu means, "He who causes Immortality to be obtained or the Giver of Immortality." Or the word Setu may mean bridge or bank, and is used here as a simile, that is to say, Brahman is like a bridge, that thrown over rivers, &c., helps one to reach the other bank; so He is like a bridge, to cross over this ocean of Samsara and reach to the other bank which is Mukti. Therefore the phrase "the bridge of the Immortal" being peculiar to Brahman, the above passage refers to Brahman. Moreover there are other texts to the same effect, showing that Mukti is given alone by Brahman, namely, Brahman alone is the Giver of Immortality. "Knowing Him alone one crosses over death, &c.," says another text, (Svet. Up. तमेब विदित्ता-Sherwith 1). The author gives a further reason, in the next sûtra: SÛTRA.-I. 8. 2.

मुक्तोपस्टप्य व्यपदेशात् ॥ १ । ३ ॥ २ ॥

इन्द्र Mukta, the released. इपन्य Upasripya, creep ng up to, resorting to. व्यवस्थान Vyap rdesat, because of distinct pointing out, because of declaration.

2. Because it is declared, that this abode of heaven and earth, is the summit to which the Released slowly creep up.—66.

COMMENTARY.

In a subsequent mantra of the same Upanisad, we find the following declaration:—

यदा पर्यः पर्यते वन्मवर्षे कर्त्तारमीशं पुवरं ब्रह्मयानिम् । तदा विद्वान् पुण्यपापे विधूय निरञ्जनः परमं साम्यमुपैति ॥ ३ ॥

"When the seer sees the golden coloured Creator and Lord as the Person from whom Brahmā arises, then possessing true knowledge, he shakes off good and evil, and, free from passion, reaches the highest similarity."—(Mu. Up. 111. 1. 3.)

This Being whom the Released reach cannot but be Brahman.

नानुमानमतचूळव्यात् ॥ १ । १ । ३ ।

न Na, not. चातुनानन् Ânumanam, the inferred one, i. e. Matter. चन्न-सन्तर् A-tad-áabdát, because there is no word de oting it.

3. The Pradhana is not the abode of heaven and earth, because there is no word denoting it to be found in that passage.—67.

COMMENTARY.

In the passage under discussion, there is no word describing the non-sentient and unintelligent Pradhana. Therefore Pradhana, called here "the inferred one," is not the abode of heaven and earth. On the other hand, words like "omniscient," &c., are found there.

SUTRA.-1. $. 4.

प्राणभृच् च ॥ १ । ३ । ४ ॥

4. The individual Soul also is not the abode of heaven and earth, because there is no word denoting it, in that passage.—68.

COMMENTARY.

The word "not" is understood here, from the preceding sûtra: so also the clause giving the reason, namely, a-tad-sabdat "there is no word denoting it." Nor the word atman, employed in that passage, can be taken to mean the Jiva only. For the word "atman" is derived from the verb \stati "to go," and means the All-pervading Brahman, primarily; and secondarily, only it denotes the individual soul. Moreover the epithets like "all-knowing," &c., found in the above passage, are appropriate only to Brahman. Therefore, because there is absence of words denoting the Jiva in that section, therefore, the abode of heaven and earth cannot be the individual soul.

The individual soul is not meant for this additional reason also.

BÛTRA-L & &

भेदव्यपदेशात् ॥ १ । ३ । ४ ॥

5. And because the difference between the individual soul and the Supreme Self is distinctly pointed out, in that passage; therefore, the Jiva is not the abode of the heaven and earth, &c.—69.

COMMENTARY.

The phrase "know Him alone as the âtman" (II. 2. 5) distinctly shows that the Brahman alone is the true Âtman, and is separate from the Jiva.

SÛTRA.--I. 8. 6.

SÛTRA.--I. 8. 7.

स्थित्यदनाभ्यां च ॥ १ । ३ । ७ ॥

7. And on account of differences of state of the two birds, one merely abiding and the other eating, it is not the Jiva that is referred to here.—71.

COMMENTARY.

After having premised that He is the abode of heaven and earth, the Sruti goes on to say: द्वा सुपदां सपुता सजाया समानं पूरां परिषद्धजाते। तथारणः पिष्पः स्वाहस्थनस्वर्णात्रीन वाकशीति।। "Two birds of beautiful plumage, inseparable friends, nestle on the same tree. One of them eats the fruit, thinking it to be sweet, without eating the other merely abides and shines" (Mu. Up. III. 1.1).

Now this being, that merely abides and shines, would not have been Brahman, in that case only, if there were not in the preceding passage, the statement that he is the abode of the heaven and the earth, &c. For had the Brahman not been mentioned in this passage, then the sudden mention of Brahman in this bird passage, would have been irrelevant. While the description of the Jiva would not have been inappropriate, for as the Jiva is well-known, it has been described here. For this reason also the abode of heaven and earth is Brahman.

Note.— Of the two birds, the one that merely illumines, would have referred to non-Brahman, if the preceding passage (Mund. II. 2. 5) had not referred to Brahman. In order to make this "bird-passage" applicable to Brahman, it is absolutely necessary to make "the heaven-barth" passage also applicable to Brahman.

Adhikarana II.—The Fulness is Brahman.

(Visaya.) In the Chhândogya Up., in answer to the question of Nârada, the blessed Lord Sanatkumâra after describing Name, &c., says:—
"The Bhûmâ ought to be enquired into." Then Nârada says:—"teach me O Lord, the Bhûmâ." Then Sanatkumâra says:—"Where one sees nothing else, hears nothing else, knows nothing else, that is fulness bhûman.) Where one sees something else, hears something else, knows something else, that is the Little (Alpan)" (Chh. Up. VII. 23. 24'. The whole passage is given here:—

1. For the realeased soul which sees thus, which thinks thus, which understands thus, there is the vision of how the Chief Prana comes out of the Âtı an, how the Hope comes out from the Âtman, how the Steady Memory comes out of Him. 2. There is this verse about it: "the released soul does not see death, nor illness, nor pain. The released soul sees everything and obtains everything, everywhere. He becomes one, he becomes three, he becomes five, he becomes nine, and it is sa'd he becomes eleven as well, nay he becomes one hundred and eleven, and one thousand and twenty.

Right doctrine leads to right thinking. Right thinking conduces to firm meditation. When meditation is firm, all ties are loosened completely, through the grace of the Lord.

To the sage Narada, with his faults all rubbed out, the great Toacher Sanatkumāra shows the other side of darkness. Sanatkumāra is called the Great Warrior, yea he is called the Great Warrior.

The word bhûman here does not denote numerical largeness, but pervasion in the shape of fulness. For the text contrasts this bhûman with alpam or small, or little, a word donoting quantity and not number, for it says:—"Where one sees something else, that is the Little." Therefore the contrasted term must possess attributes opposite of "little," namely, "muchness" or "fulness."

(Doubt).--Here arises the doubt. Is this Bhûman, Prana or Visnu? (Pürvapakşa).—The Pürvapakşin maintains that the term bhûman means the Breath or Prâna which is the topic immediately preceding it. Says the Sruti: - "The Prana is better than Hope." After this there is no question and reply. Therefore Prana is the Bhuman. And Prana here means the individual soul, which is always associated with breath, or Prâna And Prâna also here does not mean the modification of air merely, but the Jiva. For the section commences with the declaration, "the knower of Atman (Jiva) crosses over grief" and ends with the conclusion. "all this is of the Atman (Jiva)." The whole section treats of the individual soul, therefore, the bhûman, occurring in the middle of the section, must refer to the Jiva. Moreover the phrase "where one sees nothing else, &c." is perfectly relevant with regard to the Jlva, for in dreamless sleep (susupti), when all the senses are absorbed in the Prana, there is no seeing, &c. The statement that bhûman is bliss, is also appropriate to the Jiva, for in susupti one is in bliss, as he says on awakening "I slept very happily." The whole section has thus determined the jivatman, therefore this Bhûman must be construed as applying to the Jiva.

SÛTRA I. 8. 8.

भूमा सम्प्रसावावध्युपवेशात् ॥१।३।८॥

खूना Bhûma, the Full (is Brahman). सम्बद्धाराङ् Samprasadat (because of baing greater) than the vessel of grace. The Jiva is called samprasada because it is the peculiar object of grace (prasada) on the part of the Lord, or samprasadat may mean "because possessing great joy and serenity." we Adhi, greatest, highest, above. every Upadesat, because of the teaching. The Bhūma is taught to be higher than the Jiva, the vessel of grace, i. e., the Bhūma is higher than even the Mukta Jiva.

Note.—The Bhûman is not Jiva, because it is taught as higher than Samprasida or the Released Soul. The sûtra may also be translated as, "The Bhûman is not Jiva, because it has samprasida or excessive seronity, and because it is taught as adhi or the highest."

8. The Bhûman is Brahman, because it is taught as possessing highest joy, and being above all.—72.

OR

8. Because the scripture teaches that the Bhûman is greater than the vessel of grace (the Jiva); therefore, the Bhûman is not the human soul.—72.

COMMENTARY.

The Lord Vienu is this Bhûman and not the human soul, the companion of Prana. Why? Because it is expressly taught to possess the highest joy (which the Jiva has not). The Bhûman text says, "That which is Bhûman is verily joy." Thus this bhûman is immense joy, (vipulasukha), and moreover it is taught as the last of the series, and therefore it is the highest or adhi of all. (Thus one meaning of the sûtra is that Bhûman is Brahman, because it is taught as the last of the series and therefore it is above all and because it has excessive joy). Or the Bhûman is Brahman, because in Chh. Up. VIII. 3. 4. it is expressly taught to be greater than the Samprasada or the vessel of grace (or the Jiva) the companion of Prana.

We give that passage here:-

त्रथ य एव सम्प्रसादोऽस्मान्छरीरात्समृत्याय एरं ज्योतिवयसम्पद्य स्वेन क्रपेबा-मिनिज्यस्य एव प्रात्मेति देशाचैतद्युतममयमेतदृष्ट्योति तस्य इ वा एतस्य प्रक्षाची नाम सस्यमिति ॥

"Now that Released Jiva (samprasida) after having risen from out this body, reaches the Highest Light, and appears before its True Form who is the Âtman."—Thus he spoke when asked by his pupils. This (Âtman or Vianu) is the Immortal, the Fearless, this is Brahman, and of that Brahman the name is the True, Satyam." (Chh. Up. VIII. 3. 4.)

Note:-Compare:-

व्हानेवेच सरमसादोऽस्माच्छरोरास्समुत्याय परं ज्योतिवपसम्पय स्वेन कपेचामिनि-व्याते स उत्तमः पुरुषः स तत्र पर्योति अक्षन्तीडन्तममायः स्वीमिन् यानैनं वातिमिनं नोपजन्छ स्मरिनद्छ शरीर्छ स यथा प्रयोग्य माचरचे युक्त प्रवम्वायमस्मिन्छरीरे भाको युक्तः ॥

"Thus does that Released Jiva (Samptasida), after having risen from out this body, reaches the Highest Light; and appears before its Own Form, who is the Highest Spirit. He moves about there laughing, playing, and rejoicing, be it with women, carriages, or relatives, never being conscious of persons near him (so great is his costasy). As the charioteer is appointed to the carriage so is the Prana appointed in this body." (Chh. Up. VIII. 12. 8).

The sense is this. The scripture has first taught a series of beings beginning with Name and ending with Prana, and then says "Prana then is all this. He who sees this, perceives this, and understands this. becomes an ativadin." Thus the knower of Prana is called an ativadin. But the scripture then describes a higher ativadin, when it says:-"But in reality he is an ativadin who declares the Highest Being to be the True (Satya)." Now this ativadin of the True, is different from the ativadin of the Prâna, because the word "but" introduces a new topic. It serves to set aside the meditation on Prana, and teaches that the highest stiyadin is he who declares the True to be the Highest Being. The True is here Visnu, and it (True) being mentioned as separate from Prana, the Bhûman which refers to the True, murt also be different from the Jiva and Prâna. This Bhûman is not only something different from Prâna, but greater than it. Had Prans been the Bhuman, then the instruction that it is higher then Prana becomes absurd. This Bhûman is taught as something greater than Name up to Prana: therefore it must be different from Prans (and the series below it). Since every one of the series is greater than the one preceding it; thus Speech is greater than Name, and so on; therefore, the True is greater than Prana, and consequently Bhûman is also greater than Prâna, for the teaching about Prâna precedes the teaching about Phûman. Moreover, the word Satva is a well-known term applied to the Supreme Brahman Visnu. Such as "the True, the knowledge, the infinite is Brahman." (Taitt. Up.) "We meditate on the highest Satya."

In the phrase "satyena ativadati," the force of the third case in satyena is that of hetu, that is, he declares the Highest truth, for the sake of the True, or the Supreme Self. The meditation on Praṇa is higher than meditation on Name up to Hope, therefore the person who thus meditates on Praṇa is called an ativadin, he is an ativadin compared with those below him. But the meditation on Viṣṇu being superior even to that on Praṇa; therefore he who meditates on Viṣṇu is the real ativadin. Thus it is clear that an ativadin by Praṇa is inferior to the ativadin by the True. For the same reason, the pupil entreats, "Sir, may I be an ativadin with the, True": and the teacher replies, "But we must desire to know the True."

The objection raised by the Pûrvapakşin that in the Chh. text there is no question and answer as to something greater than Prana, and therefore the Ativadin by the True is the same as the Ativadin by the Prana, (and the instruction about the Atman must be supposed to come to an end with the instruction about the Prana) is not a proper objection. The reason for this is, that we do not find that the Ativadin by the True is the same as the Ativadin by the Prana. It may be asked why does not the pupil ask the question whether there is any thing greater than Prana. To this we reply that the reason is this: - With regard to the non-sentient objects extending from name to hope-each of which surpasses the preceding one, in so far as it is more beneficial to man-the teacher does not declare that he who knows them is an Ativadin; when, however, he comes to the individual soul, there called Prana, the knowledge of whose true nature he considers highly beneficial, he expressly says that 'he who sees this, notes this, understands this, is an Ativâdin (VII. 15. 4.) The pupil, therefore, imagines that the instruction about the self is now completed, and hence asks no further question. teacher, on the other hand, holding that even that knowledge is not the highest, spontaneously continues his teaching and tells the pupil that the knowledge of the true nature of Sri Visnu, who is called the True, is the highest knowledge; and absolutely beneficial for man; and he only is an Ativadin, who proclaims the supremely and absolutely beneficial being, namely, Sri Visnu who is also called the True, that is the Highest Brahman. On this suggestion the pupil desirous to learn the true nature, worship, and means of worship, entreats the teacher, saying "Sir, may I become an Ativâdin by the True."

The opponent says, the objection has been raised that in the opening passage the word Atman has been used, and therefore in the concluding passage also, the same Atman, that is to say, the individual soul, the associate of Prana, is meant. This objection is not valid. The word Atman principally means the Supreme Self, and not the Jiva Atman or the individual self.

That Atman does not mean the individual self is proved by the subsequent passage also where it is said that from the Atman arises the Prâṇa, &c. If Atman meant the individual self, then the above statement would be incorrect, for Prâṇa does not arise from the individual self, but from Brahman. This being so, the subsequent statement "where one sees nothing else, hears nothing else, understands nothing else, that is the Bhûman," becomes valid, for we understand that this applies to the Supreme. For when one perceives the Bhûman, he at that time fails to see and perceive anything else, for when one is plunged in the infinity, he cannot have any consciousness of the finite. You cannot say that the ecstacy, which one feels, when one realises the Bhûman is the joy of dreamless sleep, and that where one sees nothing else, hears nothing else, understands nothing else, refers to the dreamless sleep called Susupti. For the consciousness of Susupti and the little joy that one feels in it, is infinitely inferior to the self-forgetfulness in Bhûman, and the bliss of its presence. To say that the individual self, in the state of Susupti, is the Bhûman is simply rediculous. Therefore, the Lord Visnu alone is the Bhûman of the passage of the Chhândogya Upanisad under discussion.

COMMENTARY.

The attributes which are ascribed to this Bhûman are suitable only with regard to the Supreme Brahman, Lord Vienu, and are applicable to nobody else. Thus: "That which is Bhûman is verily the Immortal (VII. 24 1)." Shows that Bhûman possesses innate immortality. It has innate power of self supporting. As says the text:—"Sir, in what does the Bhûman rest?" "In its own greatness" is the reply. This Bhûman is the refuge of all, as we learn from the text:—"The Self is below, above, behind, before, right and left." This Bhûman is the cause of all, for says the text: "the Prâna springs from the Self, Hope springs from the Self, Memory springs from the Self; so do Ether, Fire, Water, &c." Therefore Bhûman is Brahman and nothing else.

Adhikarana. III.—The Imperishable is God.

(Vijaya).—We read in the Brihad Aranyaka (III. 8. 6. 8):—

- 7. He replied: "O Gargi! That which is above the heaven and below the earth, which is also between the heaven and the earth, which is in the past, present and future, that is woven as warp and woof in the âkâśa."
  - "In what then is the ether woven like warp and woof."
- 8. Yājāavalkaya replied, "O Gārgl, the Brāhmaņas cali this the Akṣara (the Imperishable). It is neither coarse nor fine, neither short nor long, neither red (like fire) nor fluid (like water); it is without shadow, without darkness, without air, without ether, without attachment, without taste, without smell, without eyes, without ears, without speech, without mind, without light (vigour), without a breath, without a mouth (or door), without measure, having no within and without, it devours nothing, and no one devours it."
- (Doubt).—Here arises this doubt: what is this Akeara or the Imperishable of this passage. Does it denote Pradhana or matter; or Jiva, the individual soul or Brahman, the Supreme.
- (Parcapakea).—The Aksara here is ambiguous, and may denote any one of the above three, as it is used in that sense in Mu. Up. 1. 1. 5, &c.
- (Siddhanta).—To this Badarayana replies, by the following sutra, declaring that the Imperishable is Brahman.

BÛTRA I. 8. 10.

श्रवरमम्बरान्तपृतेः ॥१।३।१०॥

स्वयंत्र Akşaram, the Imperishable : the Brahman. सम्बद्धाल Ambaranta, end of space or ether, or up to ether. श्रृते: Dhriteh, because of supporting.

10. The Imperishable, referred to in Br. Up., III. 8. 11 is the Supreme Brahman, because we find it declared in this passage that He supports even that which is the end of ether (or every thing up to ether).—74.

COMMENTARY.

The Aksara or the Imperishable is the Supreme Brahman, because the text declares that He supports that which lies beyond ether, namely, the unevolved matter or Avyakrita. Since this Imperishable supports even the Akasa or ether, and every thing below it, He must be Brahman.

But even Pradhana supports every thing up to ether, because it is the cause of all the modified objects in the universe, and so the Imperishable may be Pradhana; or it may refer to the Jiva, which is the support of all non-intelligent objects that it experiences or enjoys. To this doubt the author answers by the next satra:—

SÙTRA I. 8. 11.

सा च प्रशासनात् ॥१।३।११।

सा Sa, that, namely, the quality of supporting every thing up to space or ether. च Cha, and, ब्रह्मसमूह Pradasanat, because of the command.

11. This supporting must refer to Brahman, because the text says that it is through command that such supporting takes place.—75.

COMMENTARY.

The supporting of every thing up to space, can only be in Brahman alone, because the text says that it is by command alone that such supporting takes place, and such Supreme command cannot belong either to Pradhana or to Jiva. The following text shows the command:—

पतस्य वा सक्षरस्य प्रशासने गागि स्यांचन्द्रमसा विश्वतौ तिष्ठत पतस्य वा सक्षरस्य प्रशासने गागि द्यांचापृथियौ विश्वते तिष्ठत पतस्य वा प्रक्षरस्य प्रशासने गागि निमेचा मुद्धती सहोरात्राण्यद्वीमासा प्रासा क्रवत्यः मंचत्सरा इति विश्वतास्तिनन्त्येतस्य वा प्रक्षरस्य प्रशासने गागि प्राच्योऽभ्या नद्यः स्यन्दन्ते इवेतेभ्यः विवेभ्यः प्रतीच्योऽभ्याया याम्च विशिमन्वेति पतस्य वा सक्षरस्य प्रशासने गागि द्वतो मनुष्याः प्रशासन्ति यजमानं देवा द्वीं पितरोऽन्वायचाः ॥ ९।।

9. "By the command of that Akṣara (the imperishable), O Gargi, sun and moon stand apart. By the command of that Akṣara, O Gargi, heaven and earth stand apart. By the command of that Akṣara, O Gargi, what are called moments (nimeṣa), hours (muhūrta), days and nights, half months, months, seasons, years, all stand apart. By the command of that Akṣara, O Gargi, some rivers flow to the East from white mountains, others to the West, or to any other quarter. By the command of that Akṣara, O Gargi, men praise those who give, the gods follow the sacrificer, the father, the darvi-offering."

Now this supporting every thing by one's mere will and command is impossible in the case of Pradhana, which being non-intelligent cannot give any command, nor does any bound Jiva can give this command nor any Mukta Jiva also.

12. The Imperishable is not Pradhâna nor Jîva, because in the same text we find description of attributes which would exclude another nature than Brahman.—76.

COMMENTARY.

In a supplementary passage in the said Upanışad, we find a description of the attributes of this Akşara, which excludes Jiva and Pradhâna, because they do not possess that nature.

तद्वा एतव्सरं गार्ग्यहर्षं दृष्ट्रभ्तश्च भोत्रमतं मन्त्रविद्वातं विद्वात् नान्यवतोऽस्ति द्रष्ट् नान्यवतोऽस्ति भोत् नान्यवतोऽस्ति मन्त् नाज्यवतोऽस्ति विद्वात्रे तस्मिन् बद्धरे गार्ग्यकाद्या बोतस्य प्रोतः इचेति ॥ ११ ॥

(Br. Ar. III. 8. 11.)

"That Imperishable, O Gargi, is unseen, but seeing, 'unheard but hearing,' unthought but thinking, unknown but knowing. There is nothing that sees but He, nothing that hears but He, nothing that thinks but He, nothing that knows but He. In that Imperishable, O Gargi, the ether is woven, warp and woof."

The Imperishable is declared here as seeing, hearing, &c., and therefore, Pradhana which is non-intelligent, is excluded; because the nature of Pradhana is jadam. Similarly, the declaration that unseen by all He sees every body, shows that Jiva is not meant, for the nature of Jiva is not all-perceiving.

Adhikarana IV.—The Puruṣa seen in the Satyaloka is Brahman.

(Visaya).—In the Prasna Up. V. 2 we find the following:—

चय हैनं दीव्यः सत्यकामः पत्रच्छ। स या ह वै तद्भगवन्मतुष्येषु प्रायबान्तमाङ्का-रममिष्यायीत । कतमं वाव स तेन लोकं जयतीति ॥ १ ॥

 Next Saibya Satyakâma asked him: "O Master! what world does he conquer by such (meditation) who amongst men unceasingly meditates on Omkâra, up to his death."

तस्मै स होवाच । पतद्वै सत्यकाम परम्चापरम्य ब्रह्म यदोङ्कारस्तस्माहिहाने-तेनैवायतनेनैकतरमन्वेति ॥ २ ॥

2. "O Satyakama! that which is denoted by Om is this Brahman, both the higher and the lower. Therefore, the knower of it, through this vehicle alone, reaches one of these two."

3. If he meditates on one measure, then by that meditation alone, after death he is welcomed by the Supreme self, and obtains another birth on this earth. The Devas of the Rig Veda lead him to a human body. He in that birth endowed with austerity, celibacy, and faith, realises the greatness of the fruit of these.

मय यदि विमाने व मनसि सम्पचते सेाउन्तरिक्षं यजुर्भिवनीयते । स सेामछे।कं स सेामछाके विभूतिमञुभूय पुनरावर्चते ॥ ४॥

4. Next if he meditates in his mind, with two measures, he is carried up by the Yajus Mautras to the Antarika or the world of the moon. Having enjoyed the vast powers of the moon-world, he returns again.

यः पुनरंतिनामात्रे बेबोमिस्येतेनैबासरेन परं पुरुषमिभ्यायीत स् तेर्जास स्यें सम्पन्नो यथा पादोदरस्त्रचा विनिम्मु ध्यत पवं ह वे स पाप्मना विनिम्मु कः स साम-भिरुतीयते ब्रह्मकोकं स प्रस्माज्ञीवधनात्परात्परं पुरिदायं पुरुषमीसते तदेती स्लोकी भवतः ॥ ५॥ स ब्र्याचास्य जरपैतजीर्य्यति न वधेनास्य दृग्यत प्रतत्स्तर्यं ब्रह्मपुरमस्मिन्कामाः समादिता प्रव चात्माऽपहतपाच्या विजरो विमृत्युविद्योको विजिद्यस्योऽपिपासः सत्य-कामः सत्यसङ्कृत्ये। यथा द्वेवेद मजा चन्चाविद्यान्ति यथाऽनुद्यासनं यं यमन्तमभिकामा भवन्ति यं जनपदं यं क्षेत्रभागं तं तमेवोवजीवन्ति ॥ ५॥

5. Then he should say: By the old age of the body, that (the ether or Brahman within it) does not age; by the death of the body, that (the ether or Brahman within it) is not killed. That (the Brahman) is the true Brahma-city (not the body). In it all desires are contained. It is the Self, free from ain, from old age, from death and grief, from hunger and thirst, which desires nothing but what it ought to imagine. Now as here on earth people follow as they are commanded and depend on the object which they are attached to, be it a country or a piece of land.

तचयेह कर्माजतो क्षेकः श्लीयत प्रविवासुत्र पुण्यजिता शीयते तच इहात्मा-नमन्तुविच वजन्येता दश्य सत्यान् कामा दलेवा स्ववेषु क्षेके व्यकामचारो भवलय य इहात्मानमञ्जविच वजन्येता दश्य सत्यान् कामा दलेवा सर्वेषु क्षेक्षेषु कामचारो भवति ।। ६।।

6. "And as here on earth, whatever has been acquired by exertion, perishes, so perishes whatever is acquired for the next world by sacrifices and other good actions performed on earth. Those who depart from hence after having discovered the self and those true desires, for them there is freedom in all the worlds,

(Doubt).—The question here arises: What is this dahara âkâsa in the lotus of the heart. Is it the material space or ether or, is it the Jîva or is it the Lord Vişnu?

(Pûrvapakşa).—It is the element called ether, for the word Akasa has the well-known meaning of ether or space, or it may be the Jiva or the individual self, because it is spoken of here as the Lord of the city of the body and occupying a small space.

(Siddhânta).—The author replies to this objection by declaring tha the dahara âkâsa or the "small ether" is Brahman.

SÛTRA I. 8. 14.

वहर उत्तरेभ्यः ॥ १ । ३ १४ ॥

वस्र: Daharaḥ, the small. उत्तरेखः Uttarebhyaḥ, because of the subsequer arguments.

14. The small ether in the lotus of the heart is Brahman, because the subsequent arguments establish it to be so.—78.

COMMENTARY.

The "small ether" is Lord Visau, and nothing else. Why? Because of the subsequent arguments to be found in the supplementary passage of the text above given. If the ether within the heart did not mean Brahman, but denoted the elemental ether, then the comparison instituted in the passage "as large as that elemental ether is, so large is this ether within the heart," would be wholly inappropriate. This is one argument. The next is: The small ether is said to be the support of the earth and heaven, which could not apply to the elemental ether. Nor do the attributes like freedom from evil, &c., be appropriate to the elemental ether or to the individual self (Jiva). In this Sruti the worshipper is taught that the city of Brahman is his body, and in a portion of this body is the heart called the lotus which is the palace of Brahman, and he is taught that in this palace, in this small lotus, there is the small ether, and then what is within that small ether that is to be sought for, that is to be understood. Therefore, it refers to the Supreme Brahman, because this small ether is described to be free from evil, free from old age, free from grief, &c. Therefore, the above passage must be explained by saying that the Supreme Brahman is to be sought in the small ether which is free from evil, &c. Therefore the Dahara is Visnu and Visnu only.

SÛTRA I. 8. 15.

गतिशब्दाभ्यां तथा दृष्टं लिङ्गञ्च ॥ १ । ३ । १४ ॥

गति Gatih, going. श्रव्याभ्यां Sandabhyam, a word, i.e., on account of the going' and of the word. The going into "ether;" and the word 'etad Brahmaloka ethis (ether) is Brahma world. त्या Tatha, thus. रहन Dritam, seen. विक्रम् Lingam, mark, sign from which something may be inferred. च Cha, and.

15. Because this ether is that to which the Jivas go in deep sleep, and because there is a word connecting this small ether with the highest Brahman. This is seen in other texts also, and there is a lingam or inferential mark in this passage also, from which we infer that the small ether is Brahman.—79.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhandogya Up., Chap. 8., sec. 8, we find the following further description given of this small ether:—

तच्यथापि हिरण्यनिधि निहितमक्षेत्रका उपर्यपुपरि सम्बरन्तो न बिन्देयुरेवनेवेमाः सर्वाः प्रजा चहरक्रीच्छन्य पतं ब्रह्मकेकं न बिन्दन्यमृतेन हि प्रत्युकाः ॥

"As people who do not know the country walk again and again over a gold treesure, but do not know.

"Thus do all these creatures day after day go into that Brahma-world." Chh. Up,. VIII, 3. 2).

The above passage referring to dahara or the small ether says that it is the gati or goal of all creatures, and it is described as that Brahmaloka. Therefore these two descriptions, namely, gati or goal and the word etam-that, referring to dahara as Brahma-loka show that the small ether can be nothing else than the Lord Vişnu. Moreover there are other Upanişad texts which also show that in deep sleep, soul becomes united with Brahman:—

प्रवमेष बलु सेव्येमाः सर्वाः प्रजाः सति संप्रध न विदुः सति सम्प्रधानद्द इति ॥ २ ॥ प्रवमेष बलु सेव्येमाः सर्वाः प्रजाः सतः व्यागम्य न विदुः सतः वागच्छा-मदः इति

"All these creatures having become united with the True do not know that they are united with the True;" "Having come back from the True, they know not that they have come back from the True."—(Chh. Up. VI. 9, 2, 10, 2).

The above text shows that in other parts of this Upanisad the same idea, that Brahman is the goal, is seen. And the word Brahma-loka applied to the small ether is a sign that it is the Lord Visnu meant here. This Brahmaloka cannot mean "the world of Brahma" called also the Satyaloka, because it is not possible for Jivas to go daily in their sleep to Satyaloka, while it is possible for them to enter into Brahman in their sleep, every day.

भृतेश्च महिम्नोऽस्यास्मिन्नुपलब्धेः ॥ १ । ३ । १६ ॥

16. Because it is further stated that this small ether is the support of the two worlds, a fact which is the peculiar greatness of Brahman alone, therefore this dahara must be Brahman.—80.

COMMENTARY.

In continuation of the passage "the small lotus and in it that small ether" (Chh. Up., VIII. 1. 1), the Upanisad goes on to compare this small ether with the infinite space and further teaches that all beings get harmonised when they enter into this small ether, and it further employs the term Atman or Self with regard to it, and lastly it teaches, that it is free from all sins, &c. In continuation of this, the Upanisad in VII 4. 1., declares "It is a bridge, a limitary support, that these worlds may not be confounded." The whole Chap. VIII, in fact, is one prakarana and deals with one topic. Therefore, when it uses the word "vidhritih" or 'limitary support' it refers to this dahara or small ether. Now because this majesty or greatness of supporting the worlds, is ascribed to this dahara, therefore, dahara must refer to Visnu; for who else has this glory of being the support of all world-? In fact, Visnu is expressly stated to be the support of all worlds in other places also, such as Bri. Up., IV. 4. 22.

वय व बाला स सेत्रविष्तिरेयां क्रेकामावसमेवाय ।

"He is the Lord of all, the king of all things, the protector of all things. He is a bank and a boundary, so that these worlds may not be confounded." This also shows that to be a boundary and a support of the worlds is the distinctive attribute of Lord Vienu only.

17. And because it is a settled convention to describe Brahman as ether, therefore, the small ether or chara must mean Brahman.—81.

COMMENTARY.

The word Akasa is known to have, among other meanings, that of Brahman, also; as we find in the Taitt. Up., II. 7. "For who could breathe, who could breathe forth, if that ether (skasa) were not bliss?"

(Doubt).—An objector says: this dahara or small ether may refer to the Jiva, because immediately after the word dahara, we find the description of the Jiva given in the above passage. It says:—

चय प्रव सम्मसादे। अस्मान्ति रात्ति स्थापित प्रवेश प्रवेश स्थापित प्रवेश स्थापित स्थाप

"Thus does that released soul (samprasada), having risen from this body and approached the highest light, appears in its own form. That is Self," he said "That is the immortal, the fearless, this is Brahman." (VIII. 3, 4). This objection is answered by the author in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA I. 8. 18.

इतर परामर्शात् स इति चेत्, न, असम्भवात् ॥ १ ३ । १८॥

वसर Itara, the other one, that is the Jiva. प्रान्धीच् Paramarsat, on account of reference. सः Sah, he, that is, the Jiva. यदि Iti, thus. चेष् Chet, if. व Na, not. ससम्बद्ध Asambhavat, on account of impossibility.

18. If it be objected, that there is a reference to the other, namely, the Jiva, in the dahara passage; and therefore, it means Jiva; we say no, because it is impossible that the epithets applied to dahara should apply to the Jiva.—82.

COMMENTARY.

Though there is a reference to the Jiva in the middle of that passage, yet looking to the beginning and the end, and all other epithets applied to dahara, we cannot say that it refers to Jiva. The eight epithets applied to dahara in Chh. Up., VIII. 7. 3., cannot apply to the Jiva, namely, the epithets like free from sin, free from decay, &c.

Let it be so. The attributes free from sin, free from decay, free from death, &c., mentioned in VII. 7. 1, can easily be applied to the Jiva, because the Chap. VIII shows that the whole teaching of Prajapati refers to the Jiva only. Indra had heard that Prajapati had declared that there is a self free from sin, old age, &c., and so he goes to Prajapati to enquire about this Self. Therefore, these eight attributes of the Atman given in VIII. 7. 1, may apply to the Jiva, and consequently the dahara mentioned before, may be the Jiva. This doubt is removed by the author in the following Sûtra:—

SÛTRA I. 8. 19.

उत्तराच् चेदाविर्भावस्वरूपस्तु ॥ १ । ३ । १६ ॥

इसरात् Uttarât, because of a subsequent passage. चेत् Chet, if. शाविशीष Avirbhava, manifestation. स्वक्ष्यः Svarûpah, the true nature: essential form. ह Tu, but.

19. If it be objected that from a subsequent passage, the Jiva is meant, we reply no, because that passage only declares the manifestation of the true nature of the Jiva, by means of meditation, &c.—83,

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu,' 'but,' answers the objection raised in the first half of the Sûtra. The word 'na' of the last Sûtra is understood here also. In the speech of Prajāpati reference is made to the Jīva, and it is taught that when the Jīva meditates upon Brahman, then there appear in him these eight attributes, namely, freedom from sin, death, &c. These qualities are essentially the qualities of Brahman, and they only appear or manifest in the Jīva, when it meditates on Brahman. Therefore, the Jīva is not referred to here by the word dahara, for the essential nature of Brahman is to possess these eight qualities eternally, while in the case of the Jīva these qualities are to be acquired by him by sādhana or practice. In the case of dahara these qualities are never hidden, while in the case of the Jīva these qualities are at first hidden by untruth, while later on they manifest in him. Therefore we find in the Upanişad, the statement that when it has freed itself from the body and has approached the Highest Light, then it appears in its own form. Thus there is a great difference, in the possession of these eight attributes, by the Parmatman, from all eternity; and their temporary manifestation in the Jiva. The above passage also shows, that the Jiva gets these attributes only then, when it has reached the Highest Person called the Uttama Purusa, the Highest Light, Parama Jyotih. Moreover though these eight qualities manifest in the Jiva, through sådhana, yet the Jiva can never become the bridge of the two worlds, and the support of the universe, for these attributes are the specific and distinct qualities of the Supreme Lord. Therefore, the dahara must refer to Brahman.

But if this is so, why a reference has at all been made to Jiva in this section treating of dahara, in the passage: "Now that released soul, which having risen from this body, &c."—VIII. 3. 4. This question is answered by the next Satra.

SÛTRA I. 3. 20.

म्रन्यार्थश्च परामर्शः ॥ १ । ३ । २० ॥

20. The reference to the Jiva made in this section treating of the small ether, has a different object.—84.

COMMENTARY.

The object with which this reference to the individual soul is made in this section, is in order to teach the knowledge of the Supreme Self. It shows that when the Jiva obtains such knowledge, it also possesses these eight-fold qualities belonging to the Supreme Person.

Another objection is raised. The text describes this dahara as occupying a very small space in the heart, and because dahara is so small and Jiva is also small, therefore, dahara must be Jiva mentioned subsequently. This objection is answered by the following Sûtra:—

SÙTRA I. 8. 21.

अल्पश्चतेरिति चेत् तदुक्तम् ॥ १ । ३ । २१ ॥

ज्ञाल Alpa, small. जुते: Sruteh, because of the Sruti or scriptural declaration. जुति Iti, thus. जेस Chet, if. तच्च Tad, that. उन्हाल् Uktam, has been said.

21. If it be said that the scripture describes the dahara to be very small, therefore, it must mean the Jîva, and not Brahman; we say no, for the reasons already given.—85.

COMMENTARY.

The answer to the objection raised in this Sûtra has already been anticipated in the preceding aphorism, I. 2. 7, where it is said that Brahman, though all-pervading, is imagined to be of the size of a span, in order to meditate upon Him as having that much size. It is merely to help memory, that this convention is made, that the Brahman is of the size of the heart. In fact, the text of the Upanişad shows that He is Infinite and Inconceivable.

The next Sûtra gives another reason for this conclusion. SÛTRA I 3. 22.

भ्रनुकृतेस्तस्य च ॥ १ । ३ । २२ ॥

बहुद्धाः Anukriteh, because of imitation. शुस्त्र Tasya, his. प Cha, and.

22. The Jiva cannot be Brahman or the small ether, because the text says that the Jiva imitates Brahman.—86.

The text of the Chh. Up. VIII. 7. 3., &c., shows that the eight-fold attributes therein mentioned, which are eternally present in the dahara, is acquired by the Jiva through sådhana, in the state of Mukti. This Jiva is described in that section as covered by falsehood in its prior state, and it is only when by meditation on Brahman, this covering of ignorance is torn asunder, then are manifested the eight-fold attributes of being free from sin, free from decay, &c., and it is in this state of Mukti that the Jiva, by getting the light of Parabrahman becomes like Brahman. The Jiva, therefore, merely imitates dahara, and is called dahara in a secondary sense. And it is a well-known thing that the imitation and the original are not the same. As we say in the sentence 'Hanuman imitates the wind in swiftness,' which means that Hanuman is not wind but like it. Similarly, we find in another passage that the Jiva, in the state of Mukti becomes similar to or imitates Brahman:—

यदा परयः पर्यते रुक्मवर्षे कर्त्तारमोशं पुरुषं ब्रह्मयोनिम् । तदा विद्वान् पुण्यपापे विश्वव निरम्जनः परमं साम्यमुपैति ।

When the seer (i.e., the individual soul) sees the brilliant maker, the Lord, the Person, in whom Brahmā has his source; then becoming wise and shaking off good and evil, he reaches the highest similarity, free from passions. (Mu. Up., III. I. 8.)

80TRA I. 8. 28.

चापि Api, also. स्माने Smaryate, it is traditioned.

23. The Smriti also declares this assimilation of the Jiva with Brahman, in the state of Mukti, in certain respects only.—87.

COMMENTARY.

Thus in the Gita also we find:-

द्वं वानमुपाभित्व नम साथम्यमागताः । सर्गेऽपि नेपस्रायन्ते प्रक्षपे न व्यवन्ति थ ॥

"Having taken refuge in this Wisdom and being assimilated to My own nature, they are not re-born, even in the emanation of a universe, nor are disquieted in the dissolution." (XIV. 3).

Thus this Smriti or Gita also declares that the Muktas become assimilated to the nature of Brahman and manifest some of His attributes. Therefore dahara is the Lord Hari alone, and not any Jiva.

Adhikarana VI.—He who is measured by a thumb is Brahman.

(Visaya).—In the Katha Up., II. 4. 12, we read: -

चक्गुडमात्रः पुरुषो मध्य धारमि तिष्ठति । ईशाना भूतमव्यस्य न तता विज्ञुपुष्यते । पतद्वे तत् ॥ १२ ॥ चक्गुडमात्रः पुरुषो क्योतिरिवाधूमकः । ईशानो भूतमव्यस्य स पवाच स र श्रः । पतद्वे तत् ॥ १३ ॥

The person (purusa), of the size of a thumb, stands in the middle of the Self (body) as Lord of the past and the future, and henceforward fears no more. This is that.

That person, of the size of a thumb, is like a light without smoke, Lord of the past and the future, he is the same to-day and to-morrow. This is that.

(Pûrvapakşa).—The Pûrvapakşin maintains that the person of the size of a thumb is Jiva, because in the Svetāsvatara Up., V, verses 8 and 7, the being of the size of a thumb is expressly stated to be the Jîva.

श्रक्त्युष्ठमात्रो रवितुत्यक्षः संकल्पाहंकारसमन्दितो यः। बुद्धगुर् बेनातमगुबेन बैद श्रारात्रमात्रोऽप्यपरोऽपि इष्टः ॥ ८ ॥

8. "That lower one also, not larger than a thumb, but brilliant like the sun, who is, endowed with personality and thoughts, with the quality of mind and the quality of body, is seen small even like the point of a goad."

गुवान्वयो यः फडकर्मकर्ता इतस्य तस्यैव स बोपमाका । स विश्वकप्रक्रिगु-बिजवर्गा प्रावाधिपः सम्बरित स्वकर्मीमः ॥ ७ ॥

7. "But he who is endowed with qualities, and performs works that are to bear fruit, and enjoys the reward of whatever he has done, migrates through his own works, the lord of life, assuming all forms led by the three Gunas, and following the three paths."

(Siddhânta).—This objection the author answers by the Sûtra, next given:—

80TRA I. 3. 24.

शब्दादेव प्रमितः ॥ १ । ३ । २४ ॥

श्रव्याप् Sabdat, because of the word, एंस Eva, even, only. प्रतितः Pramitah, the measured, the limited; measured by the thumb.

24. The limited person of the size of a thumb, described in the Kath. Up. is Brahman, because of the word or the epithet applied to It in that very text.—88.

COMMENTARY.

The person of the size of a thumb is the Lord Visqu alone. Why? Because there is an express term or word, in that very passage, which can apply to Visqu alone. That passage describes this person as Lord of the past and the future. Now this epithet—"The Lord of the past and the future"—cannot be applied to Jiva at all, whose past and the future is bound by his karmas, and who is not free to possess so much glory.

But how the All-pervading Lord can be said to be limited by the measure of a thumb? This point is answered by the next Sûtra.

ह्रचपेच्या तु मनुष्याधिकारत्वातु ॥ १ । ३ । २५ ॥

हरि Hridi, in the heart, with reference to the heart, अपेश्वास Apeksaya, by reference to, हु Tu, but. अनुवा Manusya, men, human beings. अधिकारकार्य Adhikaratvat, because of the qualified.

25. But the size of a thumb is with reference to the human heart, because men are qualified to meditate on Brahman in their heart, and imagine him as limited to that size.—89

COMMENTARY.

The force of the word "tu" is to declare limitation, because the Lord is meditated upon in the heart, which in every human being is of the size of his fist or thumb, therefore, He is spoken of as having the measure of a thumb. This has already been described before, under Sûtra I. 2. 7, where we have said that this attributing of a size to Brahman, is based on a mere metaphor, taken from the size of the heart; and for the sake of devout meditation; and because His ineffable glory manifests in the heart of His devotees in that form.

But the hearts differ according to the animals, some have larger hearts, some have smaller; some are more than a thumb, some are less than a thumb. How can it then be said that the person of the size of a thumb is so spoken of with reference to the heart. This objection is met in the Satra by using the word "human." It is the human heart that is the measure here taken, (and not the heart of snakes, horses and donkeys). For though the scriptures are employed in general terms, yet they apply only to human beings, for human beings alone are adhikaris and not lower animals. Human beings alone have the faculty of devout meditation; therefore the standard of the thumb is taken from the human heart, and so there is no conflict.

Though the hearts of elephants and horses, &c., may be said to be of the size of a thumb, yet there is no conflict here also, for these creatures are incapable of devout meditation. Though the Jiva also is described to have the measure of a thumb, it is so done, because it dwells in the heart, and so metaphorically is said to be of the size of the heart. As a matter of fact, it is atomic in size, for the scripture says that its size is very small.

न्यायनागरम् यायेषा कस्पितस्य च । आगा जीवः स विश्वेषः स जान-नवाय कस्पति !

"That living soul (Jiva) is to be known as part of the hundredth part of the point of a hair, divided a hundred times, and yet it is to be infinite." (Svet. Up., V. 2).

Therefore, the person of the size of a thumb is the Lord Visnu alone.

Adhikarana VII.—Devas entitled to meditate on Brahman.

It has been mentioned in the last Sûtra, that the scriptural texts teaching meditation on Brahman are the concern of men, because by so teaching it can be proved that the Highest Brahman has the size of a thumb. The Sâstra, therefore, establishes that men alone are entitled a meditate on Brahman. But this is a wrong view. All those men who are on the path of gradual release (Karma Mukti) pass through the Deva evolution, and become Devas. If meditation on Brahman is enjoined only for men, then those men who have become Devas, are not entitled to meditate on Him. And thus the theory of gradual release would become meaningless, for there would be no release for Devas.

But Devas are entitled to meditate on Brahman as we find from the following text of the Bri. Up. (I. 4. 10).

तर् थे। थे। देवानां प्रचतुन्यत स पव तद्भवत्, तयसीयां तथा मतुन्यायाम् ॥

"Whoever of the Devas, knowing Brahman meditated on Him he verily obtained Him, so also among the Rishis, so also among the men."

Similarly, the following passage also shows that the Devas worship Brahman:—

तर् देवा ज्योतियां ज्योतिरायुर्होपासतेऽस्तम् ॥

"The Devas meditate on that Brahman who is the light of lights, who is the giver of life, and who is immortal."

(Doubt).—Here arises the following doubt. Admitting that meditation on Brahman is taught regarding the Deves in the same way as taught with regard to men, the question remains, is it possible with regard to the Devas, or is it not?

(Pareapakea).—The Pürvapakein says such meditation is impossible with regard to the Devas, because they have got no sense organs and consequently they have got no capability to meditate. The Devas like Indra and the rest, are verily thought-forms, created by the chanting of Mantras, they have no physical sense organs. Consequently on account of this absence alone, they have not the capability of meditation or the desire for the possession of such attributes as Vairagya or dispassion, Viveka or discrimination, &c. Hence the Devas are not capable of meditation on Brahman.

तदुर्प्यपि बादरायणः सम्भवात्॥ १ । ३ । २६ ॥

सूर Tad, that, namely, meditation on Brahman. स्पृति Uapri, above, namely, with regard to the beings who are above men, namely Devas. स्पृति Api, also वास्त्रास्यः Bâdarāyaṇaḥ. the sage Bâdarāyaṇa is of opinion. स्वास्त्रास् Sambhavāt, because of the possibility.

26. The meditation on Brahman, according to the opinion of Bâdarâyaṇa, must be admitted with regard to those also, who are above men, in the scale of evolution; because of its possibility with regard to them also (for they also have an organised body.)—90.

COMMENTARY.

This meditation on Brahman must be admitted with regard to these, who are higher in scale of evolution to mankind, namely, with regard to Devas also. This is the opinion of Lord Badarayana. Why has he this opinion? Because the Upanisads, the Mantra portion of the Vedas, the descriptive portions of the Vedas, the sacred scriptures known as Itihasa and Purana, all unanimously describe that the Devas have bodies as believed also by mankind. Since they have bodies, it is possible for them to meditate on Brahman; because the objection of the Pürvapakşin was that Devas have no body, and therefore they could not meditate.

Note.—It is only the Pûrva Mîmîmisîkas who hold the theory that the Vedic Devatas are not embodied beings, but only creation of the Risis when they chant the Vedic Mantras. According to this theory, the vibrations produced by the proper singing of the Mantras create these Deva-forms, through which theurgic effects are produced. But this is only a partial truth. The artificial elementals, as these Mantra-Âtmic Devatas are, constitute only a portion of the inhabitants of the Devaloka. There are real Devas also, real Jivas, passing through Deva evolution, who are not more creations of Mantras.

Thus the Devas also have the capability of meditating on Brahman, because they possess body and senses made of celestial matter, and they also are capable of feeling disgust and dispassion (Vairagya), with their own state, however high it may appear to us in lordliness and glory. For compared with the glory of God, the Devas realise keenly the sinfulness, the littleness, the insignificance, and the transitory nature of their own lordliness and glory, and consequently they also are capable of feeling Vairagya. There is the authority of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa on this subject:—

न केवळं द्वित्रक्षेष्ठ नरके दुःवापञ्चतिः। स्वर्गेत्रपे यातमीतस्य श्रायिण्योगीतिः निर्वतिः ॥

"OH, best of the twice-born, not only is sorrow to be found in hell, but it exists in Svarga also, for the inhabitant of heaven is afraid of the transitoriness of heavenly life, so the dweller of heaven also is not free from grief."

Therefore, Devas also desire to acquire the eternal bliss which the knowledge of Brahman gives. For this Brahmic bliss is free from all taint of evil, and it is an immeasureable, eternal state of joy. For thus is this bliss described in the sacred scriptures. Moreover we find in the Upanisads descriptions of how both the Devas and men went to Prajapati to learn the Brahama Vidya, as the following extract from the Br. Up. will show:—

त्रयाः प्राजापृत्याः प्रजापती पितरि ब्रह्मवर्यमृतुर्देवा मनुष्या ससुराः ॥

"The children of Prajapati are of three sorts, namely, the Devas, the men and the Asuras: They approached their father Prajapati and dwelt with him as students of Brahma Vidyā." (Br. Up., V. 2.1)

Similarly, in the Chh. Up., we find that Indra dwelt as a Brahma-charin in the house of Prajapati for more than 100 years:—

पतर् तद्यहाहरेकदातं इ वै वर्षाचि मधवान् प्रजापती महावर्यमुवास ॥

"This made in all one hundred and one years, and therefore, it is said that Indra Maghavat lived one hundred and one years as a pupil with Prajapati." (Ch. Up. VIII, 11.8.).

Owing to their having bodies, the Devas, therefore, are also qualified for meditation on Brahman.

An objector says:—If we admit that Devas have bodies, then there would arise difficulties with regard to sacrifices, for it is impossible for one limited corporeal entity to be simultaneously present at many places of sacrifices, when he is invoked simultaneously by all his worshippers. Therefore, sacrifices become useless, for an embodied Deva, like Indra, cannot be present simultaneously in all the places of worship, where he is invoked. To this objection the author gives the following answer:—

विरोधः कर्मगीति चेन्, नानेकप्रतिपत्तेर्दर्शनात्॥ १। १७॥

विरोषः Virodhab, contradiction. व्याप्ति Karmani, with regard to work, with regard to sacrifices. वृति Iti, thus. चेव् Chet, if. व Na, not. व्याप्तः Aneka, many (bodies). वृतिपत्तेः Pratipatteḥ, because of the assumption. व्यापाद Daráanat, because of the observation or seeing.

27. If it be objected that a Deva cannot be an embodied being, for then his presence at many sacrifices simultaneously would be impossible: we reply no, because it is observed (that many bodies can be assumed by spiritual entities, for simultaneous appearance in different places).—91.

Even if we admit that Devas have a body, yet this would not contradict the performance of sacrifices; because great masters of occult forces have the power of creating many bodies, and simultaneously appearing at distant places. Such were the Yogis Saubhari, etc.

(Says an objector):—"Admitting that for the reason given in this Sûtra, there may arise no difficulty as regards sacrifices, for those who hold the view that Devatas have got bodies, but then arises another difficulty. It relates to the words of which the Veda consists. If words like Indra, &c., refer to embodied beings, then when these beings are not in existence, then those words denote no object. Thus before the creation of Indra or after the destruction of Indra, there is a period when no Indra exists. But the Vedas are eternal, and the word Indra occurs in it. To what does then this word refer, during these periods, when there is no Indra? Is it not like the word "the son of a barren woman?" If so, as those words have no meaning, so the Vedas also become meaningless. Moreover in the Pûrva Mimâmsâ it was established that words, objects corresponding to those words, and the power of the words to denote those objects, are all eternal, for a Mimâmsî Sûtra says:—

चीत्परिकस्त राज्येनार्थस्य सम्बन्धः ॥

The relation between the word and its object, is natural and eternal. So if the words like Indra, &c., denoted organised beings, they would make the Vedas non-eternal.

(Siddhanta):—To this objection, the author gives the following reply:—

SÚTRA I. 3. 28.

शब्द इति चेन्नातः प्रभवात्, प्रत्यचानुमनाभ्याम् ॥ १ । ३ । २८॥

श्रव्यः Babdah, the word of the Vedas (would become non-eternal) or there would arise contradiction with regad to the eternity of the word. श्री lti, thus. वेश Chet, if. व Na, not. वह: Atah, because, from this, from the word being eternal. जनवार Prabhavat, because of the origination. जनवार Pratyaksa, perception, direct statement, namely, the Sruti or revelation. व्यवस्थाना Anumanabhyam, from inference, from Smriti, namely, the tradition.

28. If it be objected, that this view would contradict the eternity of the word; we reply, no; because the creation of the universe is from the word which is eternal. And the Sruti and Smriti (the direct statement and inference) also establish the same.—92.

COMMENTARY.

There arises no contradiction of the kind mentioned above, even with regard to the eternity of the Vedic words. Why? Because from this eternal word arises the creation. The creation of every embodied being, whether Indra or a Cow, proceeds from the remembrance of their form and their characteristics, by Brahmâ when he utters those words, which by association always suggest the particular form and the characteristics possessed by that form.

Note:—"When, therefore, a special individual of the class called Indra has perished, the creator, apprehending from the Vedic word 'Indra,' which is present to his mind, the class characteristics of the beings denoted by that word, creates another Indra, possessing those very same characteristics; just as the potter fashions a new jar, on the basis of the word 'Jar' which is stirring in his mind. But how is this known? 'Through perception and inference,' i.e., through scripture and Smriti." (Rāmānuja).

Every Vedic word always expresses a particular type form, and does not express any individual (they are all common terms and not Proper Nouns). By remembering the particular type forms, denoted by those words, Brahma creates the universe. For forms (Akriti) are eternal, and exist in the Archetypal plane, from eternity, before they become concrete in any individual form. The Vedas are like the book of Visvakarman, in which directions are given as to painting of certain forms or pictures of Devas. Thus for example, it says "Yama should be pictured as having a sceptre in his hand, Varuna as having a noose in his hand." The Vedic words denoting Devas, like Indra, &c., do not express any particular individual of that name, but are a class name like the word cow, &c., and are symbols of particular forms, naturally belonging to a particular class of beings. They do not denote merely individuals, like the word Chaitra, &c.

Therefore, because the Vedic words denote eternal forms, existing in the mind of the Creator, they are not unauthoritative; and this view of ours, that the Devas possess body, does not contradict the Mimansa view that the word is eternal. How do you know this? To this the Sûtra answers by saying, Pratyakşânumânâbhyâm, because the Sruti and the Smriti declare it so.

As an example of Sruti, we have the following:-

Thus Prajapati created Devas, &c., by pondering over the various words of Mantra, Sukta 62 of the ninth Mandala of the Rig Veda.

Note:-We give the mantra with its word meaning below:-

पते चसुप्रमिन्द्वस्तिरः पवित्रमाश्चः । किवान्यभिसीमगा ॥

स्ते Ete, these. अनुसन् Asrigram, creates. कृत्यः Indavah, drops: Somadrops. शिद: Tirah, downward. पृथितः Pavitram, pure, purifying, a seive. सायाः Âsavah, quick, rapid: another reading is आञ्चरः ॥. विस्तानि Visvani, all. सानि Abhi, towards.

These rapid Soma-drops have been poured through the purifying seive. To bring all felicities.

In the Panchavithsati Brahmana (VI. 9, 13, 22 and 12, 1, 3). We find how this Mantra was utilised by Brahma in making his creation. We read there:—

''पते'' इति इ वै प्रजापतिर्देवानस्त्रत् , "असुप्रम्' इति मनुष्याव् , "इन्द्रवः" इति पितृत् , "तिरः पवित्रम्" इति प्रदाद् , "वासुवः" इति स्तोत्रं , "विद्यानि" इति मन्त्रम् , "ग्रामसीमगः" इति कन्याः प्रजा इति ॥

Prajapati created the Devas, by reflecting on the word "Etc." He created the men, by the word "Asrigram;" the Pitaras by the word "Indavah;" the planets by the word "Tiras Pavitram;" the songs, by the word "Asava;" the Mantras, by the word "Visvani"; and he created all other creatures by the word "Abhisaubhaga."

Note:—The word Etad "this" reminds Brahmā of the Devas presiding over the senses; the word Aspigra meaning blood, reminds him of those creatures in which blood is the chief life-element, namely, men; the word indu denoting moon, reminds him of the fathers, who live in the moon; the word tiras pavitram meaning "holding of the pure ambrosia" reminds him of the planets where the some-fluid exists, the word "Âsuva," "flowing" recalls the sweet flow of music: the word "Visva" recalls the hymns sacred to the Visve-devas; the word "Abhisubhaga" meaning "great prosperity" recalls all creatures.

The Smritis like the Vişņu Purāņa, &c., also show the same. As the following:—

नामकपञ्च भूतानां इत्यानां च प्रपंचनम् । वेदशब्देभ्य पवादौ पृथक् संस्थादव निम्मेने ॥

"In the beginning Brahma created through the words of the Vedas alone, the names and forms of all creatures, the manifold rituals of all sacrificos and their different status."

SUÛTRA I. 8. 29.

भ्रत एव च नित्यत्वम् ॥ १ । ३ । २६ ॥

श्वतन्त्र Ataeva, therefore, for this reason alone. च Cha, and. निस्तन् Nityat-vam, the eternity of the Veda.

29. And for this very reason, the eternity of the Veda is proved.—93.

COMMENTARY.

Thus the eternity of the Vedas is established, because, its words denote eternal types, (and not individuals), and because these words remind the creator, the types that he should create. The names like Kāthaka, &c., do not mean that the Rişi called Katha was the author of the hymn, but that they were merely the utterers of those hymns, which exist from eternity.

Note: - We find in the Vedas passages like the following: -

"Reverence to the Risis who are the makers of mantras." It does not mean that any Rishi really made the mantras. Texts like these suggest to the mind of Brahma what should be the characteristics and powers of those Risis who would make the different sections, hymns, and mantras, and then Brahma creates them endowed with those characteristics and powers, and appoints them to remember the very same sections, hymns, &c. The Risis being thus gifted by Prajapati with the requisite powers undergo suitable preparatory austerities and finally see the mantras and so on, proclaimed by the Kathas and other Risis of former ages of the world, perfect in all their sounds and accents, without having learnt them from the recitation of a teacher.

A further objection is raised. Let it be admitted that after each minor Pralaya or shorter dissolution (Naimittika) the Lord Brahma may create the bodies of Devas, &c., by remembering the words of the Vedas and the types mentioned therein, but in the case of the major Pralaya, called the great Latency (Prakritika) when Brahma himself vanishes, along with all worlds, how can then he create a new world on the basis of the Vedas, when the Vedas themselves vanish; and how can we speak of the eternity of the Veda? To this objection the author gives the following reply:—

SÛTRA I. 8. 80.

समान नामरूपृत्वाच् चादृत्तावप्यविरोधो दर्शनात् स्मृतेश्च ॥

सनाम Samana, same, equality नाम Nama, name. क्यानाम Rûpatvât, on account of form. च Cha, and. चान्नी Âvrittau, in repetition, when after a Mahapralaya or Great Latency there is a first creation of the world. चित्र Api, also. चारियेष: Avirodhah, want of contradiction. वर्षमाम Darsanat, because of seeing, because of the Sruti. च्यो: Smriteh, from the Smriti. च cha, and

30. Even in the case of first creation (after a Great Latency), there is no contradiction (with regard to the eternity of the words of the Veda), because the names and forms remain the same. As appears from Sruti and Smriti.—94.

COMMENTARY.

The word cha in the Sûtra is used to remove the doubt raised. The word Avritti means renovation, primal creation after the Great Latency. Even after a Great Pralaya, there is no contradiction with regard to the eternity of Vedic words, because the new creation proceeds on the sameness of names and forms, &c., as in the preceding creation. In a Mahâpralaya or Great Latency, the Vedas and the types denoted by the words of the Vedas all of which are eternal objects, merge into the Lord Hari and become one in Him. This merging is in that aspect of Hari, which is called His Sakti or energy. They remain in Him in a state of Latency. When the Lord desires to create, they come out from Him again, and become manifest. The creation of individuals is always preceded by a reflection on the words of the Vedas and types denoted by them, whether such reflection is by the Lord Hari Himself, or by the four-faced Brahma.

Note:—After a great Latency, Hari creates the Vedas, in exactly the same order and arrangements as they had had before, and reflecting on its words and types, He emits the entire world, just as it had been before, from the element called Mahat down to the Brahmanda and Brahma. He then imparts the Vedas to Brahma and entrusts him with the task of creating lower beings. The Lord Hari at the same time pervades the world so created, as its Antaryamin or Inner Ruler.

A subsequent creation is similar to the past creation: just as a potter, who makes a pot, by remembering the word "pot" and the form which the word calls up in his mind, though there may be no actual pot as a mould before him. As is the case in Minor Latency, the same is the rule in the case of a Great Latency. The difference is this, that after a Great Latency, the Lord Himself creates all elements from Mahat downwards up to Brahmanda and emitting Brahma from His body, He teaches him the Vedas and entrusts him with the task of further creation. In the case of Minor Pralaya, Brahma does not cease to exist, nor do the elements; and consequently Brahma himself creates the universe after every Minor Pralaya.

Whence is all this known? The Sûtra replies by saying Darsanat Smrites cha, from the Sruti and the Smriti. The Sruti passages are like the following:—

- "Atman was alone in the beginning. He willed may I create the worlds." या अञ्चासं विद्याति पूर्व या वे वेदांस्य प्रदिचीति तस्मै ।
- "He who first creates Brahms and delivers the Vedas to Him" (Svet. Up., VI. 18). सूर्याचनप्रसी चाता यथा पूर्वसक्तपथत् ।
- "The Creator fashioned the new universe and created the sun and moon just as they were in the beginning. (Rig. Veda, end.)

The Smriti passages are the following: -

न्यप्रोधः सुमहानस्ये यथा बीजे व्यवस्थितः । संयमे विश्वमिकां वीजमूते तथा त्वयि ॥

"As a mighty banyan tree lies concealed in the small seed, similarly in thee, O Lord! as the Great Seed, lies concealed the whole universe, when thou drawest it in, at the time of the Great Latency."—Vişnu Purâna).

So also in the Varaha Purana:-

नारायवः परो देवस्तस्माज जातस्वतुम् वः ॥

"The Highest God is Narayana from Him was born the four-faced One."

So also in the Bhagawata :— तेने ब्रह्म द्वारा य चारिकचये ।।

"He who mentally imparts the Vedas to the First Sage, Brahma."

To sum up the whole. When the time of the Great Intency comes to close (and the hour strikes for a new creation) then the Lord God of All, remembers the constitution of the world immediately preceding the Pralaya, and formulates this desire. "Let me become manifold." He separates into its different parts the whole body of spirit-and-matter which had merged in Him. Thus the enjoying souls and the objects of enjoyment-the spirit and matter-come out from him as separate entities now. After this, the Lord creates the entire world just as it had been before, from the great principle called Mahat down to the cosmic egg and Brahma. He then manifests the VEDAS in exactly the same order and arrangement as they had been before, and He teaches them mentally (not orally) to Brahma. He entrusts to him the task of the new creation of the whole remaining universe, from Devas downwards. just as it was before. At the same time He entering into the world, presides in it as its Inner Ruler and Controller. Brahmå also through the grace of the Lord, gets the power of omniscience and through the help of the words of the Vedas, remembering the types, &c., creates new Devas, like those of the previous world-period. Thus the Veda, when it uses the words like Indra, &c., refers to eternal types of Indra, &c., and as these types are eternal, though the forms vanish at every Pralaya, therefore the Vedas are eternal.

Thus there is no conflict or contradiction, when it is said that the word is eternal, for it means that the types represented by those words are eternal. Thus the Devas have the capability of meditating on Brahman, since they possess an organised body; and since the Devas have this capability, there is no conflict in the text relating to the meditation on the person of the size of the thumb. With regard to the Devas a person of the size of the thumb is to be measured by the thumb of the Devas, as in the case of men he is measured by the thumb of man.

Now we enter into the consideration of the question whether the Devas are qualified or not, for these VidyAs or meditations, of which they themselves are the objects meditated upon.

In the Chhandogya Upanisad we find a Vidya called the Madhu Vidya.

"The Sun is verily honey to the Devas, the Heaven is like the cross beam, the intermediate region is the beehive. And the rays are the sons." (III. I. I.)

Here the Sun is said to be honey or nectar of the Devas and five classes of Devas called Vasu, Rudra, Aditya, Marut and Sadhyas worship or meditate on this nectar; each class being headed by its chief. They become satisfied by looking at this honey. The Sun is said to be the honey, because he is the abode of a certain nectar, to be brought about by certain sacrificial works, to be known from the Rig Veda and so on, and the reward of such meditation is mentioned in those texts is the attainment of the position of the Vasus, Rudra, Adityas, and so on.

Note: - This moditation on the Sun produces the status of Vasu, &c. The point is, should the Devas undertake this meditation, when the fruit of such meditation is the attainment of the status of a Vasu, &c. The Devas already have reached this status, and so to them this Madhu Vidyā is useless.

The author gives first the opinion of others, as regards this point:—
SUTRA L 2-21.

मध्वादिष्वसम्भवादनिषकारं जैमिनिः ॥ १ । ३ । ३१ ॥

नष्ठ Madhu, in honey. चारिषु Adişu, and in the rest. चार्यन्यास् Asambhavad, on account of the impossibility. चार्यकारस् Anadhikaram, non-qualification. विनिन: Jaiminih, the sage called Jaimini.

31. Jaimini is of opinion, that the Devas are not qualified to undertake meditations like Madhu Vidyâ and so on, because of the impossibility.—95.

COMMENTARY.

According to the sage Jaimini, the Devas are not entitled to undertake meditations like Madhu Vidys, &c., because it is impossible for one and the same person to be the object of meditation as well as the person meditating. Moreover the Devas like Vasu, &c., already belong to the class of Vasus, &c., and so in their case, the fruit being already accomplished, the meditation is useless. The Devas have nothing to gain by such meditation; and so they have no desire for this meditation; for they already possess that which is the fruit of such meditation. For both these reasons, Jaimini holds that the Devas are not qualified for meditations like Madhu Vidya, &c., in which they themselves are the objects of meditation. He gives another reason for his view.

क्ष्मातिषि भावाच् च ।

क्योगिरि Jyotiși, in the light, in the Highest Brahman. आवास Bhavat, because of the existence, because it consists of. च Cha, and.

32. And because the meditation of the Devas consists in worshipping the Light, therefore, they do not stand in need of any lower meditation.—96.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihadaranyaka Upanisad, we find that the Devas meditate on the Great Light, the Supreme Brahman alone, and they do not worship anything lower. That text is as follows:—

यस्मादर्शक संबन्सरोऽहोमिः परिवर्षते । तद् देवा ज्योतिरां ज्योतिरायुर्होपासतेऽसृतम् ॥

"Him from whom proceed the year along with the days, Him the Devas meditate upon as the Light of Lights, as Immortal Life," (Bri. Up., IV. 4. 16). Both men and Devas have this in common, that both are entitled to meditate on the Supreme Brahman, the Light of Lights. The special mention that the Devas meditate on this Light of Lights, indicates, by implication, that they are not entitled to (or rather do not stand in need of) meditations on other objects than the Supreme Brahman.

The view of the Pûrvapaken given in these two Sûtras, is thus controverted by the author:—
SUTRA I. 8-38.

भावं तु बादरायणोऽस्ति हिं॥ १।३।३३॥

भाषम् Bhavam, the existence (of the qualification to undertake the meditations like Madhu Vidya, &c.) हु Tu, but. वार्याच्याः Badarayanah, the sage called Badarayana. चास्ति Astı, is (there is the possibility of such meditation). दि Hi, because.

COMMENTRY.

The word Tu is used in order to remove the doubt raised by the Pürvapakşin. In the meditations like Madhu Vidyå, &c., the Devas have a right, according to the opinion of Lord Bådaråyana. Because though these Devas have attained the position of Vasu, Aditya, &c., yet it is possible that they may have a desire of attaining the same position of Vasuhood or Adityahood, &c., in the next Kalpa also, and so they may meditate on Brahman in the form of, and residing in Vasu, Aditya, &c. For meditation on Brahman is taught here to be of two kinds; firstly, Brahman is meditated upon as effect and secondly he is meditated upon as cause.

Note:—When meditation is on a form like that of Vasus, &c., it is meditation on Brahman as effect, namely meditation on Brahman as he appears in the form of creatures. But in the same Madhu Vidyå there is the latter section which enjoins meditation on Brahman as cause.

The sense is this, the Devas who are Vasus, Adityas, &c., in this Kalpa, meditate on Brahman as Vasu, Aditya, &c., with the object of becoming Vasu, Aditya, &c., in the next Kalpa. When they have attained Vasuhood or Adityahood by such meditation in the next Kalpa, then they meditate on Brahman as the Inner Ruler of Vasu, Adityas, &c., and worshipping Brahman as cause, they shall attain release in the next Kalpa.

Moreover the words Vasu, Âditya, &c., are not confined to these Devas, but they denote Brahman also. In this view, the section on Madhu Vidyâ does not teach meditation on Devas called Vasus and Âdityas, &c., but on Brahman, who is called also Vasu, Âditya, &c. Near the end of that section we find this declaration, "he who knows this Brahma Upaniṣad, &c." This shows that this is an Upaniṣad teaching Brahma Vidyâ, and not meditation on any inferior being like the Devas called Vasu, Âdityas, &c.

Note:—The worship of insentient objects cannot give Purusartha (the highest end of man). Therefore, this Khanda does not teach the worship of inanimate objects like the sun, &c.

In fact, in the concluding passage (khanda XI) the Sruti expressly says that the teaching herein given is Brahma Vidya and not any lower Vidya, for it says "Let the father tell this Brahma Vidya to his eldest son." It further says "He who knows this Brahma Upanişad thus," &c. How can the worship of inanimate subjects give Mukti or Brahma-pada. That the whole of these Khandas relate to Brahma Vidya, is further shown by the statement made in khanda XI where the Sruti says "In what place He neither rises nor sets" and "for Him there is perpetual day." These are applicable primarily to Mukta Jivas only. (Thus this portion of the Upanişad deals with Brahma Vidya only and not with apara Vidya as understood by others). Moreover to whom can primarily belong the possession of Yasas wisdom, tajes-bliss, indriyam-lordliness, vîryam-strength, annadyam magnanimity and rasatvam-power, but to the Supreme Lord? For says a Sruti "His name is the great Yasas."

Nor is this objection valid that the Adityas and Vasus, &c., have already attained the position indicated by their names, and so they have no objects of desire in this direction left; and therefore this meditation is useless for them. For we find in the world, that the people though having sons in this life, have still a desire to get sons in the next life; (and consequently perform sacrifices for the attainment of sons in the next life). Moreover, the various meditations taught in this Madhu Vidyâ, are really meditations on various aspects of Brahman, and consequently when the Devas meditate on those aspects of Brahman (in the form of Vasus, Adityas, &c.,) they are really meditating on Supreme Brahman; and consequently the statement that the Devas meditate on the Light of lights only is also not contradicted.

The following text shows that the Devas also perform sacrifices, &c.:-

प्रजापतिरकामयत प्रजायेयेति ; स पतदिग्नहोत्रम् मिथुनमपद्यत् । तदुद्ति स्यें जुहोदिति ।।

Prajapati desired let me create beings. He saw a pair called the Agnihotra (the fire-sacrificer) He therefore sacrificed when the sun arose.

देवा वै सत्रमासत ॥

"The Devas performed the sacrificial session."

These texts of the Sruti show that the Devas are qualified to perform sacrifices also, why should not then they be qualified to perform meditations like Madhu Vidyâ also? The Devas stand in no need of these sacrifices to attain any personal end of their own, but they do so in order to carry out the command of the Lord, and to maintain the world-process.

Note:—When the Devas perform sacrifices even in order to carry out the Divine Will in creation, no doubt can really arise whether the Devas ever meditate on the Lord or not.

An objector says; how can Devas be called Mumuksus or a-thirst after Release, when they voluntarily renounce Release or rather postpone it, to an indefinite period? For Devas or even men who meditate according to Madhu Vidyâ, wilfully suffer delay in getting release till the end of the Kalpa, and take upon themselves the duty of the high offices like those of Adityas and Vasus? For the real Mumuksutva is a burning desire for release and consists in spurning all objects of desire and all joys; yea even the joys of the Highest World of Brahmâ? How can then these followers of Madhu Vidyâ be called true aspirants after Release when they wilfully take the by-path of cosmic power? True; this is so, but it must be admitted that there are certain Beings, who owing to some unknown or mysterious action of their karmas have to undertake the duties of world-rule, and because the sacred books expressly teach the existence of these Exalted Ones, who voluntarily accept, or rather prefer the burden of cosmic agents, to the peace of final Release.

This Adhikarana shows that when even the Devas also work unselfishly, and meditate through Madhu Vidya, much more should human beings do the same.

Adhikaraṇa VIII.—The Śūdras or child-souls not qualified to Vaidic meditation.

In the previous part, it has been mentioned that men as well as the Devas are qualified to meditate on Brahman, because they have the capability and other requisites for such meditation. Now this cannot take place without study of the Vedanta texts, for Brahman is said in the scriptures "the Aupanişada Puruşa," the Spirit revealed by the Upanişads. Consequently the question arises, are all men indiscriminately qualified to the study of the Upanişads? To this, the answer ultimately given is that baby-souls, which are just coming out of animality into humanity, are not entitled to study Upanişads or meditate on Brahman at once.

In the Chhandogya Upanişad there occurs the story of a king called Jānaśruti. He was a hospitable prince and profuse in his generosity, possessing many good qualities. The mighty sages called Devarishis were satisfied with his high mindedness and assuming the form of flamingoes, they flew across his palace, when the prince was lying in open air, on the roof of his terrace, in a sultry summer night. One of these flamingoes, who was in front, was addressed by another flamingo, who was in the rear, thus:—

"Oh short-sighted one, seest thou not the auric light of this noble prince, extending from his body, high up into the air, do not heedlessly cross his aura, lest it may destroy thee." Hearing this the other flamingo answered:—"Is his aura stronger than that of Raikva of the car? Raikva is one who is always on his car, making pilgrimages from one sacred place to another, and thus sanctifying with his aura, all those shrines. He possesses Brahmic aura, far more potent than the aura of this mere petty prince."

The object of the compassionate Rialis was to break the shell of self-complacency into which this prince had unconsciously fallen, so that he might exert to know the Brahma Vidya, and might not rest satisfied with the mere performance of charity, though on a very large and profuse scale. The king hearing this speech of the flamingoes, found out his inferierity to Raikva, and was distressed in his heart, and passed his night in a state of restless grief. When it was dawn and the Royal bards were discoursing soft music praising the king and his many royal qualities, the prince rising from his bed, at once sent for his chamberlain, and told him to find out without delay, where was this Raikva, who was always on the move in his car. The chamberlain, after much search, found him in a retired spot, sitting under his car and scratching his it-hes. He at once returned to the king and informed him of his discovery. The king taking cows, gold and chariots, went to Raikva, and presenting them to him, said, "teach me venerable sir, the God that you worship." Raikva replied:—"Away with thy necklace and thy chariots, O Sudra! Let these cows remain with thee." Thus discarded, and called a Sidra, the king went back and brought mere wealth, cows, charlots, and even his daughtes, as a present for the sage. But Raikva again addressed him with the opprobrious title of Sûdra saying "O Sûdra, hopest thou to gain this knowledge through these means." However he relented ultimately and taught the king the Samvarga Vidya or the meditation on the laws of dissolution.

तदुइ जानभृतिः पौत्रायकः षट शतानि गर्वा निष्कमद्वतरीरयं तदादाय प्रतिचक्रमे तप्रदास्युवाद् ॥ १ ॥

 Therefore Janas ruti Pautrayana having taken six hundred cows, a necklace, and a carriage drawn by a pair of mules, went to Raikva and addressed him thus:—

रियके मानि वट शतानि गवामयं निष्कोऽयमश्वतरीरयो तु म पतां मगवा देवता ४ शांचि यां देवतामुपास्स इति ॥ २ ॥

2. "O Raikva! these six hundred cows, this pearl necklace, this carriage with mules are present for you. Teach me, O master, that Deity whom you worship."

तमु ६ परःप्रत्युवाचाइ होरेत्वा शूद्भ तवैव सह गोमिरस्वित तदुह पुनरेव जानभूतिः पौत्रायकः सहस्रं गवां निष्कमश्वतरीरथं दुहितरं तदावाय प्रतिचक्रमे ॥ ३॥

8. To him said Raikvn:—"Fie! the necklace and the carriage, O SÜDRA, be thine, even together with the cows." Then Janairuti taking again a thousand cows, a pearl necklace, a carriage yoked with a pair of mules, and his daughter went back to Raikva.

तर्रहाभ्युवाद रियक्वेद् सहस्रं गवामयं निष्कोऽयमञ्चतरीरण इयं जायाऽयं प्रामा यस्मिका स्सेऽन्वेव मा भगवः शाधीति ॥ ४ ॥

4. He said to him:—"Raikva, these one thousand cows, this pearl necklace, this carriage drawn by a pair of mules, this girl for thy wife, and this village in which thou dwellest are thy fee. Teach me, O master."

तस्य ह मुक्तमुपोद्गृह्वभुवाचाजहारेमाः शूद्रानेनैव मुखेनालापयिष्यथा इति ते हैते रयिक्वपर्वानाम महावृषेषु यत्रास्मा उवास तस्मै होवाच ॥ ५ ॥

5. Then Raikva, after looking for a while at the face of the girl, said "Take away these gifts, O SUDRA, thinkest thou to speak with me through this means." Then Raikva (relented and) told him. These are the Raikvaparna villages in the land of the Mahâvrisas, where Raikva dwelt in order to teach him.

Note.—This Adhikarana appears to be an interpolation. The question whether a Sûdra is entitled to the study of the Vedas or not has been answered in favour of the Sûdras by no less an authority than Swami Dayananda Saraswafi, the Founder of the Ârya Samāj. He quotes the ancients scriptures to show that in the Vedic age, there was no such restriction. The condition of the Sûdras became worse in the Puranic period only. The degradation of the Sûdras was preceded by the decline of the Brahmanas, who, when they lost their inherent greatness, began to rely, more and more, on their privilege. The honor which was spontaneously given to them because of their knowledge and wisdom and purity of life, was now extorted by them merely on the strength of their birth and race.

(Doubt).—Here arises this doubt. Is a Sûdra qualified to study the Vaidic Science or not, and perform Vedic meditations?

(Pûrvapakşa).—The Pûrvapkşin says that a Sûdra is qualified to study the Vedas, for the following reasons:—firstly, because every man in general, is stated to be so qualified; secondly, because the Sûdra possesses the capability of so studying; thirdly, because the express text of the Sruti uses the word Sûdra, which is an indication that Sûdra is qualified; fourthly, in the Puranas and the rest, we find persons like Vidura and others described as possessing a knowledge of Brahman. Therefore, for all these reasons, a Sûdra is qualified for Vaidic study and Vaidic meditation.

8ÛTRA I. S. 34.

शुगस्य तदनादर श्रवणात् तदाद्रवणात् सूच्यते हि ॥१।३।३४॥

शुक्त Suk, sorrow, grief. स्थल्य Asya, his, namely, of Janasruti. तत् Tat, that, namely, that grief. स्थादर Anadara, disrespect, the disrespectful speech of the flamingo, who taunted him for want of Brahman-knowledge. अववाद Śravaṇāt, because of hearing. तता Tadā, then. सहयवात् Adravaṇāt, because of resorting to, or going to him, i. e., to Raikva. स्थाते Sūchyate, is intimated, is referred to. िस Hi, because.

34. The reason why Raikva addressed Jânaśruti as Sûdra was to intimate that he (Raikva) by his occult powers knew that Jânaśruti was overwhelmed with sorrow on hearing the disrespectful speech of the flamingo and therefore he had come to him on hearing such speech.—98.

COMMENTARY.

The word Na (not) of the Sûtra I. 3. 28 is understood in this Sûtra also. The Sûdra is not qualified to undertake Vaidic study or Vaidic meditation. Why? Because Jânasruti is not a Sûdra.

Note.—The word Sûdra is literally derived from two words suk meaning grief, and dravati to go; because Jânasruti, through grief, on hearing the taunting words, went to Raikva; therefore Raikva calls him Sûdra or grief-impelled. The use of this term indicates that Raikva knew, by his clairvoyance, the whole incident of the flamingoes.

When Janasruti Pautrâyana, who was ignorant of Brahman-know-ledge, heard the taunting words of the flamingo, who said "can he be compared with Raivka of the car," he was overpowered with grief, at this disrespectful speech of the flamingo, and he went to Raikva who knew Brahman. Thus the use of the word Sûdra by Raikva in this story, does not mean that Janasruti was a Sūdra by birth, but that he was sorrow-stricken. Raikva uses the words Sûdra in order to indicate his thought-reading and clairaudient powers, his almost divine omniscience. It has no reference to the class called Sûdra.

Note:—This is a very forced meaning given to the word Sudra; the whole of this adhhikarana about Sudras together with the preceding one about the Devas, appears to be an interpolation of some later author. There is a break in the continuity of the aphorisms, by the eruption of these two adhikaranas. That they are a digression is admitted by both Ramanuja and Baladeva. Badarayana was not illiberal-minded, as the anonymous author of these interpolated afters tries to make him out.

If Janasruti is not a Sûdra, and if the word Sûdra is applied to him in its etymological sense of "grief-impelled," then to what class did he belong? The next sûtra answers this by saying that he was a Keatriys.

SÛTRA I. 8. 85.

35. That Jânasruti was a Kṣatriya is understood from the whole story, because the concluding portion gives the story of a Kṣatriya, Abhipratârin who was a Chaitraratha, as is known from an inferential mark later on.—99.

COMMENTARY.

We learn from the account given in the Upanisad that Janasruti must have been a Ksatriya, because he was a generous giver of wealth. possessed of faith, was a ruler of a kingdom which no Sûdra is. He has a chamberlain whom he sends in search of Raikva, and because he gave alms such as cows, necklace, chariots, daughter, &c. These things are not possible in any but a Kşatriya, because these are the qualities of a king. Thus the opening passage of the story gives us sufficient indication that Janasruti was a Keatriya. Similarly, the concluding passage also of this section shows that he was a Kşatriya. In the conclusion, where the Samvarga Vidyâ comes to an end, we find a mention of one Abhipratarin who knew this Brahma Vidya. He was undoubtedly a Kşatriya for the reasons given later on. In the concluding passage we find that a Brahamachari begged food from Saunaka, son of Kapi, and Abhipratarin, son of Kaksaseni; when these two were serving food to others. This Brahamachâri was told that the givers of food knew Samvarga Vidya. But how do you know that this Abhipratârin was a Kşatriya and a Chaitraratha, for there is no express mention of these two facts in the story. To this "Lingat," we know this from inferiential mark. the sûtra answers. Saunaka Kâpeva and Abhipratârin Kâkşaseni were connected with Samavarga Vidya. They were sitting together at a meal which also shows that there must have been some connection between Abhipratarin and Kapeyas. From Tandya Brahamana (20. 12. 5) we learn that "the Kapeyas made Chaitraratha perform that sacrifice." Thus Kapeyas are connected with the Chaitrarathas. In the Chhandogya story we find that a Kapeya is connected with an Abhipratarin. Therefore, the Abhipratarin of the Chhandogya must have been a Chaitraratha. For it was a well-known custom in ancient India, that a Brahmana family was always connected with a Kşatriya family and not with more than one family. That the Chaitraratha was a Kşatriya is proved by another text which says "from him there was descended a Chaitraratha who was a Kşatrapati or prince." Therefore, it proves that Abhipratarin was a Chaitraratha and a Kşatriya.

Therefore, it is proved that these two worshippers of Samvarga Vidya, namely, Kapeya and Abhipratarin where one a Brahmana and the other a Kentriya, and with regard to this Samvarga Vidya they were connected as the teacher and the disciple. Raikva and Janasruti are also connected together as teacher and disciple, and as Raikva was a Brahmana, therefore Janasruti must have been a Keatriya. Therefore, it has been proved logically and by reasoning, that a Sûdra is not qualified to study the Vedas or to perform Vedic meditations.

Note.—That this Sûtra is an interpolation is proved by the fallacious reasoning that will be apparent to every tyro in logic. The argument adduced in this satra may be thus summarised. Jánasruti must be a Ksatriya, because Raikva was a Bráhmana. The argument that Janasruti was a prince, and therefore he must be a Kşatriya begs the whole question. It is a historical fact that there were many Dasa kings in ancient India. They were all Sûdras, but all the same they were enlightened and generous princes, like Janasruti. The argument that a Brahmana is connected with Janasruti is no argument at all. In the first place it is not true that Brahmanas were not Purchitas of Sudras; secondly Raikva is not the family Guru or Prohita of Janasruti. Raikva was a wandering Faqir, whom Janasruti adopts as his teacher temporarily only. Nor are there any indications in this Upanisad to show that Raikva was a Brahmana. His epithet "of the car" is rather curious for a person belonging to the highest caste. Very likely he was a Kaatriya for we know from the Upaniands that Brahma Vidya was confined to the Kastriyas in the beginning; and it is from the Kastriyas that the Brahmanas learnt it. The second portion of the argument is also no argument at all. The section on Samvarga Vidya mentions two persons of the name of Kapeya and Abhipratarin. But there is nothing to show to what caste they belong. Abhipratarin is not expressly stated to be a Keatriya. The argument by which he is made out a Keatriya is this. The Kåpeyas were the family priests of Chaitrarathas. A Kåpeya is found dining together with an Abhipratarin. Therefore Abhipratarin must be a Chaitraratha. This forced logic, which is simply no logic, is a mark of modern bigotry, rather than ancient simplicity of a Risi. SÛTRA I. 8. 86.

Because of the implication. सद् Tad, that ceremony. सनाय Abhava, absence. सनिवापन Abhilapat, because of the declaration. परिव, and.

36. The scriptures take it for granted that the sacraments are preparatory to Brahma-knowledge, and with regard to a Sûdra there is a declaration that such sacraments are not possible for him.—100.

COMMENTARY.

In another Sruti we find:—"Let him invest a Brâhmana at the age of eight and then teach him, a Kṣatriya at the age of eleven and a Vaisya at the age of twelve." This shows that investiture with sacred thread is a necessary preliminary to the study of sacred literature, and the three higher castes are only entitled to it. In another text we find that there is an express declaration that a Sûdra has no sacraments. It says a Sûdra cannot perform a fire-sacrifice or ordinary sacrifice or sacraments or vows Therefore a Sûdra is a disqualified person because he is outside the pale of the three castes, because no sacraments are ordained regarding him, and the study of the Vedas pre-supposes the performance of the sacraments.

The next sûtra further strengthens the view that a Sûdra can have no sanskara.

SÛTRA I. 3. 37.

तर Tad, that, namely, the Sudrahood. सभाव Abhava, absence, negation. निर्धारके Nirdharane, in ascertainment. च Cha, and. प्रकृते: Pravritteh, because of taking steps to. Because of the procedure.

37. Because Gautama in the legend of Jâbâla takes the precaution of first assertaining that the latter is not a Sûdra and then he proceeds to invest him with the sacred thread.—101.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhandogya itself there is a legend of Gautama and Jâbâla. Jâbâla went to Gautama and said "teach me, Sir." Gautama asked him "to what Gotra do you belong?" He being a foundling, said, "I do not know, Sir, to what Gotra do I belong." By this truthful speech, it was ascertained that Jâbâla was not a Sûdra and Gautama says "no one not a Brâhmana has the courage to say so." He then asks him to bring the sacred fuel and he invests him with the sacred thread. This action of Gautama, in first convincing himself as to the caste of the candidate, and then proceeding to teach him after investing him with sacred thread, shows that a sûdra cannot be taught the Vedas. The word Brâhmana used by Gautama includes the Kşatriyas and the Vaisyâs also. This story of Gautama and Jâbâla also indicates that the sacraments are necessary before one can study the Vedas.

Note: - The story of Jabala and Gautama does not prove anything of the kind. Jabala was a founding and he asked his foster-mother what was his Gotra, because he wanted to study the Vedas. His mother said "I found you abandoned and so I cannot tell you what is your Gotra. Go to your teacher and tell him that you are the adopted son of Jabala and your name is Jabala." He does so; and Gautama is pleased with his frankness. Gautama does not test his caste, but his moral qualifications. Certainly according to Gautama every truthful man ought to be classed as Brahmana for the purposes of Vedic study. Sudras if not liars and possessing high moral qualities are entitled to be classed as Brahmanas. The Brahmanhood depends upon the qualities of the soul. As a general rule, the presumption is in favour of a soul possessing Brahmanic qualities if it is born in a Brahmana's family. The selection of a family depends upon the karmas of the soul-But all admit that in this Kali age, there has arisen a confusion of castes. gic family need not possess the attributes of a Brahmana; and so a soul born in such family need not be a Brahmanic soul. The Sastras say that if a family follows for seven generations the professions of another caste, the descendants in the eighth generation should be classed as members of the caste to which that profession legally belongs. Judged by that standard many families have lost their right to be styled Brahmanas.

SUTRA I. 3. 38.

श्रवणाध्ययनार्थं प्रतिषेधात् स्मृतेश्च ॥ १ । ३ । १८ ॥

श्रवा dravana, hearing, attending recitations. स्राध्यायन Adhyayana, studying. सर्थे Artha, object, wealth, acquirement of riches. प्रतिचेशात् Pratisedhât, on account of the prohibition. स्तृतेः Smriteli, because there is a Smriti text. च Cha, and.

38. The Sûdra is forbidden to hear and study the Vedas, cannot acquire riches in order to perform sacrifices, and there are Smriti texts also to the same effect. Therefore the Sûdra is not qualified.—102.

COMMENTARY.

Says a text:—"The sûdra is verily like a biped beast, he is like a moving cemetery, therefore one should not recite the Vedas in the presence of a Sûdra." "Sûdra is like a beast unfit for sacrifices." These texts prohibit Vedic study, &c., and so the Sûdra is not qualified for meditation. He is not qualified to hear the Vedas, necessarily cannot study it or know its meaning or perform the sacrifices enjoined therein.

Thus by prohibiting the Sûdra from hearing the Vedas recited, all these things are prohibited by implication.

The following Smriti texts also show the same:—"A Sûdra is not entitled to perform the fire-sacrifices, nor Yajñas, nor also the study of the Vedas; for him is ordained one duty alone, the service of the three twice-born castes. A Sûdra immediately becomes degraded if he studies the Vedic words."

As regards the objection that the Sûdras like Vidura or Dharma Vyâdha; &c., had the knowledge of Brahman, and consequently were Mukta Jîvas; we reply that they were born Siddhas and possessed Divine knowledge from their very birth, on account of the merit acquired in the past life. They had studied the Vedas in their past lives and so they became Mukta Jîvas in their present life without such study even. Their case is like that of Vâmadeva who had also a Siddha prajñâ. Their examples do not shake our position.

Though the Sûdras are prohibited from studying the Vedas, and performing Vedic sacrifices, yet they are entitled to salvation or Moksa, by the knowledge obtained through hearing the recitation of Purânas (and study of books like the Bhâgawad Gîtâ, &c.) A Mukta Sûdra is as holy, as any other Mukta Jîva, but the difference is only in the degree of their happiness.

Note:-This last paragraph is not according to strict Brahminism. It is a concession to the spirit of the age, and is the charter of the emancipation of the Sudras in ancient India. It appears that there were three distinct stages in the status of a Súdra in ancient India. First, he was looked upon as a conquered people, but not with contempt and not as a slave. There were many Sûdra kings, who were invited to the sacrificial sessions of the Aryan princes and priests. That was the earliest stage; when the Aryan conquest of India was not yet complete, and the Sudras had a right of hearing the Vedas and performing the Vedic sacrifices if so inclined. The second stage commenced when the Aryans had firmly established their rule in India, and were no longer afraid of the conquered races. In this stage the Sudras were relegated into the ranks of slaves. The third stage commenced with the great reformers like Sri Krishna, Buddha, Chaitanya, &c., who gave the rights to the Sudras to study and acquire Dharma, and get Mukti, through the studies of Puranas and Smriti. Practically the whole of India has become a vast Sudra camp nowa-days, uneducated, ignorant and not knowing the Vedas. The repressive policy of the Brahmanas in prohibiting the Sudras from studying the Vedas has recoiled upon them. and the Brahmana class as a whole, is as much degraded as the Sudra in these days. Injustice always brings its own punishment.

Adhikarana IX.—The Thunderbolt is Brahman.

Note.—The Sûtras 1. 3. 26-37 are evidently not of Bâdarâyana, and they have been clumsily interpolated by some bigoted priest of the later days, for they break the continuity of the subject. The purusa of the size of a thumb is the subject under discussion.

but some over-enthusiastic friend of Hindnism has introduced these thirteen Sûtras to preve that the Devas are capable of meditation and the Sûdras are not so qualified. This is in direct opposition to the aphorism of Vyâsa who says manuşya adhikâratvât "all human beings are qualified to meditate on Brahman." That the whole of this is a digression is admitted by Râmânuja and Baladeva. The latter says:--

मकृतं समन्वयं विन्तयति ॥

"Having finished the digression, the author takes up the main topic."

In the Katha Up, we find this further description of the person of the size of a thumb:—

मन्युष्टमात्रः पुरुषोन्तरात्मा सदा जनानां इत्ये सित्तविष्टः । तं स्वाच्छरीरात्मः वृद्देन्युञ्जादिवेषीकां धैर्योखः । तं विधाञ्जूकप्रमृतं तं विधाञ्जूकप्रसृतमिति ।। १७ ।।

"The Person not larger than a thumb, the inner self, is always settled in the heart of men. Let a man draw that self forth from his body with steadiness, as one draws the pith from a reed. Let him know that self as the Bright, as the Immortal; yes, as the Bright, as the Immortal."

यदिवं किञ्च जगत्सर्वे प्राच पजित निःस्तम् । महद्भयं वज्रमुचतं य पतिह्रदुर-मृतास्ते मचन्ति ॥

"Whatever there is, the whole world, when gone forth (from the Brahman) trembles in its breath. That Brahman is a great terror, like a drawn sword (vajra). Those who know It become immortal." (II. 6, 17 and 8).

(Pârvapakṣa).—It means the thunderbolt, because it causes great fear and trembling. Though it is mentioned that those who know this thunderbolt become immortal, yet it is merely a panegyric, and is not to be taken in its literal sense for release depends on knowledge of Brahman. No doubt this Vajra is described here as prâna or life, but it is called prâna in the sense of protector (prâniti). Nor is there anything in the context here, to show that this raised thunderbolt may mean Brahman.

SÛTRA I. 3. 39.

कम्पनात्॥ १।३।३०॥

कम्पनार् Kampanat, because of trembling.

39. Because the whole universe trembles from fear of Him, therefore the Person of the size of a thumb and the thunderbolt refer to Brahman.—103.

COMMENTARY.

The word "thunderbolt" occurs here between two verses describing the Person of the size of a thumb, namely, II. 4. 12 and II. 6. 17, and the whole world is said to tremble from fear of him, therefore the context as well as the description shows that the thunderbolt means Brahman. Even in the Brahmavaivarta Purâna we find the following:—

चकं चकमवादेष, वर्जनाहज्ञमुख्यते । बण्डनात् बङ्ग पवैष, देतिनामा हरिः स्वयं ॥

"The Lord Vişnu is called chakra (generally translated as discus), because He is in constant rotatory motion and goes everywhere (chankramana), and He is Vajra or thunderbolt because He regulates (Varjana) the universe; and He is called the Khadga or the sword because He cuts asunder (Khandana) the evil-doer; and Hari is called Hari because He is the Saviour."

Therefore, when Visnu is represented as having a Chakra or discus, a Vajra or thunderbolt, and a Khadga or sword, in His hand, it means that He is All-pervading and keeps the universe in constant motion, that He is the great Regulator and the Destroyer of all evil. And the Scripture always describes the Supreme Self as the life of the world (Prâna), and one of whom, every one is in terror. That Scriptural idea that He is a great terror is symbolised in this verse by one expressive term "Vajra," the thunderbolt, denoting that all beings move in their proper sphere and do not transgress it, because He is the great Regulator. This epithet 'Vajra' applied to the Person of the size of a thumb shows that, that Person is Brahman. Cf., Tait. Up. II. 8. 1.

BÛTRA I. 8. 40.

ज्योतिर्दर्शनात् ॥ १ । १ । ४० ॥

उच्चेति: Jyotih, light, the Supreme lordliness. वर्षनाव Darganat, on account of being seen.

40. The Person of the size of a thumb and the thunderbolt must refer to Brahman, because we see that He is called light (possessing lordliness) in a passage immediately preceding it.—104.

In the same Upanisad, Valli V, verse 15, we find the following:-

न तत्र सूर्यो भांति न चन्द्रतारकत्रेमा विद्युता भान्ति कुताऽयमग्निः। तमेच भान्तमञ्जभाति सर्वन्तस्य भासा सर्वमिवं विभाति ॥ १५ ॥

"Him the sun does not illumine nor the moon and the stars. Nor do these lightnings, much less this Fire illumine Him. When He illumines all (the Sun), &c. then they shine after (Him with His light). This whole universe reveals His light (in His light and its light is His).

Between this verse and the next verse, II. 6. 3, occurs this verse relating to the thunderbolt. That next verse is given below:—

भयादस्याप्तिस्तपति भयाचपति स्थाः । भयादिन्द्रस्य वायुर्व बृत्युर्धावति पञ्चमः ॥ ३ ॥ 3. "From terror of Brahman fire burns; from terror, the sun burns; from terror Indra and Váyu, and Death, as the fifth, run away."

Therefore the Vajra must mean Brahman. Everywhere, in fact, the Upanişad texts describe Brahman as possessing Supreme luminousness. Therefore in this Vajra passage also, which comes immediately after the passage describing luminosity and before the passage describing fear, it must mean Brahman. Moreover, the Person of the size of the thumb who is described for the purposes of meditation as extremely luminous and holding an upraised thunderbolt in His hand, refers to Brahman and not to an inferior deity.

Adhikaraṇa X.—The Âkâśâ is Brahman.

In the Chhândogya Upanishad we read:-

चाकाशो वे नाम नामक्ष्योनिर्वहिता ते यवन्तरा तवृत्रद्वा तवसृतश्च स्रात्मा !

The ether is the evolver of forms and names. That within which these forms and names are (or 'that which is within or without these forms and names') is Brahman, the Immortal, the Self (VIII. 14).

(Doubt).—A doubt here arises whether the being here called Akasa or ether means the Mukta Jiva, who has shaken off all bonds, or the Supreme Self?

(Pûrvapakṣa).—The Pûrvapakṣin says, the Âkâsa here refers to the Mukta Jîva. For in the clause immediately preceding it, the Mukta Jîva is described as a horse that has shaken off all dust, &c., from his hair, or as the moon free from eclipse in the following verse:—

इयामाच्छवछं प्रपचे दावलाच्छ्यामं प्रपचेऽहव इव रोमाचि विध्य पापं चन्द्र इव राहोमुं बात्ममुख्य धृत्वा दारीरमसृतं छतात्मा ब्रह्मकोकमिसस्मवामीत्वमिसस्मवा-मीति ॥ १ ॥

'Shaking off all evil, as a horse shakes his hair, and as the moon frees himself from the mouth of Rahu; having shaken off the body I obtain, satisfied, the uncreated world of Brahman.'

Moreover in this very passage the words te yad antarâ tad Brahma that which is without forms and names is Brahman—shows that the Jîvaâtman is meant, when in the state of Mukti, it throws off all forms and names. And Jîvâtman can very appropriately be called the upholder or evolver of name and form, because previous to Mukti, it assumes all forms and names such as of a Deva and man, &c. And it may very well be called Âkâsa in the sense of prakâsa or splendour or luminosity. The passage, therefore, refers to the Released soul, and it is called here Brahman, the Immortal, because it attains that state.

BÛTRA I. 8. 41.

म्राकाशोऽर्थान्तरत्वादिव्यपदेशात् ॥ १ । ३ । ४१ ॥

चाकाश: Âkasaḥ, akasa, ether, space. चर्यान्तरत्वादि Arthantaratvadi, different meaning, &c., artha = meaning, antaratva, = differentness, adi, etc., for other reasons. व्यवस्थात् Vyapadesat, on account of the designation.

41. The word akasa here refers to the Supreme Self, and not to the Released soul, because it is a designation of something different than the individual soul, and for other reasons also.—105.

COMMENTARY.

The sense of the Sûtra is this. The power of evolving name and form is proved here not to belong to the freed soul, but to âkâsa. The Jîvâtman, when in bondage, cannot evolve name and form, because it has not the power; on the contrary, it is under the influence of karma, and is itself involved in name and form, and is incapable, therefore, to evolve them. Nor can it evolve name and form in its Released state, because the Sûtra, IV. 4. 17, expressly states that in the state of Release the Jîva does not take part in the world business, while the Supreme Self is mentioned in all Scriptures, as the Creator of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms. Thus under site of the universe and to be the evolver of names and forms.

Therefore, it must be understood that the Highest Self is the Akasa of this passage.

The word adi, "&c.," in the Satra refers to the Brahmahood: the unconditioned greatness, &c., mentioned in the said passage. For Brahmahood that is greatness, and so on, in their unconditioned sense, belong to the Highest Self only. Nor is it right, as the Parvapaksin says, that the clause immediately preceding it refers to the Mukta Jiva. On the contrary, the clause 'I obtain the Brahma-world' shows that the topic immediately preceding it is Brahman, which the Released soul obtains. The word akada, moreover, means all-pervading, and it is inapplicable to Jiva, while its application to the Supreme Self is a well-known thing.

(Pûrvapaksa).—An objection is raised:—Let it be so, yet it does not establish that there is a separate Brahman other than and different from the Mukta Jiva; and therefore, all these are attributes of the Mukta Jiva; because there is no difference between the two, and so all your above argument has no force. Thus in the Bri. Up., IV. 3-7, the Jiva in the state of its bondage is first described in the passage:—

कतम मात्मेति योऽयं विज्ञानमयः प्रावेषु इचन्तरस्योतिः पुरुषः सः समानः समुमी क्रोकावजुसम्बरित भ्यायतीय क्रेकायतीय सहि स्वमी भूत्वेमं क्रोकमितकामित सुखो कपावि ।

"Who is that Self? Yājūavalkya replied: "He who is within the heart, surrounded by the Prāṇas (senses), the person of light, consisting of knowledge. He, remaining the same, wanders along the worlds, as if thinking, as if moving during sleep (in dream) he transcends this world and all the forms of death (all that falls under the sway of death, all that is perishable)."

The text then goes on to describe this very Jiva when it attains Mukti as Brahman. That passage is the following:—

स वा प्रयमात्मा ब्रह्म विद्यानमयः।

"That Âtman is indeed Brahman, the Vijñanamaya" &c. (IV. 4-5).

This shows that the released soul is identical with Brahman. Similarly in another passage of the same, after describing the state of Mukti in the words:—"Anukâmayamânaḥ, &c., free from all desires, &c.," the Scripture goes on to say:—"Having become Brahman, he goes to Brahman" (IV 4-6).

Note: - We give below the whole of this passage :-

तदेव रहोको मर्वत ॥ तदेव सकः सह कर्मबैति छिङ्गं मनो यत्र निवक्तमस्य ॥ प्राप्यान्तं कर्मा बस्तस्य यत्किम्बेद करोत्ययं ॥ तस्माङ्कोकात्पुनरेत्यस्मै केकाय कर्मा ब इति जुकामयमानोऽधाकामयमानो येऽकामा निकाम बासकाम बात्मकामः न तस्य प्राप्त रहकामनित महीव सन् महाप्येति ॥ ६ ॥

"And there is this verse: 'To whatever object a man's own mind is attached, to that he goes strenuously together with his deed; and having obtained the end the (last results) of whatever deed he does here on earth, he returns again from that world (which is the temporary reward of his deed) to this world of action."

"So much for the man who desires. But as to the man who does not desire, who not desiring, freed from desires, is satisfied in his desires, or desires the Self only, his vital spirits do not depart elsewhere,—being Brahman, he goes to Brahman." (Bri. Up., IV. 4-6.)

This also shows that the Jiva in the state of Mukti is identical with Brahman. In the conclusion of that text also, the same fact is repeated, when describing the fruit of Brahmajñana:—

स वा पष महानज बात्माजरोऽमरोऽस्तोश्मयो ब्रह्माभयं वै ब्रह्माभय<sup>भ</sup>्हि वै ब्रह्म भवति य पवं वेद् ॥

'This great, unborn Self, undecaying, undying, immortal, fearless, is indeed Brahman.

Fearless is Brahman, and he who knows this becomes verily the fearless Brahman' (IV. 4-25.)

Thus the beginning, the middle, and the end, of this passage shows that the Jiva in the state of Mukti is identical with Brahman, therefore, wherever in the Upanisads we find any statement that Jiva is separate from Brahman, it must be understood that the difference is created by upadhi or limiting adjunct, such as the difference of between the ghatakasa and Mahakasa, the space within the jar and space outside it. There is no difference between these two, and when the upadhi or the jar is broken, the space remains the same. So when the Upadhi of the Jiva is broken, the Jiva becomes Brahman, and attains to his own greatness. Jiva in this state may very well be called the Creator of the universe, &c., for it manifests then the divine attributes of creation, &c. Thus there is no difference between the Mukta Jiva and Brahman.

SÛTRA I. 3. 42.

सुषुप्सुरकान्त्योर्भेदेन ॥ १ । ३ । ४२ ॥

श्रुति Suṣupti, the dreamless sleep, deep sleep. उपाति Utkranti, departing at the time of death, suṣputyutkrantyoh, in deep sleep and departing. जेवन Bhedena, by the difference.

42. The text designates the Supreme Self as different from the Jiva, whether it be in the state of deep sleep or at the time of departure.—106.

COMMENTARY.

The word vyapadesat (on account of designation) of the last Satra is understood here also, and must be supplied here in order to complete the sense. In the above passage of the Bri. Up., no doubt can properly arise that the Mukta Jiva is identical with Brahman. Because the text there sharply and clearly draws the distinction between the Jiva and Brahman, whether that Jiva be in the state of deep sleep or at the point of death. In the state of deep sleep the Jiva is said to be embraced by the Lord in the passage, Bri. Up. IV. 3-21.

तथया भियया क्रिया सम्परिज्यको न वाद्यं किञ्चन वेद नान्तरमेवायं पुरुषः भावेनात्मना सम्परिज्यको न वाद्यं किञ्चन वेद नान्तरं तद्वा अस्पैतदासकाम-मात्मकाममकाम<sup>भ</sup>्कपभ्शोकान्तरम् ॥ २१॥

"Now as a man, when embraced by beloved wife, knows nothing that is without, nothing that is within, thus this person, when embraced by the Intelligent (prajos) Self (Brahman) knows nothing that is without, nothing that is within. This indeed is his (true) form, in which his wishes are fulfilled, in which the self (only) is his wish, in which no wish is left, free from any sorrow."

Similarly, the difference between the Jiva on the point of death, and Brahman is shown in the passage IV. 4-35, where the Jiva is described as groaning, mounted by Brahman, who carries it along thus out of the body:—

तदाया नः सुसमाहितमुत्सर्जयाया देवमेवाय रारीर चात्मा प्रावेगात्म-नान्वाकरमुत्सर्जयाति यत्रैतकृषांच्यवासी भवति ॥

'Now as a heavy-laden carriage moves along groaning, thus does the jivatman, mounted by the Intelligent Self (Brahman) moves along groaning, when a man is thus going to expire.' (IV. 3-35).

Now it is impossible that the unconscious, the little knowing Jiva either lying in deep sleep or departing from the body, should at the same time be embraced or mounted by itself, being all-knowing. Nor can the embracing and mounting Self be some other Jiva; for no such Self can be all-knowing.

The objector says, "the point at issue is, whether the Mukta Jiva is or is not identical with Brahman. You have only established that the Jiva in the state of deep sleep and while expiring, is different from Brahman. That we admit also, for in these two states the Jiva still has an upâdhi." This objection is answered by the next Sûtra:—

SÙTPA I. 3. 43.

पत्याविंशब्वेभ्यः ॥ १ । ३ । ४३ ॥

पति Pati, Lord, Protector. चार्वि Âdi, et cetera, and the rest. चार्केन्द्र: Śabdebhyaḥ, words. paty-adi-Śabdebhyaḥ, on account of words like pati, &c.

44. The Mukta Jiva is not identical with Brahman, because of such words as Lord, &c., applied to Him in that passage.—107.

COMMENTARY.

In that passage of the Bri. Up., we find the words pati, &c, employed, which shows that the Mukta Jiva could not have been meant:—

स वा एव महानज बात्मा ये।ऽयं विद्यानमयः प्रावेषु य एषोऽन्तर्हे वय बाकाश्च स्तिसम्बद्धेते सर्वस्य वशी सर्वस्यशानः सर्वस्याधिपतिः स न साधुना कर्मांबा भूयाची पव साधुना कनीयान् एव सर्वेश्वर एव भूताधिपतिरेव भूतपाछ एव सेतुविधर व एवा क्षेत्रकानामसम्भेवाय ॥

"And that is that great unborn Self, who consists of knowledge, is surrounded by the Pranas, the ether within the heart. In it there reposes the ruler of all, the lord of all, the king of all. He does not become greater by good works, nor smaller by evil works. He is the Lord of all, the King of all things, the Protector of all things. He is a bank and a boundary, so that these worlds may not be confounded."

This shows that Brahman is different from the Mukta Jiva. For we cannot predicate the lordliness over all, the ruling of all, the kingship of all to Mukta Jiva, for the Sûtra, IV. 4-17, declares that the released soul does not possess the power to create the universe, &c. Moreover in the Taittiriya Aranyaka we find that Brahman alone is the dweller within of all beings, and their Ruler.

For He is described as : सन्तः प्रविद्यः शास्ता जनानाम् ॥

Nor can it be said that the difference between the Jiva and Brahman is due to the upadhi or limiting adjunct only, and therefore, is phenomenal and not real; because we find in the Scriptures that the difference exists even in the state of Release. In the Adhikarana Sûtra II. 3. 41, this will be explained further on, where it will be taught that the statement that "ayamatma Brahma-self is Brahman" is true only in the sense that the Jiva is a part of Brahman, and it has some of the attributes of Brahman. Similarly, the sentence 'Becoming Brahman he attains Brahman' means that the eight-fold attributes become manifest in the Jiva and thus he resembles Brahman; and this is the meaning of the phrase "Becoming Brahman," for other texts like 'paramam samyam upaite-he reaches the highest similarity' also show that similarity only is reached and not identity. The phrase "Reaching Brahman" is attaining this similarity. Therefore Jiva is always different from Brahman, whether it be in the state of bondage or of release. This being established, it follows that the akada said to be the evolver of name and form in Chh. Up. VIII. 14 is Brahman and not any released soul. This difference between Jiva and Brahman was established in the Sûtras I. 1. 16 & 17 also. But there it was done in a general way, while in the present Sûtra it is specifically established that even in the state of Mukti, the Jiva retains its separate identity.

FOURTH PADA.

Adhikaraṇa I.—Avyakta of Katha I. 3. 11 means body and not Prakriti.

We pay our reverence to Bâdarâyana called Krişnadvaipâyana, who has wisdom as his ornament, and who like the sun has dispelled with the rays of his logic, the deep darkness of the fallacious reasoning of Sânkhya.

(Visaya).—It has already been stated before, that the Supreme Brahman is the cause of the universe, and that He alone should be inquired into, in order to obtain Mukti, that He is the seed of the creation, the sustenance, and dissolution of the universe, that He is different from the dead matter called jadam, and the individual souls called the jivas, that He has infinite powers, which are inconceivable; and that He is omniscient and possesses all auspicious attributes: He is free from all shadow of imperfection and has the power of realising all his purposes. The Sûtras now try to reconcile those texts, found in some Upanişads, which lend some countenance to the theory maintained by Kapila, as to there being a Pradhana and individual souls, independent of God.

In the Katha Upanisad we read :-

इतिर्येभ्यः परा क्षर्या चर्चेभ्यक्ष परं मनः। मनसन्तु परा बुद्धि बुद्धाःस्मा महान् परः ॥ १० ॥ महतः परमन्यकमन्यकात् पुरुषः परः। पुरुषाक परं किंचित्, सा काष्टा सा परा गतिः॥

*Beyond the senses there are the objects, beyond the objects there is the mind, beyond the mind there is the intellect, the Great Self is beyond the intellect. Beyond the Great, there is the Unevolved, beyond the Unevolved, there is the Person. Beyond the Person there is nothing—this is the goal, the highest road (I.S. 11).

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt—Does the word Unevolved (avyakta) mean the Pradhana of the Sankhyas or body.

(Pârvapakṣa).—The opponent says—It means the Pradhâna, because the text says that beyond the mahat is the avyakta, and beyond avyakta there is the Puruṣa. This is the order in which the Sânkhyas also mention their tattvas.

(Siddhânta).—This objection is answered by the following Sûtra.

**SÛTRA I. 4. 1.

म्रानुमानिकमप्येकेषामिति चेन्, न, शरीररूपकविन्यस्त-यद्वीतेर्वर्शयति च ॥ १ । ४ । १ ॥ सायुगानिकस् Ånumanikam, that which rests on inference, namely, the Pradhana. शापि Api, also. एकेशब् Ekeşam, of some: i.e., of the Kathakas. शासि Iti, thus. चेन् Chet, if. न Na, not. शासि Sartra, body. क्यूक Rūpaka, simile. विश्वस्त Vinyasta, contained. शृक्षिते: Grihtteh, because of the reference. क्यूंबर्सि Dargayati, shows. भ Cha, and.

1. If it be said that the Katha Upanisad mentions the Pradhâna, we say no. The word avyakta occurs there in a passage, containing a simile of the body, and must, therefore, mean "body;" and the text shows this also.—109.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'of some' means the Kâthas. The Kâthaka Sruti refers to the Pradhâna called "the inferred one." The word avyakta means that which is not vyakta, "manifest or evolved," and refers to the substrate of matter called Prakriti or Pradhâna. This objection is answered by the second half of the Sûtra, which declares that the avyaktam here does not mean "unmanifested," but "body." Because it occurs in a passage where the body is compared to a chariot and the other things like mind, buddhi, etc., as various objects connected with this chariot. In fact, the whole passage shows this. In order to understand it fully, we give below the entire passage: —

बात्मान् रिधनं विकि शरीर र रथमेव तु। बुद्धिन्तु सार्थि विद्धि मनः प्रप्रहमेव च ॥ ३ ॥ इतियाबि ह्यानाहर्षिषया ४ स्तेषु गोचरान् । ग्रात्मेन्द्रियमनायुक्तं भोक्तेत्याद्वर्मनीपियः ॥ ४ ॥ यस्वविद्यानवान् भवत्ययुक्तेन मनसा सदा। तस्येन्द्रियाण्यवश्यानि दुष्टाभ्या दव सारथेः ॥ ५ ॥ यस्त विद्यानवान् भवति युक्तेन मनसा सदा । तस्येन्द्रयाचि वदयानि सददव इव सारयेः ॥ ६॥ यस्वविद्यानवान् भवस्यमनस्कः सर्वाऽश्यविः। न स तत्वद्माप्रोति स्थारम्बाधिगव्हति ॥ ७॥ यस्त विद्यानवान् भवति समनस्कः सदा ग्रुविः। स त तत्पवमाप्रोति यस्माव्ययो न जायते ॥ ८ ॥ विद्यानसारथियेस्तु मनः प्रप्रद्वाचरः। सोऽध्वनः पारमाप्नीति तक्किप्बोः परमन्पदम् ॥ ९ ॥ इतियोक्यः परा द्वार्था प्रशेम्य इच परं मनः। मनसस्त परा बुद्धिर्ब सेरात्मा महान् परः ॥ १०॥ महतः परमध्यक्तमध्यकात् पुरुषः परः। वृद्धां परं किञ्चित् सा काष्टा सा परा गतिः ॥ ११ ॥

यव सर्वेषु भूतेषु गृहाला न मकाशते । दृश्यते त्वत्र्यया बुद्धचा स्क्ष्मया स्क्ष्मदृश्चिमः ॥ १२ ॥ यच्छेद्वाङ्कनसी प्रावस्तवच्छेद्धान चालनि । द्वानमालनि महति नियच्छेत्तवच्छेद्धाना चालनि ॥

- 3. Know the Self to be sitting in the chariot, the body to be the chariot, the intellect (buddhi) the charioteer, and the mind the reins.
- 4. The senses they call the horses, the objects of the senses their roads. When He (the Highest Self) is in union with the body, the senses, and the mind, then wise people call him the Enjoyer.
- 5. He who has no understanding and whose mind (the reins) is never firmly held, his senses (horses) are unmanageable, like vicious horses of a charioteer.
- 6. But he who has understanding and whose mind is always firmly held, his senses are under control, like good horses of a charioteer.
- 7. He who has no understanding, who is unmindful and always impure, never reaches that place, but enters into the round of births.
- 8. But he who has understanding, who is mindful and always pure, reaches indeed that place, from whence he is not born again.
- 9. But he who has understanding for his charioteer, and who holds the reins of the mind, he reaches the end of his journey, and that is the highest place of Visnu.
- 10. Beyond the senses there are the objects, beyond the objects there is the mind, beyond the mind there is the intellect, the Great Self is beyond the intellect.
- 11. Beyond the Great there is the Undeveloped, beyond the Undeveloped there is the Person (purusa). Beyond the Person there is nothing—this is the goal, the highest road.
- 12. That Self is hidden in all beings and does not shine forth, but it is seen by subtle seers through their sharp and subtle intellect.
- 18. A wise man should keep down speech and mind; he should keep them within the Self which is knowledge; he should keep the knowledge within the Self which is the Great; and he should keep that (the Great) within the Self which is the Quiet.

This passage shows that the pilgrim desirous to reach Vienu, the Supreme Goal, is represented here, in the simile of a charioteer, his body is represented as a chariot, his senses as the horses, his emotional and intellectual faculties as the charioteer, etc. It further shows that he who has these faculties under control, reaches the highest state of Vienu, at the end of his journey. The verses under discussion only show how to control these in succession, and how the control of one is easier or more difficult, according as one is grosser or more subtle. The text thus refers only to those entities, which have previously appeared in the simile under the names of chariot, horses, charioteer, the reins, etc., because the words are almost the same. Now contrasting the words of the simile, with the words of the passage under discussion, we see that 'body' is only left out, and therefore, the word 'avyakta' must denote the body, which is the remainder that we get by this method of exhaustion, and from the context also. It has no reference to the Sankhya tattvas, for it is against the theory of the Sankhyas. The Sankhyas do not admit that the arthas are the cause of the indrivas, and so higher than these; nor that the manas is higher than arthas.

Note.—In the simile (verses 3 to 9) we have the following entities:—

ENTITY.

SIMILE.

Sartra (body) Buddhi (reason) chariot. charioteer.

Manas (lower intellect)
Arthas (objects)

reins. roads.

Indriyas (senses)

horses.

The same idea is expressed in verses 10 and 11, showing, how one is more difficult to control than the other. Thus indrives (senses) are easier to control than the arthas (objects). The objects easier than the manas, and the manas easier than buddhi.

The Soul is said to be the chariot-seated, because it is the principal enjoyer; and lord of the chariot (i. e., of the body, the instrument of enjoyment). The Buddhi is the driver, as it brings pleasure or pain to the soul, according as it has discrimination or not.

Now an objection is raised, how can the body which is manifest and visible (vyakta), be said to be unmanifest and unevolved? The author replies to this in the next Sûtra:—

SÛTRA I. 4. 2.

सूक्ष्मन्तु तर्वहत्वात् ॥ १ । ४ । २ ॥

स्त्रनं Sûkṣmaṇ, the subtle, the permanent atoms, the causal body. हु Tu, but, सह Tad, that, its. सहस्राह Arhatvât, because of its capability.

2. But by the word body is meant the subtle body, and the term avyakta or unmanifest is capable of being applied to it.—110.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' is employed in the Sûtra in order to remove the above doubt. By sarira is not meant here the dense body, but the highest, the subtlest body or the causal body. Why do you say that it denotes the causal body? Because of its capability, that is to say, the causal body can appropriately be called avyakta or unmanifest. In fact in Bri. Up. I. 4. 7. the karana sarira is called by the term unevolved or avyakrita, and shows that before the world came into manifestation, it was in the form of a seed or causal body.

तन्ते वं तर्क्षं वास्त्रमासीत् तत्तामकपाभ्यामेव व्यक्तियतेऽसी भामायमिव् ५कप इति तविवृत्तप्येतर्धि गामकपाभ्यामेव व्यक्तियतेऽसी गामायामिव् ५कप इति स एव इद्द प्रविद्य सामकानेऽसी यथा श्वरः श्वरकानेऽवहितः स्थाहिश्वंभरो वा विश्वंभरकुकाये ॥

"Now all this was then undeveloped. It became developed by form and name, so that one could say, 'He called so and so, is such a one.' Therefore at present also all this is developed by name and form, so that one can say, 'He, called so and so, is such a one.' He (Brahman or the Self) entered thither, to the very tips of the finger-nails, as a razor might be fitted in a razor case, or as fire in a fireplace, &c."

But another objection is raised: If the avyakta or unevolved is taken to be matter in its subtle state constituting the causal body, what objection is there to interpret it as the Pradhana of the Sankhya system, for there also avyakta means matter in a subtle state. This objection is answered by the author in the next Satra.

तवधीनत्वावर्धवत् । १। ४। ३॥

त्तप् Tad, its, his, on him, that is on the Lord. आधीनलात् Adhinatvat, on account of dependence. आधीनस् Arthavat, having a sense or a meaning subserving an end or purpose.

3. The Pradhâna is capable of producing her effects, not independently as the Sânkhyas hold, but because she is dependent upon Brahman, the Supreme Cause.—111.

COMMENTARY.

We do not totally deny the existence of Pradhana, what we contest is the theory of the Sankhyas, according to which Pradhana produces the world by her own independent action. Matter in its subtle state subserves an end, by its dependence on the Supreme Person. Because the Lord looks on the matter and energises her, that she has the power of producing the world. In her own nature she is jadam. As we find in the Sveta. Up., IV. 9 and 10:—

छन्दांसि यक्षाः करवे। वर्तान भूतं भव्यं यक्ष वेदा वदन्ति । सस्मान्मायी स्वजते विश्वमेतत् तस्मिक्षान्यो मायया स्विक्षः ॥ ९ ॥ मायां तु प्रकृतिं विद्यान्मायिनं तु महेक्षरम् । तस्यावयवभूतैस्तु व्यातं सर्वमिदं जगत् ॥ १० ॥

'That from which the maker (mayin) sends forth all this—the sacred verses, the offerings, the sacrifices, the panaceas, the past, the future, and all that the Vedas declare—in that the other is bound up through that maya.

'Khow then Prakriti (nature) is maya (art) and the Great Lord the Mayin (maker); the whole world is filled with what are his members.'

य पको वर्जो बहुधा शक्तियागात् वर्जाननेकान् निहितार्थी द्वाति । विवैति बान्ते विश्वमादै। स देवः स नो बुद्धचा ग्रुमया संयुनक् ॥ १॥ 'He, the sun, without any colour, who with set purpose by means of his power (fakti) produces endless colours, in whom all this comes together in the beginning, and comes asunder in the end—may He, the God, endow us with good thoughts.'

So also in the Bhagavata Pûrana we find that Pradhana by her own unaided exertions does not produce the universe.

स प्र भूया निजनीर्यचोदितां स्वजीवमायां प्रकृतिं सिन्द् सतीम् । चनामकपा-त्मनि कपनामनी विधित्समानोऽतससार शासकृत् ॥

'The Lord entered into Prakriti, in order to create the universe, after having endowed her with His own powers, and which contained in her the power of deluding the jivas. He, the Great Revealer of all Scriptures also entered into the jivas, which had no names and forms before, and which thereby obtained such name and form, in order that they may enjoy the fruit of their actions, and attain liberation.'

Similarly in Visnu Pûrana we find:-

प्रधानं पुरुषण्यापि प्रविद्यात्मेळ्या हरिः। क्षोमयामास संप्राप्ते सर्गकाळे व्ययाव्ययी ॥

'Hari the Great Lord enters into Pradhana and the jivas by His own free will, and energises them, when the hour for creation strikes. He enters into Pradhana which constantly undergoes modification; and into the jiva who is without modification.

So also in the Cita we find, (IX. 10):-

मयाध्यक्षे व प्रकृतिः स्यते सवरावरम् । हेतुनानेन कैान्तेय जनहिपरिवर्त्तते ॥

'Under Me, as supervisor, Prakriti sends forth all the moving and unmoving objects; because of this, O Kaunteya, the universe revolves.' (See also Gits VII. 4 to 7).

For these reasons, while admitting the existence of the Pradhana, we oppose the theory of the Sankhyas which declares the Pradhana to be an independent cause of creation. We modify their teaching by declaring that the Pradhana is a dependent cause of creation.

In the next Sûtra, the author gives another reason for holding that the avyakta of the Katha Upanişad is not to be interpreted as Pradhana.

8ÛTRA I. 4. 4.

ज्ञेयत्वावचनाच् च ॥ १ । १ । ४ ॥

4. Because there is no statement, in this passage of the Katha. Up., that the avyakta is an object of knowledge, therefore, the avyakta does not mean the Sankhya Pradhana.—112.

COMMENTARY.

The Sankhyas say that liberation (Kaivalya) is obtained by the knowledge of Pradhana, as being distinct from Purusa. So according to the Sankhyas, Release depends upon this discriminative knowledge, and according to them this knowledge of Pradhana as separate from Purusa is necessary in order to attain certain powers. But there is no such mention in this Upanisad that the knowledge of avyakta is necessary to get Release, or to obtain powers. Therefore, avyakta here cannot mean the Pradhana of the Sankhyas.

Note:—According to the Sankhyas the Kaivalya is attained by knowing that the Puruşa is different from Prakriti. The knowledge of Prakriti is thus an essential of Release. But the Katha Upanişad nowhere mentions that the knowledge of "Avyakta" is necessary for release. The avyakta therefore of the Katha Upanişad is not the Prakriti of the Sankhyas.

SÛTRA 1. 4. 5.

"वदित" इति चेन्, न; प्राज्ञो हि प्रकरणात्॥ १। ४। ४॥

वेद्यास Vadati, the verse says, or the text says. वृति Iti, thus. वेस Chet, if. व Na, not. ब्राह्म: Prājňāḥ, the Intelligent Self, the Paramātman वि Hi, because. वकारबाइ Prakaraṇāt, of the subject-matter.

5. If it be said that the text does teach that this avyakta is to be known, we say no, because the declaration about knowing, refers to the Supreme Self, and the context also shows it to be thus.—113.

COMMENTARY.

An objector says "the text declares that the avyakta is to be known, for immediately after the above verses is the following:—

चहान्द्रमस्पर्गमकपमन्ययं तथाऽरसचित्तमगन्धवस यत्। चनाचनन्तममहतः परन्धवं निचाय्य तम्मृत्युमुकात्ममुख्यते ॥

"He who has meditated on that which is without sound, without touch, without form, without decay, without taste, eternal, without smell, without beginning, without end, beyond the Great, unchangeable, is freed from the jaws of death" (Katha Up. II. 3-15).

This description applies to Pradhana, very well; because it is without sound, without touch, etc., and is beyond the Great, or mahatattva. This passage, by using the word nichayya, which means "having known or perceived," shows that Pradhana ought to be known. Therefore, the objection raised in the last Sûtra that this Upanisad nowhere teaches the knowing of Pradhana falls to the ground."

This objection is raised in the first half of the present Sûtra and is answered by the second half. The reference is here not to the Pradhana, but to the Supreme Self called Prajña. "Beyond the Great or mahat" does not mean "beyond the mahatattva" of the Sankhyas, but beyond Hiranyagarbha, and Jiva; because the Jiva is called Great or mahat, in the above passage. The whole context shows that the asabdam, etc., refers to the Supreme Self, and not to the Pradhana. Thus verse 11 declares "Beyond the Person there is nothing. This is the goal, the highest road." So also, "That Self is hidden in all beings and does not shine forth, but it is seen by subtle seers, through their sharp and subtle intellect."

The author gives another reason for holding that Pradhana is not meant in this passage of the Katha Upanisad.

SÛTRA I. 4. 6.

त्रयाणामेव चैवमुपन्यासः प्रश्नश्च ॥ १ । ४ । ६ ॥

चवाबाब Trayanam, of the three, namely, three boons asked by Nachiketas. वृद Eva, only. च Cha, and. पृदह Evam, thus. बप्यासः Upanyasah, mention. वृदशः Prașnah, question. च Cha, and.

6. Moreover, there is mention in this Upanisad, of only three things or boons; and the question also relates to three things only.—114.

COMMENTARY.

The force of 'cha' is to remove doubt. In this Katha Upanisad, three boons are only asked by Nachiketas, namely, that his father should be well disposed towards him; that he should be taught the secret of the celestial fire; and that he should be initiated into the mystery of the Self. (Moreover three objects of knowledge only are to be found here, and the question is relating to those three objects, namely, the means of knowledge, the person knowing, and the end to be realised.) There is no question here relating to Pradhâna, or any other object, and so it would have been irrelevant for the teacher, to have given any information about Pradhâna, regarding which no question was asked. Therefore, the avyakts here does not refer to Pradhâna.

BÛTRA I.4.7.

महद्रच् च ॥ १ । ४ । ७ ॥

बहुद बहु Mahadvat, like the mahat, ज Cha, and.

7. And as the word 'mahat,' occurring in this passage, is not taken to refer to the 'mahat' of the Sankhyas, so also the avyakta here does not denote the Pradhana of that philosophy.—115.

COMMENTARY.

In the passage under consideration, we find it stated "higher than the intellect is the Great Self (mahan-atma)." Now no one has ever contended that this "mahat" used here refers to the Sankhya mahattattva, on the contrary it is unanimously taken to mean the Jivatman. Why should then the word avyakta be taken to mean Prakriti? The word avyakta, being taught here to be higher than the Jivatman, must be something different from Pradhans. The Buddhi is the Mahat of the Sankhyas. But in the Katha Up. the Mahat is said to be higher than Buddhi—buddheratma mahan parah. So the Mahat of the Ka. Up. is different from the Mahat of the Sankhyas.

Adikaraṇa II.—The Ajâ of Svet Up. IV. 5 does not mean Pradhâna.

The author next refutes another wrong interpretation given by the Sankhyas, of a verse from another Upanişad. This is to be found in Svetasvatara Up. IV. 5:—

चजामेकां केहितगुद्धहरूबां बहीः प्रजाः स्वजमानां सक्याः । चजो होके जुप-मार्केः जुरोते जहात्येनां भुक्तभोगामजोऽन्यः ॥ ५ ॥

'There is one unborn being (aji), red, white, and black, uniform, but producing manifold offspring. There is one unborn being (aja) who loves her and lies by her; there is another who leaves her, while she is eating what has to be eaten.'

(Doubt).—Does the word ajå, unborn; mean here the well-known Prakriti of the Sânkhyas, or the divine power of the Brahman mentioned in the Upanişad?

(Pûrvapakşa).—The word ajâ here denotes the Sânkhya Prakriti, because she is called 'unborn', that is, not an effect, and because she is said to produce manifold offspring by her own unaided effort.

(Siddhânta).—The ajâ here does not mean Prakriti, as the author proves in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA I. 4. 8.

चमसवदविशेषात्॥ १।४।८॥

चनसम्ब Chamasavat, like a cup. धविशेषास् Avisesat, because there is no special characteristic.

8. The word ajâ here does not denote the Prakriti of the Sânkhyas, because there is no special characteristic of her mentioned here, it is unlike the mention of the word 'chamasa' or cup in Brihadâranyaka Upanişad, where it does not convey its literal meaning of the "cup," but means the skull of the head.—116.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'na' is to be read into this Sûtra from 1. 4. 5. The word aja her cannot mean the well-known Prakriti of the Sankhyas, because there are no special characteristic marks of Prakriti in this passage. It simply means here "one that is not born," and need not necessarily mean the unborn Prakriti. It is not like the word 'cup' used in the Bri. Up. (II. 2. 3) where owing to the context, it is taken to mean the 'skull,' and not a vessel from which one drinks. But there is nothing in the context here, which would lead us to infer, that the 'unborn' meant Prakriti. That passage is the following:—

तदेव स्तोका मक्तवां विकायमसं कर्जवुष्णस्तिसम्यक्तो निहितं विकायकं तस्यासत क्रवयः सस्तीरेवागद्यमी ब्रह्मचा संविदाने स्वां विकार यमसंक्रव्यमसं कर्जवुष्ण इतीवं तिकार यम द्वां विकायमसं कर्जवुष्णस्तिसम्यक्तो निहितं विश्वकप्रतिति प्राचा वै वक्तो निहितं विकायकं प्राचानेतदाद तस्यासत क्रवयः सस्तीर इति प्राचा वा क्रवयः प्राचा-वैतदाद वागद्यमी क्रवाचा संविद्योगित वाग्यव्यमी ब्रह्मचा संविद्योगित वाग्यव्यमी ब्रह्मचा संविद्योगित वाग्यव्यमी ब्रह्मचा संविद्योगित वाग्यव्यमी व्रह्मचा संविद्योगित वाग्यव्यमी व्रह्मचा संविद्योगित

'There is a cup having its mouth below and its bottom above. Manifold glory has been placed into it. On its lip sit the seven Risis, the tongue as the eighth communicates with Brahmau. What is called the cup having its mouth below, its bottom above, is this head, for its mouth, (the mouth) is below, its bottom (the skull) is above. When it is said that manifold glory has been placed into it, the senses are verily manifold glory, and he therefore means the senses. When he says that seven Risis sit on its lip, the Risis are verily the (active) senses, and he means the senses. And when he says that the tongue as the eighth communicates with Brahman, it is because the tongue, as the eighth, does communicate with Brahman.'

In the above verse of the Bri. Up, we cannot take the word chamass in its etymological sense, namely, that implement by which snything is (chamyate) drunk. We cannot say it means a cup there, though the literal meaning of the word is "an implement of eating." Of course words, the meaning of which we know through their derivation, are not to be taken in their literal sense, without considering the context, the general possibility, the general subject matter, &c., of the passage in which such words occur. For this reason ajâ may mean the Prakriti; but when we look out to see whether this word which by its derivation means 'unborn,' can be taken to mean the Prakriti of the Sankhyas, we find that there are no such considerations of general possibility, of general subject-matter, and so on in this Sve. Up. by which such a meaning could be given to it. Nor is there anything in that passage, by which one may know that aja there possesses the power of creation independently of the Lord; all that that passage says is this that aja gives birth to 'manifold offspring,' it does not say that she creates unaided, therefore also aja here does not refer to the Prakriti of the Sankhyas, which creates unaided.

The author gives another special reason to show that the word aja means here the divine power so often mentioned in the Vedas and not the Prakriti of the Sankhyas.

SÛTRA L 4. 9.

ज्योतिरुपक्रमा तु तथाद्यधीयते एके ॥१।४।६॥

च्योतिः Jyotih, light, the Supreme Brahman. उपज्ञन Upakrama, commencing with, beginning with. Jyotir-upakrama, she who has her beginning in Brahman. Whose cause or source is Light. हु Tu, but. त्या Tatha, thus. शि Hi, for this reason. च्यान्ते Adhiyate, some read, some recensions have the reading. That is, another sakhins read. The reference is to Atharvanas. Eke, some.

9. But this ajâ is described as having Her beginning in Light, as we find in some recensions, and therefore it cannot mean Prakriti.—117.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' or 'but' has the force of declaring that there is no doubt about it. The word jyotih in the Sûtra means Brahman, because we find 'light' meaning Brahman in passages like these :- "On Him the Devas meditate, He who is the Light of lights" (Bri. Up. X. 4. 16) "Ajå has her beginning in Light" means she has Brahman for her cause, the word "beginning" means here the "cause." Therefore Brahman is the primary cause of aja herself, and it has not the literal meaning of 'unborn' here; just as the word 'chamasa' had not the literal meaning of 'an implement of eating,' in the above passage of the Bri. Up., because it has a special sense here. In the above passage of the Bri. Up. it was specifically said that the cup had its mouth below and its bottom above, and that the head was this cup. By that description given there, we came to know that the 'cup' there meant the 'skull.' Similarly in this Sve. Up, in Chap. 1. we find that aja is used long with the word 'devatmadakti,' the 'divine power,' and again in Chap. IV., we find the word 'dakti,' 'divine power' used. Therefore, as we find reference to the divine power,' wherever the word ajs is used, we infer that it means divine power. We give those verses here below :-

ते व्यानवागाञ्चगता चपस्यत् देवात्मशक्तिं स्वगुवीर्नग्दाम् । वः कारवाति विविकारि तानि काकात्मयुकान्यवितिष्ठत्वे कः ॥

'The sages devoted to meditation and concentration, have seen the power belonging to God himself (Devätmaşakti), hidden in its own qualities (guna). He, being one, superintends all those causes, time, self, and the rest—(Sve. Up. I.S.)

वादी द्वावजावीशानीशावजा होका भोकृभागार्थयुका । चन्ततश्वास्मा विश्व-क्रपा हाकर्ता वर्य यदा विदेते अद्याभेतत् ॥ ९ ॥

There are two, one knowing (lavara), the other not knowing (Jiva) both unborn (aja), one strong, the other weak, there is she the unborn (aja), through whom each man receives the recompense of his works; and there is the infinite Self (appearing) under all forms, but himself inactive. When a man finds out these three, that is Brahman.—Sve. Up. I. 9.

य पको वर्षो बहुषा शक्तियागात् वर्षाननेकान् निहितार्थो वधाति । विवैति बान्ते विश्वमादी स देवः स नो बुद्धचा शुभया संयुनक् ॥ १॥

He, the Lord, without any colour, who with set purpose by means of his power (sakti) produces endless colours, in whom all this comes together in the beginning, and comes asunder in the end—may he, endow us with good thoughts.—eye. Up. IV. I.

Therefore, ajâ does not mean Prakriti. The author gives an additional reason for this interpretation, in his second half of this sûtra "tathâhi," &c. The word 'hi means here 'for this reason also.' As some Upanişads read that Prakriti herself is born of Brahman, and so ajâ in its literal sense of 'unborn' cannot apply to Prakriti. Thus in the Mundaka Upanişad we read (I. 1. 9):—'tasmât etat Brahma nâma rûpam anuam cha jâyate'—'from him are produced this Brahman, name, form and food.' The word Brahma here means the Pradhâna, having the three qualities of sattva, rajas, and tamas; and we find it used in this sense in the Gêtâ also (XIV. 3) an analyzate, &c. My womb is the great Brahman, in that I place the germ; thence cometh the birth of all beings, O Bhârata. This shows that Prakriti herself is produced from the Lord.

If Prakriti denoted by the word ajâ, has its cause in Brahman, how can it be called ajâ or 'unborn,' or if it is strictly and really 'unborn,' how can we say that it originates in Brahman? The next Sûtra gives a reply to this.

कल्पनोपदेशाच च, मध्वादिवदविरोधः ॥ १ । ४ । १० ॥

करपना Kalpana, the creative power of thought, formation, creation. व्यवेशास् Upadesat, from teaching, on account of teaching. च Cha, and, नधारिक् Madhu-adi-vat, like honey and the rest. चित्रेषः, Avirodhah, there is no conflict.

10. Because it is taught that the Pradhana is the creation of the Lord, so there is no contradiction in calling her both created and uncreated, as is the case of honey (i. e., the sun, about which it can be correctly said that he rises and sets, as looked from the earth, and rises not and sets not as looked from the centre.)—118.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'cha' in the Sûtra denotes the removal of the doubt that has arisen. There is no conflict in calling the Prakriti created, as well as unborn, for both are possible in her case. The word kalpana in this Sûtra means creation, and not imagination, as we find it used in the following verse of the Rig Veda:—Yatha param akalpayat, "as formerly the creator made the sun and the moon." We call Pradhana created, because there is a statement in the Scriptures that she comes out of the tamas sakti of Brahman. The truth is this: there is a power of the Supreme which is eternal and very subtle called tamas. As we find in the Rig Veda:—

Tama asit tamasa gûdham agre. (Rig Veda X. 1. 29. 3.)
"In the beginning was the tamas in union with Brahman."

वदा तमस तब् न दिया न राजिः। Yadá tamas tan na divâ na râtri. When there was tamas alone neither day nor night. गौरनाद्यती &c. "Prakṛti is a cow, but voiceless" (Chulika Upaniṣad.)

This tames, at the time of pralays, becomes united with Brahman, but not merged in him. During pralaya thus united with Him, it remains as a part of Brahman; and we cannot say that she has merged into Brahman. It is not a state of merging, like that of the earth merging into water, or of water merging, into fire (gas) &c., as mentioned in the Srutis. The Srutis distinctly say that the elements beginning with Prithivt up to akeara, become merged into its higher; but with regard to tames there is no such statement of merging. On the contrary, it is distinctly said that tamas becomes united with the Supreme. This becoming united with the Supreme means that on account of its being extremely subtle, it is impossible to separate it from the Lord. It does not mean that it has become the Lord. The force of the affix chvi in the word eki bhavati, 'becomes one' denotes such union, not identity. Therefore, when the Supreme Lord desires to create, then this tamas takti, which was one with the Lord, becomes separated from Him and there arises the avyakta, called also Prakriti, with her three-fold attributes or gunas in equilibrium. The Scripture says the mahat merges (laya) into avyakta. The avyakta merges (laya) into akeara. The akeara merges (laya) into tamas. So also in the Maha Bharata we find "From Him arose the avyakta, possessing the three-fold qualities (gunas). From this avyakta arises in succession, mahat and other tattvas. Thus the teaching being distinctly given that the Pradhana is created, we come to the conclusion that the Prakriti has two states. It exists either as a cause, when it can be said to be unborn, or it exists as an effect, when it is said to be produced. So also we find in the Visnu Purana:-"From Pradhana and the Purusa both unborn as cause and both also as effects of Brahma." At the time of creation, the gunas like sattva, &c., arise in her and she becomes distinguished by names and forms, and gets the names of Pradhana avyakta, &c., and in that state Jyotirupakrama, born from the light, born of Brahman. The Sûtra then says, "that this is analogous to the case of honey and the rest," for in the Chh. Up., Chap, III, there is a section relating to honey called madhu vidya. There it is shown that the sun exists in a two-fold state. In its causal state all its rays become one in it, but in its state of effect, they become separate from him, and they become honey, or the object of enjoyment to the devas like Vasu, &c. Similarly, the sun looked at as a cause is really unmoving; but as an effect, he appears to move; and rises and sets. As in the case of the sun, both statements are correct, that he rises, and he rises not; so in the case of aid, that she is created and uncreated; that she is born as well as unborn.

Adhikaraṇa. III.—The Pañcha-pañcha-janâḥ of Br. Up. IV. 4. 17 dces not refer to the 25 elements of the Sânkhyas.

(Visaya).—In the Bri. Up. (IV. 4-16, 17, and 18), we read:— यसमाद बॉक्संबरसरोऽद्रोभिः परिवर्षते ॥ तदेवा ज्योतियां व्योतिरायुद्रोपासतेऽस्तुतम् ॥ १६ ॥ यस्मिन् पत्र्य पत्र्य जना जाकाशस्य प्रतिष्ठितः ॥ तमेष मन्य सारमानं विद्या-

"He in whom the five beings and the ether rest, him alone I believe to be the Self,—I who know, believe Him to be Brahman; I who am immortal, believe Him to be immortal."

"They, who know the life of life, the eye of the eye, the ear of the ear, the food of the food, the mind of the mind, 'they have comprehended the ancient primeval Brahman."

(Doubt).—Do the words five, five people (pancha, pancha janah) mean the twenty-five categories of Kapila system or merely five? Then the word Pancha janah would be a Bahu-vṛthi compound, qualified by the term pancha, thus making a Karmadharaya compound. In this sense it would mean "The five beings, every one of which is called a Pancha-jana."

(Pûrvapak;a).—The phrase pañcha-pañcha-janah means 'five times five, i.e.: twenty-five, and janah or products.' It refers to the twenty-five tattavas of the Sankhyas. Otherwise 'five, five people' has no meaning. No doubt, Kapila enumerates twenty-five tattva, swhile in this Upanisad passage there are twenty-seven substances enumerated, including Akasa and âtman. This anomaly, however, is not of much importance. The word janah does mean tattva also, as we find in the sentence "janas tattva-samūhaka."

SÚTRA I. 4, 11.

न संख्योपसंग्रहादपि नानाभावादितरेकाच् च ॥१।४।११॥

न Na, not. संस्था Sankhya, number. उपसंत्रहास Upa-sangrahat, on account of mention, or enumeration. आपि Api, even. नाना Nana, many. जानास Bhavat, beings. चतिरेकास Ati-rekat, on account of excess. च Cha, and.

11. Even the enumeration of numbers peculiar to the Sânkhyas, does not make this passage refer to their Prakriti, because the tattvas of the Sânkhyas have diversity, and because there is an excess in the above enumeration.—119.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'api' or 'even' shows possibility, that is to say, that if five times five products be taken for the Sankhya categories, still the passage will be open to certain objections. Those objections are two. (1) The categories of the Sankhyas are not five collections of five; they are twenty-five separate things that enter into the composition of every being. (2) The above passage also enumerates twenty-seven and not twenty-five, for it includes atma and akasa as separate entities, from the five times five mentioned above. We must not fall into the error of thinking that the twenty-five categories of the Sankhyas are meant, merely by hearing the phrase 'five times five'.

How then you explain the above passage? We reply to this as follows: The word pancha-janah is a group denoting term, and is the special name belonging to all the members of that group. The group consists of five members, each of whom is called a pancha-janah. Therefore the phrase pancha-pancha-janah does not mean five times five beings, but five beings, every one of whom is called a pancha-janah. It is just like the phrase saptarai, which denotes the constellation Ursa Major, consisting of seven stars. The word saptarai is a special name of every one of these stars, and when we say seven saptarais we do not mean seven times seven stars, but seven stars each one of whom is called a saptarai. Therefore pancha-pancha-janah does not mean five times five products, but five people every one of whom is called a pancha-janah.

Note:—The term patcha-janah is formed under Panini I. 1.15, and denotes a special name. There are certain beings, the special name of which is five people, and of these beings the additional word patcha predicates that they are five in number. The twenty-five tativas of the Sankhyas are these: prakpitl 2-8 seven modifications of it, namely mahat, &c., which are causal substances as well as effects; and 9-24 sixteen effects and (25) the 25 soul which is neither a causal substance nor an effect. See Sankhya Karika 3.

Who then are these beings called pancha-janah? To this the next Sûtra gives the reply.

12. The five beings referred to in the above passage of the Bri. Up. are the Prâna and the rest, as appears from the next verse of that Upanisad.—120.

COMMENTARY.

The Prana and the rest are given in the following verse:-

प्राचस्य प्राचमृत चश्चपरचश्चकत भोत्रस्य भोजनवस्याचं मनसो वे मने। विद्युः ॥ ते निचक्यप्रदेश पुराचमप्रथम् ॥

"They who know the life of life, the eye of the eye, the ear of the ear, the food, of the food the mind of the mind, they have comprehended the ancient, primeval Brahman." (Bri. Up. IV. 4. 18.)

So the five being, are, life, eye, ear, food, and mind, every one of which is called a pancha-janah.

(Objection.)—But this is possible only in the recension of the Mådhyandinas, who read the additional word annasya annam. But in the Kånva recension that phrase annasya annam is omitted and we have only four. This objection is answered by the author in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA I. 4. 18.

ज्योतिषैकेषामसत्यन्ने ॥ १ । ४ । १३ ॥

उद्योतिया Jyotisa, by light; by counting "light" as among the above list. एकेपाय Ekeşam, of some texts or recensions, i.e.: of the Kanvas. चवाति Aşati, ni the absence of, or there not existing. चले Anne, food.

13. In the text of some (Kânvas) the word 'light' is mentioned instead of food, and this makes up the number five.—121.

COMMENTARY.

In the recension of the Kanvas though the word 'annam' is not mentioned, yet in the passage immediately preceding, we find the word jyotis or light mentioned. Taking this word jyotis along with the four words mentioned in the above verse, we get the number five. Thus in Bri. Up. IV. 4. 16 we find the word jyotis mentioned in the passage: "Him the Devas worship as the Light of lights."

In both recensions, the word jyotis occurs in verse 15, yet in one case we make up the number five by counting the word jyotis, and in the other by counting the word annam.

Note:—The pancha-janah of the Bri. Up, is the name of the five senses, every sense is called a pancha-janah, and so pancha-pancha-janah has no reference to the Sankhya categories.

Adhikarana IV.—Brahman the Sole Cause.

The Sankhya philosopher raises a further doubt. It cannot be said that the Vedanta texts teach only one doctrine that "the Brahman is the sole cause of creation: for in those texts we find other causes of creation also mentioned. Thus in Taitt. Up. II. 1. 1. we find that creation proceeds from Self or Brahman: "From that Self sprang âkâsa, from âkâsa, air," &c. This passage shows that the cause of creation is âtmâ. But in another passage of the same Upanisad, we find that asat or non-being is the cause of the universe. For in II. 7. 1. we read: "In the beginning was asat, from it arose the sat. That made itself its Self, therefore it is called the self-made."

This shows that the cause of creation is asat and not âtmâ. While in some other Upanisads we find that kâsa is the cause of creation. As in the passage Chh. I. 9. 1, we find that âkâsa is the origin of the universe. Similarly in another passage we find that Prana is the origin of the universe: "All these creatures enter verily into Prâna," &c. (Chh. I. 11. 4). In another passage asat is said to be the cause of the universe (Taitt. II. 7. 1.) In another place sat is said to be the cause of the universe, as Chh. Up. VI. 2. 1.:—"Sat alone was in the beginning." Again we find that avyakta is said to be the cause of the universe, as in Bri. Up. I. 4. 7. "Now all this was then avyâkrita (undeveloped), it became developed by form and name." Thus the Upanişads are not consistent, as regards the cause of the universe; whether it is eat or asat, âkâia or Prâna, avyâkrita or âtman, all these are mentioned as cause of the universe. Thus it is not possible to ascertain that Brahman alone is taught in the Upanizads as the cause of the universe; while it is possible to say that Pradhana alone is taught to be the cause of the universe, as we find from the passage of the Bri. Up. already quoted above. Moreover the words sat and asat, Prana or akaia, and anyakrita, can very well be applied to Pradhana, for they are some of them the effects of Pradhana, such as akasa and Prana, while others are the names of Pradhana, itself. While these terms cannot be all applied to Brahman. Of course, in some passages we find that atms and Brahman are also said to be the cause of the universe; but these two terms can be applied to Pradhana also. The literal meaning of the word atman is 'all-pervading,' and Pradhana is all-pervading, while Brahman literally means that which is pre-eminently great (brihat); and so Pradhana may be called Brahman also. While Pradhana is called asat in its aspect of modified things and it is called sat or being in its causal or eternal aspect. Similarly it is called Prana as it is an element produced from it. And the terms thinking, &c, represented in those passages may also apply to Pradhana in a metaphorical sense, meaning commencement of action. So when the Upanisad says: 'It thought let me become many,' it means that Pradhana commenced the action of multiplication. Therefore all the Upanisad passages relating to creation harmonise better with the theory of Pradhana being the creator than of Brahman.

Note:-The Sanskrit of the passages referred to above are given below :-

14. The Brahman is described in the Upanisads as cause of âkâsa and the rest, and the Brahman so described must be taken to be the cause of the universe, and not âkâsa and the rest which are created by Brahman.—122.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'cha' is used in the Sûtra in the sense of 'but,' and removes the doubt raised in the preceding passage. It is possible to ascertain from the Vedanta texts that Brahman alone is the sole cause of the universe, because with regard to ether and the rest, Brahman as described in the Upanisads is declared to be the cause. "The Brahman as described" of the Sûtra means the Brahman distinguished by omniscience, omnipotence, and other qualities as described in the defining Sûtra I. 1. 2. That Brahman alone is described in the Vedantas to be the cause of akada and the rest. Thus the passage of the Taitt. Up. II. 1. 1. says "Brahman is true, infinite and intelligence;" and shows that He has the qualities of omniscience, etc. This very Brahman is said to be the cause of the universe in the next sentence "from that Self (âtman) sprang Akida etc." Therefore, the word Self or Atman used here must refer to Brahman as described above—sattyam jñânamanantam—and not taken in its etymological sense of all-prevading. Similarly in the Chh. Up. VI. 8. 1. "sad eva somya idam agre astt"-" Being alone was in the beginning, one only without an equal," shows that SAT was in the begining. And the next verse shows-"He thought-let me become many-"And He created light, etc.' Here also the creation of light, etc., proceeds from an intelligent being, who thinks, and therefore the SAT of this passage must mean Brahman, who thinks; and not Pradhana, an unintelligent entity. Thus wherever creation is described, it refers to Brahman as defined in the beginning, namely a being who is omniscient, omnipotent, etc. Of course effect is similar to the cause, and therefore, sometimes an effect is spoken of as cause. But this argument can apply in the case of Brahman also. For where the text describes akada or Prana to be the cause of the universe, we say they really mean Brahman and not Pradhana. for though they may be the effect of Pradhana in a secondary sense, they are the effect of Brahman. This we shall explain later on in detail. The five words âtman, âkâśa, Prâna, Sat, and Brahman, literally denote all-pervading, all-luminous, all-controlling, the Essence. and the Great, respectively, and so in their literal sense also, these terms are more appropriate with regard to Brahman, than with regard to Pradhana. While the term ikean "thinking" is absolutely inappropriate with regard to Pradhana, and a metaphorical meaning is given to this term by the Sankhyas, in order to harmonise their theory with the texts.

The next Satra explains the two words asat (non-being) and avyakrita (undeveloped). These two words in their ordinary sense cannot be applied to Brahman, for He is neither non-being, nor undeveloped. Therefore, those Upanisad texts which say that creation proceeds from the non-being or the undeveloped, must be now explained.

Norm:—The word itean is found in the Chhandogya passage referring to Sat. Vide VI. 1. 1. Chhandogya.

COMMENTARY.

The word Asat occurs in Taitt. Up. II. 7. in the following passage:—

चसहै रदमप्र पासीत्। ततो वै सद्जावत 🛊

"In the beginning this was non-existent (asat). From it was born what exists."

This passage is preceded by the following:—

'He wished, may I be many, may I grow forth. He brooded over Himself (like a man performing penance.) After He had thus brooded, He sent forth (created) all, whatever there is. Having sent forth, He entered into it. Having entered it, He became set (what is manifest) and tyet (what is not manifest), defined and undefined, supported and not supported, (endowed with) knowledge and without knowledge (as stone) real and unreal. The sattya (true) became all this whatsoever, and therefore, the wise call it (the Brahman) Sattya (the true).'

On this there is this Sloka :- 'In the beginning this was non-existent (asat).'

This shows that the word 'asat' refers to Brahman, which is the subject under discussion in the previous verse. The word here does not mean 'non-being' or 'non-existent,' but it shows that before the creation, the distinction of names and forms did not exist, and Brahman also then did not exist in the sense that he was not connected with names and forms. And as he had then no name and form, he is said to be asat or non-existent. In fact, the text of the Taitt. Up. in this portion deals with Brahman, for in a passage in the same Valli (II. 4. 1.) we find it stated that Brahman is bliss, and this Brahman called bliss which is treated in verse V. is the subject-matter of this seventh anuvâka also.

Note.—The word asat here cannot mean matter or non-being, because in this very passage we find that the description given of it can apply only to Brahman, and not to matter or non-being. To understand it we give the whole passage here:—

"In the beginning this was non-existent (seat). From it was born what exists (sat). That made its Self, therefore it is called the Self-made. That which is Self-made is a favour (can be tasted) for only after perceiving a favour one can perceive pleasure. Who could breathe, who could breathe forth, if that bliss (Brahman) existed not in the other (in the heart)? For He alone causes blessedness."

When he finds freedom from fear and rest in that which is invisible, incorporeal, undefined, unsupported, then he has obtained the fearless. For if he makes but the smallest distinction in it, there is fear for him. But that fear exists only for one who thinks himself wise, (not for the true sage.)

On this there is also this Sloka :-

From terror of it (Brahman) the wind blows, from terror the sun rises; from terror of it Agni and Indra, yee Death runs as the fifth."

This shows that seat here cannot mean anything but Brahman. Even in this sixth anuvaka the seer of this Upanisad clearly says that Brahman is not seat in the literal meaning of that word, therefore when he uses the words "asat was in the beginning," he uses it in a sense totally distinct from its ordinary denotation. Thus in the sixth anuvaka we find:—

'He who knows the Brahman as non-existing (seat), becomes himself non-existing (seat). He who knows the Brahman as existing (seat), him we know himself as existing (seat).'

In the Chh. Up. also we find that asat in the sense of non-being absolutely is not the source of creation. Thus Chh. Up. VI. 2 1. begins with the famous text: Sad eva somyedam agra 4sfd ekam evadvitiyam, which means "Being was in the beginning one only, without an equal." That passage refutes later on the view that asat was in the beginning. This also shows that asat could not but mean Brahman, and it means Brahman in his latent state, when this world, which we call "sat" was not. The Chhandogya passage VI. 2 1. starts by putting two hypotheses, namely SAT was in the beginning, and ASAT was in the beginning and then it goes on to say:—

"Some say that asat was in the beginning, one only without a second." And it refutes this theory by saying, "how can it be, that being or sat could come out of non-being or asat." The implication is how can that which is absolutely non-being or asat can have any relation to time also, and how can we say that asat was? To say that asat was means that non-being existed, which would be an absurd proposition. For all these reasons the asat of Taitt. Up. refers to Brahman.

Similarly, the word avyakrita of Bri. Up. 1. 4. V. also means Brahman there. It literally means undeveloped and is generally applied to Prakriti. But in the passage above referred to, it could not have that meaning. To understand this we give the whole passage here:—

Now all this was then undeveloped (avyåkrita). It became developed by form and name, so that one could say, 'He, called so and so, is such a one.' Therefore at present also all this is developed by name and form, so that one can say, 'He, called so and so, is such a one.'

ile (Brahman or the Self) entered thither, to the very tips of the finger nails, as a razor might be fitted in a razor-case, or as fire in a fireplace.

He cannot be seen, for, in part only, when breathing, he is breath by name, when speaking, speech by name; when thinking, mind by name. All these are but the names of His acts. And he who worships (regards Him as the one or the other), does not know Him, for He is apart from this (when qualified) by the one or the other, (predicate). Let men worship Him, as Self, for in the Self all these are one. This Self is the footstep of everything for through it one knows everything. And as one can find again by footsteps what was lost, thus he who knows this finds glory and praise.

The word avyåkrita used in the above passage is to be understood to mean Brahman as the Inner Self of the undeveloped. We must draw in the word Brahman from the subsequent passage "he entered in it up to the nails," and explain avyåkrita in the light of the subsequent passage. It would thus appear that Brahman alone, by the mere force of his will, becomes developed in name and form, and avyåkrita or undeveloped, therefore means the state of Brahman, in so far as He has not yet evolved through name and form. Otherwise, if avyåkrita were taken as referring to Prakriti, it would go against the whole current of the Vedånta texts, and against the Sûtra which declares that all Vedånta texts refer to Brahman. It is thus a settled conclusion that Brahman is the sole cause of the universe, and not Pradhâna.

ADHIKARANA V.—The Puruşa of the Kauş Up. is Brahman.

The Sankhya raises another objection, and the author refutes it. In the Kauataki Brahmana the sage Balaki promises to teach Brahman by saying 'I shall tell you Brahman.' And he goes on to describe sixteen things as Brahman, beginning with the sun. All these, however, are set aside by the king Ajatasatru who says none of them is Brahman. When the sage Balaki is thus silenced, Ajatasatru gives the teaching about Brahman in these words:—

स देश्याच । या वै बाळके प्रतेषां पुरुषाचां कर्त्यां, यस्य चैतत् कर्म स वै बेदितस्य इति ॥

"He who is the cause of these different persons and to whom there belongs this karman, He is to be known."

Nors. - The Sankhyas explain the above mantra thus : -

'He who is the cause of these different purusas and to whom there belongs this karman, He indeed is to be known.

Nove.—Bâlâki mentions first the Puruşa in the sun as Brahman. Then on being refuted by Ajâtaśatru, he goes on mentioning the various Spirits (Puruşas) in the moon, in the lightning, in the thunder-cloud, in the wind, in the ether, in the fire, in the waters, in the mirror, in the shadow, in the echo, in the sound, in the sleep, in the body, in the right eye, in the left eye. Thus Bâlâki exhausted all his idea of Brahman. Them Ajâtaśatru asks him thus:—

Then verily the son of Bâlâka became slient. Ajâtasatru eaid to him, 'Thus far only (reaches the knowledge,) O son of Bâlâka?' 'Thus far only' he replied. Ajâtasatru said, 'Speak not proudly without cause, (saying) "Let me tell thee Brahman." O son of Bâlâka, He who is the maker of these spirits, whose work is all this, He verily is the being to be known.' Then truly the son of Bâlâka came up to him with fuel in his hand, saying, Let me attend thee (as my guru).

Ajâtasatru said to him. This I consider contrary to nature that a Kṣatriya should instruct a Brâhmana. Come, I will tell thee all I know. Then having taken him by the hand, he set forth. They came to a man asleep. Then he pushed him with his staff, and he at once rose up. Ajâtasatru said to the son of Bâlâka, 'Where, O son of Bâlâka, lay this spirit asleep, where was all this done, whence came he thus back'? Then the son of Bâlâka knew not what to reply. Ajâtasatru said to him. This is where, O son of Bâlâka, this spirit lay asleep, where all this was done, and whence he thus came back. The vessels of the heart named Hitâ proceeding from the heart, surround the great membrane (round the heart); thin as a hair divided into thousand parts and filled with the minute essence of various colours, of white, of black, of yellow, and of red. When the sleeping man sees no dreams so ever, he abides in these.

the Prakriti, or does it mean the Blessed Visnu, Lord of all? phrase—" to whom this work belongs"—connects the being to be known with work; and such a being is mentioned there as the enjoying soul, the ruler of Prakriti. Further, both of them go to a sleeping person. also shows that the teaching here given is about the human soul, and not about the Lord. Further on, also, the text treats of the enjoying soul, in the sentence: 'As the master feeds with his people, nay, as the people feed on the master, thus does this conscious Self feed with the other Selfs.' Therefore, the passage relates to the individual soul. The word Prana or life applied to him is also appropriate, for Praya here means the individual soul, in so far as supporting life. The sense of the Upanisad passage is this. He who is the cause of different persons residing in the sun, &c., and who is instrumental towards the retributive experiences of the individul souls, and to whom there belongs Karman, good and evil, to which there is due his becoming such a cause, He indeed is to be known, His essential nature is to be recognised, in distinction from Prakriti. Thus the Sankhya's Jiva is the object of knowledge taught in this Upanisad. And, therefore, the Brahman which Ajâtasatru promised to teach is this Jiva in a state of emancipation and free from Prakriti: for. as a matter of fact, there is no other Isvara except the emancipated soul. And thinking, &c., also are appropriate to such a soul, and He is ruler of Prakriti who is the mother of the universe.

SÛTRA I. 4. 16.

जगद्राचित्वात् ॥ १ । ४ । १६ ॥

अन्त Jagat, the world. वाचित्राष्ट्र Vachitvat, because of the denotation.

16. The word 'karman' in the Kaus. Up. does not mean work, but it denotes creation or the world.—124.

COMMENTARY.

In this passage, the individual soul of the Sankhyas is not the topic discussed; but the Supreme Person, the sole object of the Vedanta teaching. The whole difficulty arose from the sentence "to whom this karma belongs," and if the word karma were taken in its ordinary sense, the above passage could not refer to Brahman, for Brahman is not bound by karma. But the word karma there is accompanied by the word jagat; in the above Upanisad, and therefore, we take this word karma there to mean the universe consisting of the individual souls and matter, (spirit and matter). In fact, the force of the word is this. In the phrase to whom this work belongs, the word karma refers to the universe, because Brahman is the cause of the universe, and therefore, the word karman must refer to the word world. The truth is this: - The word karma is derived from the root kri, 'to create, to make'; and it means here creation and not work and not the technical karma. And when this meaning can be given to karma, it is wrong to give it the meaning of good and evil actions. When karma is taken to mean 'creation' also, then the word etat " this" also receives its proper force. It removes then the doubt that the individual soul is the creator. And according to the Sankhyas the idividual soul is not the creator, for creation belongs to Prakriti. Nor can you Sankhyas say, that Purusa may be called 'creator' by Adhyasa or superimposition and connection with Prakriti, for according to Sankhya the Purusa is asanga, or free from all connections. Therefore, the above passage does not refer to the Jiva of the Sankhyas, but to the Supreme Lord, who alone is the creator of this universe. This also frees Ajstasatru from the censure of having told a lie, for he promises in the opening passage "I will teach you Brahman," and when Balaki mentions sixteen Purusas one after the other, he tells him this is false and himself then goes on to teach the true Brahman. Thus Ajatasatru implies that the various Purusas of Balaki were not the true Purusa and he (Ajatasatru was going to tell the truth). Therefore it is clear he meant to teach some Person, other than the various persons spoken of by Bâlâki. If he also meant to teach a Jiva, then there would be no difference between his teaching and that of Balaki whom he implicates of teaching a false doctrine. His teaching is, therefore, something different. He says, various persons mentioned by Bâlâki are not Brahman, but that they are creations of Brahman, and that He is the maker of those persons." What he meant to say is, that the Being of whom this, namely, the universe, is the karma or creation, is the Supreme Lord and the Highest Cause.

Note:—The passage which gave rise to the doubt was the phrase "yasya vá etat karma sa vai veditavyah" "of whom verily this is the kurma, He ought to be known." The word kurma generally means the good and evil deeds of a Jiva, and so the above passage was open to misconception. But the word etat in the same passage is the real key to right interpretation. Of whom THIS is the work. To what does the word THIS refer? It, in fact, refers to the sixteen persons mentiond by Bâlâki. Therefore, the word work does not mean here the good and evil deeds of the Jiva, but the world or the universe.

The Pûrvapakein raises another objection saying there are inferential marks in this Upaniead passage pointing to the Jtva and the circumstance that the mention is made of the chief vital air or Prana we must hold that this section treats of the Jiva and not of the Highest Self.

This objection the author disposes of in the next Sûtra:

SÛTRA L. 4. 17.

जीवमुख्यप्राणिक्शान्, नेति चेत्, तव्व्याख्यातम् ॥१।४।१७॥

श्रीप Jiva, the individual soul. हुन्य-तास Mukhya-prana, the principle life breath, the chief vital air. किन्नाच् Lingat, because of the inferential marks. य पृति Na iti, not thus. चेत् Chet, if. तच् Tat, that. व्यवस्थात्व Vyakhyatam, has been explained.

17. If it be objected, that in the above passage of the Kaus. Up., we have characteristics given, leading to the inference that either the Jiva, or the Chief Prâna, is the subject taught there, and not Brahman; we reply that this is not so; for the reasons already given in Sûtra I. 1. 31. —125.

COMMENTARY.

In the Sûtra I. 1. 31., which dealt with the topic of the dialogue between Indra and Pratardana, this objection was raised and answered. All those arguments would apply here also. There it was shown that when a text is interpreted as referring to Brahman, on the ground of a comprehensive survey of its initial and concluding clauses, all other inferential marks which point to other topics, such as Jiva or Prana, &c., must be so interpreted, that they may harmonise with the principal topic. In this passage also, the initial clause refers to Brahman, in the sentence 'Shall I tell you Brahman?' So also the concluding clause is. 'Having overcome all evils, he obtains pre-eminence among all beings. Sovereignty and supremacy, yea, he who knows this.' Thus initial and concluding clauses here also refer to Brahman; and if in the middle of this passage we find any mark, from which Jiva or any other topic may be inferred, we must so interpret that passage as to refer to Brahman. in order to avoid contradiction. Nor is this topic redundant, as being already taught in Sûtra I. 1. 31, for the chief point discussed here is the word karma, which was liable to misinterpretation. Therefore this Adhikarana does teach something new.

An objection is raised:—The word karma was in grammatical construction with the word etat in the above Upanisad passage, and so the the word karma was explained as this universe, and though the word Prana also found there is in construction with etat and so is applied to Brahman, and thus the whole context may be applied to Brahman, so far as these two words are concerned; but how do you get over the difficulty of the other references in this very passage to Jiva. The words karma and Prana have been interpreted by you as meaning the universe and Brahman, because the word etat is there in construction with them. But there is no such word in regard to Jiva, and from the questions and answers given in this passage, we find that the Jiva is taught to be Brahman, and that there is no separate Brahman other than the released Jiva. The reference to Jiva is very clear in this passage; and admitting your argument that the topic here is Brahman, the thing taught is that there is no Brahman other than the Jiva. The question asked in the above passage is, "Where, O Balaki, did this person sleep? Where was he? Whence did he thus come back?" This shows that the question relates to Jiva only. And that the place where the Jiva goes to sleep are the naris: and all the sense-organs become one in this Jiva at the time of sleep; and this Jiva is called also Prana here. Thus the whole question and answer shows that reference is to the Jiva. And when the awakening takes place, the Jiva comes out from the place of sleep. Thus the whole passage proves that the topic is of the Jiva, and that Jiva who is called here Prana is Brahman. To this objection the next Sûtra gives an answer.

8ÛTRA I. 4. 18.

म्रन्यार्थन्तु जैमिनिः प्रश्नव्याख्यानाभ्यामपि चैवमेके ॥१।४।९८॥

सन्तर्पान् Anyartham, a different meaning or purport. हु Tu, but. जेनिनिः Jaiminih, Jaimini. प्रश्न Prasna, from question. व्याद्यानाच्या Vyakhyanabhyam, from answer, or explanation. चार Api, also. च एवस् Cha evam, and thus. एके Ake, some, that is some texts.

18 The sage Jaimini thinks that the mention made of the Jiva in the above Upanisad passage has another meaning, namely, it aims at conveying the idea that Jiva is different from Brahman, because the question and answer shows it; and some recensions show it clearly.—126.

COMMENTARY.

The word tu "but" shows that the above doubt is wrong. The description of Jiva, in the passage under discussion, is not with the object of showing that the topic is that of the Jiva, or that the Jiva is Brahman. But it aims at showing, according to the opinion of Jaimini, that the Jiva is separate from Brahman. Why do you say so? Because the question and answer in the above passage shows it. We give the whole passage here to understand properly the discussion raised:—

'Then verily the son of Balaka became silent. Ajataentru said to him 'Thus far only (reaches thy knowledge), O son of Balaka?' 'Thus far only,' he replied. Ajatasatru said, 'Speak not proudly without cause, (saying) "Let me tell thee Brahman," O son of Baláká. He who is the maker of these spirits, whose work is all this. He verily is the Being to be known.' Then truly the son of Balaka came up to him, with fuel in his hand, saying 'Let me attend thee (as my guru).' Ajātvatru said to him, 'This I consider contrary to nature that a Keatriya should instruct a Brahmann. Come, I will tell thee all I know.' Then having taken him by the hand, he set forth. They came to a man asleep. Ajštavštru called him, (saying) 'Oh thou vast one, clothed in white raiment, king Soms.' The man still lay asleep. Then he pushed him with his staff, and he at once rose up. Ajātasatru said to the son of Balākā. 'Where, O son of Balākā, lay this spirit asleep, where was all this done, whence came he thus back?' Then the son of Balaka knew not what to reply. Ajatasatru said to him, 'This is where, O son of Balaka, this spirit lay asleep, where all this was done and whence he thus came back. The vessels of the heart named Hita, proceeding from the heart, surround the great membrane (round the heart); thin as a hair divided into a thousand parts; and filled with the minute essence of various colours, of white, of black, of yellow, and of red. When the sleeping man sees no dreams soever, he abides in these.

'Then is he absorbed in that Prana. Then the speech enters into it with all names, the sight enters with all forms, hearing enters with all sounds, the mind enters with all thoughts. When he awakes, as from blazing fire, sparks go forth in all directions; so from this soul all the Pranas go forth to their several stations, from the Pranas go forth the devas, from devas the worlds. This is the true Prana, identical with Prana, entering this body and soul, it penetrates the nails and hairs of the skin. Just as a razor placed in a rasor-case, or fire in the home of fire, thus this soul, itself Prajfia, enters this body and soul, to the hairs and nails. The inferior souls follow this Soul, as the household, the householder. As the householder feeds with his household, and as the household feed on the householder, so this Soul, itself Prajna, feeds with those souls, and thus those souls feed on this Soul. As long as Indra did not know this Soul, so long the Asuras overcame him. When he knew It, then having conquered and slain the Asuras, he attained the pre-eminence of all gods and all beings, he attained sovereignty and empire. Thus too is it with him who hath this knowledge, having destroyed all sins,—he attaineth the pre-eminence of all beings and sovereignty and empire, who knoweth thus, who knoweth thus.

The question "where was this person when asleep, &c.," and the answer, "when sleeping, he sees no dream, then he becomes one in that Prana alone, &c." shows that Jiva is separate from Brahman. So also the passage, "from that Self the organs proceed, each towards its place, from the organs the gods, from the gods the worlds, &c.,"—all this shows that the passage teaches Brahman as something separate from Jiva. The word Prana here means the Supreme Self, because He is well-known as that into which the soul enters and sleeps. In Him the Jivas merge in sleep, and in Pralaya; and from Him they come out on awakening. The mention of the veins or the nadis is not to show that they are the abode of the Jiva in deep sleep, for the abode is Brahman, called Prana here but that these nadis or veins act as gateways merely to the abode of sleep. The whole passage thus teaches that the Supreme Self is the abode, to which the tired Jiva goes after the day's labour, to find rest in sleep, and from which it comes out in the morning to begin his work again.

Not only Jaimini is of this opinion, but in the recension of this Upanisad story according to the Vajasaneyins, a clear distinction is drawn in their texts, between the Jiva and Brahman. In their reading of the dialogue between Ajatasatru and Balaki, they use the word Vijnanamaya, and read it as different from Brahman. The text is:—

"Where was then the person, consisting of intelligence, and from whence did he thus come back?—When he was thus asleep then the intelligence person, having through the intelligence of the senses, absorbed within himself all intelligence, lies in the ether that is within the heart."

Now the word 'ether' is known to denote the Highest Self; cf. the text 'there is within that the small ether' (Chh. Up. VIII, 1.1). This also shows that the Supreme Lord is the object of knowledge taught in this Upanisad.

Adhikarana VI.—The Âtman of the Br. Up. IV. 5. is Brahman and not jîvâtman.

(Vieaya).—In the Bri. Up. there is a dialogue between Yājñavalkaya and his wife Maitreyt. In the course of his teaching, after premising "verily a husband is not dear, that you may love the husband, but that you may love the Self, therefore the husband is dear, &c., &c.," he goes on to say "Verily everything is not dear, that you may love everything, but that you may love the Self, therefore everything in dear. Verily, the Self is to be seen, to be heard, to be perceived, to be marked, O Maitreyi! When the Self has been seen, heard, perceived and known, then all this is known."

(Doubt).—What is this Self which is to be seen, to be heard, &c. Is this the jivatman, taught by the Sankhyas, or is it the Supreme Self?

(Pûrvapaksa).—The Pûrvapaksin says it refers to the Sânkhya jîvâtaman or Puruşa, because the opening clause begins with the statement about husband, wife, &c., and love for them. In the middle also there is reference to jîvâtman, when it is said. "When he has departed, there is no more consciousness." This also shows that the reference is to a transmigrating soul, subject to birth and death, love and hatred. So also the concluding statement "how should he know the knower," also shows that the individual soul, who is the knower, is the topic of discussion. Of course, there is this statement also contained here, that by knowing the Self, everything else is known, and so one can say that the Self referred to here cannot be the individual soul, but the Supreme Self; for the knowledge of the individual soul does not lead to the knowledge of all. But this is no valid objection, for all created objects are for the sake of enjoyer, namely, the individual soul. Therefore, when the soul is known, we can figuratively say, that all objects are known, for they exist for the sake of the soul. Similarly, the objection is raised that this passage teaches also that the knowledge of the Self leads to immortality, therefore the Self should be the Supreme Self and not the individual soul or Jiva, for getting a knowledge of the Jiva is not a cause of immortality. This objection is also not valid, because according to Sankhya system also, immortality is obtained through the cognition of the true nature of the Jiva viewed as free from all erroneous imputation to itself of the attributes of non-sentient matter. Thus all other characteristic marks. in the above passage of the Bri. Up., by which one may think that they refer to Brahman, should be explained away. Therefore, says the purvapakein, the discussion here is about the ilvatman, and not the Supreme Lord, and Prakriti ruled and guided by the Jiva, is the cause of the universe.

To understand this Adhikarapa we give below the entire passage of the Bri. Up., fourth Adhyaya, 2fth Brahmana.

COMMENTARY.

In this portion of the Bri. Up. the Supreme Self alone has beer taught and not the Jiva of the Sankhya system. Why do we say so? Because by studying all that has gone before that passage, we find that it is related to Brahman, which is the subject-matter of the whole text. In fact, the whole sentence "the Self must be seen, &c.," can give a proper meaning, when so considered, in connection with all that precedes or follows it.

This construction of the sentence is further strengthened by the opinion of the three sages Asmarathya, Audulomi, and Kasakritana.

अधेरात रा.स. २०. प्रतिज्ञासिखेर्निङ्गमाश्मरच्यः ॥ १ । ४ । २० ॥

विश्वत Pratifia, promise, enunciation. विश्वः Siddheh, of fulfilment. विश्वय Lingam, mark. श्वरूपस्य Asmarathyah the sage Asmarathya.

20. (The word Atman in the sentence 'Atman must be seen, &c.,' must mean the Supreme Self), because thus alone the promise made (that by the knowledge of the Self everything is known) can be fulfilled. This fulfilment of the pratijua is the mark that the word Atman here refers to the Supreme Self. This is the opinion of Asmarathya.—128.

COMMENTARY.

Yājāvalkya laid down the proposition "by the knowledge of the Self everything is known." This proposition itself shows that the Self means the Supreme Self, and cannot mean the Jiva-self. Therefore, when he says in a subsequent passage "the Atman must be seen, heard, &c.," he could not have meant the Jivatman, but the Paramatman, for the knowledge of the Jivatman cannot lead to the knowledge of all; while on the other hand, the knowledge of the Supreme Atman, who is the supreme cause, leads to the knowledge of everything else, because it is its effect. Nor can you say, the knowledge of every effect is merely a figurative speech, and the knowledge of the human soul may figuratively be said to lead to the knowledge of the universe. For had it been a figurative speech merely, and having promised that by the knowledge of the Self everything is known, then Yājñavalkya could not have said,

"whosoever looks for the Brahman class elsewhere than in the Self was abandoned by the Brahman-class, whoseever looks for the Keatra-class elsewhere than in the Self, was abandoned by the Kşatra-class, &c.," for this shows that he meant by the word Self, the Supreme Self, the abode of the Brahman. Ksatra and other classes, and support of the whole universe, and who is in every form. This is impossible in the case of any self other than the Supreme, for He alone is the support of the universe. Moreover in verse 11 he says "As clouds of smoke proceed by themselves, out of lighted fire kindled with damp fuel; thus verily O Maitreyi, has been breathed forth from this Great Being what we have as Rig Veda, Yajur Veda, Sâma Veda, Atharvângirasas, &c." This also shows that the Self about which Yajñavalkya is speaking is the Supreme Self, and not the Jiva-self, because he is represented as the Creator of the whole universe, and all that it contains; and it is not possible in the case of the Jiva-self, who is in the bondage of karma. Nor a compassionate and true teacher like Yajñavalkya would teach his wife Maitreyi the truth about the Jiva-self and not about Brahman, when she had proved her worthiness for it, by discarding all wealth; and desiring only release. The knowledge of the Jiva-self never leads to immortality, while there are numerous texts which declare that the knowledge of the Supreme Self alone is the cause of Mukti. Therefore, the Atman of the passage under discussion is the Supreme Self.

Now an objection is raised again: The Atman of this passage must be the Jiva because dearness, etc., is attributed to it, in the shape of husband, wife, &c., and that it is the transmigrating self and therefore Jiva. Nor is it proper to explain atman as paramatman, merely because thereby the promise (of knowing everything by knowing one) is fulfilled. Nor is it right to say that the worshipper of God becomes the creator of all and the support of all: and gives satisfaction to all. Nor is it right to quote the following verse of the Padma Purana in support of your position:—"He who has worshipped Hari has given satisfaction to the whole universe. All animals feel delighted there, all plants and living things get satisfaction thereby." This is merely a poetical exaggeration, for the worshipper of Hari does not show forth the power of satisfying the whole universe. We do not find it as a fact

To this objection the author replies:-

SÛTRA I. 4. 21.

उत्क्रमिष्यत एवं भावावित्योडुनोमिः ॥ १ । ४ । २१ ॥

Utkramisyatah, of the person about to depart, or about to approach the Supreme at the time of Mukti. vi Evam, thus. square Bhavat, condition; evam-bhavat means "on account of this condition" namely, " peroming beloved of all, &c." प्रा Iti, thus, जीवनिया Audulomib, the sage Audulomi.

21. In the opinion of Audulomi, the human soul at the moment of entering into Release acquires all these conditions of the Purusa.—129.

COMMENTARY.

The word utkramisyatah means "of a person who has become perfect in his practice and is about to attain the Supreme Self." Such a wise man acquires this state (evam-bhava) namely, becoming dear to all, etc. Therefore, the word atman used in the initial clause of this passage also means the Supreme Self, and not the Jtva-self. This is the opinion of the sage Audulomi. The meaning of the initial passage is this: "Verily a husband is not dear that you may love the husband, but that you may love the Self, therefore the husband is dear." This means, if one thinks that for the sake of the husband or for my sake I should become dear to him, this will not make the husband dear to her, but when you love the Self, namely the Supreme Self, then your husband will love you, for through the Supreme Self flows all the love of the other selfs, and the grace of the Supreme Self on His devotee makes every other inferior self love that being.

Note:—The Lord blesses his devotees by saying "Let every object be pleasant to my devotees and useful to them. Let my devotees having me in their heart, as their ruler and guide be pleasant to all objects useful to them." This blessing of the Lord is the object which the devotees always desire to attain. Husband, &c., appear dear to the devotees not because they are husband, &c., but because they are the abode of the Supreme beloved, the Lord. And thus thinking, every object becomes helpful to the devotees, and becomes pleasant to them.

The word 'kâma' in the above sentences means "wish or will" and the phrase "âtmanastu kâmâya" means "to fulfil the will of the Supreme Self, to carry out the will of the Supreme Self." The force of the Dative case in the word kâmâya is that indicated in the Pâṇṇi Sûtra 2. 3. 14 S. 581. When the Lord is worshipped with perfect devotion, He causes every object to become pleasant and dear to His devotee. As we read in the Bhâgavata: "One who is humble, calm, quiet in mind, and controlled in conduct, and who is content in his heart, finds the whole universe full of joy, for such have I made it for him."

Or, the passage may mean, to please the husband or to carry out the will of the husband, it does not make the husband dear, but to carry out the will of the Supreme Self, the husband is made dear. 'As we read in the Bhagavata "Who is a greater object of endearment than He by relation to whom everything else becomes dear, whether it be Prans or Buddhi, Manas, or body, wife or children, riches or wealth, &c." In this interpretation, the word kama must be taken to mean 'happinces.' That is to say, it is the joy o. the Supreme Self that makes the husband dear. &c., not the busband by his own power. Therefore, by connection with whom, by the mere wihl of whom, or by relation with whom, even an unpleasant thing becomes pleasant, that Hari alone should be searched. He alone should be questioned. He alone should be seen for He is the Moreover the word atman uses here cannot mean the Jiva. Most Sweet. for this reason also, that the primary significance of this word is the Supreme Lord. It is only in a secondary sense, that atman means jivatman. Therefore, in the initial clause "atmanastu kamaya" in the middle clause "Atmava are drastavyah," the word atman means the Supreme Self in both places. We cannot take the word atman to mear Itva in the initial clause, and to mean the Supreme atman in this middle clause. For if you were to do so, we should be going against the wellknown maxim of interpretation by which one and the same word, occurring in a single passage, must be interpreted in the same way. Otherwise there would arise the fallacy called vakya-bheda or splitting of the sentence. Even if we were to split the sentence, and interpret the word Atman in the intitial clause as meaning the itv-atman, and in this middle clause as meaning the paramatman, we do not gain anything thereby. For the atman is taught as the object to be seen, and as the means to lead to immortality, which the atman of the initial passage could not evidently be, and the command that atman must be seen would be useless with regard to the Jiva-atman. Audulomi is evidently a nirguna atmavadi and his opinon is that the sole nature of atman is intelligence only. As we find from Sûtra IV. 4. 6. How can then, we ascribe to this Audulomi the view that in the state of Release, the soul manifests divine powers. For according to him, in the state of Release, the soul is pure intelligence only, and has no other powers. Moreover Audulomi is not against Bhakti and in order to remove avidya and to manifest the true nature of the Self. namely the pure intelligence, Audulomi does countenance the view that Hari must be worshipped. For in a subsequent Sûtra his view has been set forth, that Bhakti is necessary in order to get Brahma-knowledge. That Sûtra is arttvijyam iti Audulomih tasmai hi parikriyate (III. 4. 45). Thus Bhakti alone is the accomplisher of all desires and nothing else.

Let it be so. But the explanation is open to another objection. In the same passage we find in verse 12:—

"As a lump of salt, when thrown into the water becomes dissolved into water and cannot be taken out again, but whenever we taste water it is salt, thus verily O Maitreyi, does this Great Being, endless, unlimited, consisting of nothing but knowledge, rise from out these elements, and vanish again into them. When he has departed there is no more consciousness. I say, O Maitreyi."

How do you reconcile this statement with your theory that the whole passage of this dialogue between Yajñavalkya and Maitreyi refers to the Supreme Self and not to the Jiva? Evidently the above extract can refer only to the Jiva, for it states that when a man dies, there is no consciousness left. Therefore, it is more appropriate to explain the whole of this dialogue as having reference to the Jivatman of the Sankhya philosophy, than to the Paramatman of the Vedânta.

The doubt thus raised is answered in the next Sûtra.

BÛTRA I. 4. 22.

अवस्थितेरिति काशकृत्स्नः ॥ १ । ४ । २२ ॥

जनस्थाः Avasthiteh, because of abiding, because the Brahman abides within the Jiva. श्री lti, thus. आर्ज्यास्थः Kâšakritsnah, the sage Kâšakritsna.

22. Kâśakritsna is of opinion, that departing from the body in the above passage, though primarily applicable to the Jîva, applies to Brahman also, on account of its abiding within the individual soul.—130.

COMMENTARY.

Brahman is to the human individul soul, like the lump of salt to water; both are in dissolubly united together. It is this Brahman, which is denoted in the above passage as "vijtanaghana," "consisting of nothing but knowledge," and is other than the Jiva. He is called the Great Being, endless and unlimited, attributes which apply only to the Paramatman. The death mentioned there is only with reference to the Jiva in a secondary sense. It is really the Brahman that passes out of the body, and as Brahman abides within the Jiva, He is said to go out of the body, when the Jiva goes out. The above passage really teaches that Brahman is inside the Jiva, as the salt is inside the water, and so it teaches something about the Supreme Self, and not about the individual soul. According to the opinion of Kasakritsna, the Great Being, endless and unlimited, consisting of nothing but knowledge, is the Supreme Self. and not the individual self, because the distinction is drawn between these two, in this passage, where one is spoken of as salt, and the other as water.

To recapitulate, Maitreyi asks Yājñavalkya the means to immortality, when she says: "What should I do with that by which I do not become immortal? What my Lord knoweth (of immortality), tell that to me." To this question, Yājñavalkya replies:—

'Verity the Âtman is to be seen, to be heard, to be preceived, to be marked, O Maîtrey!! When we see, hear, perceive, and know the Self. then all this is known."

Thus he declares the means of attaining immortality, namely, knowing the Atman. Then he mentions some of the characteristic marks of this Atman in the passage:—

'Now as the sounds of a drum, when beaten, cannot be seized externally (by themselves), but the sound is seized, when the drum is seized, or the beater of the drum.'

'And as the sounds of a conch-shell, when blown, cannot be seized externally (by themselves), but the sound is seized, when the dram is seized, or the beater of the shell.'

This shows the means of meditation, namely, the control of the senses. Thus to get immortality, the only means is worship of and meditation on the Lord, and the method of such worship and meditation consists in the control of our senses and mind. Thus having given general instruction as to meditation and worship, Yājñavalkya goes on to expand the idea of Brahman, and His all-creative power, in the next two verses:—

10. As clouds of smoke proceed by themselves out of a lighted fire kindled with damp fuel, thus, verily, O Maitreyl, has been breathed from this Great Being what we have as Rig Veda, Yajur Veda, Sāma Veda, Atharvangirasas, Itihasa (legends), Purāna (cosmogonies), Vidyā (knowiedge), the Upanişads, slokas (Verses), Sātras (prose rules), Anuvyākhyānas (glosses), Vākhyānas (commentaries). From him alone all these were breathed forth.

11. 'As all waters find their centre in the sea, all touches in the skin, all tastes in the tongue, all smells in the nose, all colours in the eye, all sounds in the ear, all percepts in the mind, all knowledge in the heart, all actions in the hands, all movements in the feet, and all the Vedas in speech.

Thus having repeated the object of meditation, and the means of meditation, in the above two verses; Yājāavalkya winds up with the saying "as a lump of salt, when thrown into water becomes dissolved into water," &c., in order to encourage the aspirant, and increase his desire for getting Mokṣa or immortality. He shows, in this passage, that an aspirant for immortality is always in the presence of his Lord, as water is always in contact with the salt. But the person who does not worship the Lord, gets separated from the Lord, and of him it is said that the Lord rises out from these elements, and vanisheth again in the end. This rising and vanishing of the Lord applies only to the Jiva who does not worship the Lord, and who therefore constantly undergoes repeated births and deaths; and is bound to the wheel of Sańsâra, because he identifies himself with his body, and does not know the Supreme Self. Then Yājāavalkya goes on to say: "When he has departed there is no more Sanjaa (dan); which means, when a person who has reached Mukti, (for "departed" here means "attaining Mukti") by final separation from all bodies, there is no more sanjas or distinction of names, with regard to Mukta Jiva. For names like man, angel, deva, etc., are applicable only so long as the Jiva has a body. As in the state of Mukti, the Jiva has no such body, he has no such sanjait or name. His consciousness then is not limited by his body, and he attains to his natural, innate selfknowledge and he unites in his self all elemental forces, and does not think of himself as a man or a deva, etc. Then Yajñavalkya goes on to say: "For when there is, as it were duality, then one sees the other, one smells the other, &c." This shows that even of the released or Mukts Jivas, the Supreme Lord is the abode, and such Jivas are not apart from Brahman, for being apart from Braman is duality. And he further adds "how should we know him, by whom he knows air this," which means that the Lord is a most difficult object of knowledge. And Yajñavalkya ends by saying: "How, O Beloved, should we know the Knower?" Which means, 'how can that omniscient Lord be known, without His grace and without worshipping Him.' The only method of knowing Him is his worship, coupled with His grace. Thus even in the last sentence, Yajñavalkya' reiterates the idea that the worship of the Lord is the means of attaining immortality, and the immortality itself consists in attaining the Supreme Self. Thus in this Brahmana of the Bri. Up. the topic throughout is the Supreme Self, and not the Purusa of the Sankhva philosphers, nor their Prakriti, guided and ruled by such Purusa.

Adhikarana VII.—Brahman is both the operative and the material cause.

(Vigaya.)—Having thus refuted the theory of Pradhana and Purusa of the Niridvara Sahkhya, the author now refutes the doctrine of Sedvara Sahkhya, namely, Yoga; and proves that all passages and texts of the Upanisads, referring to the cause of the universe, are to be interpreted referring to Brahman, the Supreme Self. Thus we find the following texts:—

तस्माहा पतस्मावात्मन चाकाशः सम्भूतः। चाकाशाहायुः। वायापितः। इत्यादि॥

From that Self (Brahman) sprang ether (Âkâsa, that through which we hear); from ether (air that through which we hear and feel); from air, fire (that through which we hear, feel, and see) etc. -Taitt. II 1. 1.

यतो वा इमानि भूतानि जायन्ते। येन जातानि जीवन्ति। यत् प्रयन्त्यमिसंबि-इन्ति, &c. ॥ That from whence these beings are born, that by which when born they live, that into which they enter at their death, try to know that. That is Brahman.—Taitt. II 1. 1.

सवैष सीव्य द्वमा धासीत् प्रक्रीवादितीयम् ।। स वेदात, यह स्वाम् प्रकारेव । 'In the beginning, my dear, there was that only who is one only without a second.' It thought "may I be many, may I grow forth."—Chh. Up. VI. 2.1.

बाला वा स्व्येक प्रवास चासीत् । नाम्बत् विचन निपत् । स रेशत, ठोकार् द्व सुवा रति ।।

In the beginning all this was self, one only; there was nothing else blinkin; whatsoever. He thought "ahall I send Arth worlds." He sent forth these worlds.—Altar. Up. L. 1. 2.

(Doubt).—Now in these passages is Brahman to be considered as merely the operative cause or the operative as well as the material cause?

(Pûrvapakea).—The Pûrvapakein says, that all these passages of the Upanisad show that Brahman is the efficient cause only of creation, and not its material cause, and though matter is said to come out of Him, it is so said metaphorically only. In fact, the creation is always said to proceed from the Ikean or thinking of Brahman, or looking of Brah-Therefore Brahman is the creator of the universe in the same sense as a potter is said to be the creator of a pot. The material cause of the universe is the eternal Prakriti. Moreover, the material things of the world have more resemblance with the primordial matter-stuff Prakriti, than with Brahman who is pure intelligence. Nor can you say that the efficeut cause is itself the material cause. For we find in this world, that the material cause is always the inert matter, separate and distinct from the efficient cause, which is always an intelligent being. Thus the material cause of pot is the material and non-sentient clay, while the efficient cause is the intelligent being, the potter. Similarly, we find in this world one single effect, the result of many different contributing causes, and instrumental agencies. Therefore, we cannot discard the well-known rule of experience and say, that one and the same Brahman is both the material and the operative cause of the world. Therefore, it is Prakriti, superintended by the Lord, that modifies itself and constitutes the material cause of the whole universe, while Brahman 's the operative cause alone. Nor is this the theory of ours based upon mere reasoning. We have authority for it also:-

> विकार जनगमना (माया) महक्यामजा भुवाम् । ध्यायतेऽध्यासिता तेन, तन्ये मेंरता पुनः ॥ स्यते पुरुषार्थाच्य तेनैवाधिहता जगत् । गीरनायन्तवती सा जनित्री भूतभाविनी ॥ सितासिता य रका य सर्वकामनुषा विभीः ।

("The mother of all changes, the non-intelligent, having eight-fold form (the five elements and manas, buddhi and Ahankara) unborn, permanent, is Parkriti. The Lord thinks of her and being controlled by the Lord and superintended by Him, she creates the universe and commanded by Him, she produces all these effects. Under His guidance she creates all these objects for the beneft of the soul.") Her who produces all effects, the non-knowing one, the unborn one wearing eight forms, the firm one—she is known (by the Lord) and ruled by him, she is spread out and incited and ruled by him, she gives birth to the world for the benefit of the souls. A cow she is without beginning and end, a mother producing all beings white, black and red, milking all wishes for the Lord. Many babes unknown drink her, the impartial one, but one God only, following his own will, drinks her submitting her to him. By his own thought: and work the mighty God strongly enjoys her, who is common to all, the milk-giver, who is honored by the holy sacrificers. The non-evolved when being counted by twenty-four is called the Evolved." (Chullika Up.)

The two verses preceding these are also given below:-

प्रश्नावं शुनिर्दे सं दिस्यं अविश्वन्यस् । द्वित्रतेमानं तैजस्तिः सर्वः पश्यक पश्यति ॥

All men seeing, do not see this brilliant Harhsa having eight feet, and three cords, this unchanging jewel existing in two conditions and refulgent with light.

Note.—The eight feet are the five elements, earth, water, air, fire and ether, mind (manas) intellect (Buddhi) and self-consciousness (Ahankara). The three cords are either Dharma, (virtue), Artha (profit) and Kama (pleasure), or the gunas or the three nadis. The two conditions are the subtle and the dense bodies. The atman is like a necklace on our throats, but we do not see it. The Hamsa literally means the destroyer of ignorance.

भूतसंमाहने काछे भिष्ने तमसि वैद्यरे । भन्तः पद्यति सत्वस्यं निर्मुखं गुब-गह्नरे । बद्याच्यः सोज्यथा त्रस्टुं भ्येयमानः कुमारकः ।।

When the dark ignorance, the deluder of all men, the great Nescience, the veil covering the Lord, is rent asunder, then he sees the nirguna Lord, within him, dwelling in the Buddhi, in the cavity containing all gunas. He the Blessed Child, the Eternal Youth is to be seen by meditation alone and not otherwise.

So also the Smriti (Vișnu Purâna):-

वया प्रविधिमात्रेय गन्धः स्रोमाय जायते। मनसो नेापकर्तत्वात तथासी परमेश्वरः ॥

सिवानाव् यथाकाराकावायः कारवं तरोः । तथैवार्पारवामेन विश्वस्य भगवाव् दरिः ॥ निमित्तमावमेवासौ स्टानां सर्ग कमंदि । भवानकारवीमृता यतो वै सुम्बराक्यः ॥

"As a scent, by its mere contact with olfactory nerves, produces a mental change (though it does not directly act on the mind), so the Supreme Lord, without any direct action, produces vibrations (kgobha) in matter. As Space, Time, &c., by their mere presence are said to be the cause of the growth, &c., of a tree, though they do not directly cause such growth, &c., so the Lord Harl, without undergoing any modifications Himself, is said to be the cause of the universe.

In the act of creation, the Lord is merely a concomitant (nimitta) cause, and not an active agent, the creative forces (Saktis) are verily the primary causes."

Therefore texts which declare that Brahman is the material cause of the universe, should be somehow explained away.

(Siddhanta).—To this the author answers:—

प्रकृतिश्च प्रतिज्ञा वृष्टान्तानुपरोधात् ॥ १ । ४ । २३ ॥

शुक्रति: Prakritih, the material cause, the Prakriti. च Cha, and. विका Pratijha, the proposition to be proved, promisory statements, the enunciation. दृशक्त Dristanta, illustrative instances. चतुपराभाग Anuparodhat, on account of this not being in conflict.

23. Brahman is the material cause also, because this view is not opposed to the illustrations and the proposition sought to be established, in the Upanisad texts under consideration.—131.

COMMENTARY.

Brahman is not only the operative cause of the universe, but is the material cause as well; for thus alone is harmony established between Upanişad texts which show the propositions to be established and illustrations to be given. Thus in Chh. Up. VI. 1 3. we:find Uddâlaka asking his son Svetaketu, who had returned from his teacher's house, after having finished his days, conceited, considering himsef well read and stern:—

ॐ ह्वेतकेतुर्द्राविषय यास त™् ह पितोषाच इवेतकेती षस ब्रह्मचर्ये न षै सोम्याऽस्मत्कुळीनोऽनन्द्रय ब्रह्मबन्धुरिव भवतीति स ह द्वादश्चर्य वर्षेस चतुर्षि भ द्यातिषर्यः सर्वान् वेदानर्थात्य महामना अनुचानमानी स्तन्ध प्रयाय त™ ह पितोषाच श्वेतकेतो यषु सोम्येदं महामना अनुचानमानी स्तन्धोऽस्युत तमादेशममाक्षा वेना-श्रुत ™श्रुतं मबलमतं मतमविद्यातं विद्यातमिति कथं तु मगदः स आदेशो भवतीति

"Svetaketu, as you are so conceited considering yourself so well-read and so stern, my dear, have you ever asked for that Adeia (generally translated as instruction, but meaning here the Ruler) by which we hear what cannot be heard, by which we perceive what cannot be perceived, by which we know what cannot be known."

Here the proposition to be proved is the existence of that Ruler or Adeda by knowing whom alone, everything else is known. This Adeda or Ruler must be the material cause also otherwise how can His knowledge lead to the knowledge of the material universe. If he were merely the operative cause, then from mere knowledge of an operative cause you cannot know the material cause. In the case of the potter and the pot, the two causes are different, not so however here, for the above passage clearly shows the unity of the operative cause and the material cause. Not only the proposition to be proved asserts this unity, but the illustrations given in the whole of that chapter of the Clih. Up. prove the same. Thus to give a few illustrations:—

यथा सेक्येकेन स्रिपण्डेन सर्वे स्नामयं विद्यात - स्वाह्याचारमम् विद्यारा नामवेयं स्वित्येरेक स्वत्यः ।। ११ ॥ यथा सेक्येकेन कोदमयिना सर्वे कोदमयं विद्याराथ स्वाद्यान्त्रामयं विद्याराथ स्वाद्यान्त्रामयं विद्याराथ नामवेयं केहिमस्येव सरसम् ॥ १॥ यथा सेक्येकेन नवानिक्रयानेन सर्वे कार्यायसं विद्यारा प्राप्तां विद्यारा नामवेयं क्रयायसंभित्येव सरसमेव सेक्येक स्वाद्यान्य स्वाद्य स्वाद्यान्य स्वाद्य स

"My dear, as by one clod of clay all that is made of clay is known, the difference being only a name, arising from speech, but the truth being that all is clay.

5. And, as my dear, by one nugget of gold all that is made of gold is known, the difference being only a name, arising from speech, but the truth being that all is gold.

6. And as my dear, by one pair of nail scissors all that is made of iron (karşnaya-sam) is known, the difference being only a name, arising from speech, but the truth being that all is iron, thus, my dear, is that Adefa.

These illustrations show that by knowing the material cause, you know the various substances or effects of that matter, and they are opposed to the view that Brahman is only the operative cause. Nor is it possible to know the pot, from the knowledge of the potter alone. But here the text says "you can know this universe by mere knowledge of Brahman alone." Therefore, for the sake of harmony between the proposition to be established and illustrations given therein, we conclude that Brahman is the material cause of the universe, while the text expressly declares Him to be the operative cause as well.

म्रिभिष्योपदेशाचु च ॥ १ । ४ । २४ ॥

Thus Abhidhya, will; reflection. The Upadesat, on account of instruction or teaching, or statement. The Cha, and, on account of the statement of many creations.

24. Brahman is both the operative and the material cause of the universe, because of the statement that the creation is His will and because former creations were also from His will.—132.

COMMENTARY.

The force of "Cha" or "and" is to include creations that have gone before. The text says:—

सोअकामयत । बहुस्यां प्रजायेयेति । स तपोऽतप्यत । स तपस्तत्त्वा । इस्<sup>भ्र</sup>सर्वम-स्वतः । वदिष् किञ्च । तत्त्वद्वा । तदेशाद्वप्राविदात् । तद्वद्वप्रविदय । सम्ब सामा-मनत् ॥ (TAITT. Up. II. 6. 1.)

He wished, may I be many, may I be many, may I grow forth. He brooded over himself (like a man performing penance). After he had thus brooded, He sent forth (created) all, whatever there is. Having sent forth, He entered into it. Having entered it, He became set (what is manifest, and tyet (what is not manifest).

This also shows that from the Supreme Self comes out this universe, consisting of sentient and non-sentient beings, and dwelling in various localities, and all this is merely the result of the will of the Lord; so it is established, that He is the material as well as the operative cause of the universe in this creation, as well as in all the previous creations.

सादाच् चोभयाम्नानात् ॥ १ । ४ । २५ ॥

25. And both are directly stated, therefore, Brahman is both the material and the operative cause—133.

COMMENTARY.

The force of 'cha' is here that of denoting inclusion. The scripture directly states that Brahman is alone the material as well as the operative cause of the world:—

किं स्विद् वर्ग क र स वृक्ष वासीत्. यतो वावापृथिवीनिष्ठतक्षुः । मनीविको मनसा पृष्कतैतत्, यद्ध्यतिष्ठद् भुवनानि वारयन् ॥ अश्च वर्ग व्या स वृक्ष वासीत्, यतोवावा पृथिवी निष्ठतस्थः । मनीविको मनसा प्रव्रवीमि वो ब्रह्माध्यतिष्ठद् भुवनानि वारयन् ॥

What was the tree, what wood in sooth produced it, from which they fashioned out the earth and heaven?

Ye thoughtful ones enquire within your spirit, whereon he stood when he established all things. Brahman was the wood, Brahman the tree from which they shaped heaven and earth; ye wise ones I tell you, it stood on Brahman, supporting the worlds.—(Rig Veda I, $1, 4) and (Taitt. Brahman II. 8, 9, 6.)

The question asked here, and the answer given, shows that Brahman is both the material and the operative cause of the universe. The "tree" here refers to the material cause, and its effects are heaven and earth. The Lord of the world, created the heavens and the earth, from the tree which was its material cause, and that tree was Himself. "They fashioned" is in the plural number, but the sense is really "he fashioned." The anomaly of the plural number used for the singular is a Vedic license. The question is put from the worldly point of view, namely, what is the tree, what was the support of that tree, what was the support of the universe, what materials and instruments were used by Brahman when creating. To all these worldly questions the answer given is transcendental, and shows that Brahman is not to be judged by any worldly standard. He is transcendental in His attributes and substance, and thus is both the operative and the material cause of the universe.

SÛTRA 1, 4, 26,

श्रात्मकृतेः परिणामात् ॥ १ । ४ । २६ ॥

चारनकोः Atmakriteh, on account of making itself. परिवानात् Parinamat, owing to modification.

26. Brahman is the operative as well as the material cause of the universe, because of his making himself so, and by modifying himself into the universe.—134.

COMMENTARY.

In the Taitt. Up. II. 6. we find distributed! "he wished may I be many" and a subsequent passage says that agriculty equation! "itself made Its Self." This shows that the object as well as the agent, in the act of creation, is the same Supreme Self alone, who was mentioned in the opening passage "He wished may I be many." Thus He alone has both these forms, namely the agent as well as the object. But,—says an objector—how can one and the same being, established in one place as an agent, become also the object, with all its imperfections, etc.? To this question the Sûtra answers by the word parinamát:—Brahman becomes the object by modification. This parinama or modification does not conflict with the idea of Brahman being eternally unchangeable (Kuṭastha) for there can be a modification not in conflict with unchangeableness.

The truth of the matter is this. Brahman has three powers, as we learn from the following Srutis:—

प्रयान क्षेत्रकृपतिशु केवाः ।।

"He is the Lord of Nature (Pradhina) and of the soul (Kestrajūa) and the regulator of Guapa. , (Svet. Up. VI. 18)."

परास्य शकिविविवेष भ्यते । स्वामाविकी वावककिया च ।।

"His various powers are sung in the Vedas, the deeds of wiedom and deeds of strength, natural to him. (Svet. Up. VI. 8)."

So also is the following Smriti:-

विष्युरुक्तिः एरा त्रीका क्षेत्रवाक्या तथायरा । चविचा कर्मसंबाज्या ततीया क्षकिरिचते ॥

"The Vishou Sakti is called Part Sakti, His power as manifested in the souls of men is called Apart Sakti. His third Sakti is called Avidya named also Karma." (Vispu Purapa).

In the Sastras Brahman is described as being both the operative and the material cause of the world. He is the operative cause through his power called the Para Sakti. He is the material cause, through his other two Saktis called the Apara Sakti and Avidya Sakti, which work through the souls and nature (matter). As when a person is said to be a white man, it means that the attribute of whiteness is predicable of him, and the attribute of blackness cannot be applied to him. The qualities positive or negative exhaust their force with expressing the quality of the objects, and do not go further.

The Sruti also says :--

य पक्षे वर्षो बहुवा इक्तियोगात् वर्षांननेकान् निहितार्थो इवाति । विवैति वान्ते विक्वमादी स देवः स ना बुद्धचा ग्रुमया संयुक्छ ।।

"The one, formiess being, with his purposes hidden, who, with various powers, creates many forms; from whom the world rises in the beginning and to whom it returns at the end, may be grant as good understanding. (Svet. Up. IV. I.)

Thus with regard to the one and the same Brahman, both these powers are valid:—As the operative cause He is Kûtastha or unchangeable, as the material cause He is Parināmi or subject to modification; as possessed of subtle nature, He is the agent; and possessed of gross nature He is the object. This we infer from illustrations of the clod of clay, &c., given in the Chh. Up. VI. I. 1. as well as from the very words of this aphorism, which uses the term Parināmāt.

In this way we have thus refuted also the doctrine of Vivarta, which says that the world is an illusion, a superimposition on the true Brahma, (as the snake is a superimposition on the rope, which appears like a snake), and that the world is therefore not real. It is not possible that there should be the superimposition of the world on Brahman, as is the superimposition of silver on the mother of pearl, which through mistake may appear like silver. Because this superimposition presupposes that the object is in front of the person who falls into the illusion. But Brahman is not an object placed in front of anybody, like the mother of silver or rope, because He is all-pervading.

If it be said that Akasa or space is also all-pervading, but ignorant people superimpose upon it the qualities of colour, by saying the sky is blue, &c., and so an all-pervading object may be liable to superimposition; to this we reply, this is not so, because superimposition is not possible in Brahman, as it is in the case of Akada, since Brahman is not an object of attainment or perception as Akasa is. and it is never possible that Brahman can have any Upadhi. Moreover the appearance of a thing- as something which it is not, is the same to all intents and purposes, as if that thing had changed its nature. And this is not possible, unless there is illusion, for without illusion there is not possible of mistaken appearance. This illusion being separate from Brahman falls in the category of Vivarta, and thus we come to the vicious circle in reasoning. For we have to assume the existence of a separate entity called illusion, in order to explain the theory of Vivarta or illusion. In the Scriptures, the world is sometimes said to be a mere illusion, no doubt, but it is said so in order to produce disgust and indifference towards it, and not that the world is really non-existent or an illusion. Thus say the wise who know the truth. Had the world been a mere illusion and hallucination, then there would be no definite laws in this world, such as we find in the elements which constitute the world, such as a particular group of atoms constitutes a particular object, and that object always has the same number of atoms, neither more nor less. the world were an illusion, we should expect the indefiniteness of elements. for illusion has no laws and may be subject to any change. The change of condition is seen only with regard to objects which are real and subject to law. With regard to objects which are non-real, and whose nature is not fixed, we cannot say that they can undergo any change of conditions for objects of illusion undergo changes at every moment, and such change is not a change of condition, but inherent in the nature of illusion. Therefore, the true Scriptural doctrine is that of Parinama, namely, that the world is a modification of Brahman and is real; while the theory of illusion or Vivarta has no foundation in the Scriptures.

योनिश्च हि गीयते ॥ १ । ८ । २७ ॥

क्रीनि: Yonih, the womb, the source. च Cha, and. दि Hi, because. गीकर

Glyate, is sung, is described, or called.

27. Brahman is both the material as well as the operative cause of the universe, because some texts so describe Him.—135.

OCMMENTARY.

The following texts of the Mundaka Upanisad call Him the youi of the universe:—

यद् भूतवानिं परिपश्यन्ति भीराः ॥

"That whom the wise regard as the womb of all beings." (I. 1. 6.).

कर्तारमीशं पुरुषं ब्रह्मयानिम् ।।

"The Maker, the Lord, the Person, Brahman, the womb." (III. 1. 6.)

The word "maker" shows that he is the operative cause, while the term "womb" shows that He is the material cause also. The word yoni or womb always denotes the material cause. As in the sentence:—"The earth is the yoni or womb of herbs and trees, &c."

True, in ordinary language and in the Vedas, a distinction is drawn between the material and the operative cause, and ordinarily we do not find one person combining in himself both these qualities, for many causes are required to bring about any particular result in worldly life; yet the express texts above quoted leave no room for doubt, that so far as God is concerned, He is both the operative and the material cause.

Adhikarana VIII.—All names are names of God.

(Virya).—The present section is commenced in order to show that there are no Upanisad texts, which would go against the propositions above established. There are some texts, which apparently establish that Pradhana or Siva or some other deity than Visnu is the cause of the universe, while others prove that the individual self, the Jiva is such a cause. In the Svetadvatara Upanisad we find the following texts, showing that Siva is the cause of the world-creation, &c., and not Hari:—

सरं प्रधानमसृतासरं हरः सरात्मानावीशते देव पकः। तस्यामिध्यानायोजनात् तस्वभावात् मृयश्चान्ते विश्वमायानिवृत्तिः॥ १०॥

"The Pradhana is changeful; Hara (lit., the Destroyer) is immortal and unchangeable. The one God rules the changeable Pradhana and the unchangeable human soul. By meditating on Him, by communion and unity with Him, the world-illusion is completely removed and comes to an end." (f. 10).

पद्मे हि रही न द्वितीयाय तस्थुर्य इमौद्वोकान् ईरात ईरानीभिः। प्रत्यक्जनाः सिद्यति सम्बुक्केषान्तकाले संस्वय विश्वा सुवनानि गोपाः॥ २॥

"Rudra (lit., the killer of all pains) who rules all worlds with His powers, is one only—the wise do not acknowledge; a second. He exists behind all persons. He creates all the worlds, preserves them and rolls them up at the end." (III. 2.)

यो देवानां प्रमवश्वोज्ञवश्य विम्वाधिपो ठद्रो महर्षिः । हिरण्यगर्मे जनयामास पूर्वे स ना बुद्ध्या ग्रुभया संयुनक् ।। ४ ।। "He who is the cause of the birth and the power of all the devas, Rudra, the Lord of all, the Omniscient, who, at the beginning begot Hiranyagarbha, may He grant us good understanding. (III. 4.)

यदाःतमस्तव दिवा न रात्रिकं सक्त वास्तिक्य एव केवकः । तद्वसरं तत्

सवितुर्वरेच्यं प्रदा च तस्मात् प्रस्ता पुराको ।। १८ ।।

"When darkness is removed, there is neither day nor night, neither being nor nonbeing, but only the Siva alone. He is unchangeable. He is adored by the Savitri. From Him flows the Ancient Wisdom." (IV. 18.)

The following texts similarly show that the creation proceeds from Pradhana:—

प्रधानविद्युत्तं प्रधानमधिगच्छति । प्रधाने स्वयमध्येति नक्षयत् कारबं मतम् ॥

"From Pradhâna (lit., the Best, the Chief) is produced this universe, it goes back into Pradhâna, it is sustained by Him; verily there is no other cause recognised by the wise."

The following text shows that the world proceeds from the Jiva:-

बीबाद् अवन्ति भूतानि, जीवे तिष्ठन्त्यचम्बद्धाः। जीवे च क्रयमिकन्ति, न जीवात् कारकं परम् ॥

"From the Jiva (lit., the life, the Giver of life) proceeds all beings, they remain sustained by the Jiva firmly, they merge into the Jiva; there is no higher cause than the Jiva."

(Parcapaksa).—These words must be taken in their ordinary significance, and denote Siva, Pradhana and Jiva, respectively.

(Siddhanta).—This objection is met by the author, by the following Satra.

SÛTRA I. 4. 28.

एतेन सर्वे व्याख्याता व्याख्याताः ॥१।४।२८॥

श्लेम Etena, by this, by the method of interpretation indicated in the above sutras. खर् Sarve, all (words like Hara, Rudra &c.) आवश्यताः Vyakhyatah, are explained.

28. Thus are (to be) explained all words (like Hara, &c.).—136.

COMMENTARY.

The words like "Hara," &c., should be explained by the method above indicated. All such words denote the Supreme Brahman, because all names and words are His name. As says the following text:—

नामानि विश्वानि न सन्ति के के यदाविरासीत् पुरुषस्य सर्वम्।।

"All names that exist among mankind have come out from Him, the Puruşa (and so primarily apply to Him)."

The Bhallaveya Sruti also says the same :—
नामानि सर्वांक यमाविद्यांति, तं वै विष्युं परममुदाहरन्ति ।।

"Him denote all the names, they all declare the Supreme Brahman, the Lord Vișnu."

Vaisampayana also has said that all these names are the designation of Sri Krisna. In the Skanda Purana also it is written—

"Excepting the names of Narayana and such like, Hari gave all his other names (like those of Rudra, &c.) to different Deities."

The guiding principle, however, is this:—Where there is no conflict of teachings, there the names like Hara, Rudra and the rest, denote the respective devas popularly so called. But where there arises a conflict, there these names denote the Lord Visua alone.

The repetition of the word vyakhyatah is meant to indicate the termination of the Adhyaya.

Let our hearts be ever fixed on the Lord Krisna, who as if in sport, creates, maintains, and destroys the whole universe, who is the Supreme Lord, whose powers are inconceivable, infinite and true; and in whom all the Vedas find their final goal and fulfilment.

Here ends the fourth Pada of the first Adhyaya.

Note.—Thus the word Hara when applied to God means the Destroyer, who breaks up all the elements into their primordial state at the time of Pralaya. (Harati tattvåni, layabhimukhyam nayati); Rudra means the destroyer of all pains. (Rujam dråvayati); Siva means the Blessed One, the Auspicious One, Pradhåna means the Best, the Chief; Jiva means the Life, the giver of life; and so on.

SECOND ADHYÂYA.

FIRST PADA.

दुर्य किनदो कावाकविकतं परीक्षितं यः स्फुटमुक्तराधयम् । सुवर्गनेन भृतिमैक्षिमन्ययं व्यवात् स कृष्णः प्रभुरस्तु मे गतिः ॥

May that Lord Krishna be my refuge and goal, who with His discus called Sudarsana protected in the womb of his mother Uttarâ, the holy Parketta, the son of Abhimanyu, even before his birth, from the burning arrows of the cruel son of Drona.

Note:—This verse has a double meaning. It may be applied to Krishna Dvalpayana and the author of the Sütras also.

In the first Adhyaya, it was established that the Lord of all is the chief object, which the Vedânta texts teach; that He is the material as well as the operative cause of all; that He is different from everything; that He is the Inner Self of all things; that He is free from all imperfections; that He possesses inconceivable infinite powers, and has measureless auspicious qualities. This was established by the Samanvaya or correct interpretation of all the Vedânta texts. But in the second Adhyaya, it would be proved that all contrary views establishing Pradhana to be the cause of the universe are wrong; and it will reconcile the conflicts of Smriti and reasonings, which go to establish that contrary view, by proving that those reasonings are fallacious, and the systems of creation, &c., established by the Vedânta are the only right view. Thus this chapter proves that the philosophy of Kapila is not supported by Vedânta texts.

At first, the author of the Sûtras disproves that Sânkhya is opposed to the sacred texts and removes the doubt that the Vedânta view contradicts those texts which establish the Sânkhya theories. It shows that, properly speaking, there is no foundation for the Sânkhya view in the Vedânta texts.

(Doubt). Here the doubt arises, whether the view that Brahman is the sole cause of the universe, as established by the reconciliation of the texts, in the first Adhysys, is not contradicted by the Sankhys Smriti.

(Parvapakea). The opponent says, if Brahman is the sole cause of the universe, then what becomes of those texts which establish the Sankhya view that Pradhana is the material cause of the universe. According to Vedanta, this Sankhya Smriti would find no scope. Kapila, the author of Sankhya, is called a Riei in the following text of the Svet. Up.:—

वा वानि वानिमवितिहरवेका विभानि क्याबि वानीस्व सर्वाः। क्रवि मस्तं कविकं वसमन्ने बानैविर्मात्त आवमानस्य परवेतः॥

"It is the one who superintends every cause, all forms and all germs; who sustains with knowledge the wise Kapila, the first born, and who saw him born."—(Svet. Up., V. 2).

This sage Kapila is thus an authoritative person, because the Sruti itself calls him the Risi Kapila. This Risi acknowledges the validity of fire-sacrifices &c., as taught in the Karma Kanda (and is not a scoffer of ritualism like some other heretics). He has composed the Sankhya Smriti, as Jāana Kanda, in order to teach men the nature and means of getting release, to those who desire Mukti. The first aphorism of his system is:—

वय विविधदुःबात्यन्तनिवृत्तिरत्यन्तपुदवार्यः ॥

सम् Atha, now. चिविष: Tirvidha, three-fold. कुन्न Dukha, sorrow. स्वरूप Atyanta, complete. विवृत्ति: Nivrittih cessation. सम्बन्ध Atyanta, complete. दुक्तार्थः Puruşarthah the sumum bonum.

"The complete cussation of three sorts of sorrows is the highest end of man."

In another aphorism he says:—

न इष्टार्थसिदिनिवृत्तेरप्यत्ववृत्तिवर्धनातः।

न, Na, not. रहार्च Dristartha, visible means. विक्तिः Siddhib, attainment. निर्मेः Nirvritteb, after cessation. जाप Api, also. जनुष्यि Anuvritti, return. रचनास Darsanat, because of being found.

"This cossistion of pain is not possible by material means, because the relief afforded by them is temporary only; and there is the recurrence of pain."

In this system the non-sentient Pradhana is the independent cause of the world; and Pradhana creates the world in order to give release to the bound jivas, or for her own sake. Though insentient, it creates the world; just as the insentient milk turns of its own accord into curd, &c. If, therefore, Brahman be held to be the sole cause of the universe, then the Sankhya doctrine becomes contradicted and will find no scope anywhere, because it is entirely devoted to the setting forth of theoretical truth and not practical duty, and if it is not accepted in that quality, it is of no use whatsoever. Therefore Vedanta texts should be so construed as not to contradict the system of Kapila who is a great authority. It can not be said, that if we interpret Vedanta texts in conformity with Sankhya.

then Manu and other Smritis like that would be contradicted. There is no harm, if Smritis like Manu and the rest are contradicted on theoretical points, for such contradictions would not make those works useless. For Manu and similar works inculcate practical religious duty, and are authoritative in matters of Karma Kanda and will thus have a scope of their own. The Sankhya Smriti, however, is purely theoretical.

(Siddhanta).—This objection the author replies by the following

Sûtra:-

SÛTRA II. I. 1.

स्पृत्यवकाशवोषप्रसङ्ग इति चेत् न भ्रन्यस्मृत्यनवकाश-वोषप्रसङ्गात ॥ २ । १ । १ ॥

रहति Smriti, the Smriti, the Kapila philosophy. सन्दर्शन Anavakasa, non-room, want of application, redundancy. शेष Dosa, fault. त्रवह: Prasangah, result. इति Iti, thus चेन् Chet, if. न Na, not. सन्त Anya, other. स्टानि Smriti, the Smriti, अनुसद्धार Anavakasa, non-scope or redundancy. शेष Dosa, fault. त्रवहार Prasangat, because of the result.

1. If it be objected that )the Kapila) Smriti will find no scope (under Vedântic interpretation) we say no; because (under the Sânkhya interpretation) there would result the fault of want of scope for other Smritis (like that of Manu, &c.)—137.

COMMENTARY.

The word Anavakasa means want of room, want of scope, in other words, becoming totally useless. The objection to the Vedanta texts being explained, by force of Samanvaya, as teaching that Brahman is the sole cause of the universe is, that the Sankhya Smriti does not find any scope under that interpretation; therefore, the Vedanta texts ought to be explained in a way opposite to that which would appear from their superficial plain meaning: This objection is raised in the first part of the Sûtra.

It is answered in the second half of the Sûtra, which says, let it be so that the Sânkhya Smriti finds no scope, for otherwise other Smritis like those of Manu and the rest which are in harmony with the Vedânta teaching and which declare that Brahman is the universal cause, would become useless. Thus there is a choice of two evils; should the Vedânta texts be interpreted in a distorted way, so as to give scope to the Sânkhya Smriti, or should they be interpreted in a natural way, so as to give room to Manu and the rest. The greater evil is not to give scope to Manu and the rest. Manu and the Smritis like that, establish that the Lord is the cause of the creation, &c., of the universe, and that the theory of Kapila is not correct. Thus Manu (Chapter I. V.) says:—

षासीदिदं तमाभूतमप्रवातमसस्यम् । यप्रतस्यमिषिदेयं प्रसुत्तमिष सर्वतः ॥ ततः स्वयम्युर्मगवान्, स्वयक्तं व्यप्नयिव्यम् । महाभूतादिवृत्तीजाः प्राहुरासीत्रमेगुद्धः ॥ वेग्नस्यवितिवृत्त्याद्यः स्वयम्युर्मगवान् । सर्वभूतमयोऽवित्यः स एव स्वयमुद्धः । स्वयम्ययः स्वर्षः स्वयमुद्धः । स्वयम्ययः स्वर्षः । स्वयम्ययः । स्वयम्ययः स्वर्षः स्वरास्ययः । तिस्मन् यदे स्वयं स्वरास्यविक्षेत्रस्यास्यविक्षेत्रस्यास्यः ।।

"This (universe) existed in the shape of darkness, unperceived, destitute of distinctive marks, unattainable by reasoning, unknowable, wholly immersed, as it were, in deep sleep.

Then the divine Self-existent (Svayambhu, himself) indiscernible, (but) making (all) this, the great elements and the rest, discernible, appeared with irresistible creative power, dispelling the darkness.

He who can be perceived by the internal organ (alone) who is subtle, indiscornible, and eternal, who contains all created beings and is inconceivable, shone forth of his own (will).

He, desiring to produce beings of many kinds from his own body, first with a thought created the waters, and placed his seed in thom.

That (seed) became a golden egg, in brilliancy equal to the sun; in that (egg) He himself was born as Brahman, the progenitor of the whole world.

Similarly Parasara says in the Visnu Purana :--

विष्केः सकाशातुर्भुतं जगसमैद व सितं। सितिसंयमकर्तासी अगताऽस्य जगस सः ॥ यथार्वेनामिद्वयाद्वी समास्वयन्त्रतः । तथा विद्वसः भूयसा प्रसत्येषं अवार्दमः ॥

From Vignu there sprang the world, and in Him it abides; He makes this world persist and he rules it. He is the world. As the spider draws out the thread from his stemach, and again draws it into his body, similarly the world is emitted from the body of the Lord and merges back into it.—Vignu Purdna.

There are other Smritis also to the same effect. These find no scope in Karma Kanda and are concerned with theoretical truth only. They cannot be explained as helping Karma Kanda. They are taught for the sake of Jnana, because they teach practical duties, with the object of purifying the mind, so the knowledge of Brahman may arise therein.

(All abstract science and philosophy are of no practical utility, except in so far as they conduce to mental culture; or to put it in the words of the Hindu Philosophy, Jñāna Kāṇḍa has no concern with actions, but only with the purification of the mind.) The following Sruti text shows that the purification of the mind is the object of Jñāna Kāṇḍa:—

तमेतं वेदातुवयमेन ब्राह्मया विविद्यिक्तं वहीन दानेन तपसाध्माककेन ।।

"The Brahmapas try to know Him through the studies of the Vedas, by sacrifices, by ansterities and by fasting."—BR. UP., I.V. 4:22.

No doubt in some cases we find the performance of these things lead to the falling of rain, to the begetting of sons, to the attainment of heaven, &c. That is however only side-results or bye-products, which arise occasionally; with the object to produce faith in the scriptures; and their higher object is to produce knowledge of Brahman. In fact the entire Veda including the Karma Kanda has this object, as says the text:—

सर्वे बेदा यत्यद्मामनन्ति तपाश्रसि सर्वाचि च यहदन्ति । यदिच्छन्तो महाचर्यस्य-रन्ति तचे पदश्रसम्बेच मदीम्बीमित्येतत् ॥ १५ ॥

"Whose form and essential nature all the Vedas declare and in order to attain Whom they prescribe austorities, desiring to know whom the great ones perform Brahmacharya, that symbol I will briefly tell thee. It is Om. "—Katha UP. I. 3. 15.

So also the text :-

नारायकपरा वेदाः &c.

"All the Vedas declare Narayana alone," &c.

Nor can we settle the meaning of the Vedanta texts by means of the Sankhya Smriti of Kapila, for then we should have to accept the extremely undesirable conclusion, that all the other Smritis quoted are of no authority, and it would be establishing a conclusion opposed to the whole tendency of the sacred scriptures. For settling the meaning of a text is to show clearly the whole current of the scripture. The Sankhya Smriti does not possess this qualification. Therefore, it is against scripture, evolved out of one's own inner consciousness and not the production of any authoritative (apta) person. We are, therefore, not afraid of the contingency that the Sankhya Smriti would find no scope in Vedanta. Let the Sankhya Smriti be totally discarded, when by so doing we save those other very numerous class of Smritis which closely follow the doctrine of the Vedanta.

It is not proper to show undue preference for Sankhya Smriti merely on the strength of its being composed by an apta or authoritative person. For in that case, we'shall have to admit many a conflicting Smritis, such as those of Gautama, &c., who were also aptas, but who have given different theories about the world, soul and God and thus we shall be landed into the absurdity of believing contradictory theories, merely because their authors were aptas (or reliable honest persons). The result of which will be that we shall never know what was the truth. Moreover, it is a well-known maxim that when there is a conflict between two Smritis, then that Smriti alone is to be followed which is in harmony with the sacred scriptures (Sruti): and that alone ought to be respected.

Since our opponent raises the objection on the strength of Kapila's Smiriti, therefore our author says, "we shall refute him by his own argument," namely, by the strength of other Smritis such as those of Manu, &c. For if the argument of the opponent has any force, it comes to this, that scope should be given to the Smritis, and the Vedanta should be so explained that the Smritis should not be discarded.

Taking our stand on this proposition of our opponent we say, that we must so explain the Vedânta that it may give scope to the largest number of Smritis, such as Manu and the rest.

As regards the objection, that the author of the Sankhya is spoken of respectfully by the Sruti itself, in the famous passage of Svetisvatara Upanisad (V. 2), we reply that you have not properly understood that verse. It does not refer to Kapila, the founder of Atheistic Sankhya, but to a different being altogether. The verse really means, "He who before the creation of the world produced the sage Kapila (namely, the Golden coloured Brahma), in order to maintain the universe and who sustains this Brahma with the knowledge of the past, present and future, we worship that Lord God." The word Kapila here means Golden coloured, and is another name of Brahma called Hiranyagarbha, referred to in this very Upanisad in Verse 4 of the 3rd Chapter: "He who is the cause of the birth and power of the gods, Rudra, the lord of all, the omniscient, who at the beginning, begot Hiranyagarbha, may he grant us good understanding." That this first-born with the Golden colour is Brahma, we find also from Verse 12, Chapter IV of this Upanisad. Thus the sacred scripture refers to another being altogether, when it uses the word Kapila: and it does not refer to the founder of the atheistic science, for he misinterpreted the meanings of the Sruti. Therefore, if this latter Kapila is called an unauthoritative person (Anapta) we are not showing any disrespect to the Sruti. On the other hand, the authoritativeness of Manu is stated in unambiguous language in the Taittiriya Brahmana, where it is said "whatever Manu has declared that is a panacea."

Similarly, Srf Parasara is mentioned in the Vienu Purana to have obtained the knowledge of the supersensuous worlds and of the true nature of Devatas, through the blessing of Pulastya and Vasietha. Thus both Manu and Parasara are undoubtedly Aptas, but not so Kapila. The sage Kapila who founded the Sankhya Smriti opposed to the Vedic doctrine, was a particular Jiva, born in the family of Agnivaman, and deluded by the mysterious power of the Lord, he propounded this false philosophy.

He is not that Kapila who was the son of Kardama, for he was an incarnation of Visnu.

Note.—There are two persons of the name of Kapila mentioned in our books: they should not be confounded. The founder of the atheistic Sankhya was a different person from the Kapila mentioned with great respect in Bhagavata Purana and the Bhagavad Gita. See our Chhandogya Upanişad, page 242.

Thus we find in the Padma Purana:-

कपिको बासुदेबाक्यः सांक्यं तत्वं जगाइ ह । ब्रह्मादिश्यद्वव देवेश्यो शृत्वादिश्यस्तयैव च ॥ तथैबासुरये सर्वे वेदायै क्यबंदितम् । सर्ववेद विकद्भक्य कपिकोश्य जगाइ ह ।। सांक्यमासुरयेश्यस्मै कुतकंपरिवृद्धितम् ।।

"One Kapila called also Vásudeva taught the philosophy of Sánkhya to the Devas, Brahmā and the rest, to the Rieis, Bhrigu and the rest, as well as to Âsuri. He taught the doctrine full of harmony with the teachings of the Vedas. There was another Kapila who also taught a Sánkhya philosophy, fully opposed to all the Vedic teachings, and he had also a disciple called Asuri, who was other than the first Asuri. His Philosophy is full of false reasoning and bad arguments."

Therefore there is no fault if the Sankhya Smriti be entirely discarded, because it is opposed to the Vedas and is the work of a person who is not an apta.

8ÛTRA II. 1. 2.

इतरेषाञ्चानुपबब्धेः ॥ २ । १ । २ ॥

स्तरेपान Itaresam, of others, namely, of other points mentioned in the philosophy of Sankhya. प Cha. and, प्रमुख्या Anupalabdheh, because of the non-perception, because of their not being found in the Vedas.

2. Many other doctrines taught in the Sankhya philosophy are also not found in the Vedas, hence this system is not authoritative.—138.

COMMENTARY.

It is not only because Sankhya teaches that Pradhana is the author of creation, which makes it unauthoritative; but it teaches other doctrines also, which have no foundation in the Vedas. Thus it teaches that souls are pure consciousness and all-pervading, that bondage and release is the work of Prakriti alone, and these two are effects of Prakriti. It further teaches that there is no Supreme Spirit, the Lord of all. It also holds that time is not a Tattva. It holds that the Pranas are merely forms of the functions of the five senses, and have no separate existence of their own. All these heterodox doctrines are to be found there.

Adhikarana II.—The refutation of Yoga.

Says an opponent, admitted that the Vedânta text should not be explained in the light of the Sânkhya philosophy, because it is opposed to the theory of Vedânta. But they may be explained according to the philosophy of Yoga, because it is based on the teachings of Vedânta and is not opposed to it. In fact, Yoga is in harmony with sacred acriptures, and may be called a Srauta philosophy. It is mentioned in the Upanisads thus:—

तां येग्गमिति मन्यन्ते शिरामिन्दियशारबाम् । सममत्तत्त्वा मवति योगो हि प्रमवायवी ॥ ११ ॥

That they hold to be Yoga, which is the firm restraint of the senses. Then one becomes not heedless. Yoga should be performed with regard to the Lord, from whom is the origin and destruction of all things.—Katha Upunisad, VI. 11.

We find many such reference to Yoga in the Upanisads thus:-

मृत्युमोकाविकते।ऽथ सम्बा विचामेतां वेगविविक्य सम्बद् । ब्रह्ममाता विरक्षाऽमृद्धिसृत्युरम्योऽप्येवं या विवृत्यात्ममेव ।। १८ ॥

Nachiketas having then obtained all this knowledge and practice of Yoga imparted by Yama, attained Brahman, became free from rajas and beyond death; another who thus knows the spirit certainly becomes so.—Katha Uanishad, VI. 18.

Similarly, the method of postures and other members of Yoga are taught in Gitâ also where it says, that one should sit with his body straight and neck not bent, &c. Therefore, the Lord Patanjali composed this Yoga Smriti in order that men may conquer Sansara, by crossing over the difficult ocean of the world. He is one of the best authors and he has composed this philosophy through his great Yoga powers. Thus his first aphorism is:—

चय योगाजुद्यासमम्। 1-1.

"Now an explanation of Yoga."-1-2.

यागिवसम् सिनिरायः 1-2.

Yoga is the cossation of the modifications of thinking principle."-1-2.

These Sûtras are not opposed to Vedânta. If this Yoga Smriti, which merely deals with the teaching of the concentration of the mind, be held unauthoritative, then it will find no scope anywhere else; and if the Vedânta texts are to be explained by the method of Samanvaya, without regard to any other Smriti, then this Yoga becomes redundant. Therefore, the Vedânta texts should be so explained as to give room to Yoga Smriti, and the doctrine of Samanvaya should not be carried to this extreme.

(Katha Upanishad VI. 18.)

The Smritis like Manu and the rest, being concerned with Karma Kanda may be contradicted in certain parts, by the Yoga Smriti; but they will still have room, inasmuch as, they teach practical duties (Dharma). Therefore, says the Purvapaksin, the Vedânta texts should be construed by the Yoga Smriti and not in accordance with the above-mentioned Samanvaya.

(Siddhanta).—To this the author replies by the following Sûtra:—
SUTRA II. 1. 3.

एतेन योगः प्रत्युक्तः ॥ २ । १ । ३ ॥

प्रतेष Etena, by this; namely, by the refutation of the Sankhya Smriti. बोग: Yogah, Yoga doctrine as to creation. ब्राह्मकः Pratyuktah, has been refuted.

3. By the above refutation of the Sankhya Smriti, the Yoga Smriti is also to be understood to have been refuted—139.

COMMENTARY.

On similar grounds as those by which the Sankhya theory of creation has been refuted, the theory of Yoga is also refuted thereby. For the Yoga theory on this subject is opposed to Vedanta. If the Vedanta texts are to be explained by the light of the Yoga Smriti, then the other Smritis, like that of Manu and the rest which are in harmony with the Vedas, would become useless; and will have no scope. Therefore, the Vedanta texts about creation are not to be explained in accordance with the Yoga Smriti.

It cannot be said that the Yoga theory about creation is not opposed to the Vedanta theory about cosmogony. For in the Yoga philosophy also, the Pradhana is said to be the independent cause of creation. According to the Yoga, the Lord and the Jivas are mere consciousnesses (Chitimatrah) and both are all-pervading (Vibhu). Not only is the Yoga theory opposed to Vedanta in these matters, it is opposed also in other respects, such as:—Yoga holds that Mukti is merely the cessation of pain, which is a result of Yoga practice. All these theories are opposed to the teachings of Vedanta on these points. We do not find in the Vedanta texts the mention of the three-fold means of right knowledge, admitted by the Yoga. The latter holds that the Pramanas are perception, inference and testimony. Nor do we find in the Vedanta texts the mention of the five Vrittis or functions of the mind, mentioned by Yoga. The Yoga holds that Chitta or mind or thinking principle has five modifications right knowledge, false knowledge, fancy, sleep and memory. There is no such classification of mental functions in the Vedanta texts. All these things are to be found in the Yoga philosophy alone. Therefore, Yoga Smriti being opposed to Vedanta on these matters, is not a valid Smriti. If it be said, the Yoga philosophy would find no scope otherwise, we say let it be so. But since it is opposed to the Vedanta, we are not afraid if it has no scope left to it. In fact, all the arguments adduced to refute Sankhya may be adduced against the Yoga also. The real truth about the Lord as revealed in the Vedanta, about the Jivas, about the cause of bondage and salvation, and the means of getting salvation will be described later on.

This being so, how do you explain those Vedanta texts which expressly mention Yoga and its various members, such as the following:—

विकार' साध्य समं शरीर' ह्वीन्दियाचि मनसा समिनेस्य । ब्रह्मोडुपेन प्रतरेत विद्वान् सोतांसि सर्वाचि भयावहानि ॥ ८ ॥

"Making his body, with its three raised parts steady and placing his senses into the heart with his intellect, the wise men should cross all the fearful streams by means of the rafter of Om, the Brahman.—Sect. Up., II 8."

नित्वो नित्वानां चेतनश्चेतनानामेको बहुनां या विद्धाति कामान्। तत् कारखं सांक्यवेगगाविगम्यं झात्वा देवं मुख्यते सर्वपादीः ॥ १३ ॥

"The Eternal among the eternal ones, th: Consciousness of the conscious beings, who though one, dispenses to many their objects of desire—one who knows that God, the cause who is knowable by Sankhya and Yoga is freed from all bonds.—Svet. Up., VI. 18."

The words Sankhya, Yoga, however, here mean metaphysical knowledge and meditation, and have no reference to the systems of philosophy bearing those names.

Release cannot be obtained by the method taught in Yoga, namely, by the discrimination of the difference between Purusa and Prakriti, which is the favourite method of Yoga and Sankhya. According to Vedanta, release depends on the grace of God plus the knowledge of God, and not upon the knowledge of the difference between man and matter. This will be proved by the following texts:—

वेबाहमेतं पुरुषं महान्तमादित्यवर्षं तमसः परस्तात्। तमेव विदित्वातिमृत्युमेति नान्यः पन्था विद्यतेऽयनाय ॥ ८॥

"I know this Great Spirit, shining like the sun and transcending the world of darkness. It is only by knowing Him that one escapes death; there is no other path to go upon.—Svet. Up., 111. 8."

तमेव घीरे। विद्याय प्रवां कुर्वीत ब्राह्मकः ।। नातुष्यायाषु वहुम्कव्यान्याचा विका-

"Knowing Rim alone, let the wise Brahmana constantly meditate. Let him not study many books, for verily all that is waste of energy."—Br. Up., IV. 4.21.

पतव् या ध्यायति रसति भजति से।ऽस्ता भवति ।

"He who meditates on Him, feels joy in Him and is devoted to Him, alone gets immortality and no one else."

Moreover, that portion of the Sankhya or Yoga, which is not opposed to the Vedanta, is admitted valid by us also. We do not cherish any animosity against the whole of Sankhya or of Yoga: but take exception only to certain theories of theirs, as to creation and the method of obtaining release. The fact is, we simply discard the portions expressly opposed to the Vedanta, and accept the rest of the philosophy of Yoga and Sankhya.

True, the Yoga is not non-theistic like the Sankhya, for it admits the existence of God, in its several Sûtras, such as the following:—

र्ववरप्रविधानाहा ।

levara, God. Pranidhanat, by resignation to the will of. Va, or.

"Concentration may be attained by complete devotion to the Lord."

ह्रोशकर्मविपाकाशयैरपरामुखः पुरुवविशेष र्दश्वरः।

Kleia, pain. Karma, acts. Vipāka, fruits of act. Āsayaiḥ, by the store. Aparāmriṣṭaḥ, untouched. Puruṣa, Viieṣaḥa particular Spirit. İsvaraḥ, Lord.

"The Lord is a particular Spirit untainted by evil, suffering, acts and the frants of actions," etc.

Yet these Sütras are not absolutely necessary for the Yoga system, and many say that the author of Yoga was not in his right mind when he framed these particular aphorisms, and they are merely a mistake of his.

Similarly, Gautama, the author of Nyâya, and Kanâda, the author of the Vaisesika, were deluded when they propounded their theories regarding creation and release: which are also opposed to the Vedânta.

These will be refuted later on. No doubt these authors are also very learned and wise, but their delusion is the result of either too much conceit of their own knowledge, thinking that they were omniscient, or because the Lord had so willed that they should start such theories, for some mysterious purpose of His own. In fact, some hold that these theories were necessary in order to clearly bring out the perfect symmetry and harmoniousness of the Vedanta.

The present Sûtra opens a new Adhikarana, inasmuch as the Yoga differs from the Sankhya in admitting the existence of the Lord; and so the doubt arose that the refutation of the Sankhya did not necessarily involve the refutation of Yoga. To remove that doubt, this adhikarana has been started. The sangati is atided or analogy. Though the author of Yoga is no less a personage than the Great Hiranyagarbha himself, yet even he should be discarded on points where he contradicts Vedanta.

Adhikarana III.—The Vedas are eternal and infallible.

Says an objector:—If the Smritis like the Sankhya and the rest are to be set aside as non-valid and anapta, merely because they are opposed to the Vedas, then you must first establish that the Vedas themselves are infallible and contain nothing which is opposed to science or reason. The present section is commenced to remove that doubt, and to establish the infallibility of the Vedas.

(Doubt).—The doubt is raised in the following form. Is the Veda fallible or infallible? Is it the production of an Apta or an anapta? Had the Veda been infallible, then all that it says would come out to be true. But that is not the case, for example, it says, "Let a person desiring rain, perform the Kariri Sacrifice." Now the performance of the Kariri Yajña does not invariably produce rain. Therefore, the Veda is not infallible.

न विनन्नगत्वादस्य तंपात्वञ्च गब्दात्॥ २।१।४॥

न Na, not. विश्वचानातृ Vilakṣaṇatvāt, because of the difference of character. जूस Asya, of that, of the Veda. त्यास्त्व Tathātvam, suchness, the eternity, the authority. च Cha, and. चड्यात् Sabdāt, from the Word, from the Scripture.

4. The Veda is not unauthoritative (like the Sânkhya, &c.) because of its being of a different character altogether, and because its eternity is established from the Word.—140.

The Veda is not unauthoritative, like the Smritis of the Sankhyas and the rest. Why? Vilakşanatvât. Because it has a different character. Every human production is liable to four-fold error: that is, heedlessness, wrong-headedness (tyring to establish a proposition merely through a spirit of argumentation and against one's own immost conviction), error or delusion, and want of ability, owing to imperfection of instruments. No such errors of authorship are possible in the case of the Veda. For it is eternal and has no human being for its author. And its tathatva, suchness, the possession of such attribute, namely, its eternity is proved from the Word itself. As says a Sruti:—

तस्मै नृतं श्रमियवे वाचा विकप निखया। वृष्ये वेादस्य सुद्दुतिम् ॥

Tasmai, to him, to the Agni, Nûnam, now. Abhidyave, to the well-satisfied, Vacha, with Speech; Virupa, O sage Virupa; Nityaya, with the Eternal; Vrisne, to the Powerful. Chodasva, praise; Su-stutim a fair praise.

"Now, O Virupa, rouse for Him, Strong God who is ever Self-content, fair praise with the Eternal Vedic Speech."—Rig Veda, VII, 94. 6.

Thus the Śruti itself calls the mantras, by the significant epithet of the nitya-vâk or the Eternal Voice. The Smritis also declare the Veda to be eternal. Thus in the following:—

प्रनादि निधना नित्या बागुत्तवृद्या स्वयम्भुवा । प्रादेश वेदमयी दिव्या यतः सर्वाः प्रवृत्तयः ॥

"The Self-existing Lord, in the beginning of creation, sent forth the eternal, beginningless Voice, the divine Veda; from which proceeded all the other scriptures."

The Smritis like those of Manu and the rest, are authoritative, because they are based on the Veda, and for no other reason. In the Sûtra I. 3. 29, the eternity of the Veda was established by reasoning, in the present Sûtra it is established by authority; herein consists the difference between these two Sûtras.

But, says an objector, the Vedas are non-eternal, because we find in them a statement to the effect that they were created, at a certain time, and every thing that is created, has an end, necessarily, some time or other. The following verse of the Purusa Sûkta shows that the Vedas are created:—

तस्माव् यद्वात् संबंदुतः ग्रन्थः सामानि यद्विरे । सन्वंशि अद्विरे तस्माव् यज्ञस् तस्माव्जायत ॥

Tasmat, from Him, Yajnat, from that Sacrifice, Sarva-hutah. all-offered, general sacrifice, Richah, the Rik hymns. Samani, the Sama hymns. Jajfire, were born or produced, Chhandamsi, the Chhandas. Jajfire, were born or produced, Tasmat, from Him, Yajus, the Yajur Veda, Tasmat, from Him, Âjayata, was born, produced.

"From that great general Sacrifice, Richas and Sama hymns were born, therefrom were spells and charms produced; the Yajus had its birth from Him."—Rig Veda, X. 90. 9/

To this we reply, this is not so. By the word jan "was born," we mean "was manifested;" and not born in the ordinary sense. As has been said in the following verse:—

स्वयम्भुरेव मगवान् वेदै। गीतस्त्वया पुरा । शिवाया स्वविपर्यन्ताः स्मर्चारीऽस्य न कारकाः ॥

"This Lord Veda is Self-existent (that is eternal). Thou, O God, hast sung it out of old. The great ones from Siva down to the Risis are its reciters only and not its authors."

Nor can it validly be objected, that the Vedas are unauthoritative, because they do not always produce the results promised by them. The production, of any particular result, depends upon the capacity of the person performing the act. A competent person (like a competent chemist) always gets the predicted result, by the proper chanting of the hymns, while an incompetent person (like a tyro in Chemistry) fails to get the expected result. The failure of the result only proves the incompetency of the agent and not the defectiveness of science. While the Smritis like the Sankhya and the rest are unauthoritative, not because they fail to produce the results promised by them, but because they are in conflict with the teachings of the Vedas on these important points of Creation, Release, &c.

Adhikarana IV.—The Superintending Devas are denoted by terms like Fire, Earth, &c.

Objection.—Let it be so. But how do you reconcile the absurd sayings of the Vedas, such as the following:—

"The Fire willed let me become many; the Waters willed let us become many."—Chhandogya Up., VI. 4. &c.

"These Pranas quarelling among themselves went to Brahma and asked who was the best amongst them.— $Br.\ Up$ .

The elements like fire, &c., are non-sentient objects, and to say that they willed or quarrelled, is as reasonable as to say that the sons of a barren woman held a discussion. Therefore, one portion of the Vedas being proved unauthoritative, the portion relating to Brahman being the cause of the world, is also without authority. The Pradhana is, therefore, the cause of the world.

श्रभिमानि व्यपदेशस्तु विशेषानुगतिभ्याम् ॥ २ । १ । ५ ॥

स्तिनानि Abhimani, the presiding deity of the elements, &c. व्यवस्थः, Vyapadeśaḥ, pointing out of, denotation of. g Tu, but. शिक्ष Viśeṣa, on account of distinction, because of being so qualified. The epithets applied to these elements show that the superintending devas are meant. The subsequent passage expressly shows that the devas entered into them.

5. The words fire, &c., however, denote there the superintending devas, because the epithet "Deva" is mentioned there, and the statement that they entered these elements prove it also.—141.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" shows that the doubt above raised is being removed. In the phrases "the fire willed," &c., the conscious superintending devas of these elements are meant, and not the unconscious elements. Why do you say so? Because of the specific epithets "deva" is given therein. In those very passages we find that Fire, &c, are called devas. Thus the whole passage is given below to understand the argument.

सरेव सेम्पेदमप्र वासीरेकमेवाहितीयं तदौक बाहुरसरेवेदमप्र वासीदेकमेवाहि-तीयं तस्मादसतः संजायेत ॥ १ म

1. The Sat alone was in the beginning, one only, without an equal. About this the others say, the Asat alone existed in the beginning, one only without a second. From that Asat was produced the Sat.

कृतस्तु अलु सोम्येवं स्यादिति देशाय कथमसतः सजायेतेति सत्वेय सेामेदमम जासीव्देकमेवादितीयम् ॥ २ ॥

2. But, O child, how could it be thus, said the father. How from Asat should be born the Sat. Therefore, the Sat alone existed; O child, in the beginning, one only, without an equal.

तरैक्षत बहुस्यां प्रजायेयेति तत्तेजेाऽस्त्रत तत्त्रेज येक्षत बहुस्यां प्रजायेयेति तद्याः उत्तरत ।।

8. He thought "I shall assume many forms and create beings." He created Fire. The Fire thought "I shall assume many forms and create beings." That created the waters.

ता भाप पेक्षन्त बहुचाः स्वाम प्रजावेमहीति ता सन्तमस्यान्त ॥

4. The Waters thought "We shall assume many forms and create beings." They created the Food.

सेयं देवतेश्वत इन्ताइमिमास्तिश्चो देवता स्रमेन जीवेनात्मनाऽतुप्रविदय नामक्ये व्याकरवाकीति ॥ २ ॥

2. That God thought "these three Devatas are well-created; now I shall enter into them with that aspect of mine called the Living Self, and shall develop name and from."

Thus the specific epithet of the Devata is applied to these three, and so they cannot mean inanimate elements, but are sentient beings, or cosmic Intelligences.

Similarly, the quarrel about the Pranas refers to the devatas, as the following extract will show:—

"Next follows the recognition of the pre-eminence of the Prana by the other devatas. All the devatas contending with one another to assert their own pre-eminence, went out of the body. It lay like a piece of wood. Then speech entered into it. It spoke and lay down still. Then the eye entered into it, when it spoke and saw, but still lay down. Then the ear entered into it, when it spoke, saw and heard, but still lay down. Then the mind entered into it, when it spoke, saw, heard, and thought, but still lay down. Then the Prana entered into it, when it immediately got up. All these devas knowing the Prana to be pre-eminent and fully comprehending Him as the Conscious Self went out of this world with all these." Kausitaki Up., II. 9.

Thus here also the epithet Deva is applied to these senses. Consequently the quarrel was among the devas of the senses and not between unconscious sense organs.

Not only the specific epithet Deva is applied to these, but in another Upanisad we find that the devas entered into these elements. &c, in order to regulate their activities. Thus in the Aitareya Arnayaka II, 4. 2. 4:—

ता पता देवताः सृष्टा चस्मिन् महत्वर्षवे प्रापन्। चप्तिर्वाग्भृत्वा मुखं प्राविशत्। बायुः प्राचे। भूत्वा नासिके प्राविशत् । चावित्यप्बश्चर्भृत्वाऽस्तिकी प्राविशत्। दिशः स्रोतं भूत्वा कर्जी प्राविशन्।

- Those devatas, Agni and the rest, after they had been created, fell into this great ocean.
- 4. Then Agui having become speech, entered the mouth. Vâyu having become scent, entered the nostrils. Âditya having become sight, entered the eyes. The Dis, having become hearing, entered the ears.

Thus it shows that the superintending devas of senses are meant by the terms Agni, &c. This entering of the devas constitutes another reason for holding that sentient entities are meant, and not unconscious elements, &c. Similarly, the Bhavişya Purāṇa is to the same effect:—

पृथिकाचिममाभिन्यो देवताः प्रचिताजसः । ग्रविन्याः शक्तयसासां हृदयन्ते मुनि-मिक्च ताः ॥

"The superintending devas of earth, &c., possessed of mighty powers, and inconceivable energies are actually seen by the sages."

Similarly, the phrase "the stones float, &c.," are to be explained as praises of the devas within them. And, as a matter of fact, they did float on the water when Sri Râma bridged the ocean. The devâs held up the stones and made them float on water. Thus there is nothing unauthoritative in the Vedas. Consequently the Vedânta teaching, that Brahman is the sole cause of the universe, is firmly established, and is not open to objections raised by the Sânkhya.

Adhikarana V.—Brahman the material cause of the universe established by reasoning.

(Objection.)—The Sankhya comes to the attack again, this time not relying on the texts, but on pure ratiocination, and says that Brahman cannot be the material cause of the universe. It is true, that the Sankhya himself admits that in matters transcendental, relating to the true nature of the Self and of cosmogony, &c., reasoning is of little avail, and must be abandoned in favour of the Sruti. It has the following aphorism:—

भृतिचिरोधात् न कुतर्कापसद्दयारमलाभः ॥

Sruti, the sacrad Revealation Virodhat because of the conflict or contradiction, not. Kutarka bad reasoning. Apasadasya, of the inferior person. Atma-labhah, attainment of the Self.

"The attainment of the Self cannot take place by mere false reason...g, because opposed to the Scripture."—VI. 35.

This homage paid by the Shakhya to Sruti is merely a lip homage, for the Saakhya appeals to Sruti merely to find fault with his opponent. The doubt raised is to this effect.

(Pûrvapakşa).—The opponent says that Brahman cannot be the material cause of universe, because the world is of a different nature from Brahman. Brahman is conceived to be Omniscient, Omnipotent, Allpure and possessing pure joy as His nature. The world, on the other hand is admittedly seen to consist of ignorance, impotence, impurity, and sorrow. Thus there is no dispute that the two, the God and matter, are diametrically opposed to each other in their nature. It is a fact of daily experience that the effect has the nature of the cause. Just as a jar or a crown, or a piece of cloth have the same nature as the clay, or the gold or the threads of which it is made. Therefore the world being of a different nature to Brahman, cannot have him as its material cause. We must, therefore, search out some appropriate material cause of the world. And that we find in the Pradhana alone. The world consists of joy, sorrow and delusion, and for such a world, the Pradhâns consisting of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas is the most appropriate cause. "But," says the Vedantin, "we explain this by positing the existence of two energies (Saktis) consisting of Spirit and Matter, and both dwelling in Brahman, and thus there is no difficulty in understanding how this world, as an effect, proceeds from Brahman." But this also does not solve the difficulty. The world still remains of a different character from its material cause, the Brahman. From a very subtle material cause, like the two energies, Spirit and Matter, it is not easy to explain how this gross world, that we see around us, comes into existence. Similarly, there are other differences between the world and Brahman. Therefore, the world has not Brahman for its material cause; because it is essentially different from Brahman; and the Scripture must, in matters worldly, take the help of Reason to ascertain the truth. This then is the Pürvapakṣa.

(Siddhanta).—The next Sûtra answers this objection.

SUTRA II. 1. 6.

दृश्यते तु ॥ २ । १ । ६ ॥

राको Drisyate, is seen. The coming out of the gross from the subtle is a matter of experience, सु Tu, but.

6. But it is seen, (that a thing totally different from another may be the material cause of that thing).—142.

COMMENTARY.

The word "but" removes the doubt above raised. The word "not" of Sûtra II. 1. 4. is understood here also. The statement that the world cannot have Brahman for its material cause, because it is of a totally different nature from him, is not correct; because it is seen in everyday experience, that things entirely different in their essential natures, stand as material cause and effect. Thus the rise of different qualities from things of different nature. (As the quality of intoxication arising from sugar.) Or as the birth of living worms from the dead honey. Or as the coming out of elephants and horses from the tree of all-desire. Or of gold from the philosopher's stone. Referring to this coming out of matter from the Spirit, the Atharvanikas say:—

यथोर्चनामिः स्वते गृहते च यथा पृथिकामेष्ययः सम्मवन्ति । यथा सतः पुरुषत् देशकामानि तथाऽसरात् सम्मवति। विश्वम् ॥ ७ ॥

"As the spider stretches forth and gathers together its threads, as herbs grow out of the earth, as from a living man come out the hair, so from the Imperishable comes out this universe.—Mundals, I. 1. 7.

Adhikarana VI.—Non-being not the First cause.

An objector again comes forward and says:—If the material cause be different in its essential nature from the effect, if Brahman differs in nature from its effect, the world; then it means that the cause and effect being essentially different, the world before its origination was non-existent in Brahman, the cause. In other words, the world was a nothing (Asat), before origination and the one (Brahman) only existed then. But you, who hold that the world is a real effect, and is real, cannot hold this view.

To this the author replies:

SÛTRA II. 1. 7.

म्रसिवति चेत्, न, प्रतिवेधमात्रत्वात् ॥ २ । १ । ७ ॥

श्चलत् Asat, non-existing, absolute, nothing. द्वाति Iti, thus. चेतृ Chet, if, न Na, not, प्रतिदेश Pratisedlia, a denial, a prohibition. नानवात् Matratvat, because, merely.

7. If it be objected, that the world is then an absolute unreality, we say no, for there was merely a denial in the previous Sûtra of the sameness of nature between the cause and the effect, and not that the two are substantially different.—143.

COMMENTARY.

The objection raised by the opponent is no real objection. Because the denial in the previous Sûtra was only with regard to the rule that the cause and effect must be of the same nature essentially. It was not meant that the substances of the two should also be different. (Thus the effect of the union of oxygen and hydrogen is essentially different in qualities from the two gases but there is no substantial difference between the effect. water and the cause, oxygen and hydrogen. The substance is the same.) Our position is that Brahman himself becomes modified into the world. and then manifests different characteristics. The meaning is this. you say that because there is difference of nature between the cause Brahman and the effect world, and therefore, Brahman cannot be the material cause of the world, do you mean to say, that because all the attributes of Brahman do not a re-appear in the effect, therefore, the effect is not due to Brahman, or do you intend to say that because only some characteristics appear and the others do not, therefore Brahman is not the cause. You cannot mean the first, for then there would be no such thing as cause and effect, for the cause and effect are not identical in all characteristics. The very relationship of cause and effect implies that there is some difference between them. For though the lump of clay be the cause of the jar made out of it, yet the jar does not possess the lumpiness of the clay, but has a different form altogether. If, however, you mean the second, and say that no characteristics of Brahman appear in the world, you are evidently wrong. For Brahman is Sat or Being, and this characteristic of His re-appears in the world, for the world possesses existence. Nor can you say, that because these particular attributes of Brahman do not appear in the world, such as His joyousness, etc., therefore, the world is not His effect. You cannot pick and choose the qualities at random, for then anything may become the cause of any other thing; and everything will be the cause of everything else, and the law of causation would be reduced to absurdity.

Says an objector, we do not hold any such absurd position. But we demand that the particular attributes which differentiate the cause from other objects, should re-appear in the effect, for the relation of cause and effect is constituted by the persistence in the effect of those characteristic points which differentiate the cause from other things. The characteristics by which the thread differs from gold, persist in the cloth manufactured from the thread, and in the bracelet made from gold.

To this, we reply, that this is not an invariable rule. For this rule is violated in the production of worms from the honey, and so on. Nor is gold in every respect the same as the bracelet; there is the difference of condition between the two. Though the world and Brahman are different, as the philosopher's stone is different from gold, yet they have this in common, that both are essentially one in substance, as the gold and bracelet. Therefore, the world, though an effect, is not unreal.

The Sankhya opponent comes forward now with another objection:

SÛTRA II. 1. 8.

श्रपितौ तद्रत् प्रसङ्गादसमञ्जसम् ॥ २ । १ । ८ ॥

चपीतो Apitau, at the time of pralaya or the great dissolution in re-absorption. तसूत् Tadvat, like unto that, like the effect. The cause would become like the effect, when the effect is re-absorbed in it at the time of pralaya. वसूत्र Prasaugat, on account of the consequences. चत्रकासन् Asamamjasam, inappropriate.

(Objection).—If Brahman is the material cause of the universe, then in pralaya, when the world is re-absorbed in Him, Brahman would have all the consequences of the world (tainted with all its defects), and thus the Vedânta texts would become inappropriate.—144.

COMMENTARY.

If Brahman, with His subtle energy consisting of Spirit and Matter, is the material cause of the world,—a world full of misery and many a defect, injurious to the progress of the human soul;—then when it is re-absorbed in Brahman, at the time of pralaya, Brahman would become tainted with all the concomitant consequences of matter. The force of vat in the Sûtra is that of ivz or 'like.' As the world is not the final object of man, (for admittedly the goal is different) so the Brahman would not be the goal of man. For in the state of pralaya the world being one with Brahman, the latter will have all the defects of the former. (As the pungent assasfætida when mixed with any condiment, scents the whole food with its pungent and disagreeable smell.) That being so there would arise inappropriateness, for all those Upanisad texts which declare that Brahman is Omniscient, free from taint, etc., would become contradicted Thus, for this additional reason also, Brahman is not the material cause of the world.

SÜTRA II. 1. 9.

न तु दृष्टान्तभावात् ॥ २ । १ । ६ ॥

न Na, not. हु lu, so, but. ह्हान्स Dristanta, instances, illustrations. आसूत्र Bhavat, because of the existence of.

9. But this is not so; as there are instances to this effect.—145.

COMMENTARY.

By the word "tu," the possibility of the objection is set aside. There is no inappropriateness in the Brahman's being the material cause of the universe. For there are instances to show that the cause is not tainted by the defects of the effect. Though the world is full of misery, etc., yet the Lord God is all pure, etc. He remains always untouched by evil. As in one picture, the different colours, like the blue, yellow, etc., remain in different parts of the canvas, and do not overlap each other; so the qualities of the world remain in their proper locality in Brahman. Or, to take another instance. As youth, childhood, and old age, which are attributes of embodied beings, belong to the body only and not to the embodied Self; or the attributes of the blindness, deafness, etc., belong to the senses and not to the embodied Self; so the defects of the world do not appertain to Brahman. Thus all those modifications belonging to matter and antagonistic to the highest end of Man, appertain to the energies of Brahman, and are attributes of His Energies (Saktis) and remain in His Saktis and do not pervade the pure Brahman. We hold that Brahman is the material cause of the world. This theory is not only free from any objections, but the opposite theory of the Sankhyas, that the Pradhana is the material cause of the world, is open to the following objection:—

SÛTRA II. 1. 10.

स्वपन्ने दोषाच् च ॥ २ । १ । १ • ॥

Svapakse, in his own side, in the theory of the Sankhya himself.

10. The objections raised by the Sankhya to the Vedanta theory apply with equal force to the Sankhya theory itself.—146.

COMMENTARY.

"O Sankhya, the faults that you find with our theory, are to be found in your theory as well. These have been pointed out in another place." One fault found is that the Upadana or the Cause is different from the effect, or the world. In the Sankhya also the same objection applies. Pradhana is conceived to be void of sound and the rest. The world generated by Pradhana has the attributes of sound, &c. Thus the Cause is different from the effect here also. The effect thus being different from the cause, the objection that the effect is non-existent, and unreal re-Similarly, when in the state of re-absorption, all objects merge into Pradhâna and become one with it, there is pervasion into the Pradhâna of all the effects of the world, and so the objection raised in Sûtra 8 applies to Pradhana also. Similarly, all the objections raised against the Brahman theory apply to the Pradhina theory as well. The Brahman theory deduces the creation from a conscious Being or Spirit; the Pradhana from unconscious matter. Moreover in the Pradhana theory of creation, the very motive of creation falls to the ground; for the Pradhana being unconscious, can have no motive at all. This will be mentioned in greater detail, when examining that theory later on.

The author now shows that the scriptures, when supported by ratiocination, are the cause of ascertaining the truth, and consequently reason has its proper place in this system.

SÙTRA II. 1. 11.

11 2 1 2 1 22 11

- तर्क Tarka, reasoning, ratiocination, controversial reasoning, समितिशाल Apratisthanat, because not having any fixity or finality. स्वि Api, also. सन्वर्ध Anyatha, otherwise, contrary. अनुनेदम Anumeyam, to be inferred, inferable. स्ति 1ti, thus. चेत् Chet, if. एवं Evam, thus. सपि Api, thus, also. सिनोंच Anirmo sa, want of release. ससूह: Prasangah, consequence.
- 11. If it be said that there being no finality about reasoning, it is always possible to infer the truth of the opposite; we say "no," for then the undesirable consequence would follow that there would be no final release also.—147.

COMMENTARY.

Owing to the differences of the brains of men, their reasoning powers are also different. There is no finality about reasoning. A position established by reason by one man, is found to be demolished the next day by the stronger intellect of the other man. Therefore, showing no regard to reasoning, we must believe Brahman to be the material cause of the world, because the Upanisad teaches so. Even with regards to the acknowledged great thinkers, there is no finality about their reasoning also. Great thinkers like Kapila, Kapāda, &c., are seen to refute each other.

(Objection).—Nor can it be said that there is no reasoning which is absolutely unassailable, for then the reasoning by which argumentation is held to be non-conclusive would itself become invalid. If every reasoning be inconclusive, then all worldly activities would come to an end. Human activities are all based upon inference, the future is predicted from the present, and past. The actions which have been found pleasant or painful in their results in the past, are followed or avoided, by reasoning alone. For it is inferred that they would produce the same consequences, in the future also.

(Reply).—In this view also, the existence of Release would not be established. A proposition established by pure human intellect, unaided by intuition, is always liable to be set aside by a higher intellect, born in another time or place. Release, therefore, can never be obtained by methods evolved by human brain, but is to be found by Upanisad method only.

It is perfectly true, that in certain secular matters, reasoning is absolute (such as mathematical reasoning); but in matters transcendental, such as the existence of God, of after life, of final Release, &c., the pronouncements of human intellect can never be perfectly free from doubt; because these are matters not within the scope of mind; they are beyond its scope. For Brahman is inconceivable, and consequently unarguable. If you allow reasoning in the matter of Brahman, then you not only contradict the Sruti, but your own assertion becomes incongruous. For says the Sruti:—

नेवा तर्केष मितरापनेया प्रोक्तान्येनैव सुवानाय प्रेष्ठ । याम्बमापः सत्यपृतिर्वतासि स्वाहक्त्रो भूयाचिकतः प्रदा ॥ ९ ॥

"This belief which thou hast got, cannot be brought about nor destroyed by argument. When taught by the True Teacher the Self becomes easily realised. O dearest, strong is thy resolution. Enquirers like thee, O Nachiketas, are not many." Katha Up.,
I. 2. 9.

The Smriti also is to the same effect:-

क्रवे विवृक्ति भुनयः प्रशान्तात्मेन्द्रियाशयः। यदा तदैवासत्तर्के स्तिरोधीयेत विष्युतम् ॥

"O Risis! the sages with their body, senses and mind tranquil, realise that Truth, but when it is overwhelmed with dry reasoning, it vanishes."

Therefore, as Sruti is the highest authority in matters of Law (Dharma), so also it is the only authority, in matters theological (Brahman). Of course, the reasoning auxiliary to Sruti is always allowed, for the word Mantavya, used in the Sruti itself, shows that Brahman should be mantavya or reasoned about also. The Smriti also says that one must interpret a passage of law by reasoning and looking to all that precedes it and follows it. See Manu, XII. 106.

Adhikarana VII.—Kanâda and Gautama refuted.

The author has refuted the arguments of the Sankhyas and the Yoga philosophers as regards God being the operative cause only and not the material cause of the world. Now he refutes the Smritis of Kanada and Gautama, and answers the objections brought forward by them. According to Kanada and others, if Brahman be taken to be the material cause of the world, then those philosophies would find no scope at all. For, according to them, the bigger atoms are formed by the aggregation of smaller atoms. When two small atoms unite they give rise to a molecule called dvianu or a dyad, and so the triad, &c. The whole world is made up of atoms, which are the ultimate material cause of the universe and not the Brahman or Prakriti. Brahman being supposed to be all-pervading, cannot be the material cause of the world, for it is limited.

(Siddhanta.) -To this the author replies by the following satra:-

SCTRA 11, 1, 12,

एतेन शिष्टा परिव्रहा ऋषि व्याख्याताः॥ २ । १ । १ ॥

एतेन Etena, by this, by the above reasoning विद्याः श्रीकृते, the remaining systems like those of the Atomists. अवशिवदाः Aparigrahap, not acknowledged by the Vedas, not accepted of the Vedas अपि Api, also. आकार्याः Vyakhyatap, are explained or refuted.

12. Hereby other systems not in harmony with the Vedas, are also refuted.—148.

COMMENTARY.

The word sistân means the remaining. The word aparigranant means those systems which do not acknowledge or accept (parigrana) the Vedas as authority on these matters, but which rely on reason alone; and which are not countenanced by the Veda. The Sûtra teaches that by the demolition of the Sânkhya doctrine given above, the remaining theories not comprised within the Vedas are also refuted, such as the theories of Kanada and Aksapada, &c., for they are opposed to the Vedas on these points. The reasons are the same as in the case of Sankhya.

Nor is there any fixed rule in the theory of the Arambha Våda that this is the minimum with which a thing must commence. For we see it contradicted in the case of a cloth commenced with a large thread in a double cloth; and in the case of sound born of åkåsha.

We give below an extract from the commentary of Râmânuja, to show the exact bearing of the question treated in this section. The translation is from Dr. Thibauts' Vedânta Sûtras, Râmânuja.

"Here however a new objection may be raised, on the ground, namely, that since all these theories agree in the view of atoms constituting the general cause, it can not be said that their reasoning as to the causal substance is ill-founded. They indeed, we reply, are agreed to that extent, but they are all of them equally founded on Reasoning only, and they are seen to disagree in many ways as to the nature of the atoms, which by different schools are held to be either fundamentally void, or non-void, having merely cognitional or an objective existence, being either momentary or permanent, either of a definite nature or the reverse, either real or un-real, &c. This disagreement proves all those theories to be ill-founded, and the objection is thus disposed of."—Rāmānuja.

Thus even as regards the nature of the atom, there is no unanimity of opinion. Kanada and Gautama hold it to be permanent, while the four Schools of the Bauddhas hold it to be impermanent.

Note: -- The Vaibhasika Bauddhas hold that the atoms are momentary but have an objective existence, (kṣanikān artha-bhūtān). The Yogachāra Bauddhas hold it to be merely cognitional (juana-rapan) The Madhyamikas hold it to be fundamentally void (sunya-rapan) The Jainas hold it to be real and non-real (sad-asad-rapan).

The author raises another objection and disposes it off

SÛTRA II. 1. 18.

13. If Brahman be the material cause of the world, then there would be no distinction between the Enjoyer (Jiva) and the Lord. To this we reply, it need not be so, as we see in ordinary life.—149.

COMMENTARY.

(Objection).—Your opinion is that Brahman as possessing the subtle energy is himself the material cause, and as possessing the gross energy he is even the effect. Let us see whether this view is sound or not. Now energy is not different from the substance of which it is the energy; therefore the Jiva, the subtle energy of Brahman, is not different from Brahman. Thus your theory of the two energies of Brahman, lands you into this contradiction. Thus it follows that the Jiva and Brahman become one. Therefore, the texts like "two birds" "when it sees the other as the Lord," &c., become null and void and the difference established by them is ignored.

(Reply). --To this objection we reply: --It is not so. Even in ordinary life, the energy is seen different from the person possessing it. Thus a man armed with a sword is a single man, but the sword is different from the man, though it represents the energy of the man. Therefore, Brahman possessed with Sakti is nothing more than Brahman, yet the Sakti is different from Brahman. Thus there is no fault in this theory of Brahman and His two Saktis.

Adhikarana. VIII. -The world non-different from Brahman.

Now the author wishes to establish that though the world may be considered as having Brahman for its material cause, yet it does not follow, that the world is the same as Brahman. In the previous Sûtra II, 1, 7, and other subsequent Sûtras, the non-difference of the world from Brahman was assumed, and it was on this assumption, that the proof was given that Brahman was the material cause of the world. The present Sûtra raises an objection against that very non-difference, and then proceeds to refute it,

The question is: —Is this world, which is an effect, different from Brahman or is it not different? The followers of Kanada hold the view that the effect is always different from its cause. Their reasons are as follows:—(1) The difference of ideas. For cause and effect are the objects of different ideas. For a lump of clay, which is the cause, is a different idea from the jar, which is its effect. (2) The difference of words. The word "jar" applied to the effect, is never applied to the "lump" of clay which Thus the cause and effect are not only represented by different ideas in our minds, but by different words also. (3) The difference of adaptibility. Thus a jar is used in fetching water from the well, while no water can be fetched in a lump of clay. (4) The difference of forms. The cause clay is a mere lump in shape; the effect, namely the jar, has a different shape, with a broad neck, etc. (5) The difference of time. The cause is prior in time, the effect is posterior. Thus for all these reasons. the effect is different from the cause. If it were not different, then the activity of the person producing the effect would be useless. If a jar be the same as a lump of clay, then the activity of the potter is useless. For a jar would come into existence in spite of such activity. If it be said. that the effect, although always existing, is at first non-manifest; and then is manifested; so the activity of the agent is necessary; and thus activity is not purpose-less: this view also is not correct. The question arises. does the effect exist before manifestation or does it not? Or is the manifestation existent or non-existent prior to the activity of the agent. The manifestation cannot be existent prior to such activity, for then that activity will be purposeless, and it would follow that the effect should be ever perceptible. Moreover, this would result in removing the distinction between the eternal and non-eternal things. If it be assumed that one manifestation requires another manifestation to account for it, then we are driven into a regressus in infinitum. If it be held that manifestation is non-real (Asat) then we lapse into the theory of the asat-karyvada; according to which the effect does not exist before its origination. Therefore the parvapaksa is that the effect is different from the cause, and that activity of the agent is not necessary for the production of the effect, if the effects were unreal. Therefore, the Naiyayikas hold that from a material cause. which is Asat, is produced an effect which is Sat.

SÛTRA II. 1. 14.

तदनन्यत्वमारम्भग्रशब्दादिभ्यः ॥ २ । १ । १४ ॥

वह Tat, therefore, from that, from Brahman the cause of the world. सक्यान Ananyatvam, a non-difference, the identity. सार्वास Ârambhaṇa, the word arambhana as found in the Chh. Up. सम्बादिन: Sabdadibhyaḥ, from the words the beginning of which is the term Arambhaṇa.

14 The non-difference of the world from THAT (namely, from Brahman is established in those verses of the Chh. Up.) which commence with the word Ârambhana—150.

COMMENTARY.

The word Tat means from that, namely from Brahman, the material cause of the world, and who possesses two saktis called the Jiva and Prakriti, the Spirits and Matter. This world is verily an effect, which is not at all anything other than its cause, namely Brahman. How do you know this? We learn it from all those passages which commence with the word Arambhana. We give those passages below:—

चौ इनेतकेतुर्दांवनेय चास तछ इ पितावाच इनेतकेता वस महाचार्य न वै सीम्याऽद्यार कुछीने।ऽनन्द्य महानर्जुारव भवतीति स इ हाददावर्ष उपेल बतुर्विछ।इति-वर्षः सर्वान् वेदानघोत्य महामनाः चनुष्वानमानी स्तन्ध प्याय तछ इ पितावाच इनेत-केता यम्ब सोम्येदं महामना चनुष्वानमानी स्तन्धोऽस्युत तमादेदामशस्यो येनाभुतछ। भुतं मदलमतं मतमविद्यातं विद्यातमिति ।

- (1) Harib, Om. There lived once Svetaketu Âruṇeya (the grandson of Aruṇa). To him his father (Uddâlaka, the son of Aruṇa) said: "Svetaketu, go to school; for there is none belonging to our race, darling, who, not having studied (the Veda), is, as it were, a Brāhmaṇa by birth only."
- (2) Having begun his apprenticeship (with a teacher) when he was twelve years of age, Svetaketa returned to his father, when he was twenty-four, having then studied all the Vedas, conceited, considering himself well-read, and stern.

सदेव साम्येदमम् मासीदेकमेवाद्वितीयम् । तदेशतः बहुस्याम प्रजापेय ॥

That which is Being (i.e., this world which now, owing to the distinction of names and forms, bears a manifold shape) was in the beginning one only (owing to the absence of the distinction of names and forms). He thought may I be many, may I grow forth.—(Chh. VI. 2. 3.)

The whole of this is thus explained by Rāmānuja:—For these texts prove the non-difference from Brahman of the world consisting of non-sentient and sentient beings. This is as follows. The teacher, bearing in mind the idea of Brahman constituting the sole cause of the entire world and of the non-difference of the effect from the cause, asks the pupil, 'Have you ever asked for that instruction by which the non-heard is heard, the non-perceived is perceived, the not-known is known'; wherein there is implied the promise that, through the knowledge of Brahman the general cause, its effect, i.e., the whole Universe, will be known? The pupil not knowing that Brahman is the sole cause of the Universe, raises a doubt as to the possibility of one thing being known through another, 'How then, Sir, is that instruction?' and the teacher thereupon, in order to convey the notion of Brahman being the sole Universal cause, quotes an instance showing that the non-difference of the effect from the cause is proved by ordinary experience, as by one clod of clay there is known everything that is made of clay?' the meaning being 'as jars, pots, and the like, which are fashioned out of one piece of clay, are known through the cognition of that clay, since their substance is not different from it.'

In order to meet the objection that according to Kanada's doctrine the effect constitutes a substance different from the cause, the teacher next proceeds to prove the non-difference of the effect from the cause, by reference to ordinary experience 'Vachdrambharam vikaro namadheyam mrittikety em antyam." Arambhanam must here be explained as that which is taken or touched (a-rabh-a-labh; and 'alambhah sparsahimsayoh'); compare Panini III, 3, 118, as to the form and meaning of the word. 'Vacha,' "on account of speech," we take to mean "on account of activity by speech"; for activities such as the fe ching of water in a pitcher, are preceded by speech, 'Fetch water in the pitcher,' and so on. For the bringing about of such activity, the material clay (which had been mentioned just before) touches (enters into contact with) an effect (vikara), i.c., particular make or configuration, distinguished by having a broad bottom and resembling the shape of a belly and a special name (namadheya), vis., pitcher, and so on which is applied to that effect; or to put it differently to the end that certain activities may be accomplished, the substance clay receives a new configuration and a new name. Hence jars and other things of clay or clay (mrittika), i.e., are of the substance of clay, only, this only is true (satyam) i.e., known through authoritative means of proof, only (eva) because the effects are not known as different substances. One and the same substance, therefore, such as clay or gold gives occasion for different ideas and words only as it assumes different configuration, just as we observe that one and the same Devadatta becomes the object of different ideas and terms and gives rise to different effects, according to the different stages of life, youth, old sge, &c., which he has reached. The fact of our saying 'the jar has perished' while yet the clay persists, was referred to by the Pürvspakşin as proving that the effect is something different from the cause, but this view is disproved by the view held by us that origination, destruction, and so on, are merely different states of one and the same as causal substance. According as one and the same substance is in this or that state, there belong to it different terms and different activities, and these different states may rightly be viewed as depending on the activity of an agent. (Dr. Thibaut.)

If it be held that the pot is different from the clay, there would arise objections as to their having double weight, &c. The weight of a lump of clay being one unit, and that of the pot another; when it is weighed in the balance, the weight ought to be double. (But the jar does not show any increase of weight. Thus the substance remains the same. The jar is not the lump of clay plus jar, but the same lump). So also in other respects. (The chemical analysis of jar shows the same materials as that of the lump of clay.)

The jar is not an effect like the illusion (vivarta) of silver in the shell. For silver is found to exist separately as a distinct substance from the mother of pearl.

Thus also is answered the objection of those persons who say that the word and 'iti' in mrittika iti era satyam is useless.

Nor can you say that the theory of manifestation (ablivy kti) has no scriptural authority for it. For we find in the Bhagavata Purana the following:—

करपान्ते काळखडेन याञ्चेन तमसानृतम् । समित्रकक सगदिदम् स्वयं रोषिः स्वरोषिया ॥

"At the end of the Kalpa, the self-luminous Lord manifestes (abhivyansk) this world which was covered with blinding darkness wrought by Time, through Ris self-luminious Power (Chitrakti)."

Nor is this theory open to the two objections of (1) accomplishing a thing which is already accomplished, (2) and regressus in infinitum. For it is not acknowledged by us that manifestation existed prior to the activity of the agent. Nor do we acknowledge that one manifestation requires another manifestation to manifest it and so on.

Says an objector:—If so, then you are open to the objection of maintaining the theory of asatkârya (namely, that the effect does not exist before its origination). For the activity of the agent manifests the effect which did not exist before: and thus the activity of the agent creates the effect. To this we reply, this is not so. The activity of the agent produces manifestation, but does not produce the effect—for the manifestation is not effect. The effect is that which has the power of self-manifestation.

Manifestation is proved by the substratum of which it is the mani-In other words, the manifestation of the substrate constitutes the manifestation of the world. But the manifestation in the form of sansthana Yoga is a constant manifestation and thus there is no fault in the theory set out by us. On the other hand those who maintain that an effect is the result of a cause which is Asat or non-existent (in other words. that an effect is altogether different from its cause) are wrong, because it is not capable of any proof and is self-contradictory. For if it were so, then the result will be as follows:—the effect will be non-existent before the activity that manifests it, and consequently anything would be the effect of any other thing, and everything would produce the same effect and everything would come out of everything else. Since non-existence is present everywhere, and an effect before its manifestation is non-existent. according to you, therefore an effect can be produced from anything. Thus not only oil would be extracted from sesamum, but we shall get milk from the same seeds also. Because oil being non-existent in the seed, and being the result of the activity of the agent, milk may be extracted, likewise. from the seed by the same activity. Moreover the theory is open to another objection. If the effect were altogether non-existent prior to its orgination; then production of a thing would be agentless. Nor can you say that some energy inherent in the cause would regulate the particulareffect which that cause would produce, for there can be no relationship between an existent cause and a non-existent effect.

Moreover we have the following dilemma also:—Does the origination originate itself or does it not? If the first, then there is regressus in infinitum; for one origination we require another origination to originate it, and so on. In the second alternative the effect being non-existent and non-eternal, the origination becomes impossible. Thus both these alternatives are wrong. It would follow also that we must perceive an effect always or must not perceive it at all. If you say origination being itself an origin, what is the necessity of imagining another origin for it; then we say it is the same thing as the theory of manifestation; and in that case the theory of origination and the theory of manifestation become identical.

The author now shows from further arguments that the effect is non-different from the cause by the following aphorism:—

SÛTRA 11. I. 15

भोष Bhave, in the existence, in the alternative that the effect exists, प्. Cha, and. उपनक्षे: Upalabdheh, because of the perception.

COMMENTARY.

In the effects, like a jar or a crown, we perceive the existence of the clay or gold which are the causes of the effects called jar and crown. In fact, the recognition of the clay, etc., in the jar, etc., would not have been possible had the effect been absolutely different from its cause. An objector may say, but we do not recognise the cause in the elephants. horses, etc., which are produced from the Kalpa tree, for there is nothing in common between the tree, and its effect, horses, elephants, etc. To this we reply, that there is no force in this objection. Here also there is the recognition of the cause in the effect. The Kalpa tree is a physical object, and so also are the horses and elephants; therefore, as far as the physical matter is concerned, the recognition is possible. But-savs an objector-there is no recognition of fire in the smoke and smoke, being the effect of fire, ought to show fire in it. To this we roply, that smoke is really the effect of damp fuel, which when coming in contact with fire throws off its earthy particles, in the form of smoke. That the smoke and the fuel are identical, and that we can recognise the fuel in the smoke, is proved by the fact that smoke has smell as well as the fuel, and the smell is generally of the same kind as that of the fuel.

Or, because of the existence of the effect, which is posterior in time to the cause, in which it exists, even from before, as an identity.—152.

COMMENTARY.

The effect is non-different from the cause for this additional reason also that before its manifestation it exists in latency in the cause. Thus says the Sruti:—"Being only was in the beginning." So also says the Smriti:—

नीहिचीजे यथा मूळं नासं पत्ताक्षुरी तथा। काण्डं केशांलधा पुण्यं सीरं तद्वच तण्डुकः ॥ तुषः कथाइच सम्तो वै यान्खाविमांबनात्मनः। मराइदेतुसामगीमासाय मुनिससम ॥ तथा कर्मास्वनेकेषु वेवाधालनकः स्थिताः। विष्कुशक्तिं समासाय मराइमुपयान्ति वै।। स च विष्कुः परंजद्वा यतः सर्वमिष्कं जनत्। जनव वे। यतस्वेवं यहिमंद्व जनमेष्यति।।

As in the seed of barley, there exists in latency, the root, the stem, the leaf, the bud, the carpels, the ovary, the flower, the milk, the rice, the husk, and the seeds; they manifest out of the seed when they get proper conditions and materials to manifest them. O best of the sages! Similarly, in innumerable karmas exist all bodies of Devas and others. When they come in contact with Viṣṇu energy they get into manifestation. Verily that Viṣṇu is the supreme Brahman from whom proceeds all this universe, from whom is the sustenance of this universe and in whom is its dissolution.

We can get oil only from sesamum because it exists in the seed, though in latency, but not from sand because it does not exist in it. Both in the world and in the Brahman the existence is the same, and because in Brahman everything exists so it can come out of it. We have already established previously the identity of the effect with the cause even after the origination of the former. In the next two aphorisms will be established the same identity of the effect with the cause, even after the destruction of the effect and its merging into the cause.

it as non-being, we reply it is not so, since the word Asat or non-being refers to another attribute of the effect and does not mean absolute non-existence, as would appear from the complementary passage of that text.—153.

COMMENTARY.

An objector says:—Let it be so, but we find the following passages also in the Sruti:—

यसहा रदमप्र पासीत्।

Asat was this verily in the beginning.—Taitt. Up., Il. 6. 1.

Here we see that the effect is called Asat or non-being, and consequently the effect does not exist in the cause at the time of pralava, and vanishies absolutely. To this objection we reply that this is not so, for the word Asat used in that passage does not refer to absolute non-existence, as you take it to mean, but it refers to another attribute of the effect, namely:-non-manifestation. The word Sat and Asat should be understood as referring to two attributes of one and the same object, namely, to its gross or manifested condition and subtle or unmanifested condition. An object existing as cause is in subtle condition, and existing as effect it is in gross condition, therefore the word Sat means the gross condition of an object, and Asat means the subtle condition. Thus the word Asat here refers to the subtle condition of the object and is the designation due to another attribute of the object as different from the gross condition. But how do you expiain the word Asat which literally means non-being as meaning here the subtle condition. We do so in order to make the sense of the passage consistent with what follows in the same text. For further on we find the following: - (We give the whole passage here in order to understand the reasoning).

ससद्वा १६मम सासीत्। तते। वै सद्जायतः। तदात्मान्छः स्वयमकुरतः। तस्मा-चत्सुहतमुख्यतः १ति । यद्वै तत्सुहतम् ।

Asat indeed was this in the beginning, from it verily proceeded the Sat. That made itself its Scil, therefore it is said to be self-made.

The words "Asat made itself its Self" clears up any doubt as to the real meaning of the word Asat. For if the word Asat meant absolute non-being, then there will be a contradiction in terms; for a non-being can never make itself the Self of anything. Similarly, the word "Asit" or "was," becomes absurd when applied to Asat, in the sense of absolute non-being, for absolute non-being can never be said to exist and was means existed. An absolute non-being can have no relation with time, past or present, nor can it have any agency as we find in the sentence "It made itself its Self." Therefore the word Asat here should be explained as a subtle state of an object.

COMMENTARY.

The cause of our thinking and saying "the jar exists" is the fact that the lump of clay assumes a particular form of a neck, hollow belly, etc., while the material remains the clay only. On the other hand we think and say "the jar does not exist" when the clay takes a condition opposite to that of the jar, namely, when it is broken into two pieces, etc. Therefore, existence and non-existence, when applied to objects, show their different conditions only, and non-existence in this connection does not mean absolute non-existence. The Smriti also declares the same fact, as we find in the Vishnu Purana:—

मही घटलं घटतः कपाछिका च चुर्वरजस्ततोऽसः ॥

The clay assumes the form of a jar, the jar becomes a potsherd, which in its turn, when broken into pieces, may be reduced into powder as dust, but the clay remains the same in all these conditions. The further analysis of the dust would reduce into atom of the physical plane, but the matter never vanishes.

Therefore the reason is this that we do not perceive any absolute non-existence of the jar and when we say that the jar does not exist, we only mean that the jar has been resolved into its two halves or into a still more fine condition; there is no absolute annihilation of the jar; this is the reasoning or yukti.

The word Asat being thus explained, the word Sat is its opposite, and thus non-being and being really mean the subtle and gross state of matter.

As regards the other text, we find it in the well known passage of the Chliandogya Upanishat:—

सदेव सोम्य १दमप्र प्रासीत् । एकमेबाद्वितीयम् ।।

The being alone existed in the beginning, one alone without a second.

Thus both through reason and authority of the Vedic text, we come to the conclusion that the word Asat used in the Taittiriya passage does not mean absolute non-existence, like the non-existence of the horn of a hare, but it means the subtle condition into which all objects are resolved at the time of pralays. When this world merges into the supreme Brahman, in a very subtle state, that condition of the Universe is called non-being or Asat, on account of its extreme subtleness. Therefore we come to the conclusion that even prior to its origination the world existed, and thus the effect is not different from the cause, but is the cause in a different form. The saying: - "non-being can never come into being because of the impossibility, nor being can be the result of the activity of an agent, because of the futility of such agency, but the whole process of creation is an indescribable mystery" is a wrong statement, and proceeds from not understanding the true significance of the words 'being' and 'nonbeing' as applied in the Upanisats. For there does not exist something inexplainable different from Sat and Asat :- namely the maya of the Mayavading. The latter hold the theory that mava is neither being nor non-being but something different from both and is utterly inconceivable.

The author now gives some illustrations, in order to confirm the doctrine that effect is something real and is not different from the cause.

8ÛTRA II. I. 19.

पटवचा। २।१।१॥

quq Patavat, like a piece of cloth. Cha, and.

19. And as a piece of cloth is not different from its threads, so the effect is not different from its cause.—155.

COMMENTARY

As the materials of a piece of cloth existed from before in the form of threads, and as these threads, when arranged in a particular way lengthwise and crosswise manifest the cloth, similarly this whole universe existed as the subtle energy of Brahman, and when Brahman desires to create, it assumes manifestation as the external world. The word "And" of the Sûtra shows that other illustrations like the seed and the tree may be given here also.

SÛTRA II. I. 20.

यथा च प्रागादिः ॥ २ । १ । २० ॥

प्या Yatha, as. च Cha, and. शासारि: Pranadi, the vital airs called Prana, apana, vyana, samana and udana.

20. And as the different vital airs are modifications of the chief Prâna, so the effect is not different from its cause.— 156.

COMMENTARY.

As in Yogic trance induced by Pranayama or control of breath, all the various life functions such as respiratory, digestive, etc., cease for the time being, and these separated functions known as Prana, Apana, etc., merge in the main Prana, and exist in latency in it, but when the Yogi comes out of the trance, these functions manifest themselves and come out of the same chief Prana, and take possession of the various organs such as the heart, lungs, etc., and manifest their different functions; similarly at the time of Pranaya, the universe loses all its specific differentiations and merges in the subtle energy of Brahman, but exists in Brahman in that aspect, and at the time of new creations it emerges from Him, because He desires to create, and then assumes different forms called the Pradhana, the Mahat, etc.

The word "and" in the Sûtra indicates that the last illustration of the piece of cloth, and the present one of the life functions, should be read together as one illustration. In fact, there are no illustrations anywhere with regard to the theory that the effect is something non-real, and different from the cause (Asat-karya-vada). No one has ever seen the birth of a son of a barren woman, nor the sky-flower, for these are contradictions in term. Therefore Brahman, though one only, has two energies, the subtle and the gross, the one consisting of all the aggregates of egos (Jivas) and the other of all the aggregates of matter (Prakriti). In other words, Brahman has two energies called Spirit and Matter, and possessing these two energies Brahman Himself is thus the material cause of the universe, and consequently the universe as the effect is not different from the Brahman, but has Brahman for its Self. Thus is established the proposition that the effect is non-different from the cause. But Brahman, though manifesting as an effect, retains through His mysterious attributes, all His powers in their fullness, that He possessed before manifestation. The manifestation does not cause any decrease in Brahman. As says the Smriti (Vişnu Purana.)

कों नमा बासुदेबाय तस्मै भगवते सद्। व्यतिरिक्तं न यस्यास्ति व्यतिरिक्तोऽ विकास्य यः॥

Om, salutation to that adorable Lord Vasudeva, than whom there is nothing greater but who is above all this universe.

Adhikarana IX.—Brahman, the operative cause.

In the Sûtra I. 4. 23, it was shown that Brahman was the material as well as the operative cause of the universe. In the Sûtra II. I. 6 and the rest have been answered the objections raised to the view that Brahman was the material cause of the universe, and by answering such objections, the author has strengthened the former view. He now confirms the latter view also, by showing that none but Brahman is the operative cause of the universe, and he answers the objections of those who hold that Mukta Jivas are creators of universes.

One side holds the view that Brahman is the operative cause of the universe, because of the texts like the following:—

कर्तारनीयन्

He is the agent, He is the Lord and He is the Creator.

The other side who hold the view that Mukta Jiva is the creator of the universe, quote the following text in support of their position:—

श्रीबार भवन्ति मुतानि

All beings arise from the Jiva.

They maintain that if Brahman were the Creator of the universe, it would detract from His perfection, because the world is full of imperfections. Therefore, they maintain that Mukta Jivas alone create the universe.

Thus arises the doubt—Is God the Creator of the universe or is some highly developed Mukta Jiva its cause, because we find texts supporting both positions?

This doubt the author removes by the following sûtra, showing that no Jiva, however high, can ever produce the universe.

इतरव्यपवेशाखिताकरणाविवोषप्रसक्तिः ॥

2 | 2 | 22 |

हतर Itara, of the others. Of those who maintain the view that the Jiva is the creator of the universe. Or "itara" may mean "of the other, namely, of the Jiva as agent of the universe." ध्यवेशात् Vyapadesat, from the designation. हिल Hita, good, beneficial सकरवादि Akaranadi, not creating, etc. शेष: Doṣaḥ, imperfection, fault. श्रवक्ति:, Prasaktiḥ, result, consequence.

21. If the other view be held that Jîva is the creator of the universe, then the result would be, that the creation would be liable to the objection that the Jîva creates intentionally that which is not beneficial to it—157.

COMMENTARY.

Those who hold the view that Jiva is the creator of the world must answer the objection "why does it create a world which is not beneficial to it." If man creates the world, why does he create it full of imperfections, through which he suffers. If man is the master of his own destiny, and there is no Lord to award the results of good and bad actions, and if man alone was the creator of his world; then he certainly would not create it such, which he knows would be painful to him. The world, therefore, is the creation of no man, because we find that it has the fault of not doing that which is beneficial to man; on the contrary doing that which is non-beneficial to him. Thus no man willingly wants to labour, etc., but the conditions of the world are such, that no man can live in it without labouring and undergoing troubles, etc. The world, therefore, is not the creation of any man. No wise and independent person is ever seen to create his own prison-house, like the silk worm, and after creating such a house enter into it wilfully, to suffer all the miseries of confinement. Nor does any human being, being himself pure, would voluntarily enter into a body full of all impurities. The man, prior to creation, being supposed to be free and pure, voluntarily confines himself into a body of flesh, full of impurities; and enters into a self-created world where he has no freedom of action. Nor has any one ever seen any Jiva to create the Cosmic matter called Pradhana or the matter of the Buddhic and Ahankaric planes, nor the matter of the physical plane Fire, air, ether, etc., are the production of no man. In fact, the brain of man reels in even contemplating the wonderful organism of this universe. Therefore, the theory that, the world is man-made is wrong. On the other hand, it is God alone who is the Creator of the universe, and the objection why He has created the world full of imperfections while He Himself is perfect, will be answered later on.

But an objector may say that if Brahman be the creator, then He also is liable to the objection of creating a world full of misery, and with great effort, and after such creation He has entered into it and thus He also voluntarily creates a world of misery, and then entering into it, lives in it. To this the author replies by the following sûtra:—

म्राधिकं तु भेदनिर्देशात् ॥ २ । १ । २२ ॥

चित्रस् Adhikam, greater than the Jiva, Brahman is greater than the Jiva. हु Tu, but. श्रेट Bheda, difference. निर्देशस् Nirdesat, because of the pointing out.

22. But Brahman is greater than Jiva, because the scriptures declare His difference from the Jiva.—158.

COMMENTARY.

The word "But" sets aside the doubt above raised. Brahman is greater than man, because He possesses vast power and consequently is something infinitely superior to man. The entering of the Brahman into the world which He creates is no bondage to Brahman, while the entering of man into the world, if created by the man himself, is a cause of bondage of man. The difference between man and God is distinctly taught in the scriptures. Thus in the Mundaka: Upanişat:—(3. 1. 2)

समाने वृक्षे पुरुषो निमन्नोऽनीशया शोषति मुझमानः । स्रष्टं यदा पद्यस्यम्यमोशमस्य महिमानमिति बोतशोदः ।।

Though seated on one and the same tree, the Jiva bewildered by the Divine Power sees not the Lord and so grieves. But when he sees the eternally worshipped Lord and His glory, as separate from himself, then he becomes free from grief (and fit for Mukti).

This verse clearly shows the difference between the Jiva, full of sorrow and delusion, and the Supreme Self, full of great Lordliness and glory.

So also in the (lita (XV. 16 and 17 verses): --

हाविमी पुरुषो स्रोके सरस्थासर एव च । सरः सर्वाचि भूतानि क्टस्योग्सर उच्यते ॥ उत्तमः पुरुषस्त्वन्यः परमारमेखुदाहतः । यो क्षेकित्रयमाविदय विभाग्यय्य ईम्बरः ॥

There are two sorts of Jivas in this world, the bound and the free; the bound are all these beings, and the free are those who rest in the Rock of ages.

The Highest Parasa is verily Another, declared as the Supreme Self, He, who pervading all, sustaineth the three worlds, the indestructible Lord.

Similarly, in the Vişnu Purana (Book J, Chap. II, Verses 16 & 24):
प्रधानपुरुवण्यक्तकालानं परमं हि यत्। पर्यन्ति स्त्यः शुद्धं तहिष्योः परमं पद्म् ।
प्रधानपुरुवण्यककालास्तु प्रविभागशः। कपाणि स्थितिसर्गान्तव्यक्तिसङ्गावदेतवः ॥
विष्योः स्वकपात् परतादि तेऽन्ये । कपे प्रधानं पुरुवष्य विष्र ।
तस्यैव तेऽन्येन भूते वियक्ते । कपेव यतत्व द्विज कालसंबम् ॥

He who is higher than matter (Pradhana), Jivas, manifested world and time, He is the highest Vişnu, about whom the acriptures declare "The wise see the highest pure form of that Lord Vişnu." Matter and Jiva are distinct from Vişnu though they are also two aspects of Him. That aspect by which the Lord brings about the union of spirit with matter, at the time of creation, and their separation from each other during dissolution, is called Time. (Thus the supreme Vişnu has four aspects, the root of matter called Pradhana, the root of spirit called Puruşa, the manifested universe called Vyakta and the time called Kâla).

Similarly, in the Bhagavat Purana:-

पतवीशनमीशस्य प्रकृतिस्थोऽपि तद् गुवैः। न युज्यते सदारमस्येवेथा दुविस्तदास्रवा ॥

This is the glory of the Lord, that His devotees, though plunged in all defiling matter, are not defiled by its contact, nor bound by her energies, because their mind is always refuged in the Lord.

Moreover in the satra I. 2. 8, it has been shown that the Lord though living in the world and in the Jtvas is not tainted by this contact. Thus the Lord possessed of inconceivable and infinite power creates the world by His mere will, enters into it in order to sport in it, and with it; and when it begins to decay, He destroys it and rejuvinates it, just as a spider. By such a creation, etc., of the world, there does not accrue to the Lord the slightest taint.

An objector says: - Man and God are however one in essence, the difference between them is that of degree alone, just as the difference between the space confined within a jar and the infinite space outside it. Space is one and not different. To this we reply, it cannot be so, because we do not admit that the supreme Brahman is liable to division or limitation like space (we cannot cut off a portion of Brahman and say the so much is Jiva and the other is Lord). Nor is the Jiva and Brahman related like the reflection of moon in the water and the moon in Heaven. "Reflection no doubt does not possess all the glory and the perfection of the original and man being a reflection of God is lower than God, but essentially the same." But we do not admit this, because the Lord being formless, it is impossible that there should be any reflection of Him. Reflection can be of matter only, no one has ever seen the reflection of spirit. The third illustration, given by the Advaitins that of the King's son is also inapt. A king's son brought up among the shepherds, considered himself so and never knew his lineage. Once a wise man passed that way and told him thou art not a shepherd's child but the son of the king. No sooner he heard it, his delusion vanished and he realised his own Similarly, so long as man is overpowered by ignorance, he thinks himself man, but when knowledge comes, he knows that he is God. To this we reply, that God being one, according to this theory, and man being essentially God, the delusion which a man is under must be the delusion which affects (dod, and thus it detracts from the Omniscience and Omnipotence of God. There existing no other being but God, the ignorance which makes man thinkh imself separate from God, and a distinct individuality, must be an ignorance indwelling in God Himself. God is thus subject to delusion and illusion.

SÛTRA II. I. 28.

भ्रश्मादिवस तवनुपपत्तिः ॥ २ । १ । २३ ॥

जरनारिक्तं Asmādivat, like stone etc. च Cha, and. तस् Tat, of that. जनुपत्तिः Anuppattib, impossibility.

23. And as stones, etc., are not creators of the universe, so the Jivas, which are equally finite, have no power to create the world, for it is impossible that any Jiva should create the world, just as it is impossible for a piece of iron, wood, etc.—159.

COMMENTARY.

The Jiva though sentient is as much non-independent as a piece of stone, or wood or iron or a clod of clay; and consequently it is not possible for such a Jiva to be the creator of the world out of himself. The Sruti also says that the Lord is the creator as the following text:—

चन्तः प्रविद्यः शास्ता वनानाम् ।

" He is the ruler of all beings, He is within every body."

Similarly, GitA also says: -

ईम्बरः सर्वभूतानां हद्देशेऽर्ज्जन तिहति । भ्रामयन् सर्वभृतानि यंत्राक्डानि मायया ॥

"O Arjuna, this Iswara, dwelling in the hearts of men, makes them work by His mysterious power, and causes them to revolve, as though mounted on a potter's wheel."

SÛTRA II. I. 24.

उपसंद्वारवर्शनान्नेति चेत् चीरवद्धि ॥ २ । १ । २४ ॥

हचर्चहार Upasanhara, completion, bringing to an end. वर्णनाइ Darsanat, because of the seeing. Na, न not. इति Iti, thus. चेत् Chet, if. न Na, not. चीरवह Kṣīra-vat, like milk. The word वह has the force of an instrumental case here: See Sūtra of Panini. नेन तुन्धं किया. &c हि Hi, because.

24. If it be said that Jiva is the creator because we see him bringing to conclusion many acts, we say it is not so, as is the case with the milk.—160.

COMMENTARY.

The Jiva is not perfectly inert like a piece of stone, etc., he has the power of action, because we see him bringing to a finish any act that he commences. Nor is this agency of the Jiva a delusion, because there is nothing to show that the Jiva is not the real agent in the acts that he does. If it be said let the Jiva be an agent, but he is an agent only subordinate to the will of God, we reply it is not so, for we have first to imagine a God, whom we do not see in the world, and next to add further that he is the mover of all other sentient beings of the world; the theory therefore that God is the inciter of all souls to action is wrong, on account of its very clumsiness. Therefore, the Jiva himself is the agent, through his own self-initiated activity, and not because he is impelled to action by any external laws.

To the objection raised in the last paragraph the author replies by saying, it is not so, for as in the case of milk. Because the Jiva has the power of agency only so far as the cow produces milk. The cow has no power of her own to produce milk, for the production of milk is not a voluntary act of the cow. It is the prana force that is primary agent in the production of milk, as says the Suriti, "it is the prana that changes the food into various humours of the body such as chyle, milk, etc." Similarly, though we see the Jiva producing some effect, yet he is not independent in his act. The primary agent is the supreme Lord. This will be futher explained in Sûtra II. 3. 39, where it will be shown that the activity of every Jiva proceeds from the Highest Self as its cause.

If it be said that we do not see the hand of God in the acts of men, to this the author answers by the next Sütra.

SÛTRA II. I. 25.

देवादिवदिति लोके ॥ २ । १ । २४ ॥

देशादिवस् Deva-adi-vat, like devas and the rest. The word Vat has the force of sixth case here. श्रीते Iti, thus, Another reading is. श्राचे Api, 'also,' कोडे Loke, in the world.

25. God, though invisible, is the creator of the world, just as the devas, though invisible, are seen to work in the world.—161.

COMMENTARY.

Devas like Indra, etc., are not visible, yet we see their activities in the world, such as the production of rain, etc. Similarly, God though not perceptible in the world, is the unseen creater of it.

The author now gives another reason to show the absurdity of holding any Jiva to be the author of the universe.

SÛTRA IL L 26.

क्रुत्सप्रसिक्तिरवयवत्वराब्दव्याकोपो वा ॥ २ । १ । २६ ॥

क्षा Kritsna, entire, complete. अवाधिः Prasaktib, employment, activity. विस्वयस्य Niravayavatva, without form, without members, indivisible, without parts. अवाधि Sabda, text, व्याकीयः Vyakopab, contradiction, violation, stultification. वा Va, or,

26. Either the Jiva is entirely absorbed in every activity, or else there would be a violation of the text that Jiva is without parts.—162.

COMMENTARY.

He who holds the theory that the Jiva is the creator, must accept the conclusion that inasmuch as the Jiva is without parts, its entire self is present in every act. But this cannot be said, because in raising a light thing like grass, etc., we do not see the employment of the entire force of the Jiva. When the Jiva puts his entire self into any action, all his power is manifested therein. As in raising a heavy stone, the Jiva puts in all his power, but he does not do so in raising a light straw, and so the exertion in raising a straw is infinitely less. Nor can you say, that in the latter case, the entire Jiva is not active but only a portion of it. Because it is an admitted fact, that Jiva is partless. Therefore, we cannot say that the entire Jiva is present in the act of raising a stone but only a portion of it is present in raising a straw. You may say, where is the harm if you admit that the Jiva has parts. To this we reply that then you will be stultifying all those texts of the scripture which declare that the jiva is without parts, as for example:—

This self is atomic and is to be known by mind alone in which the chief prana has completely withdrawn his five-fold activities. The mind of all beings is entirely interwoven by these five pranas and is consequently never quiet. But when the mind is perfectly pure, then the soul manifests its powers.

Thus the soul is atomic and consequently partless. As regards those texts which say that the world is produced by the Jiva, we have already explained that the word Jiva there does not mean the individual soul, but the living Lord. Therefore, the theory that the Jiva is the creator of the world is untenable.

Now we shall consider whether the above two objections apply to the agency of Brahman. The objector may say that Brahman is also entire and indivisible, therefore if in all acts He puts Himself in His entirety than in raising straw, etc., He will employ His entire powers, but that is not possible, because it is done by a fraction of His power, or rather it is possible to be accomplished by a portion of His power. On the other hand, if He puts in only a portion of His power in any activity, then there is violence done to those texts which declare Brahman to be partless and actionless

Thus the same two objections apply in the case of Brahman being the agent, as in the case of the Jiva. To this the author replies.

SÛTRA II. I. 27.

श्रुतेस्तु शब्दमूनस्वात् ॥ २ । १ । २७ ॥

चतः Brutch, from the scripture, on account of revelation. ह Tu, but.

27 But the above defects do not apply in the case of Brahman, because the scriptures so declare it, and the Word of God alone is the root from which we learn anything about these transcendental subjects.—163.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" removes the above doubt. The word "not" is understood in this Sûtra, and is to be drawn from II. I. 24. In the case of Brahman being the agent, the above imperfections do not apply. Why do we say so, because the scripture declares it to be so, such as:—Brahman is transcendental, inconceivable, pure knowledge and yet He has a form, He is possessed of knowledge; and though He is one, He is manifold also, and though He is partless He has parts, and though He is immeasureable He is yet measured. He is the creator of all, yet unmodified Himself. Similarly, in the Mundaka Upanicad, III. 1. 7.

बृह्य तिह्यमिष्यक्षं स्थाय तत् स्थातरं विभाति । बृशास्त्रकृरे तिवृहान्तिके च पश्यस्तिवेद विदितं गुहायाम् ॥ ७ ॥

The Lord shines forth as great, divine and inconceivable. He appears as smaller than the smallest, He is far off as well as near, and to the discerning. He is verily here in the cavity of the heart.

This text also shows the paradoxidal and transcendental powers of Brahman. Similarly, another text says:—Lord Govinda is without parts, is one, His form is mere existence, intelligence and bliss. While another text says:—He has a crown of peacock hair, has a very pleasant form and unobstructed intelligence. In the Gopála Upanisad we read, though one He shines forth as many. In the Mandukya Upanisad we find Him described as partless and yet having parts.

समात्रोऽनन्तमात्रस्य है तस्योपद्यमः शिवः । स्रोकाराः विदिता येन स मुनिः नेतरा सनः । स मुनिर्नेतरा सनः ॥ He who knows the Lord as parties and yet full of infinity of parts, as the destroyer of all false knowledge and blissful, is verily a sage and no one else; he is verily a sage and no one else.

Similarly in the Kathopanisad (II. 21) we find Him described as measured though immeasureable:—

चासीने। दूरं मजति शयाने। याति सर्वतः । कस्तस्मदामदग्देचं मदन्या दातुमदीत ॥ २० ॥

Sitting He goes afar, resting He moves everywhere, who other than my Self is able to know that God who is the dispenser of pleasure and pain.

So also Rig Veda, 10 81. 3 (Svet. Up. III. 3) says :—
सर्वतः पाकिपादं तत् सर्वताऽसिशिरामुक्य ।
सर्वतः भृतिमद्धोके सर्वमादृत्व तिष्ठति ॥
विभवतस्वश्चदत विभवता मुना विभवता बाहुदत विभवनस्पात् ।
संवादश्या वमति संवतवैद्यावाभूमो जनयन् देव एकः ॥ ३॥

That one God, having His eyes, His face, His arms, and His feet in every place, when producing heaven and earth, forges them together with His arms and His wings.

So also in Svetasvatara Upanisad, IV. 17:-

वर देवी विश्वकर्मा महात्मा सदा जनानां हृदये सविविष्टः । हृदा मनीवा मनसाऽ-सिक्क सो व व्यक्तितुरस्तास्ते मदन्ति ॥ १७ ॥

This God is the creator of all, is the Highest Self. He is always present in the hearts of men, with heart of love and the mind concentrated, the wise who know Him verily become immortal.

स विश्वकृतिश्वविदाससयोगिकः कास्रकाका गुजी सर्वविद् यः । प्रधानक्षेत्रकपति-गुँबेकः सञ्चारसोक्षवितिकश्वदेतुः ॥ १६ ॥

He is the creator of all, He is the heart of all, the source of âtman, the Omniscient, the Creator of time, possessed of all anspicious attributes and knowing all. He is the Lord of all matter and spirits, He is the Lord of all gunas, He is the cause of transmigratory existence and release, bondage and freedom.

So also in VI. 19:-

निष्करं निष्करणः शान्तं निरवशं निरश्चनम् । चमृतस्य पर्शः सेतुं दृग्येन्यन-मिवानकम् ॥ १९ ॥

He is partiess and actionless, pure and taintless, all peace. He is the supreme bridge of immortality, He is like fire that remains when the fuel is all burnt.

These texts of Svetasvatara Upanisad show very distinctly the possession by the Lord of powers which appear to us self-contradictory, and hence impossible. But in matters transcendental, we are to be guided by scripture and not by our mere reasoning.

But, says an objector, are we to renounce our reason in favour of scripture, when there is pure contradiction, such as the assertion, the fire has drenched the cloth. Is not such a statement a logical absurdity?

To this the Sûtra replies "Sabda-mûlatvat." The knowledge of Brahman and His attributes being founded on the scripture, and the scripture alone, we have no right to say that the scriptures are illogical, if they describe God as having attributes which are paradoxical. These inconceivable attributes must be accepted by us with regard to Brahman, because the only proof of Brahman is the word alone. Nor is it so mysterious altogether. We see some distant analogy of it in the inconceivable powers of certain gems and charms to produce magical effects. Because a thing is inexplicable or inconceivable, there is no reason to hold it impossible.

To sum up: there are three sorts of proofs, namely: -sensuous (pratyaksa), inferential (anumana) and scriptural authority or the word of God (sabda). In the case of first two kinds of knowledge, there is always room for mistake and hallucination. Thus a sensuous perception may be a pure hallucination, caused either by hypnotic suggestion or disease of the senses. A man may see a person standing in front of him, or the cut off head of Chitra, while as a matter of fact this may be all due to pure hypnotism. Thus "Pratyaksa" or sense-knowledge is not always absolutely reliable. Similarly, the knowledge based upon inference is also liable to error. Ordinarily the proposition is true when we say "there is no smoke without fire:" but in some cases, the person would not be justified in inferring the existence of fire from mere smoke. A great fire, when quenched by water. gives rise to a large amount of smoke, a person seeing such smoke and suffering from cold may go to the place where that smoke is rising from. but will be disappointed when he sees there charred coals and no fire. Thus inference is also liable to error. The only proof which is free from all these possibilities of errors is the word, whether it is the word of God as recorded in the scripture or the word of an inspired sage called Apta or the perfect, or the word of a person who is competent and honest. Thus the statements "There is snow on the tops of the Himalayas, there are gems in the depths of the Oceans" are always true. The word not only corroborates perception and reason, it is sometimes independent of both, and often declares that which neither reason nor perception can ever tell us. Thus a man who has been once deceived by seeing an illusory decapitated head may take a real decapitated head to be an illusion. But when he is told, from the voice of silence, that it is a real head and not an illusion, his ignorance is removed and he gets true knowledge. So also a traveller suffering from cold, may be running towards the place where smoke is rising, thinking that he will find relief there. But a person who knows the real nature of that smoke, may save him from disappointment.

by saying "do not go there, there is no fire, smoke is rising from the fire that has just been quenched by the rains."

The word as an instrument of proof supports and corroborates perception and inference. Thus a man may have a jewel necklace on his throat, but having forgotten it may be searching it everywhere. But when he is told "thou hast the necklace on thy throat;" he is saved all further trouble and anxiety. So also the word is the only means of knowing things which cannot be known either by perception or reason, or at least, which cannot be known by every man by his own perception and reason. Thus the movements of the heavenly bodies and their influences, have been declared to us by the astronomers and the experts in that department. The word, therefore, of these persons is our only means of knowing when a certain celestial phenomenon will take place, such as an eclipse or the rising of a comet. Thus here also we see, that the word is a higher means of knowledge, than our own perception or reason. In worldly matters, the word is admittedly superior in its probative force to perception and reason. Much more is it so in matters other-worldly, where we have to depend on the testimony of seers and saints, and the highest testimony of all, the word of God or Scripture. As says the Sruti:-

"The non-knower of Vedas can never think even of the Supreme." Therefore, the scripture being self-proved, is not open to any objections.

8ÛTRA II. I. 28.

28. And thus is the power of the Self, because manifold objects are seen (to be produced from the tree of all desires).—164.

COMMENTARY.

As from the Tree-of-all-desires or from the philosopher's stone possessing lordly powers and inexplicable mysterious energy, there come out elephants, horses, etc., and as these wonderful creations are mysterious, and are credible simply on the authority of scriptures, similarly is the power of the Âtman, the Lord of all, the Supreme Vianu, who gives rise to Devas, men, and lower beings. If we can believe, on the authority of scriptures, in the wonderful powers of the Tree of-all-desires, or in the philosopher's stone, why should we not believe, on the same authority, in the mysterious powers of the Lord. It is scripture alone that gives us any information of the existence of these mysterious things. We do not question, when animals come out of the Tree-of-all-desire, whether they are created by the entire tree or by a portion of it, or whether any particular part of the tree has power to produce any particular animal. We see and mark the result, and leave the thing as a mystery, admitting that there is no scope for reasoning here. Similarly is the case with the Lord in His creative agency. We should not question whether the Lord is active in His entirety in any particular creative act, or whether it is done by a portion of His energy. We must simply accept the statement as we find it.

The word "Âtmani" is exhibited in the locative case in the sattra in order to show that the Self is the receptacle or support of all effects. The second "cha" is in order to indicate that when such wonderful things are believed by us as the existence of the Tree-of-all-desires, or the philosopher's stone, why should we hesitate to believe in the mysterious power of the Lord. The word "Hi" implies that the facts above mentioned are well known in all these Purâṇas, etc. Therefore, the conclusion is that the theory that Brahman is the agent of creation, is more reasonable than the theory of any Jiva being such agent. The next Sûtra strengthens this view.

SÛTRA II. I. 29.

स्वपन्ने दोषा ॥ २ । १ । २६ ॥

- स्पर्धे. Sva-pakṣe, in one's own view, in the opponent's theory that the Jiva is the creative agent. वायात्, Doṣât, because of the defect of imperfections. प Cha, and
- 29. And because all these objections are similarly applicable to your view also, therefore, it is not to be accepted.—165.

COMMENTARY,

The objection raised by you to our theory equally applies to your theory also. If Jiva is the creative agent, does he create with his entire energy or a portion of his energy. In the case of Brahman, the objection has been answered by us already, but in the case of Jiva being the agent, there is no possibility of getting out of the difficulty.

Now the author raises another objection and answers it. The doubt arises whether Brahman shows any partiality to any Jiva and if so whether it is possible for such a Brahman to be the creator. The text says Brahman is pure truth, knowledge and infinity. He is mere being, etc.

In these texts we do not find any energy attributed to Him. It is seen that beings possessed with energy or power (Sakti) have only the capacity to produce wonderful results, such as a carpenter and others. A man may have the whole knowledge of the art of carpentry, but if he has no power, he cannot accomplish any thing. To this objection, the author answers:—

SÛ TRA II. I. 30.

सर्वोपेता च तर्रानात् ॥ २ । १ । ३० ॥

सर्च Sarva, all, all powers. इतेशा Upeta, endowed with, possessed with, this is a word formed with the affix "trich." The crude form is "Upetri." प Cha, and, alone. सन् Tat, that, the possession of such power. वर्षनान् Daráanat, because it is seen.

30. The Lord alone is possessed of all powers, because it is so seen in the text.—166.

Commentary,

The supreme Self alone is endowed with all sorts of energies (Sakti)
Because we find Vedic texts to that effect —

Svet. Up., I. 3:--

ते ध्यानयागाञ्जगता चपद्वन् देवात्मदाकिं स्वगुवैतिगृहाम् । यः कारवाति निविद्यानि तानि काळात्मयुकान्यचितिष्ठत्वेकः ॥ ६ ॥

They immersed in meditation, saw the self energy of the God, concealed in its own qualities. Who one alone pervades and presides over all other causes, such as time, nature, destiny, etc.

So also Svet. Up., IV. 1.:—

य पक्रेऽवर्की बहुषा शक्तियोगाद वर्काननेकान् निहितार्थी द्याति । विवैति चान्ते विश्वमादी स देवः स ने। बुद्दच्या ग्रुमया संयुनकु ॥

"He who, one and without any colour, creates many colours through His manifold powers, and who places in them all beneficial objects with His purposes hidden, who at the time of Pralaya withdraws within Himself the whole universe. May He endow us with good understanding."

So also Svet. Up., VI. 8:-

न तस्य कार्य्ये करवे च विचते न तत् समस्वम्याविकस्य दृश्यते । परास्य शकिः विविधेव भ्यते स्वामाविकी द्वानवस्रक्रिया च ॥ ८ ॥

There is no effect and no cause known of Rim, no one is seen like unto Rim or better. His high power is revealed as manifold, as essential, and so His knowledge, force, and action.

Similarly in the Smriti we find Him described as possessing powers of various sorts; such as Visnu Sakti is said to be the highest.

No doubt these powers are all inconceivable as says the Smriti:— He is without hands and feet, His power is inconceivable, He is the Lord of Self, not to be found by reasoning, and possessed of thousands of powers. Therefore, it follows that Brahman is the agent in the act of creation, etc., because of His being endowed with infinite and inconceivable powers. The texts declaring that Brahman is the true knowledge, bliss, etc., reveal His essential nature, while on the other hand, the texts like Devâtma Sakti, etc., of the Svet. Up., declare His manifold powers. Consequently the nature of Brahman is one which is endowed with powers. Therefore in the texts "He willed, etc.," "He saw, etc.," we find Him possessed with the power of volition (Sankalpa) and the rest. Both sorts of texts—those declaring Brahman, to be mere knowledge, existence, bliss, etc., and those declaring Him as willing, thinking and creating, etc.,—are of equal validity and authority, because both are Srutis and there is no difference in them as such.

The author raises another objection and answers it again.

(Objection).—Brahman cannot be the creator or agent, because He has no sense organs. Though Devas and others are possessed of powers, yet they are seen to be active agents in creation, because they have got sense organs and not because they have got merely powers. But Brahman is without sense organs, how can He be capable of world activity. Even the same Svet. Up. (III. 19) that you have quoted, to prove the possession of all powers by Brahman, declares definitely that He has no sense organs:—

चपाविषारी जवनी प्रशिता पर्यायवश्चः स श्वात्यकवः । स वेशि वेर्च न च तस्यास्ति वेशा तमाहुरस्यं पुरुषं महान्तम् ॥ १९ ॥

He sees without eyes, He hears without ears, without hands and feet He hastens and grasps, He knows whatever is knowable, but of Him there is no knower; they declare Him to be the first, and the mighty person.

To this objection the author replies:-

विकरणत्वान्नेति चेत्तवुक्तम् ॥ २ । १ । ३१ ॥

विकरस्वासन् Vi-karanatvat, on account of the absence (Vi) of instruments of (Karana) action and perception, that is, on account of the absence of sense organs. न Na, not. इति lti, thus. चेन् Chet, if. तम् Tat, that, that objection.

31. If it be objected that Brahman cannot be the agent of creation, because Hc does not possess sense organs, then we reply that this objection has already been met by the scripture itself.—167.

Commentary.

The objection that Brahman cannot be the agent, because He has no sense organs, is answered by the very text of the Upaniead quoted by you to show that He possesses no sense organs. The three verses of Svet. Up. are given below in order to understand the context (Svet. Up., VI Verse 7 to 9):—

न तस्य करिकत् पतिरस्ति केन्द्रे न वेशिता नैव च तस्य क्षित्रम् । स कारबं करकाधिपाधियो न चास्य करिकक्रानिता न चाधियः ॥ ९ ॥

We know that God who is the adorable Lord of all the worlds, who is the highest Lord of all lords, who is the highest God of all gods, who is the Master of masters and who is Greater than the great one (Prâkriti)—7.

Of Him there exists no (prakritic) body nor sense organs, nor such activity. There is no one equal to Him nor superior. His power is seen to be the highest, and is sung to be manifold—the natural powers consisting of knowledge, force and activity—8.

There is no master over Him in this world, nor any ruler of Him. Nor is there any mark by which He can be known, He is the great cause, the Lord of the lords of the senses, there is no father of Him, nor any lord over Him—9.

Note.—The Logoi like Rudra, Brahma, etc., are called Lords or Iswaras; Indras, etc., are called Devates or Gods, Daksa and other Prajapatis are called Masters or Patis. These are the various classes of divine hierarchies. The powers of the Lord are threefold, called Jäänasakti, Balasakti, and Kriya-sakti. They are innate or sväbhäviki. "There is no mark-of Him" means, there is nothing in this world by which His existence and powers can be inferred, they are known only through revelation.

Though in the verse beginning with "He has neither hands nor feet. etc.," it was mentioned that the Great Spirit did every act without the instrumentality of sense organs, yet the present verses clear up any doubt, that might have remained, as to how there can be any activity without sense organs. This being is called Purusam-Mahantam, the Great Spirit, because He is the Ruler of all spirits. When it is said He has no activity or sense organs or body, it is meant that His body is not made of Praktitic matter, nor are His sense organs of the same. Consequantly His activity is not Prakitic but super-prakritic. When, therefore, the Sruti says He has no karya, it only denies such physical activity, because He certainly does possess activity of the highest order, as He is endowed with paradakti. That dakti or power is natural to Him and hence it is called svabhaviki. In fact, it is the very essence of His Self. It is to this parasakti, this svabhaviki sakti that He manifests His threefold powers, namely, that of Jaana, Bala and Kriya--Knowledge, Force and Activity. Since no one possesses this transcendental attribute, this parasakti, therefore, no one is equal to Him. : It follows from this that no one can be superior to Him. So also, though He is devoid of Prâkritik sense organs, yet He possesses organs which are the essential parts of His nature, and hence there is possibility of activity in Him.

Others say, the above text about His grasping without hands and hastening without feet, etc., does not prohibit the possession by Him of the sense organs. It only prohibits the exclusive use of a particular organ, for a particular purpose. Ordinary beings grasp only through the hand, and can run with the feet. But with the Lord there is no such restriction as regards the sense organs; with Him every organ is capable of being used for the purposes of every other organ. In fact, the same Upanisad further on says that all His organs are universal in their activity. It says:—

सर्वतः पाविषावं तत् सर्वताऽक्षितिरोमुकम्। सर्वतः भ्रुतिमङ्कोके सर्वमावृत्व तिष्ठति ॥ १६ ॥

His hand and feet are everywhere, so also His eyes, head and mouth; He hears everything in the universe because His ears are everywhere. He exists enveloping this all.

So also in the Bhagavata, it is declared that every limb of His is endowed with the power of performing all functions of all the senses. This extraordinary power of the sense organs of the Lord was manifested in His last avatara of Sri Krisna, at the time of forest-picnic, in Brindavana, among His companions of boyhood. In this view of the above verses, the word "Karyam" should be explained as "to be accomplished." In other words, when the Sruti says there is no "Karya" for Him, it means there is nothing to be accomplished by Him, because He is already perfect and full. In this interpretation the word "Karana" or sense organs may be explained as something to be laid down, something to be done. The rest is the same as in the first explanation.

In the next Sûtra, the question is raised, whether Brahman has any motive to create the universe. The prima facie view is that He has no motive, because He is perfect and this view is set forth in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II.I. 82.

न प्रयोजनवस्वात् ॥ २ । १ । ३२ ॥

- श्र Na, not. श्रवेशवनस्थास् Prayojana-vattvat, being endowed with a motive.
- 32. The Lord has no inclination towards creation, because He has no motive.—168.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Na" is understood in this sûtra from the last one. The word "Na-prayojana-vattvât" is a compound word meaning "because being motiveless." The usual form would have been "A-prayojana-vattvât." The Lord can have no urging towards creation, because being perfect, He has no motive to create. In the world, every activity is seen to exist on a motive beneficial either for one's own-self, or for the sake of another. The motive beneficial to His ownself, cannot exist in the case of the Lord, because He being perfect, all His wishes are ever fulfilled, as the scripture repeatedly declares. Nor is His motive to do something beneficial to others, because the creation evidently is for the sake of punishing the Jivas, and making them suffer the pains of birth and death. An all-compassionate Lord would not create a universe, merely to punish the erring Jivas for their misdeeds. And no one creates anything without a motive. Therefore, it follows that the Lord has nothing to urge Him to creation.

This objection is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA II. I. 88.

लोकवत्तु नीलाकैवल्यम् ॥ २ । १ । ३३ ॥

सोसन्त Loka-vat, as in the world, as in an ordinary life. तु su, but. सीसा Ltla, sport, play. क्षेत्रमन् Kaivalyam, merely.

33. The motive of the Lord in creating the world is a mere sport only, as we see in ordinary life.—169.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Tu" removes the above doubt. Though all-full and desiring nothing, yet the motive which prompts the Lord towards the creation of this wonderful world is mere sport only, and has no object beneficial to Him in view. As in ordinary life, men full of cheerfulness, when awakening from sound sleep, begin to dance about without any object, but from mere exuberance of spirit, such is the case with the Lord. This ltld or the sport of the Lord is natural to Him, because He is full of self-bliss. As says the Mandukya Upanisad (kârikā):—

भागार्थे सृष्टिरित्यन्ये क्रीडार्थमिति चापरे। देवस्येच स्वभावाऽयमासकामस्य का स्पृद्धा ॥

Some think that the creation is for the sake of enjoyment (of the Creator), while others think that it is for the sake of recreation, (to shake off the lethargy of the Pralaya sleep or the ennui of the solitude of Pralaya). This (act of creation) of God is His nature (without any motive). What motive can there be for one who has all His desires satisfied?—(Man. Up. L. 9.).

To the same effect is the Smriti (Narayana Sanhita):-

ख्ड्यादिकं हरिनैंव प्रयोजनमपेस्य तु । कृष्ते केवळानन्दाद् यथा मसस्य नर्सनम् ॥ पूर्वानन्दस्य तस्येद्व प्रयोजनमतिः कृतः । मुक्ता क्यासकामाः स्युः किम् तस्या विद्वासानः ॥

The creation, etc., of Hari does not depend on any motive, He does so out of sheer joy, as the drunkard dances through frenzy. He who is full of all bliss can have no motive whatsoever. When even the Muktas have got all their desires fulfilled through Him, what unfulfilled desire can there be in the case of the Lord who is the Self of the universe.

But a man intoxicated with drink has no consciousness of what he is doing. Is the Lord also devoid of consciousness, like the drunkard? For then He would not be omniscient. We do not say so. All that we say is that man does play and become sportive, through the mere exuberance of spirit and sheer joyfulness of life; such is the case with Brahman. The Advaitins explain the words "as we see in ordinary life" by the well-known example of respiration that goes on even in deep sleep, and which is altogether involuntary and motiveless. This analogy however, is open to the objection that Lord is subject to deep sleep and loses consciousness, as man does. The example given by the Visistadvaitins is that of a prince who amuses himself without any motive, at the game of balls. This analogy, however, is open to the objection that playing at a game of balls is not altogether motiveless, for the prince gets some pleasure by the play.

Adhikarana X.—The Lord is neither partial nor cruel.

The author again raises an objection and then goes on to remove the doubt. The theory, that Brahman is the Creator, is open to the objection that the Lord is either partial or cruel; for He creates Devas and men, some of whom enjoy happiness and others suffer misery. This theory is, therefore, not a congruous one. But the texts say that the Lord is neither cruel nor partial. How can then such a Lord be the Creator? To this objection the author answers by the following sûtra:—

SÛTRA II. I. 84.

वैषम्यनैर्घृगयेन न सापेचत्वात् तथा हि दर्शयति ॥ २ । १ । ३४ ॥

विश्व Vaisamya, inequality, partiality. विश्ववेश Nairghrinyena, cruelty. व Na, not. वार्यवास् Sapeksatvat, because the creation depends upon the karma of creatures, because of having regard to karma: ह्या Tatha, so. वि. Hi, because. व्यवित Daráayati, the scripture declares.

34. There exist no partiality and cruelty in the Lord, because the pleasure and pain, suffered by beings, has regard to their karmas, and so also the scriptures declare.

—170.

COMMENTARY.

In Brahman, as Creator, there exists no fault of partiality or cruelty. The differences of condition in which creatures are born, and the pleasure and pain which they suffer, depend on their own karmas, and the Lord creates the environment, in which the creatures are placed, with the strictest regard to such karma. The proof of this is the scripture itself. For in the Kansitakt Upanişad, III.8, we find the following:—

प्य हो देनं साधु कर्म कारयति तं यमन्यातुनेष्येय प्रदेनमसाधु कर्म कारयति तं यमन्यातुनेष्येय प्रदेनमसाधु कर्म कारयति तं

For He makes him whom He wishes to lead up from these worlds do a good deed, according to the tendencies created by his past karmas, and the same makes him whom He wishes to lead down from these worlds, do a bad deed, according to bad tendencies generated by the past karmas.

Note.—Every act of man is really done under the will of the Lord. A man can do a good or bad deed, only if the Lord so wills it, for He is the sole agent in this world. But this world of the Lord is not capricious and lawless. The man who has done good karmas in the past, gets further energy from the Lord to do better karmas in this life, and thus rise higher. It is in this way only that the Lord makes him whom He wishes to lead up from these worlds do a good deed. And so also the reverse. The wish of the Lord has always regard to the karmas of the Jiva.

Jivas get the condition of Devahood through the will of the Lord, similarly they get the condition of the denizens of hell through the same will of the Lord. The Lord is the operative cause of the suffering and the enjoyment of the Jivas. But this will of the Lord has always regard to the karma of the Jivas.

SÛTRA II. I. 85.

न कर्माविभागादिति चेन्नानादित्वात् ॥ २ । १ । ३४ ॥

- म Na, not. आर्थ Karma, karman, actions, acts of the Jivas. श्वित्वानात् Avibhagat, because of non-distinction. श्रीत् Iti, thus चेत् Chet, if. म Na, not, श्वनादित्याद्व Anaditvat, because of beginninglessness.
- 35. (The theory of karma) cannot (explain the inequality and cruelty seen in this universe, because when the creation first started) there was no distinction (of souls and consequently) of karmas. This (objection however) is not valid, because there is no beginning of creation.—171.

COMMENTARY.

An objector may say your theory of karma only pushes the difficulty one step back. No doubt, it explains to some extent the inequalities and sufferings of Jivas in their present life. They may be the results of acts done in the past life. But since in the beginning of creation, there were no Jivas, nor were their acts, they must have been created with inequalities, in order to act differently. If they had been created all equal, there is no reason to hold that their acts would have been different. The Sruti also says "the Being or the God (Sat) alone existed in the beginning, one only without a second" (Chhandogya, VI. 1.). This shows that when the creation started, there was no karman or Jivas, distinguishable from Brahman. He alone existed, all in all. To this objection, raised in the first half of the Sûtra, the next half gives the answer, by saying 'this is not so, because of the beginninglessness.' The karmas and the Jivas are beginningless. just like Brahman, and this is the theory adopted by the author. Thus there is no fault, because every subsequent karma is motived by the tendencies generated by the past karmas. In Pralaya, the karmas, good or bad, done by the Jivas are not absolutely destroyed. The next kalpa is conditioned by the karmas of the past. So also in the Bhavişya Purâna:-

पुण्यपापादिकं विष्तुः कारयेत् पूर्वकर्मवा । चनादित्वात् कर्मवद्य न विरोधः कथञ्चन ॥

The Lord Vişņu makes the Jivas do good or bad deeds in accordance with their past karmas, nor is there any conflict in this position, because the karmas have no beginning.

If you say that karmas being beginningless, the theory is tainted with the fault of regressus in infinitum, we say it is not so, because we find authority for it in reason also. The well-known case of the seed and the tree is in point. Is the seed first or the tree? Nor is it any objection that God being bound to create according to the karmas of the Souls, loses His independence. The Lord certainly is independent, but He is not capricious and whimsical. Had He created the world with perfect disregard to the karmas of the Jivas, He might have proved His omnipotence to some minds, but to the majority, His act would have appeared capricious and cruel. In fact, the authorities clerly show that the substance and karma and time are equally co-eternal with the Lord, and He creates the universe, with a full regard to all these three. It is not only the karma that conditions the universe, but the substance (or the matter stuff), and time are also important factors in creation. Of course, these three are subordinate to lawars. but He never disregards their existence in His act of creation. The Lord is not partial or cruel, or wanting in omnipotence. In fact, the theory of karman and the beginninglessness of creation reconcile all the difficulties. You cannot say that this theory is open to the same objection as the theory of specific creation. You cannot say it is the falling of the smugglers unwittingly into the hands of the tax-collectors.

Note.—Certain merchants, in order to evade customs duties, went by a roundabout way, to avoid the customs house. In the dark night, they missed their way, and after fwandering for some time, they took shelter in a roadside house. In the morning, it was ound that the house in which they had taken shelter, was the customs house which the traders were trying to avoid. Thus they had not only to pay the tax, but punished also for trying to cheat the customs. This maxim is called "Morning in the customs house."

Our theory is not open to this objection of "Morning in the customs house." In order to avoid the imputation of cruelty and inequality to the Lord, we have explained the eternity of creation, and you cannot say that since the Lord is not bound to regard the karmas, because He is independent. His creating a world full of misery, simply to punish the souls for their karmas, brings you back to the same difficulty, which you were trying to avoid. The Lord, being perfectly independent, certainly could have created a world all full of joy, and with complete disregard to the karms of the Jivas. But then His actions, instead of being regulated by any law, would have been lawless, and it would not be a creditable attribute of the Lord. Therefore, His creation of a world with perfect regard to the karms of the Jivas, and to time and substance, does not detract from His omnipotence. But it rather shows forth His great wisdom and compassion. Though He can act against all the laws of matter, spirit and karma, yet He is not doing so, and His making the Jivas act in accordance with the tendencies generated by their beginningless karma, is a matter for His glory, and not an instance of His partiality.

Adhikarana XI.—The grace of the Lord is not partiality.

In the previous Sûtras, it has been shown that Brahman is neither partial nor cruel. Now is taken up the question, whether the Lord by showing special grace to his devotees, is not open to the objection of partiality. It is a fact, that the Lord shows "partiality," to His devotees, for He specially protects them and specifically fulfills their desires. The doubt therefore arises:—Is not this special protection of His devotees and this fulfilling of their want, a mark of partiality in the Lord? He will protect His devotee from the mouth of the lion, but He will allow ordinary men to be devoured by the beast. This objection the author answers by saying that it is not so.

SÛTRA IL L M.

उपपद्यते चाऽप्युपसभ्यते च ॥ २ । १ । ३६ ॥

रप्पात Upa-padyate, it is proved to exist, it is reasonable that it should be so. च Cha, and. उपात्रको Upalabhyate, is found (in the scriptures.) च Cha, and.

36. Such partiality to His devotees is reasonable in the Lord, and is observed also in the scriptures.—172.

COMMENTARY.

The special grace shown by the Lord to His devotees is no doubt "partiality," but the Lord, the kind lover of His devotees, has such "partiality." and it is rersonable that it should be so. It is the natural, inherent power of the Lord, to show forth His grace on those who have Bhakti, and devotion for Him. This special grace is not an arbitrary functioning of the Lord's will, but it also has regard to the factor of bhakti or devotion in the Jiva on whom such special grace is shown. Nor does this conflict with the statement that the Lord is free from partiality. For this sort of "partiality" to His devotees, instead of being a fault in the Lord, has been praised in the scriptures as adding to His glory. For the scripture says that this is the highest jewel among the perfections of the Lord, this grace on His devotees. If the Lord had not this quality of showing special grace, then all His other attributes, however great. would not have been attractive to mankind, and would not have evoked devotion and love towards Him. This shows the reasonableness of the existence of this "partiality" in the Lord.

Not only is this reasonable, but the revelation and the tradition also declare it:—

नायमात्मा प्रवचनेन स्थ्यो न मैथया न बहुना भुतेन। यमेवैच वृत्तुते तेन स्थ्यस्तस्येच प्रात्मा विवृत्तुते ततुं स्वाम् ॥ ३ ॥

This Self cannot be gained by dissertations (devoid of devotion), nor by mere keen intellect, nor by much hearing. It is gained only by him whom the Self chooses. To him this Self reveals His form.

SÛTRA IL I. 87.

सर्वधर्मोपपत्तेश्य ॥ २ । १ । ३७ ॥

हार्च Sarva, all. की Dharma, attributes, qualities. इत्युक्तः Upapatteh, because of the reasonableness, because of being proved. च Cha, and,

37. And because it is proved that all attributes are present in Brahman, however conflicting they may be with each other, therefore He is just to all, and "partial" to His devotees.—173.

COMMENTARY.

It has been proved above, that in the supreme Lord, whose essential nature is inconceivable, there exist all attributes and qualities, whether harmonious in themselves or self-contradictory. It follows that along with His perfect justice and equality, He has this attribute of showing favour and partiality to His devotees. The wise, therefore, do not find any greater difficulty in reconciling the existence of these two heterogenous attributes in Him, than in any other similar pair of attributes which are opposite to each other, and which still exist in him. For example, He is cesentially all-knowledge, and yet possessing knowledge: He is essentially formless and colourless, and yet possessing the most ravishing form that enchants the heart of His devotees; similarly, though He is perfectly just and equal to all, yet he does show favour and special grace to His devotees. Not only the pair of opposites exist in Him. but all harmonious attributes also are to be found in him; such as He is forgiving, kind, compassionate and merciful to all. The Smriti also says to the same effect (Kûrma Pûrana):--

केवर्यवागात् मगवान् विवदार्थोऽमिषीयते । तथापि देश्याः परमे नैवादार्थाः

I PADA, XI ADHIKARANA, 84. 37.

"The Lord is described as possessing self-contradictory and opposite attributes, because He has supreme power. Though He has these attributes, yet no evil or false-hood should ever be attributed to Him. On the contrary, all these conflicting attributes should be reconciled with each other so far as possible.

Thus it has been proved that the Lord though equal to all is yet the friend of His devotees.

Here ends the first pads, of the second Adbyays of the Vedants Sutras and the Govinda Bhasys.

SECOND ADHYÂYA.

SECOND PADA.

े नैति यः सांच्याद् युक्तिकटकाद् । किलायुक्यसिना किनं कृष्कितिसकं स्ववात् ॥

I salute Vyasa, called also Krisna, the island-born, who has removed with the sharp edge of the sword of his reason, the thorny bushes of the heterodox systems, like the Sankhya and the rest, and who has thus made this world a plain ground for the Lord Krisna to play upon.

Note.—The Stakhya author Kapila, as well as the Buddhists and Jainas, maintains that the world is without any God. Kapila says that the world originates from matter (Pradhâna.) The Buddhists maintain that atoms are the cause of creation. The Jainas hold the same view. A class of Buddhists holds the view that the whole world is void, while all three are united in the view that there is no Creator of the world in the sense of a conscious and intelligent being Philosophers like Kapāda (the Author of Vaisesika Sātras) and Patafijali appear to have admitted the existence of a God, but practically they are as atheistic in their tendencies as the Sānkhyas and the rest, because they do not admit the God as taught in the Vedas. Vyāsa, seeing this world full with the thorns of the false philosophies of Kapila and the rest, and finding it impossible that the Lord should tread this earth with Ris soft feet and be not pierced with the thorns, prepared the way for His coming, by cutting away these wild growths, with the sword of his sharp reasoning. The Lord Krisna manifested Himself, after the world was prepared for His coming, by the Vedānta teaching of Vyāsa.

In the first påda of the second Adhyåya, the author has answered the objections raised by his opponents to the system propounded in his sûtras. He had been on the defensive in the last chapter. Now he takes up an aggressive attitude, and attacks the position of his opponents and refutes their systems by proving the uncritical and unphilosophical nature of their doctrines. This was necessary in order to protect the weak-minded from going astray, and from abandoning the ancient highway of the Vedas, and from being attracted by the fallacious agruments of these plausible systems, and wandering in the pleasant labyrinths of these philosophers, and thus losing their way and getting destroyed. The author first takes up the Sankhya system and refutes it.

The Sankhya professor Kapila has made a collection of sutras in which he has enumerated various tattvas or primeval principles or elements of creation. According to him, Prakriti is the name given to the original root of matter, and it is defined by him as the state of equilibrium of the three attributes of matter, namely, Sattva or rhythm, Rajas or activity, and Tamas or inertia. From this Prakriti comes out Mahat, the Great Principle, from Mahat proceeds Ahankara, from Ahankara the five Tanmatras, the two sorts of senses (the cognitive senses and the senses of action) and the gross elements. Thus the twenty-four tattvas are Prakritik, namely, (1) Mahat, (2) Ahankara, (3) to (7) the five subtle elements called the Tanmatras, the Tanmatra of sound, of touch, of colour, of taste and of smell. (8) to (18) the five Jnana-indrivas and the five Karma-indrivas and Manas. The Jnana-indrivas are the senses of hearing, touch, seeing, tasting and smelling; the Karma-indriyas are organ of speech, the hands, the feet, the generative and the excretive organs, (19) to (24) the five elements (ether or akada, air or vayu, fire or agni, water or apas and earth or prithivt). Added to these twenty-four is the class of Spirits or Purusas or Egos. This constitutes the twenty-five tattvas or classes of the Sankhyas. The three primeval qualities-Sattva, Rajas and Tamas when in equilibrium constitute Prakriti. The essential nature of Sattva is joy. of Rajas, pain and of Tamas, delusion. As the world is the effect of these three qualities, we find in it joy, pain and inertness. The same object may possess all these three gunas, at one and the same time, with regard to different persons looking at it, and to the same person at different times. As a beautiful girl is an object of joy to the accepted lover, an object of pain to the rejected rival and an object of indifference to an ascetic; or as a wife, when in good humour, is a source of joy; when in anger, a source of pain, and when away from her husband, a source of delusion. Such is this world full of joy, pain and delusion.

It has been mentioned above, that the senses are of two sorts. Ten of them are external, one is an inner sensory called also Manas; thus altogether there are eleven senses. The Prakriti is eternal and all-pervading. It is the root or the primeval cause, and no further cause of it need be enquired into, as we find in Sûtra I. 67 of the Sânkhyas.

मुक्ते मूकामाचादमूलं मूकम्।

Since the root has no root, the root (of all) is root-less, (that is to say, there is no other cause of Prakriti, because there would be a regressus in infinitum if we were to suppose another cause, by parity of reasoning, would require another cause, and so on without end.)

It is not limited and is the material cause of all. It is all-pervading as asserted in Sûtra VI. 36 of the same.

सवन कायदशमार् विश्वत्वम् ।

She, Prakriti, is all-pervading, because her products are seen everywhere.

Karika (3) says :--

मूकमक्रतिरविकृतिमेददाधाः मक्रतिविकृतयः सतः। वाउदाकस्तु विकारा, न मक्रतिने विकृतिः पुरुषः ॥

The Mûla Prakriti or the Root-matter is not produced. The Great Principle (Mahat) along with Ahankara and the five Tanmatras make a group of seven, which are both producer and the produced. Sixteen are the produced only (the eleven senses and the five elements); and the Spirit or the Egos are neither the producer nor the produced.

To sum up, out of the twenty-five tattvas of the Sankhyas, Mula Prakriti is never produced, though producer of everything else. Its opposite, the Purusa or the ego, is also eternal and never produced. But it produces also nothing, because it is changeless. Between these two poles of Spirit and Matter, lie the twenty-three other tattvas seven of which are both producers and produced, the remaining sixteen being produced only.

This Prakriti, eternally producing everything, herself insentient, but the cause of the enjoyment and liberation of innumerable sentient beings, and though super-sensuous and incognisable by any perceptive means, is yet to be inferred by her effects. Though one, she has many heterogenous attributes, and through her power of modification, she produces this wonderful world, beginning with Mahat and the rest; and thus she is the operative and the material cause of the universe. Purusa, on the other hand, is attributeless, all-pervading consciousness, and separate for every separate body, is to be inferred from the existence of this organised life, because no organised life can exist, but for the sake of something else. As is to be found in Sûtra I. 66:—

संघातपरार्थत्वात् पुरुषस्य।

(The existence) of Soul (is inferred) from the fact that the combination (of the principles of Prakriti into their various effects) is for the sake of another (than unintelligent Prakriti or any of its similarly unintelligent products.) "But the application of the argument in this particular case is as follows:—

- (1) The thing in question, vis., Prakriti, the Great one, and the rest (of the aggregates of the unintelligent) has, as its fruit (or end), the (mundane) experiences and the (eventual) liberation of some other than itself:—
- (2) Because it is a combination; and
- (3) (Every combination), as a couch or a seat, or the like, (is for another's use, not for its own, and its several component parts render no mutual service.)

Since Purusa is free from all action and modification, neither produced by anything, it follows that it is agentless and without enjoyment. Suffering and enjoyment, as well as agency, belong to Prakriti and not Purusa. But the man mistakes the Purusa as agent or enjoyer through illusion. When Prakriti and Purusa come together, their very juxtaposition produces an interchange of attributes among each other; namely, consciousness appears in matter, and agency and enjoyment in spirit. This is Adhyasa or super-imposition, or falsely attributing the qualities of the one to the other. Nature is really unconscious, but the vicinity of Spirit makes it appear as if conscious. On the other hand, the Spirit is neither the agent nor the enjoyer, but the vicinity of matter causes it to look as if it was so. From this want of discrimination, arises all the suffering of the soul, while liberation consists in realising this difference.

The person who has become indifferent to Prakriti has attained Moksa. Such in short is the theory of the Sankhyas. In this system the means of the right knowledge (Pramana) are three, namely:—sensuous perception, inference and testimony, as is to be found in Sûtra 1.—88.

विविधं प्रमायं । तत्सिकी सर्वसिकेनीभिष्यसिकिः ॥

Proof is of three kinds: there is no establishment of more, because if these be established then all (that is true) can be established (by one or other of these three proofs, vis., 'sense (pratyakça), 'the recognition of signs' (anumina) and 'testimony' (sabda), to the exclusion of 'comparision' which is reckoned in the Nyâya as a specially distinct source of knowledge, etc.)

As regards Pratyakan or sensuous perception and testimony we have not much difference with the Sankhyas, because these two things deal with accomplished objects. Our difference with them is as regards certain inferences which they have drawn. By a certain mode of reasoning, they have deduced the conclusion that Pradhana is the cause of the universe; it is this reasoning which is fallacious. If we can refute their arguments about Pradhana being the cause of the universe, we practically refute their whole philosophy, because this is the central point of their system. Their argument regarding this is contained in three Sûtras, namely, I. 130, 131 and 132.

परिमाचात् ।

180.—Because of their measure, (which is a limited one, Mind and the rest are products; whereas the only two that are uncaused, ris., Prakriti and Soul. are unlimited).

समन्यपात्॥

181.—Because they conform (to Pradhāna.) Mind and the rest are products, "because they will (follow) and correspond with Pradhāna, i. c., because the Qualities of Pradhāna are seen in all things:" and it is a maxim that which is the effect is derived from the cause, and implies the cause.)

शकितस्वेति ॥

182.—And, finally, because it is through the power (of the cause alone, that the product can do aught, as a chain restrains an elephant only by the force of the iron that it is made of.)

Doubt.—Now arises the doubt, Is Pradhana both the operative and the material cause of the universe, or not?

The Pürva-pakşin says:—Pradhāna is the operative as well as the material cause of the universe, because the world consists of three attributes of Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, and so we infer that the primal cause also must have in it these three attributes. For nothing can be in the effect which is not in the cause. As we see in the case of jars, etc., that their material cause is clay which belongs to the same category as the jar. Moreover, inert objects can become agents, for we use active verbs in connection with such objects. Such as "the tree brings forth fruits," "the water is moving." Therefore, Pradhāna alone is the material cause of the universe and creator of it as well.

Siddhantu.—To this view the author replies by the following

8ÛTRA II. 2. 1.

रचनानुपपत्तेश्च नानुमानम् २।२।१॥

रचना Rachana, construction. सनुष्योः Anupapatteh, on account of the impossibility. च Cha, and. न Na, not. सानुष्यानम् Anumanam, the Inferred One, namely, Pradhana whose existence we infer from the existence of the world.

1. The Inferred One (Pradhâna) is not the cause of the world, because it is impossible for her to have created the universe (since she is unintelligent).—174.

COMMENTARY.

Pradhana is called 'Anumanan' or the Inferred One, because her existence is purely hypothetical. (Just as the other of the modern scientists is an entity postulated merely to explain certain phenomena, such as those of light, magnetism, etc., so Pradhana is postulated by the Sankhyas in order to explain the cause of the universe.) This hypothetical Pradhana is neither the material nor the operative cause of the world. The world shows wonderful construction and design, and it is impossible for unintelligent matter, to have produced this wonderful universe, without the directive action of an intelligent agent. No one has ever seen a beautiful palace constructed by the fortuitous coming together of bricks, mortar, etc., without the active co-operation of intelligent agents, like the architects, masons, and the rest. The word 'and' in the Sûtra is employed in order to indicate by implication, that the argument based upon Anvaya (undistributed middle) has no proving force.

Note:—The argument based upon Anvaya is a sort of fallacy. For example, to infer that all cows must be white, because whiteness is present (Anvaya) in some cows. Whiteness is merely an accidental attribute. Whiteness is not the cause of the class-characteristic of cows.

Physical objects like flowers, beautiful jars, etc., no doubt, have the presence in them of the quality of producing pleasure. But the feeling of pleasure is altogether an internal feeling, and we cannot say that flowers and pots have the nature of pleasure in them, though they excite pleasure in man. Pleasure is altogether an attribute of the soul and not of matter. So Matter cannot be said to have the quality of joy, or delusion, &c.

Note:-For a fuller discussion of this point see Vedinta Sûtras, Raminuja S. B. S., Vol. XLVIII, page 484.

SÛTRA II. 2. 2.

प्रवृत्तेश्व । २ । २ । २ ॥

ब्रमुक्ते: Pravritteh, because of the activity. प Cha, and. It has the force of "only" here.

2. And because the inert matter becomes active, only when there is the directive action of intelligence in it.—175.

The phrase "of the inert matter, when an intelligent entity is a directing energy" must be supplied in the Sûtra to complete the sense. The activity, properly speaking, aught therefore to be attributed to the directive intelligence, rather than to the inert matter. That which sets matter into motion is the real agent. We do not say that the chariot moves of itself, but that the charioteer is the real mover of the carriage by directing the movements of the horse. Therefore, the phrases like the "tree brings forth fruits," really mean that the Inner Guide, the Supreme Lord directs the activity of the tree, and makes it bring forth the fruits. The fruit, therefore, is really produced by the Lord, through the instrumentality of the tree. This we learn from the scripture, describing the Inner Ruler (see Brihadaranyaka Upanisad. II. 7, 3 to 23.) This will become clearer further on.

The force of and in the Sûtra is that of only. "I do" can be asserted only by an intelligent Self. Every activity is seen as the result of an intelligent agent. Inert matter therefore has no agency. To put it in other words, matter or Pradhana has no self-initiated activity of its own.

If you say that it is possible for the world to have been created by the mere coming together of Spirit and Matter, or Puruşa and Prakriti, and by the mutual superimposition of the attributes of the one on those of the other, then we ask the following question. What is the cause of this superimposition, which takes place by the mere coming together of Spirit and Matter? Does it inhere as a substance in them or is it a modification of Spirit and Matter? It cannot be the first, for in that case the liberated souls would also have this superimposition, for it is one of the innate qualities of Spirit. Nor can it be the latter, for if supe imposition be the modification of l'rakriti, then it itself being an effect, cannot be the cause of its own self. The question therefore remains, what is the cause of this Adhyāsa or superimposition. Nor can it be a modification of Spirit, for according to your system, Spirit is changeless.

An objector says, the milk by its own inherent quality is changed into curd; or the water falling from the clouds though having one taste becomes bitter, sweet, acid, etc., according to the fruit in which it enters, whether it be that of a mango or of a toddy or of Nim, etc. Similarly Pradhana also, though homogeneous like water, becomes modified into different kinds, according as it comes in contact with the different karmas of the jivas. The differences in the bodies and environments, etc., of souls are the effects of the past karmas of these beings. To this the author replies by the fo lowing Sútra.

BÔTRA II. 2. 8.

पयोऽम्बुवश्वेतत्रापि । २ । २ । ३ ॥

प्रस्य. Payas, milk. प्राम्ह Ambu, water, प्रम् Vat, like. चेस् Chet, if. सप Tatra, there. प्राप्त Api, also.

3. If it be said that Pradhana of herself modifies into her various products, like milk or water, without the guidance of any intelligence, we reply, there also the intelligence guides the change.—176.

COMMENTARY.

Even in the case of the change of pure water into different saps and juices, or the change of pure milk into curd, it is the directive action of intelligence that produces the change. And this we infer from the example of chariot, etc. We may not see the intelligent driver of the chariot, but we infer his existence from the inotion of the car; similarly, though we may not see the intelligence working in the tree or the milk, we can infer its existence from these changes. Nor is this a question of inference only, but we have the sacred authority of the scripture as well. (See the Antaryamin Brahmana of the Br. Upanisad).

SÛTRA. II. 2. 4.

व्यतिरेकानविस्थतेश्चानपेचत्वात् । २ । २ । १ ॥

व्यतिक Vyatireka, in the absence of anything else, different. श्वनवस्थितः Anavasthiteh, because of the non-existence, because of the non-necessity. प्र Cha, and, also. श्वन्यश्वात् Anapekṣattvāt, because of the independence.

4. As before creation there existed no other cause except Pradhâna, so there would be no necessity of any other cause than the Pradhâna herself to produce her changes.—177.

COMMENTARY.

The force of 'cha' in the Sûtra is that of also. There is this additional reason also to be adduced against the Sankhya theory. According to it Pradhana independently can produce the whole creation. Before the beginning of creation, there existed no other cause than Pradhina. Nor was there any necessity for the existence of any other cause, for all the changes which Pradhana undergoes are self-initiated. There is no mover or stopper of the motion of Pradhana except the Pradhana herself. This theory of the Sankhyan is, however, to be given up because the true theory is that it is the presence of Purusa that starts the changes in Pradhâna. Thus even according to Sankhya theory Pradhâna herself is not the sole creator. But in some mysterious way the proximity of Purusa initiates the change. This goes against the theory that the pure inert matter or Pradhana is this producer of change. The Sankhyas. therefore, cannot consistently say that Pradhana of herself produces all changes without any extraneous help. The theory of proximity is open also to objection. If the proximity causes the change, the Purusa is always in proximity with Prakriti, and in the state of pralaya also this proximity cannot be broken. The result would be that creation would start even during pralays. The Sankhya may say the karmas of the jivas being dormant in pralays, no creation can start then. To this we reply, what is there to prevent the awakening of karmas in pralaya. Thus the theory of the Sankhyas is self-contradictory.

Says the Sankhya philosopher "we see that grass, creepers, leaves, etc., transform themselves, through their inherent nature, into milk, without the help of any other cause. Similarly, Pradhana also transforms herself into Mahat, etc., without the guidance of an intelligent principle." To this the author replies by the following Sûtra.

BÛTRA 11. 2. 5.

भ्रन्यत्राऽभावाच न तृणादिवत् ॥ २ । २ । ५ ॥

श्रम्भ Anyatra, elsewhere, namely, elsewhere than in cows. श्रमानाम् Abhavat, because of the absence. च Cha, and, only. न Na, not. श्रमादिन्य Tṛiṇa-ādi-vat, like grass, etc.

5. It is not like the transformation of grass, etc., (into milk, when eaten by a cow) because there is absence of such transformation in another place (namely, when eaten by a bull).—178.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'cha,' and, has the force of only. This argument of the Saakhyas is not sound. Because it is not natural for the grass to always transform itself into milk when eaten by an animal. It is only when a female animal eats it that it is so transformed. When eaten by a male animal no such change is visible. If it was natural for the grass to always change itself into milk, irrespective of the locality or the person absorbing it, then we shall see grass changing into milk even when lying at a quadrangle of a street. But we do not see any such change. Therefore, it is not the natural quality of the grass to change itself into milk, but it is only when it comes in relation with a particular animal, that it is so changed. And here also it is the will of the Supreme Lord that brings about the change, not because an animal has eaten it.

It has been proved that Pradhans being inert has no self-initiated activity of her own. But even if we admit for argument's sake, that she has such an activity, it will not help much the cause of the Sankhyas. The author shows this in the next satra.

BÛTRA IL 2. 6.

श्रभ्युपगमेऽप्यर्थाभावात् ॥ २ । २ । ६ ॥

कानुपत्रोद्धारी, Abhiy-upagamepi, even if it be accepted. सर्थ, Artha, purpose. समाचार, Abhavat, because of the absence.

6.—Even if it be accepted that Pradhana has self-initiated activity, yet it is a useless theory, because it serves no purpose.—179.

COMMENTARY.

The word "not" is understood in this and the subsequent three satras. The theory of the Sankhyas is that Pradhana is moved to activity in order to cause experience and liberation of the jiva. Her object is that the jiva after enjoying her, and finding her full of evil, should become indifferent to her, and thus attain liberation, which consists in such indifference. The activity of Pradhana is purely altruistic, with the object of giving experience and joy to the soul. She has no purpose of her own to be served by her activity. In the Sankhya Satra, 111.58, it is thus stated:—

मधानस्टः परार्थे स्वताश्यमाकृत्वादुर्कुर्कुमबहनवत् ॥

Pradhana creates for the sake of another, and though it be spontaneous—for she is not the enjoyer—just like a camel that carries the saffron for the sake of his master and not for himself. Saukhyas believe that the jiva is actionless though the experiencer. They say that the jiva can be a non-agent and yet experience the fruit of activity, just like a person who may not cook food himself yet all the same eat it when cooked by another.

For such an activity of Prakiti is not a reasonable proposition to be accepted. It serves no purpose, even if such an activity be accepted. For what is the aim of such activity? It is either to produce experience in the ilva, by showing him the various sides of Prakriti, or to produce liberation of the Purusa, by making him indifferent to her charms. The first object, namely, to produce experience in the jiva, cannot be the result of any activity of Prakiti. For it is admitted that before there was any such activity in Prakiti, the Purusa existed as a mere intelligence. actionless, changeless, self-satisfied. Why should such a Purusa, go out of his bliss of isolation, to see the enchanting play of Prakriti? Merely because the Prakiti is active, is no reason for holding that Purusa must undergo the change in the shape of looking at her. It, therefore, follows that the activity of Prakiti cannot be the cause of the experience of the Purusa. Nor can such activity be the cause of liberation of the Purusa. because before such activity, the Puruea was already in a state of liberation. Why should the Prakiti make herself active in order to produce the liberation of the Purusa, when it was already liberated.?

If it be said that wherever the Prakriti is active it is bound to produce some change in the consciousness of Puruça, for it is in proximity with Prakriti, and thus the mere activity of Prakriti is the cause of experience of the Puruşa, then we say that your proposition is rather too large. Merely because a soul is in proximity with matter, is no reason why it should be affected by the activity of such matter; for then even the mukta souls would also be affected by such activity, and fall into bondage again, since matter is all-pervading, and the proximity of spirit and matter is eternal and impossible of removal.

The Sankhyas say that if the Prakriti is not active by her own inherent power, then we have another theory to propound. The correlation between spirit and matter, is like that of a blind and a lame. One has no power of motion, the other has no power of vision. The spirit is lame and is void of all power of motion. Prakriti is blind, though possessing all power to move. Each by himself is incapable of achieving any result. But when the lame (spirit) comes in contact with the blind (but moving matter), it makes this blind matter become active and directs all her movements. Or to take another illustration, as a magnet itself without motion, can set in motion the iron in its proximity, so the spirit, itself motionless and changeless, sets in motion Prakriti, when both come in contact with each other. Thus this reflection of spirit in matter, makes the matter appear intelligent, and sets in motion her creative activity. To this theory of the Sankhyas, the author replies by the following Sûtra:—

BÛTRA II. 2. 7.

पुरुषाश्मवदिति चेत् तथापि ॥ २ । २ । ७ ॥

बुह्म Purusa, man. श्वस्त्र As na, stone, magnetic stone. वृष् Vat, like. इति Iti, thus. चेत्र Chet, if. स्वाडिंग l'athapi, so also,

7. If it be said that Prakriti creates like the lame man directing the blind, or like the magnet moving the iron, even then the theory is open to objection.—180.

CGMMENTARY.

The insentient matter has no power of self-initiated activity, and the instances of the lame man guiding the blind, or the magnet moving the iron, do not remove the difficulty. The inability of the Pradhana to act in lependently remains the same. The lame man, though incapable of walking, yet possesses the power of seeing the read and of guiding another, etc. Similarly, a blind man, though incapable of seeing, has the capacity of understanding those instructions and acting upon them. In he case of the magnet and the iron there is the brining of the magnet in the proximity of the iron. But the soul is ever actionless, without any attributes, and incapable of any such change. If it be said that the soul undergoes no change, but its mere proximity produces the change in Prakriti, then the soul being always near to the Pradhana, it would follow that creation also would be eternal, and there would never be any emancipation for the soul. Moreover, the lame and the blind are both conscious entities, and the iron and the magnet are both insentient matter, and consequently the instances given are not to the point.

The Sankhyas hold that the creation depends upon the superiority and inferiority of the gunas, and the world results from a certain relation between principle and subordinate entities, as consequence of such difference of gunas. This view is refuted by the author in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 2. 8.

प्रक्रित्वानुपपत्तेश्च ॥ २ । २ । ८ ॥

चहित्र Angittva, the relation of being the principal. चतुप्रकेः, Anupapatteh, on account of the impossibility and unreasonableness. च Cha, and.

8. It is impossible that any one of the gunas may be the principal in the state of Pralaya and hence the world would not originate.—181.

COMMENTARY.

Pradhana has been defined to be the equilibrium of the three gunas, Sattva, Rajas and Tamas. In the state of Pradhana, no guns is superior or inferior to the other. Every one of them is equal to the other, and consequently the relation of subordinate and principal could not exist then. Nor can you say that Iswara or Kala (Lord or Time) brings about the disturbance in the eqilibrium, and this makes some gunas superior to the other, because you Sankhyas do not admit the existence of the Lord, nor do you hold Time to have any separate existence of its own. Thus Kapila, in Sutras I. 92 and I. 93, asserts that the existence of God cannot be proved, and the world is not created by any intelligent being:—

ईम्बरासिस्ः।

It is not proved that there is a God. I. 92.

मुक्तवद्येगरन्यतरामावान् न तत् सिद्धिः।

उभययाज्यसत्करत्वम् ॥

And further it is not proved that He exists, because whoever exists, must be either free or bound, and of free and bound. He can be neither the one nor the other. Because either way He would be inefficient. Since, if He were free, He would have no desires which as compulsory motives would instigate Him to create, and if He were bound, He would be under delusion. He must be on either alternative unequal to the creation, etc., of this world. I. 98.

In sutra II. 12, the Sankhya denies the separate existence of Time.

Nor can it be said that the soul is the creator, because according to your theory, the very nature of the soul is perfect indifference to every thing. Sutra I. 163. The Purusas therefore, being perfect Udasins, have no interest to bring about the breaking of the equipoise of the Prakriti and making one guna superior to the other. Hence the creation is not caused by the relative superiority and inferiority of the gunas. Moreover, admitting that in every successive creation and in Pralaya, the gunas will always be unequal in their force, but in the first creation there will be nothing to bring about this inequality. In other words, that admitting for argument's sake, that there is inequality among the gupss in the ordinary state of creation and may have come about without any reason, it would follow that in Pralaya also the inequality will be brought about without any reason, and then Pralaya would be no Pralays. For creation would start up then also. And if inequility can be brought about without any cause, it may also follow that in the beginning it may be not also brought about without any cause.

But, says the Sankhya, we must infer that the gunas are of various nature and of wonderful attributes, because we see their effect in this world and therefore the objections raised by you do not apply. To this the author replies by the following satra.

BÛTRA II. 2. 9.

भन्यथानुमितौ च ज्ञराकिवियोगात्॥ २।२।६॥

सम्बद्धा Anyathâ, otherwise. सनुपति Anumitau, in case of inference. च Cha, and. हा Jūa, intelligence. शस्ति Śakti, power. विशेषाह् Viyogât, because of being destitute of.

9. Even if it be inferred otherwise, yet the Pradhana cannot create, because it does not possess the power of being a conscious entity.—182.

COMMENTARY.

Even if it be admitted as an inference that the gunas must have different attributes and mysterious powers, still it does not answer the difficulty raised by us. Pradhana being supposed to be insentient, has not the power of self-conciousness. Being thus destitute of it, it has not the idea of any plan or design. It cannot say, as an intelligent entity would say, "let me create the world in such and such a way." Creation never proceeds from dead matter, not overshadowed by intelligence. (No more than a house can be built by mere bricks and mortar without the supervision and active agency of the architect and masons.) Without the directive action of intelligence, the gunas, however wonderful in their powers and attributes, can not of themselves create the universe.

The author concludes this portion by the following sûtra.

BÛTRA II. 2. 10.

विप्रतिषेधाच्चासमञ्जसम्।। २ । २ । १ • ॥

विश्वतिचेषाच् Vipratisedhat, because of contradiction. च Cha, and व्यवनंत्रवच् Asamanjasam, objectionable, not harmonius: untenable.

10. Because (the theory of the Sankhyas is full) of internal contridictions, hence (it not being a consistent theory) is untenable.—I83.

COMMENTARY.

There are internal contradictions in this philosophy propounded by Kapila, hence it is inconsistent and untenable and should be rejected by those who desire the highest good. For example, it holds that Prakriti is active for the sake of Purusa alone, who is the experiencer, the seer, the supervising agent. It holds the soul to be something different from all bodies and vehicles. Thus in I. 139, it declares:—

शरीरादिब्बतिरिकः पुमान् ॥ १ । १३९ ॥ "Soul is something else than the body, etc."—I. 189.

संहतपरार्थत्वात् ॥ १ । १४० ॥

Nature is a compound and a combination because that which is combined is for the sake of the other.—I. 140.

Thus in these two sûtras, the Spirit and Matter are contrasted. The Spirit is single, indivisible and non-material, the Matter is composite and divisible, and exists only for the sake of the soul. But later on, this very soul is defined to be as actionless, changeless, attributeless, devoid of all agency, fruition and sentiency. It is said to be a pure isolation. In one place it says that Jadah or matter is non-luminous and luminosity belongs to the soul. But in the next sûtra it contradicts itself when it says "the soul has not intelligence for its attribute" Thus intelligence belongs neither to the soul nor to the matter.

Note.—We give below the original Sanhkya satras to understand this passage properly:—

त्रिगुकादिविपर्ययात् ॥ १। १४१ ॥

And Soul is something else than the body, &c., because there is (in Soul) the reverse of the three Qualities, &c. (because they are not seen in it.)—I. 14i.

चिच्छानाच्चेति ॥ १ । १४२ ॥

And Soul is not material because of its superintendence over Nature. (For a Superintendent is an intelligent being, and Nature is unintelligent).—1. 142.

माक्जाबात् ॥ १ । १४३ ॥

And final is not material because of its being the experiencer.-- I. 148.

कैवस्वार्थं अकंतेः ॥ १ । १४४ ॥

It is for Soul and not for Nature, because the exertions are with a view to isolation from all qualities, a condition to which Soul is competent, but Nature not.—I. 144.

जरमकाशाबागात् मकाशः ॥ १ । १४५ ॥

Since light does not pertain to the unintelligent, light, which must pertain to something or other, is the essence of the Soul which, self-manifesting, manifests whatever else is manifest.—I. 145.

निगुकैवात् न विव्यमी ॥ १ । १४६ ॥

It (Seal) has not Intelligence as its attribute, because it is without quality.—146.

The Sankhyas are further inconsistent inasmuch as that in one place they say that it is Soul that undergoes bondage, owing to its want of discrimination, and that it attains release when it discriminates between the gunas and itself, while at another place it says that bondage and release belong to the gunas and not to the Soul, which is eternally free. As in Sutras III. 71 & 72.

नैकान्तता क्यमे।सी पुरुषस्यविकाहते । प्रकृतेपान्त्रस्यात् सराकुरवात् प्रगुषत् ॥

Bondage and Liberation do not belong actually to Soul, and would not even appear to be but for non-discrimination. But in reality, the aforesaid Bondage and Liberation belong to Nature alone:—so he asserts.—71.

It really belongs to Mature, through consociation,—like a beast, i.e., through her being hampered by the habits, &c., which are the cause of pain;—just as a beast, through its being hampered by a rope, experiences Bondage and Liberation;—such is the meaning.—72.

Thus there are many internal contradictions in this system the Sankhyas and they can be easily found out by any one who studies them carefully.

Adhikarana II.—(The refutation of the atomic system).

The author now refutes the theory of the Vaisesikas. They hold the opinion that there are four sorts of atoms, namely, earthy (physical), watery (astral), fiery (mental) and aerial (buddhik): These atoms are partless, but possess the quality of colour, touch, taste and smell, and are spherical in form. At the time of Pralaya, they exist in a latent state, without originating any effect, but at the time of creation, they originate this world by combining together in forming binary and ternary compounds: owing to their being in contact with the Souls, having Advicta in them. In this theory, two atoms are brought into activity by the action of adrists of the soul residing in them. The souls in the atoms set them in motion, and thus there takes place the union of two atoms, and a binary is formed which is "small." Thus three causes operate to produce a binary, namely, two atoms, samavayi cause), their union (asamavayi cause), and the adrists of the souls, which brings about the union and which thus constitutes the operative cause (nimitta cause). And so on. Similarly, from three binary molecules, set in motion by the adrista of the souls within them, there is produced the "big" called the ternary. Two atoms cannot produce a ternary, for a thing requires a bigger cause and larger number of atoms. A bigger effect must have a larger cause. Similarly, four ternaries give rise to a quaternary, and so on bigger and bigger things are produced. Thus by the conglomeration of the molecules are produced the big (visible) earth, the big waters, the big fire, the big air. The colour, taste, scent, &c., seen in the effect are dependent on the particular colour, &c., inherent in the ultimate atoms which are samavayi The qualities latent in the cause produce the qualities in the effects which are manifest. Thus the world comes into existence. the Lord wishes to destroy the world. He withdraws from the hinaries, the active force of affinity which had brought about the union of two atoms. When this affinity is destroyed, the two atoms fall asunder, and thus the binary ceases to exist. The binary being thus destroyed, the ternary and others are also destroyed, and thus the earth, &c., cease to exist. Thus when the thread is destroyed the cloth is destroyed. The qualities of colour, &c., cease also with the cessation of their substrate, the binaries, &c. This is the method of the dissolution of a world. The atoms in this system are called parimandala or spherical. The size of an "ultimate atom" (parimandala) is called parimandalyam. A binary is called in this system anu or "atom." While the name paramanu is given to the "ultimate atoms." The size of a binary is called short or small, Hrasva, or atomic. While the size of the ternary is called big or mahat (or rather that which has a perceptible magnitude.)

Note.—The word parimandala is the name of the "ultra atom" in this system: while the anu of other systems corresponds with the dvyanu or binary of this. Similarly, the words brasva or short and mahat or big are differently used here. Every binary is a brasya, everything above the binary is mahat.

Doubt.—Here arises the doubt, is it a consistent theory to hold that the world is produced by the atoms (without the guidance of the Lord)?

Pârvapakea.—The adrietas of the souls bring about the union of atoms by setting in motion the two atoms. The atoms being thus set in motion, come into union, and thus a binary is produced; and so on. There is no inconsistency in this view, and it is the right view.

Siddlanta.—The creation is not thus brought about. The next sûtra shows this.

SÛTRA II. 2. 11.

महुद् वीर्धवद् वा हस्वपरिमग्डलाभ्याम् ॥ २।२।११॥

बहुद Mahat, big that which has magnitude. श्री Dirgha, the long, that which has extension and is perceptible to the senses. बहु Vat, like. श्रा Va, or it has the force of "and" here. ह्रास् Hrasva, short, the binary, the sub-atomic molecule. श्रीवण्डाचान् Parimandalabhyam, from the atomic.

Note.—May not these four words be the names of the four kinds of ethers known to the Theosophists? Parimanials the most subtle, literally the all-spherical, would correspond with the atomic plane. The brasva would be the sub-atomic, mahat would be the super-etheric, and the dirghs would be the etheric.

11. And as the origination of the big (magnitude) and long (extension) from the short (dimensionless) and the atomic (sizeless) is untenable, so is the rest of the Vaiseşika system.—184.

COMMENSARY.

The word "or" has the force of "and" here. The word "untenable" is to be supplied from the last sutra to complete the sense. The theory of the Vaisesikas is untenable in its entirety, as their view of the origination of the ternary from the binary, and the atomic, without the aid of the Lord is untenable. The other portions of this system, such as their account of the origin of earth, &c., is equally untenable, along with their theory of the sizeless atoms and dimensionless sub-atoms giving rise to the ternary having magnitude and dimension. There are inherent selfcontradictions in this theory. It holds that the atoms are without magnitude, but still they give rise to ternaries and others, which have magnitude. This is unreasonable, for no amount of adding up of atoms without magnitude, will give birth to a molecule with magnitude. A piece of cloth is produced by the threads which themselves have parts. and six sides by which they can be joined with each other. If the threads were partless, they could not have given rise to a piece of cloth. Therefore it must be admitted that the atom has also a magnitude and occupies space. Otherwise the union of thousands of atoms would not give rise to anything more than an atom, and would not differ in extension from a single atom. Consequently there would not arise other kinds of extensions known as mahat, dirgha, &c. It is merely a mental idea that a product having a larger bulk must have a larger number of constituent atoms. But even if it be admitted, then the atoms themselves must be admitted to have parts, and those parts will have further parts, and thus there will be regressus in infinitum. Moreover, a mustard seed will be similar to a mountain, for both have an infinity of parts. Therefore, to say that the ternary which is big and long, is produced by the binary, which in its turn is produced by the atom, is to assert something which is void of sense.

This sûtra should not be explained, as some have done it, as refuting an objection raised to the Vedanta theory of Brahman being the general cause; for this chapter deals in refuting the theories of the opponents and not in supporting one's own theory.

The Vaiseşika system is open to futher objection, as shown in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 2. 12.

उभयचापि न कर्मातस्तदभावः ॥ २ । २ । १२ ॥

हनव्याऽपि Ubhayathāpi, in both ways, on both assumptions also. त्र Na, not. क्ष्म Karma, action, motion. यहः Atab, therefore. त्रद्वाप: Tat-abhāvab, the absence of that.

12. On both assumptions (whether the adrista in the atom or in the soul) there is no motion, and consequently there is absence of the origination of the world.—185.

COMMENTARY.

The argumentative philosophers (the Vaiseşikas) hold that the world is produced by the successive formation of compounds like binary, ternary, &c., owing to the union of atoms. Now arises the question, how is this primal motion brought about? Is it caused by the adrista residing in the atoms or caused by the adrists residing in the souls? It cannot be the first; for the adrists, which itself is the resultant of the good and bad deeds of the soul, cannot possibly reside in atoms. It must inhere in the soul. Nor can it be caused by the adrists residing in the soul; for the adrista residing in the soul cannot produce motion in the atom. Thus on both these views the motion of the atom is not explained. A third alternative may here be set up by the Vaidesikas, namely, that the motion originates in the atoms, as soon as they come in the proximity of the souls charged with any definite adrists. But this also is not a reasonable view. For there can be no proximity or contact between the souls which are partless, and the atoms which also are partless for there can be no contact between two objects, both of which have no parts by which they can come in contact. Thus in both these ways adrists cannot be the cause of the first motion given to the atoms. We have already proved before that an insentient object cannot move another, because of its inertness, until it is set in motion by a sentient being. We have seen that all motion of objects are initiated, guided and directed by intelligence and and intelligent beings. Nor can the soul be the cause of the primal motion of the atoms at the beginning of a creative period. Because in Pralaya, according to the Vaidesikas, the soul itself lies dormant without possessing any intelligence, and hence is in no way superior to the atom. Nor can it be said that the primal motion of the atom is caused by the will of the Lord in conformity with the Adrista of the itvas, because His will is eternal and so the creation ought to be eternal. During the Pralaya-say the Vaisesikas—there is no creation because the Adristas of the ilvas do not mature and are not awakened, and consequently the will of the Lord is not active. The reply to this is that this view is also wrong, because all the materials being present, the creation ought to take place, irrespective of the maturity. Consequently there is no definite cause found, which can explain the primal motion of the atoms, for neither the Adrista residing in the jivas or in atoms, nor the will of the Lord is a determined cause. The atoms being thus without any motion, in the beginning of the creation, they cannot come together and form an aggregate. Since they cannot come together to form the aggregates, the molecules binary, etc., cannot be produced and consequently there can be no creation. On a parity reasoning, there can be no pralaya also.

Note.—The refutation of the Valserika system is only with regard to their explanation of the first motion of the atoms. The Vedánta does not deny the existence of the atoms, but it denies the Valserika doctrine of the Karmas of the souls being the cause of the primal motion of the atoms. The Vedánta holds that creation depends entirely on the will of the Lord, and that will is not influenced by the Karmas of the soul. If the Advistas be the cause of the motion, then there is nothing whatever to prove, that these Advistas, which spring from the diverse actions of souls, performed during many lives, should remain in a condition of latency without maturity, for the full period of the Pralays. If the Advistas had any power of their own, irrespective of the will of the Lord, why should they remain dormant, for this long period of time? The atomic theory, therefore, is bound to fall back upon the Vedánta doctrine, that it is the will of the Lord that keeps the Advistas immature.

because of equality, by parity. unvited: Anavasthiteh, because of the non-finality, because there results a regressus in infinitum.

13. The Vaisesika doctrine is untenable on account of the acceptance by it of the (fictitious) relation called Samavâya, from which results by parity of reasoning an infinite regress.—186.

COMMENTARY.

The Vaisesikas admit the relation called Samavaya, and hence their doctrine is untenable. Why is it so? Because the Samavaya relation is equal to any other relation, and hence it requires another Samavaya to explain it, and that Samavaya would require another Samavaya to explain it. The atoms come together to form a binary molecule through the relationship called Samavaya. If there was no Samavaya relationship. there would be no conjunction of atoms. But this Samavaya relationship is a mere assumption, for like every other relationship, it is equally inexplicable. If two atoms come together through Samavaya relationship, it would require another Samavaya to bring about this relationship. Thus there would be an infinite regress. The Samavaya produces the notion of quality, action and general characterities. Thus it is a mere relation like any other relation, and if it were not so it would prove too much. As a mere relation we have already said that it requires another Samavaya to explain it, and is open to the objection of Anavastha. If it be said that the relationship is to be assumed in order to account for the inseparable connection between two things, and that this relation is the essential nature of the thing, then it must be assumed everywhere. It cannot be said that the nature of Samavaya is inseparable connection, for that also is open to the same objection. For then every quality would be found everywhere, in other words, the holders of this doctrine of Samavays will have to admit that the quality of smell would be found in the air. the quality of sound in the earth, the quality of form in the Atman and the quality of intelligence in light. In other words, every quality would be found everywhere, because Samavaya being a unity it would be present everywhere. But this is not a fact, therefore Samavaya relationship is an incongruous assumption.

Note.—For the explanation of the word Samavaya, see Valveşika Sûtra, S. B. H., Vol. VI, page 27. (Valveşika Philosophy).

14. The world would be eternal because Samavâya is eternal.—187.

COMMENTARY.

If the Samavaya is admitted to be eternal, then the world, of which it is the relation, would also be eternal. But this is untenable, for even the Vaisesikas do not believe the world to be eternal.

Note.—In Samavaya, (which in modern chemical phraseology may be described as the affinity which brings about the union of atoms) is an eternal cause, then creation would be eternal, because affinity is eternal. If Samavaya be considered as the destructive cause, which separates the atoms, then the Pralaya would be eternal. If the atoms have the tendency of affinity in them, then the creation would be eternal; if they have the opposite tendency then the dissolution would be eternal. Thus the Samavaya cause, translated as the combinative cause, is open to this objection also, for it leads to the absurdity of eternal creation or eternal dissolution.

15. The Vaiseşika theory is further untenable because its atoms have colour, etc., and because the reverse is also observed in them.—188.

COMMENTARY.

The Vaisesikas admit that the atoms of earth, water, fire and air possess the attributes of colour, taste, smell and touch and that they are eternal and partless. But the reverse of this is the logical result of their assumption, and their atoms ought to be non-eternal and having parts. Because it is so observed in ordinary life. Anything that possesses colour, etc., is liable to destruction. Such as jars, etc. The atoms therefore of the Vaisesikas must therefore have the seed of destruction in them, and must be made up of parts like a jar. Thus this doctrine is full of inherent contradictions.

If it be accepted that the atoms have not colour, taste, etc., then we cannot explain the possession of these qualities by earth, water, etc., for that which is not in the cause cannot be in the effect. If we take the contrary view, and hold that the atoms have colour, taste, etc., then the theory is open to the objection raised in the last sûtra. Thus in both ways, the atomic theory is untenable.

17. The atomic theory is not accepted by authoritative sages, therefore it is to be disregarded altogether.—190.

COMMENTARY.

Some regard may be shown to the doctrine of Kapila and the rest, because authoritative sages like Manu and others have accepted portions of their philosophy. But this doctrine of atoms, being opposed to the Vedas, no sages have accepted any portion of it, hence it is undemonstrated and should be disregarded by every one who aims at the highest end of man.

Adhikarana III .- The Buddhist doctrine examined.

Now the author disproves the Buddhistic teaching. The Buddha had four disciples, who founded four systems of philosophy, called respectively Vaibhāṣika, Sautrāntika, Yogāchāra and Mādhyamika. The Vaibhāṣikas hold that every external object, which is perceived, is real. The Sautrāntikas hold that there is no proof whether external objects really exist or not, the ideas only exist, and the external objects are inferred from these ideas. Thus the Vaibhāṣikas hold that the external objects are directly perceived, while the Sautrāntikas maintam that the outward world is an inference from ideas. The third class, the Yogāchāras hold that ideas alone are real and there is no external world corresponding to these ideas. The outward objects are unreal, like dream objects. The Mādhyamikas maintain that even the ideas themselves are unreal, and there is nothing that exists except the void (Sûnvam). Such were the doctrines held by these four classes of Buddhists. All of them agree in maintaining that every existing object has only a momentary existence. first two classes, namely, the Vaibhasikas and Sautrantikas, hold all outward things may be classed under two heads, namely, physical and mental, the physical itself is sub-divided into two parts, Bhûta or elements, and Bhautika or elementals. Similarly, all mental objects are divided into two classes, mind or chitta, and mental or chaittika. They further hold that there are five Skandhas, namely, Rûpa, Vijnana. Vedana, Sanjna and Samskara. Among these the four so-called elements earth, water, fire and air are produced by the aggregation of four kinds of atoms earthy, watery, fiery and siry, possessing respectively the attributes of hardness, fluidity, hotness and mobility. These four elements compose the bodies and senses of the various beings. All external objects thus constitute one Skandha, called the Rûpa Skandha, consisting of elements and elementals. The second Skandha called Vijnana, is the stream of consciousness which gives the notion of egoity. In other words, this I-ness is the Vijnana Skandha. This is also called the Atma, the enjoyer, the agent The third Skandha called Vedana consists of the sentiency of pleasure and pain. It may be called the Skaudha of feeling. The fourth Skandha called the Sanjiña consists of names such as Deva Datta, etc. All words thus constitute this fourth Skandha. The fifth Skandha, called Samskara, consists of the attributes of the mind, such as affection, hatred, delusion, merit, demerit, etc. The four last Skandhas collectively are called Chitta-Chaittika, mind-mental, or internal objects. All activities depend upon them and they constitute the inner motive of every thing. All internal objects are thus Chatus-Skundhi or belonging to any one of these four Skandhas. All external objects belong to one Skandha alone. namely the Rûpa Skandha. Thus the whole world consists of these two kinds of objects, internal and external. Except these two, there exists nothing else like ether, etc.

(Pûrvapakşa).—This theory is valid, because it explains all world-activity.

(Siddhanta).—This is not so, as shown in the following Sûtra.

समुदाय उभयहेतुकेपि तदप्राप्तिः ॥ २ । १ । १८ ॥

क्षत्राय: Samudâyaḥ, the aggregate, all objects. इत्रव्यक्ति, Ubhaya-hetuke, having two causes, namely the external and the internal. आहे. Api, also.

कर अवातिः Tat-apraptib, there is non-establishment of that. There is not proved the world order.

18. Even admitting that the whole aggregate has as its cause these two classes of objects, still there is not explained the world-order.—191.

COMMENTARY.

The above theory of the Bauddhas which classifies all objects under two heads, one aggregate being called the external, the other internal, is not sufficient to explain the world order. Because all aggregates are unintelligent and there is no permanent intelligence admitted by the Bauddhas which can bring about this aggregation. According to the Bauddhas every thing is momentary in its existence, there is no permanent intelligent substance, who brings about the conjunction of these Skandhas. If it be said they come together of their own internal motion, then the world would become eternal, for Skandhas being eternal, and possessing motion of their own, they will be constantly bringing about creation. Thus this theory is untenable.

The holder of the Buddhistic doctrine here says:—In our system there is a concatenation of cause and effect, beginning with Avidya.

Note.—Thus through Avidyā arlses desire, aversion, etc., which compose the Samakārs Skandha. From this arises cognition or the kindling of the mind which composes Vijāāna Skandha. From this arises the six sense organs which compose the Vedanā Skandha And from sensation again arises Avidyā. Thus the circle goes on.

We Buddhists hold this theory of the circle of causation, and as this circle is not refuted by any one and is admitted by all, and as it moves like the Persian wheel, by which water is drawn from the well, so our theory is not open to any objection raised by you. Thus Avidya produces Sańskara, from which comes out Vijnana, Nama-rūpa, the body, the touch, the sentiency, the thirst (triṣṇā), the activity, the birth, the species, the decay, the death, the grief, the lamentation, the pain, and despondency.

Note.—These are all technical terms of the Buddhists. Avidyå means the idea of permanency in a thing which is really impermanent, such as the idea that the fame is permanent while it is momentarily changing. From this Avidyå arise desire, aversion, etc., which constitute the Samskåra Skandha. From this Samskåra Skandha arises that vegue consciousness which exists in prenatal condition, and this consciousness is called Vijääna. From this Vijääna arises the four elements earth, water, fire and air, which constitute the body of all beings, and this is called Nāma. From this Nāma (the four elements) are formed the bodies of all beings and which is called Rūpa, because the bodies are either black or white. This embryonic body is called Nāma-Rūpa. The embryo then develops the six senses called the şaf-āyatana. From these senses, by their mutual contact, arises sparsa, touch or contact, with external objects. From this contact with external objects arises feeling or Vedanā. From this Vedanā arises desire or thirst, whence successively arise Upadana, etc., mertioned above. Thus goes on this eternal cycle of causation. For further explanation see note to the next satra.

This theory is refuted by the author in the next sûtrs.

क्षारेक्ट Itara-itara, mutual, one another. व्यवस्थात् Pratyayatvāt, because of being the cause. One being the cause of the other. The word Pratyaya here means the cause. वृद्धि Iti, thus. ेच्यू Chet, if. व्यवस्थान् Uspatti-māttra, merely production, of the origin merely. विनिचलान् Nimittatvāt, because of there being efficient cause only.

19. If it be said that the world is produced by the mutual causality of Avidya, etc., we say no, because they are merely the efficient causes of the immediately subsequent links.—192.

COMMENTARY.

If you say that this aggregate or the world is formed by the mutual causation of Avidya and the rest, as described above, we say it is not so. For your link of causation explains only the origin of the subsequent from the previous. It only explains how Vijnans arises from Samskara, etc. It does not explain how the aggregate is brought about. An aggregate called Sanghata always shows a design, and is brought about for the purposes of enjoyment (A Sanghata like a house may be explained to have been produced by a putting together of bricks, mortar, etc., but they do not explain the design). You say that there is no permanent Atma. Your Atma is momentary only. For such a momentary soul, there can be no enjoyment or experiencing. Because the enjoying soul has not produced the merit or demerit whose consequences it has to enjoy. It was produced by another momentary soul. Nor can you say the momentary soul suffers the results of the acts done by its annestral soul, for then that ancestral soul must be held to be permanent and not momentary, and if you hold any soul to be permanent, you give up your theory of the momentariness of everything. But if you hold everything to be impermanent your theory is open to the objection already made. Hence the theory of the Saugatas is untenable.

Nors.—The series beginning with Nescience comprises the following members:—
Nescience, impression, knowledge, name and form, the abode of the six, touch, feeling, desire, activity, birth, species, decay, death, grief, lamentation, pain, mental affliction, and the like.

The commentators agree on the whole in their explanations of the terms of this series. The following is the substance of the comment of the Brahmavidyabharana: Nescience is the error of considering that which is momentary, impure, etc., to be permanent, pure, etc. Impression (affection, samskira) comprises desire, aversion, etc., and the activity caused by them. Knowledge (vijfiina) is the self-consciousness springing up in the embryo.—Name and form is the rudimentary flake—or bubble-like condition of the embryo. The abode of the six (satisystams) is the further developed stage of the ombryo in which the latter is the abode of the six senses. Touch (sparés) is the sensation of cold, warmth, etc., on the embryo's part. Feeling (vedana) the sensations of pleasure and pain resulting therefrom. Desire (triqué) is the wish to enjoy the pleasurable sensations and to shun the painful ones. Activity (upadana) is the effort resulting from desire. Birth is the passing out from the uterus. Species (jati) is the class of beings to which the new-born creature belongs. Decay (jara). Death (maranam) is explained as the condition of the creature when about to die (mumuras). Grief (soks) the frustration of wishes connected therewith. Lament (parivedanam) the lamentations on that account, Pain (duhkba) is such pain as is caused by the five senses. Durmanas is mental affliction. The 'and the like' implies death, the departure to another world and the subsequent return from there. (Dr. Thibaut.)

इस्त Uttars, in the next, in the subsequent. इस्ताचे Utpade, on the origination, on the production, ज Cha, and. प्रतिसंपाद Purva-nirodhat, because there is atoppage or cessation of the preceding.

20. There can be no causal relation between avidyâ and the rest, because when the subsequent is produced the preceding one ceases to exist.—193.

COMMENTARY.

In this Sûtra the author criticises the view that AvidyA, etc., give rise to the terms in their subsequent series. He shows that AvidyA, etc., cannot stand even in causal relation to the next term in the series. The Buddhists being the upholders of the doctrine of momentary existence of everything, admit that when a thing comes into existence in a subsequent moment, the thing that existed in the preceding moment has totally ceased to exist. An effect produced in a subsequent moment is the result of the total destruction of the cause that existed in the preceding moment. This being their doctrine, the series of AvidyA, etc., cannot stand to each other in the relation of cause and effect. For the cause having totally ceased to exist cannot stand in the relation of the originator to the effect which comes into existence in the subsequent moment. Because we always perceive that the cause subsists in the effect as the thread subsists in the cloth. But the Buddhists hold that existence originates from non-existence, for they maintain that the effect cannot manifest without the destruction of the cause, the tree cannot appear until the seed is destroyed.

This view is next refuted by the author.

SÛTRA II. 2. 21.

असति प्रतिज्ञोपरोधो योगपद्यमन्यद्या॥ २। २। २१॥

चन्ति, Asati, if there was non-existence, if the effect originates from the non-existence of the cause. अतिहा Pratifia, admitted principle. उन्होन: Uparodhap, contradiction. चेनपुराष्ट्र Yaugapadyam, simultaneousness. सन्दान, Anyatha, otherwise.

21. If the cause ceases to exist when the effect manifests itself, then there results contradiction of the admitted principle that the universe is caused by the Skandhas. Otherwise there would arise simultaneousness of the cause and effect.—194.

COMMENTARY.

The admitted principle of the Buddhists is that the world originates from the Skandhas. If, therefore, it be said that an effect may originate even when the cause is totally non-existent, then it would contradict the admitted principle. Non-existence being present everywhere, any thing will arise anywhere, always. If, however, it be said that the antecedent momentary existence of the cause lasts so long as the effect does not originate, then we are landed in the other difficulty, namely, the cause and the effect exist simultaneously together, for the cause would then remain in the effect. This would also go against the accepted doctrine of the Buddhists that everything is momentary merely. Therefore, it follows that the effect does not originate from non-existence.

The author next refutes the tenet that there can be absolute annihilation of the substance. The Buddhists hold that substances like jar, etc., totally cease to exist like the flame of the lamp. The author disproves this theory next.

SÛTRA II. 2. 22.

प्रतिसंख्याप्रतिसंख्या निरोधाप्राप्तिरविच्छेदात् ॥ २ । २ । २२ ॥

विशेषण, Pratisamkhyå (destruction) depending upon the volition of some conscious entity. चनविदेश्य A-pratisamknyå, (destruction) not depending upon any voluntary agency. शिरोप:, Nirodhaḥ, destruction, cessation. चनिक्रां Apraptiḥ, non-establishment, non-demonstration. चनिक्रांतु. Avichhedat, because there is no complete interruption.

22. Nor can there be established the two sorts of destructions, the volitional and the non-volitional, because there is never any complete interruption.—195.

COMMENTARY.

Pratisamkhya-nirodha is the destruction of things dependent upon the volition of some conscious agent. Thus when a man says I shall destroy this jar and takes a hammer and reduces it to pieces. The other form of destruction which is non-dependent on the will of any sentient agent is called Apratisamkhya-nirodha. These two, together with Akasa or space, which is defined to be the absence of all obstruction or covering are the three kinds of non-entities believed by the Buddhists. A destruction like this is called Niranvaya Vinasa or absolute destruction or Nirupakhya Sunyam or total void. Everything else is momentary only. As is found in the following aphorism. "Everything which is an object of conception other than these three (the two sorts of Nirodha and Akasa) is temporary and composite."

The author will refute later on the theory that Akasa is a non-entity. At present he refutes the wrong doctrine of the two sorts of nirodha. These two sorts of nirodhas cannot be established or are impossible because (Avichhedat), on account of the absence of interruption. An object which is existent cannot be absolutely annihilated, for the words origination and destruction of a substance really mean only change of condition of the substance. It only undergoes modification or a change of condition, but the substance is a unity and remains permanent. You cannot say that when a candle is burnt out, it is totally annihilated. As we find in other cases that destruction is only a change of condition, we can easily infer that in the case of the candle also there can be no total destruction.

Note.—It is no longer a matter of inference now, but a positively proved fact that when a candle burns out, it is not lost, but undergoes a change of condition. The first experiment shown in Chemistry is generally to prove the proposition that substance can never be agnituded.

We do not certainly perceive the caudle when it is burnt out, but the materials of which it consisted, continue to exist in a very subtle state and hence they are imperceptible. If there were the absolute annihilation of even a single real substance, then in the next moment you will see the whole universe reduced to annihilation, and you yourself will not exist to see it. Consequently absolute anhihilation is an impossibility and cannot be proved.

Note.—The following extract from Dr. Thibaut's Vedânta Sâtras, S. B. E., Vol. 34, page 410, explains the reasoning of this Sâtra very clearly:—

A series of momentary existence constituting a chain of causes and effects can never be entirely stopped; for the last momentary existence must be supposed either to produce its effect or not to produce it. In the former case the series is continued; the latter alternative would imply that the last link does not really exist, since the Bauddhas define the satta of a thing as its causal efficiency (cp. Sarvadaránasamgraha). And the non-existence of the last link would retrogressively lead to the non-existence of the whole series.

The author next refutes the notion of release as entertained by the Buddhists.

हश्रवण Ubhayathā, in either case. च Cha, and. श्रेश्य Doṣāt, because there are objections.

23. In both cases there are objections and hence the very idea of release is not established.—196.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'not' is understood in this and the three subsequent sutras from the sutra II. 2. 19. The Buddhists define Moksha or release to be the cessation of the series of Avidya and the rest, which constitute the world cycle called Samsara. Does this release accrue from direct knowledge of the truth or of itself? It cannot be the first, for then the acceptance by the Buddhists of the form of destruction called Apratisankhya-Nirodha would be useless; nor can it be the latter, for then all the disciplines and methods of meditation laid down by the Buddhists become useless. Thus their teaching cannot stand the test of reasoning, and in this system release can never be established.

The author next refutes the doctrine of the Buddhists that Âkâśa is an absolute non-entity.

बाकार Åkage, in the case of Akaga or space or ether. च Cha, and.

24. The tenet of the absolute non-existence of Åkâsa is also untenable because there is no difference in this case also.—197.

COMMENTARY.

The doctrine that space is an absolute non-entity is not tenable. Why do you say so? Avideat, because there is no difference in the case of Akasa from any other kind of substance which is an object of perception. We perceive space when we say "the hawk flies in space." The space, therefore, is as much a real substance, as the earth, etc. As we know the earth by its quality of smell, water by its quality of taste and so on, so we know from the quality of being the abode of objects, the existence of space, and that it has the attribute of Sound. Thus Akada is a real substance and not a non-entity. You Buddhists also say that air exists in Akasa. If Akasa was totally non-existent, what would be the receptacle of air? Nor can you say that space is nothing but the absence of any occupying object. This also cannot stand to reason. Consequently Akasa is not a negative substance of the logicians. The logicians hold that absence or Abhava is of three sorts.--Prak-abhaba, prior nonexistence, as the non-existence of the jar before its being made by the potter, second Pradhvasta-abhava, or absence by destruction, as when a jar is broken into pieces, third Atyanta-abhava, absolute non-existence. as the horn of the hare, which is absolutely a fiction. Akasa is none of these three kinds of absence. If Akisa be a non-entity, then the whole universe would become devoid of space. For if you say that Akada is nothing, but the absence of covering or occupying body, then it can not be the covering of earth, etc., and if Akada is non-perceptible, because there is an occupying body like earth, etc., then we are landed into a position that the whole universe is without space, because something or other exists everywhere. If you say that Akasa exists then there would be non-perception of earth, etc. Thus on neither view the definition of Akada given by you is tenable.

Note.—Nor is it possible to hold that Space is nothing else but the non-existence (abhāva) of earth, and so on, for this view collapses as soon as set forth in definite alternatives. For whether we define Space as the antecedent and subsequent non-existence of earth, and so on, or as their mutual non-existence, or as their absolute non-existence—on none of these alternatives we attain the proper idea of Space. If, in the first place, we define it as the antecedent and subsequent non-existence of earth, and so on, it will follow that, as the idea of Space can thus not be connected with earth and other things existing at the present moment, the whole world is without Space

If, in the second place, we define it as the mutual non-existence of earth, and so on, it will follow that, as such mutual non-existence; inheres in the things only which stand towards each other in the relation of mutual non-existence, there is no perception of Space in the intervals between those things (while as a matter of fact there is). And, in the third place, absolute non-existence of earth, and so on, cannot of course be admitted, and as non-existence (abhāva) is clearly conceived as a special state of something actually existing. Space even if admitted to be of the nature of abhāva, would not on that account be a futile non-entity (something 'tuchcha' or 'nirupākhya.') (Dr. Thibaut.)

SÛTRA II. 2. 25.

अतुस्मृतेश्च ॥ २ । २ । २४ ॥

25. The fact of memory or recollection also proves that things are not momentary.—198.

COMMENTARY.

Anusmritih or remembrance is the idea or cognition of what was previously perceived. It is also called recollection or recognition. In recollection we recognise the thing that was perceived in the past, and assert about it. "this is the thing that was seen before." This at least proves that the person who recollects cannot be a momentary thing. Therefore, all things are not momentary. You cannot say that this recognition of the thing, is only the recognition of similarity, as when we say "this is the Ganges" or "this is the flame which we saw before." In the case of the Ganges and the flame, no doubt, it is a false assumption to say, it is the same as it was before, for the water in the river is not the same. nor the particles which constitute the flame. In their case, there is no oneness of the object. The perception is merely of similarity. But unless there be one permanent knowing subject, who can perceive the similiarity, in the past with the present, he cannot assert "this is the Ganges or this is the flame which was in the past." In other words, the knowing subject must be permanent and not momentary. It may be possible, that sometime doubts may arise as regards an external object. and one may not be able to assert whether it is identically the same object which was perceived in the past or something similar to it. But with regard to the Self, the cognising subject, there can never arise any such doubt "whether I am the same who was in the past." For it is impossible that the memory of a thing perceived by another should exist in one's own self. Nor can you say, that there is unity of succession, and that one impression vanishes after giving birth to a similar impression, and this current of impressions gives the notion of unity. For if successions of impressions are identical with the preceding ones, then it practically comes to the same thing as the admission of a permanent chain of similar impressions, and this permanent chain may well be called Atma, and thus it would also refute the Buddhistic theory. But if it is not admitted, then the fact of recollection or remembrance cannot be explained. Moreover, what do you mean by "momentariness"? Do you mean by it that which is related to a moment, or that which originates or is destroyed in a moment? It cannot be the first for even a permanent object must be related to a moment, for many moments must pass over it. Nor can it be the second, for we do not perceive objects coming into existence in a moment or vanishing in a moment. Thus the theory of momentariness of all things is refuted. These very arguments refute also the theory of Dristisristi. For this theory, which posits that creation is constant and going on at every moment and depends upon one's seeing it, is only the theory of momentariness in another garb. Consequently things are not momentary.

The author next takes up the theory of the Sautrântikas and proves its untenableness. They maintain that objects leave their ideas in our consciousness—ideas of their having certain colour, form, etc., and though they may vanish and exist no more, they exist in our consciousness as ideas, and are inferred as such. Therefore, the ideas are only existing things, and their manifoldness is caused by the manifoldness of external objects. This view is set aside in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 2. 26.

26. Of that which no longer exists, there can be no persistence in cognition, because it is nowhere seen to be so.—199.

COMMENTARY.

The Sautrantikas hold that a thing that has perished imparts its form to the cognition, and on the foundation of that form, yellow colour and so on, the thing itself is inferred. The special cognitions, such as yellow colour, etc., cannot be the forms of things that have perished, and exist only in cognition; for we never see it in actual reality. When the substance perishes, the qualities that inhere in that substance perish along with it. We do not see the qualities passing over to another object, when the substance itself is gone. Nor can you say that objects like jars, etc., are merely inferences and have no real external existence. When a person sees a jar, he says "I see the jar," he does not say "I have the idea of a jar in my mind, and I infer there must be something outside of me which I call a jar." For this kind of idealism is contradicted by the very pronouncement of our consciousness, which declares that the jar exists outside. This is a special objection to the Sautrantika theory. It follows therefore that the existence of jar, which is an object of perception, is not inferred from the idea of jar formed in our cognition. Such existence is intuitively given by the very fact of perception.

The author next shows a common defect which taints both these theories of the Vaibhasikas and the Sautrantikas.

SÛTRA II. 2. 27.

27. If things were all momentary, then even persons who are non-active, will accomplish all their objects without any exertion.—200.

COMMENTARY.

If things originate from non-existence, because every thing is momentary, then persons who never exert will accomplish their objects by their mere laziness, because effects are produced without any real cause. In the theory of universal momentariness, the thing does not exist in the next moment, and so there can be no effort to attain a thing desired or to ward off a thing not desired, for there would remain no motive for such exertion, because the good things would be obtained without exertion, and evil warded off similarly. A believer in this doctrine would never exert either to attain heaven or release. But the Buddhists, however, are inconsistent in their actions, for believing in the momentariness of all objects, they still exert for Moksa. As a matter of fact, every one believes that in order to attain an end he must employ appropriate means and exert properly. Consequently these two schools merely tend to delude mankind. For they lay down practices for the attainment of heaven, and final release for souls which in their theory are momentary, and believing that entity can arise from non-entity, they still exert for the realisation of their objects, and as if they believed that the world originated not from a non-entity, but from the Skandhas which (according to them) are real substances. Their theory being thus self-contradictory deserves no serious consideration.

Note.—This refutation of the Vaibhaşika and the Sautrantika system proceeds upon a misconception of the true doctrine taught by these schools. They are not so absurd as the Brahmanical commentators have made them out. It is very doubtful whether the Satras themselves refer to these doctrines, for they do not employ any words which can lead to the existence of these doctrines. Badarayana wrote long before the rise of these modern Buddhistic schools and it is not likely that he would have referred to them. If the Sûtras are interpreted as referring to these schools which arose in quite historical times—some five hundred years after Christ, then we are faced with the difficulty of assuming that Bâdarâyana wrote after 500 A. C.

Adhikarana IV.—(Yogâchâra theory considered).

The Vaibhāṣikas and the Sautrāntikas being thus refuted, now come forward the Yogāchāras. They say that the Lord Buddha assumed the existence of external things, and in his system of Vaibhāṣika and Sautrāntika he showed the relation of those things with thought, merely out of deference to those weak-minded disciples of his, who were attached to external things. As a fact, the Lord did not believe in the reality of the external world. His highest doctrine is represented by the Yogāchāra system, according to which the Vijnāna Skandha or cognition alone is real.

According to this system, an object like jar, etc., which is perceived in cognition, is nothing more than cognition. The Vijnana modifies itself into the form of the object. You cannot say that without external objects the worldly business cannot be transacted, for to this we reply that in dream also there are no external objects, and still all activities are performed with the thought objects. Even those who believe in the reality of external objects, have to admit that those objects are cognised in so far as the mind becomes modified in the shape of those objects. If it were not so, there would not arise phrases like 'I know the jar, I know the cloth.' Thus all worldly activities can well go on with mere cognition, and all practical thought and intercourse are rendered possible by cognition alone. What is then the necessity of assuming an external object corresponding to these ideas? Nor can it be objected that thoughtforms of internal cognitions being very minute and subtle, cannot have the form of the large and big things like a jar or a mountain. little consideration will show that we cannot object that how can a small thing like the mind contain big things like these. Mind or idea itself is the power of illumination. It illumines or shines forth, it has a form and because it has a form it has the possibility of shining forth in the shapes of all these objects. (And the smallness of the mind is no reason against its containing large objects, for a small object like the retina of the eye contains within it all the visible external world). Savs the objector, if there were no real external objects what causes the mind to assume the manifold shapes? To this we reply the mind assumes different shapes owing to the different Vasanas or desire-impressions submerged in it. (Just as these Vasanas or desire-impressions left in the mind create the dream world in sleep, so the external world in the waking consciousness is also the result of the Vasanas). The manifoldness of cognition is thus caused by the manifoldness of the Vasanas, and this we can easily find out by a little thinking. For wherever there is Vasana there is a change of mental form, corresponding to the Vasana, but whenever the series of Vasanas are stopped, the mind also stops. Moreover you also admit that the cognition and the object of cognition are always co-existent, and that the act of perception is one. We never see an object without the corresponding conception of it, consequently there is no necessity of admitting the existence of an external object corresponding to the internal idea. But as a matter of fact the object of knowledge is identical with cognition, and is not separate from it. We are conscious of only one form, namely, the idea, though this idea appears to us at the same time as an external object The latter, however, is an error. And since we are always conscious of ideas and things together only, it is useless to assume that the thing is something different from the idea. Thus the ideas only exist.

(Doubt). Now arises the doubt, is every thing merely an idea, and is it possible to have practical thought and intercourse without external objects, just as it is done in dream.

(Pûrva-pakṣa).—Yogâchâras say, all practical purposes are well rendered possible by admitting the reality of ideas only, for no good purpose is served by the additional assumption of external objects corresponding to internal ideas.

(Siddhanta).—The external world really exists as is shown by the author in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA. II. 2. 28.

नाभाव उपलब्धेः ॥ २ । २ । २८ ॥

ৰ Na, not. স্থানাৰ: Abhavaḥ. non-existence of the external things. ব্যৱহার Upralabdheḥ, because they are perceived, because we are conscious of them.

28. The external things are not non-existent, because our consciousness bears testimony to their existence.—201.

COMMENTARY.

As it is the consciousness alone-by which we judge the existence or the non-existence of a thing, we must admit that the external things are existent, because our consciousness says they are existing. Moreover the very words we use show that we admit the existence of external things. We say "the knowledge of a jar," a sentence which assumes that knowledge is different from the jar. No theory is worth consideration by the wise which goes against the testimony of one's consciousness. The Yogachara may say "I do not affirm that I have no consciousness of an object, I also feel that the object appears as an external thing, but what I affirm is this, that I am always conscious of nothing directly but of my own ideas, and hence the so-called appearance of the external things is the result of my own ideas." To this we reply that the very fact of your consciousness proves that there is an external object giving rise to the idea of externality. ("That the outward thing exists apart from consciousness, has necessarily to be accepted on the ground of the nature of consciousness itself. No body when perceiving a post or a wall is conscious of his perception only, but all men are conscious of posts and walls and the like as objects of their perception." Dr. Thibaut.)

Moreover in the sentence 'I know the pot' there are three things given, the knower the "I," the knowledge and the object of knowledge. The verb to know is an active verb requiring an agent as well as an object. The whole world believes it so and makes others believe it also. Therefore, to say that there is only knowledge, but no object of knowledge, is merely to court ridicule and derision. Consequently it is established that an object is separate from knowledge.

Says an objector, "if a jar and the rest are separate from the knowledge of them, how is it that this knowledge arises in cognition." If you say that it shines forth in consciousness, then by the knowledge of the one iar we ought to know every thing external, for all external things have the common attribute of being different from knowledge, being the other. If one thing which is non-knowledge is known, every non-knowledge must be known. To this we reply, it is not so. All external objects, no doubt. have this thing in common that they are different from the percepient subject. They all come under the category of non-self or object. Certainly, we know every thing as non-self by knowing one non-self. That is to say, the general relation of the non-self to the self, is known by knowing one non-self. But there are many non-selves and their special relation to the self are different; one object is yellow, another is red and it cannot be said that the knowledge of the yellow object is the same as that of the red object. For yellowness and redness are two different ideas altogether, and there must be two external objects to give rise to two different ideas.

Ideas and things certainly are concomitant, they always go together. But this concomitance instead of proving that things are unreal and that ideas only are real, proves just the contrary. For the very fact that they go together shows that they are different things and not one. Moreover, the Lord Buddha, while denying the reality of external things admitted the separate existence of the external world. For he says 'the form which is perceived internally appears like an external object.' He uses the word 'like' an external object, which shows that he admitted the reality of the external objects. Otherwise he would not have used this word. For no one makes a comparison with a thing which is absolute unreality. No one says he is like the son of a barren woman, or like the mare's nest.

Note.—The following quotation from Sankara is clearer:—"No body when perceiving a post or a wall is conscious of his perception only, but all men are conscious of posts and walls and the like as objects of their perception. That such is the consciousness of all men, appears also from the fact that even those who contest the existence of external things bear witness to their existence when they say that what is an internal object of cognition appears something like the external. For they practically accept the general consciousness which testifies to the existence of an external world, and being at the same time anxious to refute it they speak of external things as "like something external." If they did not at the bottom of their hearts acknowledge the existence of the external world, how could they use the expression "like something external." No one says, "Visuumitra appears like the son of a barren mother." If we accept the truth as it is given to us in our consciousness, we must admit that the object of perception appears to us as something external, not like something external.

Now the author refutes the theory that external objects need not exist at all, because all different ideas can well be explained as originating from Vâsanâs without the necessity of believing in the real existence of any external objects. The opinion of the Yogâchâras is that all practical thought and intercourse are possible without assuming the existence of things, in addition to the ideas. As in dream a person has intercourse and practical communication with other things and objects, while they are nothing but his own ideas, similarly in the waking state also, without any external things, the manifoldness of ideas may be explained through the Vâsanâ. This view is refuted in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA. II. 2. 29.

29. The ideas of the waking state are not like those of the dream state, because they are of a different nature.

—202.

COMMENTARY.

In the dream state and in the state of reverie and hypnotic suggestion there are no external objects like jar, etc., and all experiences therein and different ideas are caused merely by one's own consciousness, and not by anything really outward to the person dreaming, so also it may be in the waking state. This view is not possible, because the ideas of the dreaming state are different from those of the waking. The objects of the dream state have not the same characteristics as those of the waking state. objects perceived in dream are memories of waking experiences. In the waking state they are perceptions and not memories. The objects in the dreaming state instantly change their forms and are found to be unreal, as soon as a man awakes from sleep. In other words, the dream objects are sublated by waking consciousness. On the other hand, the objects perceived in the waking state do not change so instantaneously. Even after hundreds of years, they will have the same appearance as now. Moreover, we never have the consciousness of their being unreal. They are never sublated. True, we have said above, that things perceived in dream are mere memories, but this is only a partial statement of fact. opinion of Bidarayana is that the supreme Lord really creates objects in the dream state, and makes the soul experience them. They are, therefore also real, only the difference is that the Lord creates them for a temporary purpose and for a particular soul only; while the external world He has created for all souls and for the Cosmic period, and given them greater fixity. This opinion will be fully expounded in the Sûtra III. 2. 1., where he will show that all dream objects are also creations of the Lord and not of the soul.

The author now refutes the view that manifoldness of ideas can be explained by the manifoldness of Vasanas without the assumption of external objects.

SÛTRA II. 2. 30.

30. The Vâsanâs do not exist without corresponding external objects, because it is never so perceived in experience.—203.

COMMENTARY.

Vasanas can have no existence according to your theory, for you hold that there are no external objects. We know that Vasanas are produced by external objects; where there is no external object there is no Vasana. This is demonstrated by the rule of identity and difference. We never see any Vasana originating without any external object. The Yogacharas cannot explain how the Vasanas originate. And as they do not believe in the existence of external objects, they cannot explain the existence of Vasanas even. According to their doctrine, the existence of Vasanas is impossible, as they do not admit the perception of external objects, according to us.

Våsanå is really a kind of mental impression or Samskåra. This Samskåra or impression cannot exist without some permanent substratum, in which it may inhere. But the Yogacharas do not believe in any permanent substratum, hence for this reason also their so-called Våsanås or mental impressions cannot exist. This the author shows in the next Satra.

SÛTRA II. 2. 81.

31. The Vâsanâs have no permanent substratum, because of their theory of universal momentariness.—204.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'Na' is understood in this Sûtra from the preceding aphorism. According to your theory there is no permanent substratum in which Vasanas may inhere. For you believe that everything is momentary. According to you, the external ideas that we have during an earth life (Pravritti Vijñana) and the Cosmic ideas which cease only with the cessation of a world period or Pralaya (A-laya Vijnana) and which exist in the Monad are all momentary. Thus there being no conscious self which is permanent in past, present and future, it is not possible to have remembrance, recognition and so on, which are subject to mental impressions dependent on place, time and cause. All these Vasanas. memories, and thoughts, practically presuppose some absolutely unchangeable Self or principle, equally connected with the past, the present and the future. Consequently this Vijnana-matra-vada is unworthy of further consideration, for it cannot explain how the Vásanas can exist without a permanent substratum, and how they can be manifold in the sheence of that substratum.

Adhikarana V.—(Mâdhyamika theory refuted).

The Yogachara being thus refuted, now comes forward the Madhyamika who holds the doctrine of universal void. He says "The Lord Buddha admitted the existence of external objects and of ideas, only for the sake of those less intellectual pupils of his, who could not at once grasp his real doctrine of universal void. All the preceding theories of the momentariness of things and ideas are so many concessions to these, and may be considered as rungs of the ladder leading to this theory. This is the real doctrine of the Lord, and as a matter of fact, neither the external objects nor the ideas exist in reality. The only reality is Sûnyam, the Great Void and the reaching of this nothingness constitutes Release or Moksa. This is the true secret taught by the Lord and it is proved thus: -Sûnya or nothing is self-existent and self-proved, because no cause need be assigned for its production. It is only a thing, which exists. that requires a cause to explain its origination. But No-thing requires no such cause or explanation. Further a thing which is (Sat) must originate either from some existent thing or not. It cannot originate from a thing which is existent or from a being, because we do not see a tree to originate with sprout, leaves, etc., so long as the seed is not destroyed. It is only when the seed is destroyed, that the tree originates. Thus a Sat or a thing cannot originate from a being. Nor can it originate from a non-being (Abhava), for we do not see the origination of tree. sprout, etc., from a seed which has been roasted. Similarly, no-thing can originate of itself, for then it would be dependent upon Atma which would be a useless assumption. Nor can any motive be assigned for a thing originating from it-self. Nor can it originate from anything else. for then it would follow that any thing might originate from any thing, for all things alike are other things. Thus there being no origination. there is also no destruction. Therefore the words like Origination. Destruction, Being, Non-being are mere illusions and the only reality is the Sûnvam.

(Pûrvapaksa).—The Sûnyam is the only reality because it is self-proved while other things being based upon illusion have no real existence. The Great Void constitutes reality.

सर्वेषा Sarvatha, in every way. श्रद्धपुरसे: An-upapatteh, because of the improbability, because of its not being proved. प Cha, and.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'Na' is understood in this Sûtra. What is the Sûnyam of yours, is it a being or a non-being or both being and non-being? In any way, you cannot establish your doctrine. If you say it is a being, then you give up your position and admit that Sûnyam is a being; if you say it is a non-being then your declaration amounts to this, that you establish that every thing is nothing. But you must admit yourself to be a being and your reasoning also to be something, and not nothing and this also contradicts your theory that all is nothing. If you say it is both being and non-being, then it also contradicts your own theory and lands you into undesirable results. Moreover the means of knowledge by which Sûnyam is to be proved must at least be real and must be acknowledged to be true, for if such means of knowledge and arguments be themselves nothing, then the theory of nothingness cannot be established. And if those means and arguments be true, then something certainly is proved, and then also the theory of universal nothingness is disproved. Thus Sûnyavâda is disproved in every way. Thus it is to be inferred that the Lord Buddha taught these three self-contradictory doctrines in order to delude the world. At one time he teaches the reality of the external world, next the reality of ideas only, and lastly general nothingness, and thus he has made it clear that his object was to delude the Asuras. The doctrine of the Lokayatikas or materialists, being perfectly futile, the author of the Sûtras has made no attempt to refute them. Thus the Buddhistic doctrine being refuted, its sister doctrine the Mayavada also stands refuted. The doctrine that creation depends upon perception (Dristi Sristivada) and the doctrine that the creation is an illusion as the illusion of the snake in the rope (Vivarta-vada) have also this in common with the Buddhistic teaching, that they also believe the things to be momentary. Hence the refutation of Buddhism refutes these theories also.

Adhikarana VI.—The Jaina theory examined.

Now the author shows the faults of the Jaina theory. The doctrine of the Jainas is that substances are of two kinds, Jiva or souls and Ajiva or Non-souls. The Jiva is sentient, and intelligent, has the size of the body which it occupies, and has parts or members. The Ajiva or NON-SOULS are of five kinds, namely, (1) Dharma or Merit, (2) Adharma or De-Merit, (3) Pudgala or Bodies, (4) Kåla or Time and (5) Åkåsa or Space. Dharma or Merit is that which causes the motion or progress. Adharma or De-Merit is that which causes the stationariness of a thing. Both these are all-pervading. The Pudgala or Body is that which possesses colour, smell, taste and touch. It is of two sorts, namely, Atomic, and Molecular or compounded of Atoms. Air, Fire, Water, Earth, Bodies of Creatures and the various planes or Worlds are Compounds and not Atomic. The Atoms, which are the causes, are not of four sorts, but of one nature. Through a modification of their nature, they assume different forms like earth etc. Time is a particular Atomic substance, which is the cause of the distinction of past, present and future. Space is one, infinite and is that which contains others and has dimensions. substances (the Jiva and the five non-Jivas) are called Dravyas and this world consists of them. Among these, with the exception of the Atoms, the remaining five are called Asti-kâyas. Such as the Jîva-Asti-kâva, the Dharma-Asti-kâya, the Adharma-Asti-kâya, the Pudgala-Asti-kâya and the The word Asti-kaya denotes, the substance that Akada-Asti-kaya. occupies different parts of Space. In other words, any space-occupying substance, may be called an Asti-kâya. The Jainas describe seven categories, which are helpful for the purposes of the release of the Souls. They are these substances arranged in a different order, namely (1) Jiva or Soul, (2) Ajiva or Non-Soul, (3) Asrava or influx or channel, (4) Niriara or decay or exhaustion of passions, (5) Samvara or hinderance or obscuration, (6) Bandha or bondage, and (7) Moksa or release. Among these, the Jiva has already been defined, namely, the substance which has knowledge. etc., as its qualities. Ajiva or Non-Soul is every thing which is the object of enjoyment of the Soul. The Asrava or channel is that through which the Soul flows towards the external objects; it is the channel of communication between the Soul and the world, in other words, the senses are called Soul. The Samvara or the obscuration are indiscrimination, want of dispassion, etc., which hinder the opposite attributes of discrimination, etc. Niriara or exhaustion is that which destroys totally or which exhausts the source of lust, anger, etc., such as austerities, like plucking off of hairs. sitting on hot stones, etc. Bondage is the current or cycle of birth and death, caused by eight kinds of Karmas. These eight kinds of Karmas are comprised under two heads, namely, four Ghâtika Karmas or particular evil deeds which obstruct the natural innate knowledge, wisdom, seeing.

vigour and pleasure of the Jiva. Four Aghati Karmas, which are particular kinds of virtuous acts, by which is accomplished the connection of the Soul with the Body, the wrong notion of identifying the Soul with the Body, and indifference towards pleasure and pain, as well as desire of pleasure and avoidance of pain. Release or Mukti consists either in remaining stationary in Space above all worlds, or in which there is constant progress towards higher regions. This is to be accomplished by means of the practices taught in the Jaina scriptures. They cause liberation from these eight kinds of Karmas, and manifest the true nature of the Soul. Their practices are called the three jewels, namely, the right knowledge, the right seeing, and the right conduct. They establish these substances by their system of reasoning called the Sapta-bhangi-nyaya, called also Svåd-våda. (1) Svåd-asti, somewhat it is or may be it is. (2) Svåd-Nasti, somewhat it is not or may be it is not, (3) Syad-avaktavyah, it may be pre licated a little, or may be it is not predicable, (4) Syad-asti-chanasti-cha, may be or somewhat it is or it is not, (5) Syad-asti-chaavaktavyah-cha, may be or somewhat it is and is not predicable, (6) Svadnasti-cha-avaktvyah-cha, may be or somewhat it is not and is not predicable. (7) Syad-asti-cha-nasti-cha-avaktavyas-cha, may be somewhat it is and it is not and it is not predicable.

The word 'Syad' is an Indeclinable and has the sense of "somewhat," "somehow," "not fully." The word "Sapta-bhangi" means that system of reasoning in which the seven rules are refuted (bhanga-broken). Those seven rules are (1 Existence or Sattwam, (2) Non-existence or Asattwam: (3) Sat-asattwam or existence and not existence, (4) Sad-asadvilaksanatvam, something different from existence and non-existence. (5) Sattve-sati-tad-vilaksanatvam, while there is existence it is different from it. (6) Assatvesati-tad-vilaksanatvam, while there is non-existence vet it is different from it. (7) Sad-asattve-sati-tad-vilaksanatvam, while there is existence and non-existence, yet it is different from it. Thus there are seven kinds of theories regarding the reality of substances or world. some holding it to be existent or real, others holding it to be non-real. a third class holding it to be neither real nor non-real, and so on. To disprove these several theories of existence, is the object of this Santabhangi-nyaya, or the reasoning by which the seven theories are refuted. This is necessary everywhere, for every object is either real or nonreal, eternal or non-eternal, different or non-different and is manifold on account of these attributes. If the object is absolutely existent then it will exist always, everywhere, in every mode and no one will ever desire either to acquire it, or to abandon it (as no one ever desires to acquire air or reject it since it exists everywhere). A thing which one already has can never become an object of acquisition, nor is it possible to abandon it, just as gravity which is everywhere cannot be abandoned. If, however, the substances do not exist absolutely, but exist only to some extent, and sometimes and for some person and place and somehow, then only it is possible to make exertion to acquire it, or attempt to reject it. All exertions and cessation of exertion, are possible only with regard to objects which are not absolute existences. All objects are either Dravvas or different modifications of Dravyas, and called Paryaya. The Dravya or substance alone is qualified by the attribute of Satttwa or real, while Paryaya or modification has the quality of Asattwa or non-real. Paryaya or modification is the particular state in which the substance may exist. They have different conditions of permanency and non-permanency, of origination and destruction, etc. The substance is permanent, its modification is impermanent, the substance is real, its modifications are unreal, the substance has no origin or destruction, its modifications have origin and destruction. This is the theory of the Jainas.

(Doubt).—These several categories taught by the Arhats, namely, Souls, Non-Souls, etc., are they reasonable or not?

(Pûroa-pakşa). --This theory is reasonable, because it is established by the logic of seven paralogisms.

(Siddhanta).—This is, however, not true; every thing is not of an ambiguous nature as the Jainas hold. This is established by the next Satra.

SÛTRA II. 2. 88.

नेकस्मिन्नसम्भवात्॥ २।२।३३॥

- न Na, not. एकस्मिन् Ekasmin, in one substance. जसम्मनान् Asambhavát, because of the impossibility.
- 33. These categories cannot be established, because it is impossible that in one substance there may simultaneously exist opposing qualities, such as real and non-real, etc.—206.

COMMENTARY.

These categories of the Jainas and their sevenfold reasoning cannot be established, because in one substance it is not possible that contradictory qualities should exist simultaneously. No one ever sees the same object to be hot and cold, at the same time. Moreover it would be useless to lay down rules of practice for the attainment of heaven, for the avoidance of hell, or for release; because there being no certainty about anything, the heaven may as well be hell, and final release not different from these. Since everything is ambiguous, there would be nothing to distinguish heaven, hell and release from each other. Not only would arise the confusion with regard to objects of other world, but of this world also. If the things are indefinite, and if every thing is "somehow it is somehow it is not," then a person wanting water, will go and take fire to quench his thirst, and so on with every thing else; for it may be that fire is hot, it may be that fire is cold. Similarly in this system, there exists not only difference between objects but non-difference also; thus water is not only different from fire, but it is also not different from it, and hence a man may desist from fire, if he wants water, when he thinks of the difference between the two; but he may try to use fire, as water, when he thinks of their non-difference. Their logic, therefore, is fragile as the thread of a spider and cannot stand the strain of reasoning. As a matter of fact, substances are definite and the means of establishing their definiteness are the various categories or Bhangas, and the Soul is the subject that makes this definition, and the fruit of this process is definite conception. But in this system of indefiniteness, nothing can be asserted as either existing or non-existing, and nothing can be known for certainty. What is, therefore, the use of examining this system any further, and when nothing is ascertainable in this system?

In the next Sûtra the author refutes that doctrine of the Jainas which declares that the Soul has the size of the body.

SÛTRA II. 2. 84.

र्ष Evam, thus. च Cha, and. चाला Atma, Soul or Atman. चाकाल्येव Akartsnyam, not entireness, limitedness.

34. And in this view of the Jainas, the Soul also becomes mutilated, and loses its entireness.—207.

COMMENTARY.

The Jaina theory is open not only to the objection of predicating contradictory attributes, like existence and non-existence, etc., to the same object, at the same time; but their Âtma also becomes non-entire and mutilated. They hold that the Jiva has the size of the body that it animates. Therefore, the Soul of a child or a youth being smaller in size, would not be able to fill completely the body of the grown up man.

Nor would the Soul of a man, being of the size of the man, fill the entire body of an elephant, if owing to some fault of his past karmas, he is condemned to occupy that body. The body being thus too big for the Soul, it would not perceive the pleasure and pain in its entire organism. Similarly, when it is condemned to occupy a small body, like that of a mosquito or a gnat, it would be too big for that body, and would not be able to enter it fully.

SÛTRA II. 2. 85.

न च पर्यायादप्यविरोधविकारादिभ्यः ॥ २ । २ । ३ ४ ॥

Na, not. The Cha, and. The Paryayat, on account of the assumption of the doctrine of paryaya or successive change; namely, that the Soul contracts and dilates, in succession, according to the size of the body.

Api, also. The Avirodhah, non-contradiction. Contracts: Vikaradibhyah, because it would be open to the objection of change, etc.

35. Nor would this contradiction be removed by assuming the theory of Paryâya, for then the Soul would be liable to change and the rest.—208.

COMMENTARY.

The Jains may say the Soul is really indefinite in its size, and therefore when it animates the bodies of an infant or a youth, it has that size, and when it occupies the bodies of horses or elephants, it expands itself to that size; and so by successive expansion and dilatation (just like a gas), it fully occupies the entire body, that it for the time being animates; and thus there is no objection to our theory that the Soul is of the size of the body. To this, we say, that it cannot be so. Because it involves the undesirable assumption of the Soul being liable to change. In your own theory you also admit that the Soul is changeless. But if this Paryays theory be admitted, then the Soul would become liable to change, and consequently it would become non-permanent. This is a conclusion which neither you nor any body desires. Hence your theory is not a reasonable one. There is another theory, that the Soul undergoes no change then only when it assumes the body of Release or the body of Mukti. In that body, the Soul has the size of the body and is unchanging as that body is unchanging and permanent. This modified theory which holds that the final size of the Soul results from the Mukta-Deha and in which the size and the Soul are both permanent, because the Soul does not pass into another body, is also not reasonable. If this final body is produced at a certain period of time it must be liable to destruction. If it is not produced at a particular period of time, then it is the eternal body of the Soul, which it possesses from the very beginning, and it being its real size, your theory of Paryaya falls to the ground. Moreover, in your theory of every thing being indefinite, this ultimate size of the Soul may either be existent or non-existent, and so there would be no permanency of this size also.

In the next Stitra the author shows the faults in the theory of release as taught by the Jainas.

SÛTRA II. 2. St.

Antyavasthiteh, in the final state, on account of the permanency of the final condition or release. That, and was Ubhaya, both. Antyava Nityatvat, of being permanent. The Aviscat, because there being no difference.

36. The final condition or the state of release being not different from the worldly state, because both are eternal so this theory is untenable.—209.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Not" is understood in this Sûtra from the last one. There is no peculiarity or difference according to the Jainas between the state of release and the mundane state. Both are permanent according to them. The Mukti is defined by them as eternal progress upward or remaining in the Aloka-Akada. Both these are called states of releases whether the Soul makes eternal progress or is fixed in the Aloka-Akasa. Thus there is no difference between the worldly existence and release. For motion, whether in the worldly cycle or whether in a straight line of infinite progression, is after all mundane. Moreover, no one can ever feel happiness in a state of constant upward motion, or in standing stationary without any support in one place. Thus both these ideas of the Mukti of the Jainas are not Soul-satisfying. The Jaina may say such a state of constant motion or permanent fixture may be a state of pain to an embodied Soul, but not to disembodied Mukta Jiva. To this we say, that even in the state of Mukti, the Soul has its various members and feels their burden just as it feels the weight of the body. Moreover, neither the condition of eternal progress or the permanent fixture in Aloka-Akada can be said to be eternal because they presuppose action and consequently liability to certain destruction also. Therefore, this Jaina theory is futile and ludicrous. This refutation of the Jaina theory, includes also the refutation of the Māyāvādins, the secret friends of the Jainas, who also assert that this world is a Māyā, neither resl, nor non-real; and that Brahman taught in the Upanisats is not predicable by any words.

Adhikarana VII.—(Pâsupata system reviewed).

The author now refutes the opinions of sectarians like the followers of Pasupati, Ganesa and Sûrya. The Pâsupatas maintain that cause, effect, (yoga) meditation, discipline (vidhi), and the end of pain are the five categories revealed by the great Lord Pasupati Himself, in order to break the bonds of the Soul called herein Pasu or animal. In this system Pasupati is the operative cause, and Mahat and the rest are the effects. The Yoga is the meditation, concentration, etc., through Omkâra. The vidhi is the discipline such as bathing three times a day, etc., while the end of pain means release or Mokra. These are the five categories of the Pâsupatas. Similar to this doctrine, are the teachings of the followers of Ganesa and Sûrya, who hold these deities to be the operative cause, and the Prakriti and time are the causes of the creation of the world through the operative agency of these deities. By worshipping them the Soul attains proximity with these gods, and there accrues complete cessation of all pains, which is Mokṣa.

(Paredpakea).—The Pürva-pakein maintain that this system is reasonable, because we see in ordinary life also, that an agent like a potter, etc., is only the operative cause of the jar which he makes, he is not its material cause. God, therefore, is only the operative cause of the universe, and not its material cause. The matter is supplied by the eternal Prakriti. The disciplines laid down also are reasonable and practical.

SÛTRA II. 2. 27.

पत्युरसामंजस्यात् ॥ २ । २ । ३७ ॥

पानु: Patyuh, of the Lord, the doctrine of the three patis or the Lords, vis., Pasupati, Ganapati, and Dinapati. पान्यक्षाप्, Asamanjasyat, on account of untenableness, inappropriateness.

37. The teaching of Pasupati is also not right, because of its inappropriateness.—210.

COMMENTARY.

The word "not" is understood in this sûtra. The doctrine taught by Pasupati is not right, because it is inappropriate, that is to say, it is opposed to the Vedas. The Vedas teach that the one God Nârâyaṇa is the sole cause of the creation of the world, while other deities like Brahma, Rudra etc., are creatures of Him. It teaches that release depends upon devotion (Bhakti), knowledge (Jûâna), and the proper performance of the duties of one's order and caste as taught by Nârâyaṇa. As we find in the Mahâupanişat:—

इत्यथ पुनरेव नारायवः सोज्यत्कामा मनसा घ्यायेत तस्य घ्यानानाः सम्बद्धात् त्र्यक्षः शुरुपाचिः पुरुषाजायत विम्नविद्धयं सत्यं अम्बद्धं तपा वैराग्यं मन केवर्यं सम्बद्धा व्याहतय ऋग्यञ्चः सामाधर्वाङ्गिरसः सर्वाचि छन्त्रांति तान्यक् च्याजि-तानि ॥ २ ॥

This shows that the four-faced Brahmâ arose from Nărâyaṇa as well as Pasupati or Siva. In another Upanişat also we find the same (Nărâyaṇa-Upanişat):—

सय पुरुषा ह वै नारायकाकामयत प्रकाः खुक्रेयेति । नारायकात्राका जायते मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाकि व । कं वायुर्ज्योतिरापः पृथिषी विश्वस्य धारिकी । नारायकाद्रस्रा जायते नारायकाद्रस्रा जायते नारायकाद्रस्रा जायते नारायकाद्रस्रा जायते नारायकाद्रस्रा कायते नारायकाद्रकाद्रस्र वद्या नारायकाद्रस्रा सर्वा वेचताः सर्वे क्रवयः सर्वाकि क्रवृत्ति सर्वाकि व भूतानि नारायकादेव समुत्यकते नारायके प्रकीयको नारायके प्रकीयको नारायके प्रकीयको नारायके प्रकीयको नारायके प्रकीयको नारायके प्रकीयको । १ ॥

Now verily Nărâyana the Puruşa desired "Let me create offspring." From Nărâyana was produced the Prâna, Manas and all the sense organs. From Him arose the ether, air, light, water, and earth, the upholder of all. From Nărâyana arose Brahmâ, from Nărâyana was produced Rudra, from Nărâyana was produced Prajāpati, from Nărâyana was produced Indra, from Nărâyana the eight Vasua, from Nărâyana the eleven Rudras, from Nărâyana the twelve Âdityas, all Devatâs, all Rieis, all Hyuns, all Beings verily are produced from Nărâyana and they merge into Nărâyana.

So also in the Rig Veda we find: -X. 125., 1 to 8:-

चहम् रुद्रेभिः वसुभिः वरामि चहम् चादित्यैः उत विश्वदेवैः । चहम् मित्रावदका उभा विभिमे चहम् इन्हाझो चहम् सम्बना उमा ॥

चहुम् एव स्वयम् रदम् वदामि जुडम् देवेभिः उत मानुषेभिः । यम् कामये तम् तम् उपम् कृषोमि तम् ब्रह्माचम् तम् ऋषिम् तम् समेधाम् ॥

5. I, verily, myself announce and utter the word that Gods and men alike shall welcome.

6. I bend the bow for Rudra that his arrow may strike and slay the hater of devotion.

चहम् सुवे पितरम् चस्य मूर्वेन् मम योनिः चप्तु चन्तः समुद्रे । ततः वितिष्ठे भूवना चतु विभ्वा उत चमुम् चाम् वर्ष्मण उप स्पृशामि ॥

7. On the world's summit I bring forth the Father; my home is in the waters, in the cocen.

कहम् एव वातः १व म वामि प्रारममाना भुवनानि विश्वा। एरः दिवा एरः एना पृथिना एतावती महिना सम् वभूव ॥

8. I breathe a strong breath like the wind and tempest, the while I hold together all existence.

Beyond this wide earth and beyond the heavens I have become so mighty in my grandeur.

Similarly in the Yajur-Veda (Brihadāraṇyaka, IV. 4. 22.) we find it stated:—The knowers of Brahman seek to understand him by the study of the Veda, by sacrifice, by glits; by penance, by fasting and he who knows him becomes a Muni.

So also (Brihadāraņyaka IV 4, 21):-

Let a wise seeker of Brahman after he has discovered Him practise wisdom (that is, meditate on Him).

So also in (Brihadaranyaka, IV 5. 6.):-

Verily the Atma is to be seen, to be heard, to be perceived, to be marked.

So also the Smritis, following in the footsteps of the Vedas, declare this truth over and over again. In some places, no doubt, of the Vedas and the Smritis the word "Pasupati," "Ganesa," "Sûrya" etc, are used and they are described as the Ruler of all, the Cause of all, the Creator of all, etc. But in those places these words are to be taken in their etymological sense as applying to Nârâyaṇa. Thus the word "Pasupati" there would mean the Lord of all Souls, "Ganesa" the Lord of hosts, "Sûrya," the Goal of the wise (Sûri), just as the word Indra in the Veda is the name of the Supreme Lord, being derived from the root Inda "to rule." Thus all the Vedas and the Smritis really describe Nârâyaṇa, the Supreme Brahmaṇ and not any lower deity. The proper interpretation of Vedic texts, therefore, is that "Supreme Brahmaṇ is the real Creator."

The sectarians like Pasupatas and the rest have, by mere arguments and reasoning, established the existence of the Lord. But reasoning must be according to worldly rules, and it cannot establish such existence. These sectarians also hold that the Lord is only the operative cause, which cannot be established by reasoning. Because it is impossible that the Lord should be the mere operative cause of the world, for then His connection with the world cannot be established. In ordinary worldly life we see, that a potter, who is merely the operative cause of the pot, has a certain connection with the clay with which he fashions the pot. What is that connection of the Lord with Pradhana and the Souls, with which He creates the world? These sectarians cannot establish that connection. The next Sûtra shows this.

SÛTRA LL 2. 38.

सम्बन्धानुपपत्तेश्च ॥ २ । २ । ३८ ॥

R. Anupapatteb, because of the impossibility.

Cha, and.

38. The Lord can have no connection as Creator of the world, with the world, because of the impossibility of such a connection.—211.

COMMENTARY.

These sectarians hold that a Lord is without a body, consequently such a Lord can have no connection with Matter and Spirit. An embodied being, like a potter, can have such relation with clay, etc., because he has a body. But a bodiless Lord can have no such connection. Thus the very connection of Lord with Matter, cannot be established in this theory.

BÛTRA II. 2. 39.

म्रिप्रानाऽनुपपत्तेश्य ॥ २ । २ । ३६ ॥

स्थित Adnisthana, superintendence or rulership, or staying in a place, having a position. अनुष्यः Anupapatteh, because of the impossibility. प्र Cha, and.

39. A bodiless Lord cannot create the world, because He cannot occupy a position.—212.

COMMENTARY.

Controlling a thing is the function of embodied beings. It is by virtue of occupying a particular position, that an embodied being, like a potter, can control the clay and produce the effects like pots, etc. A disembodied being cannot do this.

It may be said that the Soul also is unembodied, but it rules the sense organs and the body, without any particular position, so the Lord also may control Pradhana To this the next Sûtra replies:—

SÛTRA II, 2. 40.

करणवच्चेन्न भोगाऽऽविभ्यः ॥ २।२।४०॥

सरवार्क Karaņa-vat, like the instruments of senses ेच्यू Chet, if. ज Na, not. आजारिन्य: Bhogadibhyah, on account of enjoyment, etc.

40. If it be said that the Lord rules Matter, as the Soul rules the sense organs, we reply it cannot be so, because the Soul has to undergo certain experiences of pleasure and pain ow ng to its karmas, not so the Lord. --213.

COMMENTARY.

You cannot say that Matter exists in Pralays and the Lord creates the world with it, controlling it just as the Soul controls the sense organs.

You cannot say so, because the connection of the Soul with the body is in order that it may undergo certain experiences of birth and death, pleasure and pain, in order to get the rewards of its karmas. But there is no such karma in the case of the Lord. Why should then the Lord have any connection with Pradhans, in order to create the world. If His connection is just like that of the Soul, then He would be subject to birth and death, pleasure and pain. When He will be in connection with Pradhans that will be His birth, and He will be happy. When in pralays He renounces the Pradhans, that will be His death and He will feel pain. Thus He will be no God at all.

If it be said, let us admit then that the Lord has also some sort of karma, some sort of Adrista, some sort of good Karma and good Adrista, and that it is on account of such karma, that the Lord gets the body with which He creates the universe. Just as we see a mighty monarch, owing to his great merit, gets a body and sphere of control or empire, over which he rules, but not so a poor Soul having not high merit behind it. This theory is also open to the following objection:—

SÛTRA II. 2. 41.

भंतवस्वमसर्वज्ञता वा॥२।२।४२॥

जन्तव्यक् Antvattvam, finiteness. श्रास्त्रीता Asarvajūatā, want of omniscience. वा Vā, or.

41. If the Lord has karma, (however high and refined it may be) then He would be either a finite being or not possessed of omniscience —214.

COMMENTARY.

If the Lord has a body, on account of some karma of His own, then He would be finite like any ordinary Jiva, nor would He be omniscient. For He only who is not subject to karma can appropriately have omniscience. But the Pasupatas maintain that the Lord is destructionless and all-knowing. Thus there arises this contradiction in their theory. Says the Pasupata "but does not this objection apply to your Brahman also; for you also believe that your God is a personal one." To this we reply, that our theory of a personal Brahman is not open to this objection, for we do not believe in this on account of any reason or arguments, but because it is so mentioned in the scriptures. The sacred revelation describes Brahman with personal attributes, and we never try to reconcile this description with reason. In fact, in Sûtra II. 1. 27, we have already shown this.

The holy Bâdarayana does not show any disrespect to the mighty deities like Pasupati or Ganapati or Dinapati; all that he means is that these Patis or Lords are not independent agents, as their worshippers misconceive, but work under the will and direction of the supreme Brahman. The author of the Sûtras refutes only the mistaken notion of these sectarians, when they attribute perfect independence to their deity. Since they are Cosmic Agents or Lords, we acknowledge that they deserve all reverence and worship, but we do not forget their subordinate position to the Over-Lord. These five Sûtras are meant thus to refute the doctrine of these Patis or Lords. The word "Pati" is mentioned in the Sûtra without any distinctive attribute, and thus includes all the three Patis, namely, the Lord of the Soul, the Lord of the hosts, and the Lord of the day.

Others hold that these Sûtras refute the Lord of the argumentative philosophers and the rationalists, who try to establish the existence of a God by mere reasoning without revelation.

Adhikarana VIII .-- The Sakti theory reviewed,

The author now refutes the theory of the Saktas. They hold that Sakti alone is the cause of the world, that She is possessed with the attributes of omnipotence, omniscience and the rest.

(Doubt).—Now arsies the doubt, Is it possible that Sakti should be the independent Creator of the world?

(Parvapaksa). No agent can accomplish any thing without energy or Sakti. The effect must, therefore, be attributed not to the apparent agent. A red-hot iron has the power of burning, but effect of burning should be properly attributed to the fire, and not to the iron through which the fire manifests itself. It is the eternal energy, working through the Lord, that creates the world, and the Lord without the Energy has no creative power. Thus Sakti is the real Creator.

उत्पस्यसम्भवात् ॥ २ । २ । ४२ ॥

- इत्युचि, Utpatti, origination, creation. च्याञ्चयात् Asambhavât, on account of the impossibility.
- 42. Sakti alone cannot create, for creation is impossible without the co-operation of the Lord.—215.

COMMENTARY.

The word "not" is understood in this Sûtrs. The followers of Sakti have imagined Her to be the sole cause of the world, by reasoning alone, unsupported by Vedic authority. Since they base their theory on reason, they must be refuted by such reason as would appeal to common sense of mankind. It is not possible that Sakti should be the Mother of the whole Universe, because She has no power of origination singly. We do not find in this world immaculate conception, nor do women give birth to children without connection with men. To attribute omniscience, etc., to Sakti is the mere outcome of non-reasoning, because we do not find energy showing these attributes anywhere. Says a Sakta, we admit that there is a Purusa (Siva), the husband of Sakti, and She creates the universe through Her connection with Him. To this we reply that this also is not right, as is shown in the following Sûtra:—

SÛTRA II. 2.48.

न च कर्तुः करणम् ॥ २।२।४३॥

म Na, not. च Cha, and. कर्च: Karttub, of the agent "Siva." क्रास्क् Karaņam, sense orgān.

43. The Creator has no sense instruments to come in connection with Sakti.—216.

COMMENTARY.

Even if it be admitted that there is a Lord, who has connection with Sakti, yet in His case also there is absence of sense instruments like body, etc., with which He may create the universe. Thus it is not possible that such a Purusa can have any connection with Sakti. If, however, it be assumed that He has a body and sense organs, then the objections raised in Sûtra II. 2. 40, would apply to Him.

But says an objector, it need not be that the body and the sense organs of the Lord, are like ours, made of matter and the result of karma, He may have a body consisting of eternal knowledge, volition, etc. To this the author answers by the next Sûtra:

SÛTRA 11. 2. 44.

विज्ञानाविभावे वा तदप्रतिषेषः॥ २। २। ४४॥

বিস্তাৰ Vijitana, knowledge. আহি Adi, and the rest আৰু Bhave, of the nature of. বা Va, or. বহু Tat, that. আমনিব্যঃ Apratisedhah, non-contradiction.

44. If it be said that the body of the Lord consists of knowledge and so on, then there is no contradiction (for such a Lord is our Brahman).—217.

COMMENTARY.

If this Lord of the Saktas be assumed to have body and sense organs, consisting of eternal knowledge, volition, etc., then there is no contradiction; and the Sakta theory would become included in the Vedanta theory of Brahman. For we do admit that the creation proceeds from such a Lord.

We do not refute the theory of the Saktas as a whole, but only that portion of it which makes Sakti independent of the Lord. The extreme Saktas hold that Sakti alone is the cause of the universe. This must not be respected by any one who wishes to attain final beatitude. The author, therefore, finishes up with the following Satra:—

SÛTRA II. 2. 45.

विप्रतिषेधाच्य ॥ २ । २ । ४ ॥

Authorities.

That, and.

45. The theory of the extreme Saktas is untenable, because it contradicts all sacred authorities.—218.

COMMENTARY.

The theory that Sakti alone creates the world is untenable since it contradicts the revelation, the tradition and reason. As we find in the Padma Purana:—

भुतवः स्वृतयस्थैय युक्तयस्थेष्यरं परम् । वद्गित तद् विस्तः ये। वदेत् तस्मान् न वायमः ॥

The Strates, the Smritis and reasonings all are unanimous in declaring that the Lord is the Supreme. He who declares any thing against it is the vilest of the vile.

The force of the word "and" in this Sûtra is to bring in the reasoning of II. 2, 42, here also.

Thus in this Pada has been shown that the paths of the Sankhyas, Vaiseeikas and the rest down to the Saktas, are strewn with thorns and are full of difficulties, while the path of Vedanta is free from all these defects and should be trodden by every one who wishes his final beatitude and emancipation.

Here ends the Second Pada of the Second Adhyaya of the Vedanta Sûtras and Govinda Bhasya.

SECOND ADHYÂYA.

THIRD PADA.

Adhikarana I.—Ether is a product.

क्यामादिविषयां गामिर्विमतिः विजयान यः। स ता मनु विषयो भास्तान् इच्यः प्रविद्वनिष्यति ॥

May that Kriena who has destroyed with the rays of His wisdom the wrong notions of people about other, etc., destroy also my worldly propensities.

In the Second Pâda has been shown the fallacious reasoning contained in the theories regarding Pradhâna and others. In the Third Pâda will be shown the origination of various Tattvas from the Lord of all at the time of creation; their merging into Him again at pralays, as well as that the Souls do not originate (but are eternal) and that they have a body of intelligence in which resides knowledge, that they are Atomic but all-pervading through the rays of their knowledge, that they are agents and portions of Brahman. It will further be shown that the various Avatâras like those of the Fish, etc., are full and complete manifestations of the Lord. It will also be shown that the diversities seen among the Jîvas are caused by their karmas. All this is demonstrated by refuting the contrary arguments, in the present Pâda.

The order of the origin of the various Tattvas held authoritative in this system is that which is laid down in the Scriptures like those of Subåla, etc., namely, Pradhåna, Mahat, Ahankåra, Tanmåtras, Senses and the Gross Elements beginning with Ether. The order of succession, as we find laid down in the Taittiriya Upanişad and the rest, has also been discussed here, in order to show that there is no real conflict between these texts of the Subålas and the Taittirylas. This will be clearly shown later on.

सदेव साम्येदमम बास्तिदेकमेवादितीयं तदौक बाहुरसदेवेदमम बास्तिदेकमेवा-द्वितीवं तकावंसतः सजायेत ॥ १॥ कुतस्तु कलु साम्येवछ स्यादिति होवाच कथमसतः सजायेतित सस्वेव साम्येदमम बास्तिदेकमेवादितीयम् ॥ २ ॥ तदैसत वह स्यां प्रजाये-वेति तस्त्रेजाऽस्त्रत तस्त्रेज पेशत वह स्यां प्रजायेवेति तद्गेगऽस्त्रत तकाधम क व शोचित स्वेदते वा पुरुवस्तेजस एव तद्ग्यापा जायन्ते ॥ ३॥ ता बाप पेशन्त कथ्यः स्याम प्रजायेमहीति ता क्षणमस्त्रन्त तकाधम क व वर्षति तदेव भूयिष्ठमकं भवस्वदृश्य पद तद्ग्याचां जायते ॥ ४॥ In the Chandogya Upanisad we find the following (VI. 2, Verses 1 to 4).

- 1. The Sat (Good) alone, O child, existed in the beginning (of this creation) one only without an equal. About this others say, the Asat (Void) alone existed in the beginning of this creation, one only without a second, from that Void (Asat) was produced the Plenum (Sat).
- 2. "But, O child, how could it be thus" said the Father. "How from the Void should be born the Plenum." Therefore, the Sat (the Good) alone existed, O child, in the beginning of this creation, one only, without an equal.
- 3. He thought "I shall assume many forms (in order to govern the world) and create beings." He created Fire. The Goldess of Fire thought, "I shall assume many forms and create beings." She created the Waters (Apas). Therefore, wherever and whenever any body weeps or perspires, water comes out; for it is from fire that water is produced.

4. The (God of) water thought "may I multiply and create beings." He created (Rudra, the God of) Food (Earth). Therefore, wherever and whenever it rains, much food in produced; therefore from Water alone is produced all food fit for eating.

In this passage it is mentioned that Fire, Water and Food came out of Brahman, and are therefore products. This gives rise to the doubt, mameby whether Akasa or Ether is also produced or not. In this text there is no mention of the creation of Ether. The Pûrva-pakşin therefore starts the next Sûtra by declaring that Ether has no origin because the text is silent about it.

SÛTRA II. 8. 1.

नावियदश्चतेः ॥ २ । ३ । १ ॥

भ Na, not. विका Viyat, Ether, Space. अनुते: Agruteh, on account of no Scriptural statement, on account of its not being mentioned in this text.

1. The Ether has no origin, because it is not heard in the above text of the Chhândogya Upanisad.—219.

COMMENTARY.

Ether is eternal and all-pervasive. It has no origin, because had it an origin the above text of the Chhandogya Upanisad would not have omitted to mention such a fact. Since there is such an omission in that Upanisad which treats of the successive origin of the various elements and confines itself, solely, to Fire, Water and Earth and is silent about Ether, we are right in asserting that Ether has no origin.

This prima facie view is set aside in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 8. 2.

श्रस्ति तु॥ २।३।२॥

श्रीत Asti, is, there is an origin. तु Tu, but.

2. But there is the origin of Ether also.—220.

COMMENTARY.

The word "But" is used in this Sûtra in order to remove the doubt raised in the preceding Sûtra. The Ether certainly has an origin. Though the Chhandogys Upanisad does not mention its origin, we find it expressly stated in the Taittiriys Upanisad; and it is a well-known rule of interpretation that the omission of one text should be supplied from another when possible.

तकाहा यतकाक्तम बाकाशः सम्मृतः । बाकाशाहायुः । वाकेरकिः । बहेरायः । बह्नयः प्रविची ।

From that Self (Srahman) sprang Ether (akááa, that through which we hear; (from other air (that through which we hear and feel); from air fire (that through which we hear, feel and see); from fire water (that through which we hear, feel, see and taste); from water earth (that through which we hear, feel, see, taste and smell).

This text shows that Ether also has its origin in the Lord.

The Pûrva-pakain again raises the same doubt by explaining the above Taittiriya passage metaphorically. He says that the origin of Ether is not to be taken in its literal sense, but figuratively only. The Space or Ether being all-pervading, we cannot imagine its creation. Therefore, when any one says that Space is created, it is to be taken in a figurative sense. Thus as in a crowd, one may say "make Space;" which does not mean "create space," but to make room for some person by removing the crowd.

SÛTRA II. 2. 3.

गौरयसंभवात् शब्दाच्य ॥ २ । ३ । ३ ॥

- नीवी Gauni, figurative. चत्रज्ञात Asambhavat, because of the impossibility. चत्रात Sabdat, because of the Scripture. च Cha, and,
- 3. Creation of Ether is figurative only, because it is impossible to create it and because of this text.—221.

COMMENTARY.

It is not possible to imagine the origin of Space or Ether. The great philosophers like Kanada and the rest have fully shown that Space cannot be created, but is eternal. The origin which the Tattiriya text mentions is figurative only, as we find people say "make space" or "the space is made." It is impossible to make space, for it is formless and all-pervading. If Ether was also a product, what is its cause? There cannot be an effect without a cause. Moreover, the express text of the Brihad-Aranyaka Upanişad shows that Akasa has no origin. It says "Vayu and Antarikşa (Space)—both are immortal." (Brihad-Aranyaka, II. 3, Verses 2 & 3).

Thus from this text of the Brihad-aranyaka we learn that Space has no origin.

(The doubt raised in this Sutra will be answered in the Sûtra after the next). An objector may say that the word "Sambhûta" is used in the Taittirlya Upanişad, and it has the definite meaning of "born" or "produced." In the case of Fire and the rest, mentioned in that text, the word "produced" is taken in its literal sense. How do you interpret the same word, used in the same passage, in a figurative sense? The rule of interpretation is that if a word is used in the same passage several times, it must be explained everywhere in the same sense, and not in its literal sense in one place, and in its figurative sense in another. This objection is thus answered by the Pûrva-pakşin.

BÛTRA II. 3. 4.

स्याज्वेकस्य ब्रह्मशब्दवत् ॥ २ । ३ । ४ ॥

swell as a primary sense in the same sentence. We Cha, and. Water Ekasya, of one word. Appropriate Brahma-sabda-vat, like the word Brahman.

4. One word may have a double sense in the same sentence as the word Brahman in the Taittiriya Upanişad, III. 2.—222.

COMMENTARY.

The word Brahman occurs in the Taittiriya Upanisad, IU. 2. and subsequent passages thus:—

तपसा महाजिद्दास्य तपा महा 🛭

"Try to know Brahman by penance, for penance is Brahman." Now in this sentence, the Brahman in the first part is taken in its literal sense of denoting the Supreme Being, while in the second portion it is used in a secondary meaning, namely, the means of knowing Brahman. Similarly, the word "Sambhûta" used in Taittirlya, II. 1., may be taken in a secondary sense with regard to Akasa and in its primary sense with regard to other elements like fire, water and earth. Therefore this text of the Chhandogya Upanişad declaring the origination of Ether is superseded by the text of the Chhandogya Upanişad where there is no mention of the origin of Ether.

This objection of the Pûrva-pakein is thus answered by the author. sûtra II. 2. 5.

प्रतिज्ञाऽद्दानिरव्यतिरेकाच्छब्वेभ्यः ॥ २ । ३ । ४ ॥

विश्वा Pratijua, promissory statement, enunciation of the eneral proposition. आस्त्रिः Ahanih, non-abandonment, adherence to. अध्यक्तिसम् Avyatirekat, on account of non-difference, water Sabdebhyah, from the words, namely, from the expressed texts of the Veda.

5. The adherence to the proposition enunciated in the beginning of Adhyâya VI of the Chhândogya Upanişad can take place only then, when the existence of nothing else than Brahman is posited and this is the case proved from the words of the sacred scriptures also.—223.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhandogya Upanisad, Chapter VI, Khanda I, Uddalaka promises to teach his son that "by which we hear what cannot be heard, by which we perceive what cannot be perceived, by which we know what cannot be known." This promise can only be fulfilled if Brahman. which is evidently meant by Uddalaka, be the only substance existing in the beginning of creation. If in the beginning every thing be held to be non-different from Brahman it would be then only that the knowledge of Brahman would lead to the knowledge of every thing else. But if the effect (world) be different from Brahman then the knowledge of Brahman would not necessarily lead to the knowledge of the world. The word nondifference in the Sûtra means that one must realise that Brahman is the material cause of the world as well, not only the operative cause. Hence this universal proposition asserted in the beginning of Chapter VI of the Chhandogya Upanisad, namely, that one substance by knowing which every thing else is known, leads to the conclusion that every thing else is caused by Brahman, and hence we interpret the sixth Khanda of the Chhandogya Upanisad in conformity with this general proposition. We, therefore, hold that even Uddálaka held the opinion that Akada also originate I from Brahm in, though he does not expressly say so.

Not only is this to be inferred from the general promissory statement above referred to, but from the other texts of the same Upanicad also. Thus VI. 2. 1, begins with the well-known statement—

सदेव साम्य इदमचासीत्। एकमेचाहितीयम्।

"In the beginning, My dear, there was That only Which Is, One only without a second."

Again in VI. 8. 7, and in subsequent Khandas he asserts-

स य परेाऽविमैतदारम्यमिष् सर्वं तत्सत्यम् ।

"Now that which is that subtle essence, in it all that exists has its self, it is the true."

These passages show that in the beginning Brahman alone existed, and every thing else existed in Brahman in a state of unity or non-difference from Him. They existed in such a subtle state that one could not say that they were separate from Brahman. These-two passages of the Chhandogya Upaniend show that before creation (or in Pralaya) one-ness (ekamevadvittiyam) of every thing was the case, and during and after creation (Sristi) Aitad-atmyam is the Law, namely, every thing in creation has Braman for its innermost Self.

If it be objected "there is no express text of the Chhândogya Upanişad declaring the origination of Âkâsa and you cannot infer from mere reasoning that Chhândogya Upanişad also meant to teach that Âkâsa is a product." Then we reply that it is not so. The next Sûtra gives the reason.

SÛTRA II. 8. 6.

यावद्विकारं तु विभागो लोकवत् ॥ २ । ३ । ६ ॥

भागन्तिकारम् Yavatvikaram, so far as all modifications go, wherever there is an effect. तु l'u, but. विभागः Vibhagaḥ, division, origination क्षोक्सन् Lokavat, like in the world.

6. But the Upanisad teaches that whatever is an effect has an origin, as we see in the world.—224.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Tu" shows that the doubt raised in the last Sûtra is being removed. The phrase "All this has its self in Him, etc., etc.," is a proposition stating that every effect has its origin in Him. In sacred texts like those of Subala Upanisad we find that Pradhana, Mahat, and the rest are all effects, and those texts expressly teach that they have their origin from Brahman. This is just like what we find in ordinary world. If a man says "All these are sons of Chaitra" and then he gives certain particulars about the birth of one of them, he implies thereby that it applies to the birth of all the rest. Similarly, when the Upanisad says that "All this has its self in Him," and then it goes on to give the origin of some of them from Him, such as fire, water and earth. It does not mean that others have not their origin in Him, but it only means that it was not thought necessary to give a detailed account of their origin. In fact, in Subila Upanisad it is stated that Pradhana, Mahat and the rest have their origin in Brahman. Therefore, though there is no express text in the Chhandogya Upanisad as to the origin of Akasa, yet we infer from the universal proposition therein laid down that "every thing has its self in Him," that Akada also has its self in Brahman, and so is produced from Brahman.

The word "Vibhaga" or "division" means here "origination." The Satra, II. 3. 3, asserts that we cannot conceive the origin of space. To this it may be replied that the powers of Brahman are mysterious and inconceivable, and Akasa arises from Brahman, though we cannot conceive how space can have any origin.

In some passages, Akasa no doubt is said to be Amritam or immortal, birthless and deathless, but we must understand it in a figurative sense, and not absolutely in its literal. Because we find in other passages that it has an origin and destruction. Thus we infer that Akasa also must have been taught by Uddalaka to have an origin and an end. Akasa is an element, like fire and air; therefore, it must have an origin. It is the substrate of impermanent qualities like sound, etc., and so also it must be impermanent. This is the direct argument to prove the origin and destruction of Akasa. The indirect argument to prove it is, "whatever has no origin is eternal as the Soul," and "whatever has permanent qualities is eternal as the Soul," but the Akasa not being like Soul in these respects, cannot be eternal. Thus both from direct and indirect reasoning, we infer the impermanency of Space. This Sûtra answers the objection raised in II. 3. 4. also. Therefore, the opinion of the modern philosophers, who hold that space has no origin, is untenable.

In the next Sûtra the same arguments are applied analogically to prove the origin of Vâyu also.

Adhikarana II.—Air is a product.

SÛTRA II. 8. 7.

एतेन मातरिश्वा व्याख्यातः ॥ २ । ३ । ७ ॥

स्तिम Etena, by this (the explanation about the Âkasa being a product). नारास्थित Matarisva, the mover in mother-space, the child of the virgin mother, the Vayu, the Christ. व्यावदात: Vyakhyatah, is explained.

7. Hereby is explained the origination of the Air also.—225.

COMMENTARY.

This explanation regarding the origination of space, explains also that Air has an origin as well, and is an effect. When space itself has an origin, Air which moves in space, must have an origin. The argument is as follows:—

The Pûrva-pakşin says that Air has no origin, because the Chhân-dogya Upanişad is silent upon this point. To this it is replied that Air originates from Akâda, because it is so mentioned in the Taittirlya Upanisad. To this the Pûrva-paksin rejoins that the birth of Air mentioned in the Taittiriya Upanisad is figurative only, because Air is said to be one of the immortals along with Akasa. (See the text quoted from the Bri. Up. under Sûtra II. 3. 3). To this we reply that even in the Chh. Up. the origination of Air is taught by implication, because it teaches that every thing has its self in Brahman, and that Uddalaka promises to teach one such thing, by knowing which every thing else would be known. Air, therefore, must also be an effect. No doubt in the Bri. Up. air is said to be an immortal, but He is only relatively immortal or during one kalpa. He never dies. This Sûtra might well have been included in the Sûtra II. 3. 1, by making the latter somewhat like this "Na viyat-matarisvanau, asruteh," "the space and air have no origin because the Chh. Up. is silent on this." But the author has not made the Sûtra thus, in order to indicate that in Sûtra II. 3. 9, the Anuvritti of Mataridva alone is current, and not that of Akasa. Had the Sûtra not been separately enunciated, we could not have read the Anuvriti of Air alone in the Sûtra 11. 3. 9. but of both Air and Space. Hence the necessity of Yoga-vibhaga or the splitting of one possible Sûtra into two.

Adhikarana III.—Sat has no origin.

The author now raises another doubt; whether the Sat mentioned in the Chh. Up., VI. 2. 1, has any origin or not, for when it says "Sat alone existed in the beginning, one only without a second" the doubt may arise, whether the Sat also has any origin. In other words, whether the Brahman itself has any origin. When such final causes as the Root-Matter and space have origin, it is possible that Sat or Brahman may also have origin. For it is a final cause, like the Root-matter or Pradhana, and like Space. In fact, a text of the Svet. Up. (IV. 3) clearly says that Brahman also is born or has an origin.

त्वं स्नी त्वं पुमानसि त्वं कुमार उत वा कुमारी। त्वं जीवें दण्डेन वंबसि त्वं जाता भवसि विश्वतामुकः ।

Thou art woman, thou art man, thou art youth, thou art maiden; thou, as an old man, totterest along on thy staff, thou art born with thy face turned everywhere.

This shows that Brahman also has an origin. The author answers this doubt by the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 8. 8.

ब्रसम्भवस्तु सतोऽनुषपत्तेः ॥ २ । ३ । ८ ॥

समान्य Asambhavah, non-origination. तु Tu, but. सतः Satah, of the Sat, of Brahman. अनुपर्योः Anupapatteh, on account of the impossibility (of there being an origin of Brahman).

8. But there can be no origin of Sat, because of its impossibility, (and unreasonableness).—226.

COMMENTARY.

The word "But" is used in order to remove the doubt. Of Brahman who is entitled to the designation of Sat, (i.e., that which exists) there can be no origin or sambhava. Why do we say so? Because he is the causeless cause of all, and of such a cause there can be no origin. Other causes may have an origin, nay they are bound to have an origin, but that which is the Sat, by its very name, cannot have any origination. Hence the same Sruti of Svet. Up. says (VI. 9)—

न तस्य कश्चित् पतिरस्ति शेकि न वैशिता नैव च तस्य क्रिक्सम्। स कारवं कार-वाविपाविषो न वास्य कश्चित्रानिता न वाविषः॥ ९॥

There is no master of His in the world, no ruler of His, not even a sign of Him. He is the cause, the Lord of the lords of the causes, and there is of Him neither parent nor lord.

Nor is it valid to say that because every cause has an origin, Brahman being a cause, must have an origin. This would be against all sacred texts and reasonings. A final cause being admitted by you, it is not desirable to search any cause of it, for then there would be an infinite regress. That which is the root cause, must be admitted to be rootless. As says the Sanklya Sûtra, I. 67:—

मूले मूकाभावादमूलं मूलम्।

Since the root has no root, the root (of all) is root-less, (that is to say, there is no other cause of Nature, because there would be a regressus in infinitum, if we were to suppose another cause, which, by parity of reasoning, would require another cause, and so on without end).

Thus removing the doubt as to whether Brahman has any origin or not, it is implied that Brahman alone being the Supreme cause is free from all origination, and every thing other than Brahman such as Pradhâna, Mahat, etc., has an origin. The special Sûtras teaching the origin of Âkâda and Vâyu are illustrative only; because they could have been deduced from the general proposition that every thing else than Brahman has an origin.

Adhikarana IV.—The fire originates from air.

Having finished the digression about Brahman, the text now goes on with the reconciliation of the conflicting Srutis as to the origination of fire. Some texts say that the fire originates direct from Brahman as the Chh.

Up., VI. 2. 2. Others declare that it originates from air. Those texts are given below:—

तत् तेअऽपेक्षत बहु स्वां प्रजायेयेति तद्याःस्जतः । तकाद यत्र क ब शोकति स्टेक्ते वा पुरुषस्तेजस एव तद्यापा आयन्ते।

It thought, may I be many, may I grow forth. It sent forth fire. Therefore, wherever and whenever any body weeps or perspires, water comes out; for it is from fire that water is produced.

तकाहा पतकादात्मन बाकादाः संभृतः । बाकादाद् वायुः । वाटे।रहिः । बहेरायः ।

"From that Self aprang Âkāsa; from Âkāsa, air; from air, fire:" "from fire, water."
The Pērva-pakşin says that fire comes direct from Brahman as taught in the Chb. Up., and the text of the Taittl. Up. can be explained by interpreting the ablative case in the sense of showing sequence. "Vāyoh Agnih." The word Vāyoh is in the ablative case, and may be translated either as "from Vāyu" or "after Vāyu." If translated "after creating Vāyu, Brahman created Fire" there would be no conflict between the two Upanicada. The Siddhānta view, however, is that fire originates directly from air, and the next fitter teaches this.

SÛTRA II 8. 9.

तेजोतस्तथाद्याष्ट्र ॥ २ । ३ । ६ ॥

ते अन्य Tejas, fire. श्वतः Atah, from it, namely, from Matariavan. सुशा Tatha, thus. दि Hi because, श्वाप Aha, says (the Scripture).

9. From Air is produced Fire, for thus says the Scripture.—227.

COMMENTARY.

From Matarisvan comes out the Fire, and the Scripture teaches this also. "Vayoh Agnih"—"from Air, fire." The sense is this. The word "Sambhûta" or "sprang" is used immediately before, and the sentence means "from Air sprang Fire," and we cannot translate this sentence "after Air sprang Fire." The primary meaning of the ablative case is that of "from" and not "after." When the primary meaning is possible, it is not desirable to take the secondary meaning. No doubt, every thing springs or is produced really from Brahman, but some come out directly and others through the mediation of a link. As will be taught in Sûtra II. 3. 12. Thus there is no conflict between the Chhandogya and Taittirfya teaching.

Adhikarana V.—Water is produced from Fire.

Now the author teaches the origin of Water. In the Mundaka Upanizad, Water is mentioned as originating direct from Brahman, while in other places it is mentioned as originating from Fire:—

यतमाज्ञायते प्राक्षा मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाचि म । सं वायुज्येतिरापः पृथिकी विश्वस्य भारिकी ॥ ३ ॥ From him (when entering on creation) is born breath, mind, and all organs of a other, air, fire, water, and the earth, the support of all. (Mundaka, II. 1. 3).

In the Chhandogya and Taittiriya Upanisad, Water is said to be produced from Fire (Chh. Up., VI. 2. 3).

तत् तेज पेसत बहु स्याम प्रजायेयेति तद्याऽव्जत ।

That fire thought, may I be many, may I grow forth. It sent forth water.

So also in the Taittiriya Upanisad, II. 1.

क्रोरापः ।

From Fire sprang Water.

(Pârva-pakṣa.) Water comes out directly from Brahman as the Mundaka text teaches. The ablative case must be explained in the sense of after; and as regards the Chhândogya text, we must admit that there is a plain contradiction between it and the Mundaka, which is simply irreconcileable.

(Siddhânta).—There is no such conflict as you apprehend. The next Sûtra answers your doubt.

BÛTRA II. 8. 10.

ञ्चापः ॥ २ । ३ । १० ॥

चापः Âpaḥ, waters. [चतः Ataḥ, from it. त्या Tathā, thus. दि Hi, because.

10. From Fire is produced Water, for thus says the Scripture.—228.

COMMENTARY.

The phrase "from it, thus the Scripture teaches" is to be supplied into this Sûtra, from Sûtra II. 3. 9, in order to complete the sense. The Water is produced from Fire, because the Scripture says:—"that fire thought may I be many, may I grow forth. It sent forth water. (Ch. Up. VI. 2. 3)."

" From fire, water (Taittiriya II. 1)."

There is no room for interpretation regarding a text which is express and un-ambiguous. In the Chhandogya Upanisad also is given the reason, why water comes out of fire.

"And, therefore, whenever any body anywhere is hot and perspires, water is produced on him from fire alone."

Similarly, when a man suffers grief and is hot with sorrow, he weeps, and thus water is also produced from fire.

Adhikarana VI.—Earth is produced from water and the word "food" in the Chhândogya Upanişad means earth.

In the Chhandogya Upanisad we further find:—ता चाप वेद्दार क्या व्याप व

Now what is the meaning of the word "food" here? Does it mean rice, barely, etc., or does it mean earth? The Pûrva-pakşin says it means corn, grain, etc., because of the reason given in the same Upanişad, vis., "Therefore whenever it rains anywhere, most food is then produced. From water alone is eatable food produced."

This shows that the word Annam means barley, etc., and not earth. This is one Pûrva-pakşa. Another Pûrva-pakşa arises from the Mundaka Upanişad were the earth is declared to come out directly from Brahman, and the Taittirlya Upanisad where it is said to come out from water. To remove both these doubts, the next Sûtra declares the Siddhânta view.

SÛTRA II. 8. 11.

पृथिव्यधिकाररूपशब्दान्तरेभ्यः ॥ २ । ३ । ११ ॥

वृतिची Prithivi, earth. श्रापिकार Adhikara, because of the context, because of the subject matter. इत Rupa, colour. श्रावस्थारिम्बः Babdantarebhyah, on account of other texts.

11. The word "food" in the Chhândogya Upanişad, VI. 2. 4, means "earth," because the context there is about the creation of the great planes of existence, and because colour is mentioned regarding it, and because there are other sacred texts also.—229.

COMMENTARY.

By the word Annam we must take here to mean "earth," and not barley, rice, etc., and this for three reasons:—

- (1) The whole Adhikara or subject matter of Chh. Up., VI. 2, is the creation of elements, such as fire, water, etc. Food is not a Mahâbhûta or element, hence its mention here would do violence to the context. It must, therefore, be explained as meaning an element, i.e., earth.
- (2) Colour is mentioned with regard to food, which also shows that the word "food" here means "earth." Thus it is said "the red colour of the flame is the colour of the flame is the colour of water, the black color of the flame is the colour of food (earth)."
- (3) There is an express text of the Taittiriya Upanisad (Adbhyah Prithivi), "from water, earth"; which clearly shows that earth is produced from water.

Of course, the reason given in the Chhandogya Upanisad is more applicable to food than to earth, but then we must explain the word food as a figure of speech, the effect taken for the cause. Earth never arises from rain, ordinary eatables do arise from rain. And the reason given by the Chhandogya:—"Whenever it rains any where most food is then produced" is applicable strictly to food. The word food here is used as a figure of speech for earth.

Adhikarana VII.—The great elements all arise direct from Brahman.

The author in the preceding sûtras has shown the creation of Akaés, etc., in a certain order, the succession being that from ether arises air, from air fire, from fire water, and from water earth. This succession is given merely to remove doubt and controversy regarding the order of manifestation of these elements. As a matter of fact, there was no necessity of teaching it here, because the Sûtra I. 1. 2. defines Brahman to be the cause of the origination of everything. The root matter Pradhans, the great principle Mahat, and the rest, have been shown to arise out of Brahman in that Sûtra. Now is taught details about this origination. In the Subala Upanisad we find:

किं तदासीत् ? तस्मै स होवाच न सचासच सदसदिति । तस्मात् तमः संजायते । तमसो भूतादिभू तादैराकाशमाकाशाद् चायुर्वायोरप्रिरप्नेरापोऽद्रश्यः पृथिवी तदण्डम-भवदिति ॥

The pupils ask "what existed in the beginning?" To them, replied the teacher, "neither being nor non-being, neither being-non-being existed then. It was both being and non-being. From it arose the Tamas (darkness), from Tamas arises the Bhûtâdi, from Bhûtâdi springs Âkâs; from Âkâsa, Vâyu; from Vâyu, Fire; from Fire, Water; from Water, Earth; and this became an egg.

Between Tamas and Âkâsa should be read the Aksara, the Avyakta and the Mahat. And after Bhûtâdi should be read Tanmâtrâs and the Indriyâs. Thus the complete order of creation is from Being Non-being arises Darkness, from Darkness arises the Imperishable; from the Imperishable, the Unevolved; from the Unevolved, the Great Principle; from it the Tanmâtras; from Tanmâtras, Indriyas or sense organs; and then the five elements. This we must do, in order to harmonise the subsequent passage in the same Upanisad regarding the absorption of elements at the time of pralays. That passage is given below:—

सन्दरम्या सर्वाचि भूतानि पृथिचन्द्र प्रछीयते । स्नापस्तेत्रसि सीयन्ते । तेत्रे। वायै। विकीयते । वायुराकाते विकीयते । भाकात्तमिन्दियेच्चिन्द्रयाचि तम्प्रात्रेषु , तम्प्रात्रावि

भूतादै। विकीयन्ते। भूतादिर्महति विकीयते॥ महानव्यक्ते विकीयते। स्वयक्तमक्षरे विकीयते। सक्षरं तमस्ति विकीयते। तम पक्तीमवति परिसन्। परस्मात् न सन्नासन्न सदसदिति॥

"When all beings are thus burnt up, the earth is merged in water, water in fire, fire in air, air in the ether, the ether in the sense-organs, the sense-organs in the Tanmatras, the Tanmatras in the bhutadi, (Ahankara); the bhutadi in the Great Principle, the Great Principle in the Unevolved, the Unevolved in the Imperishable; the Imperishable is merged in Darkness; Darkness becomes one with the highest Divinity."

The highest Divinity is that which has been defined as neither Sat (dense world) nor Asat (the subtle world), neither Sat-Asat (the mixture of the two forms); but something transcending both and from which arise the Sat and Asat.

The word Bhutâdi in the above means the principle of Ahamkâra which is three-fold. From the Sâttvic Ahamkâra arises Manas and the Devatâs. From the Rajas Ahamkâra arise the sense-organs, from the Tamas Ahamkâra arise the Tamaâtras, from which arise the five gross elements.

In the Gopála Upanişad it is said :-

पूर्वं द्वोकमेवादितीयं बद्धासीत्। तसादव्यकः व्यक्तमेवासरम् । तसादसरात् महान्। महतो वा बहङ्कारस्तसादहङ्कारात् पञ्च तन्मात्राचि । तेम्या भूतानि तैरावृतम-सरं मवतीति ।

"In the beginning there existed Brahman alone, one without a second. From Him arose the Unevolved and the Evolved, the Imperishables; from the Imperishable came the Great Principle, from the Great Principle Ahamkara, from the Ahamkara the five Tanmatras, from them the five gross elements; the Imperishable is coverd by all these."

Doubt—Now arises the doubt, do these Pradhana and the rest originate directly from Brahman, or from that which is mentioned immediately before it.

Pûrva-pakşîn.—They arise not directly from Brahman, but from the tattvas immediately preceding.

Siddhânta.—They arise directly from Brahman as is shown in the following sûtra:

तदभिष्यानादेव तु तर्छिगात्सः ॥२।३। १२॥

तब् Tat, that, his. स्रविध्यानाङ् Abhidhyanat, because of the volition, reflection. एव Eva, even. तु Tu, but तब Tat, his. जिंगाङ् Lingat, because of the inferential mark. सः Sah, he.

12. Brahman is the direct cause, because the text shows that they were produced by His reflection, which is an inferential mark.—230.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'but' is employed in order to remove the doubt. That Lord of all, endowed with the energy of Tamas and the rest, as mentioned in the Subala Upanisad, is alone the direct cause of all these effects, beginning with Pradhana and ending with earth. Why do we say so? Because creation of every one of these tattvas is preceded by the volition of the Lord as mentioned in the scripture. Everywhere we find "He desired, May I be many, May I grow forth." This volition cannot belong to insentient objects like fire, air, etc., but to Brahman alone. He determines upon having various abodes such as Pradhana and the rest; and dwelling in each, He successively creates the various elements. Lings or indicatory mark shows that Brahman entering into Darkness and the rest, modifies them into the various forms of Pradhana and the rest. Another Sruti also says that earth, fire, etc., are the bodies of the Lord. As for example in the Antaryami Brahmana of the Brihadaranyaka Upanisad II. 7.3, etc., and the Subala Upanisad, which declares "whose body is the earth, etc., whose body is the Unevolved."

Adhikarana VIII.—The Lord is the Chief cause working through matter.

SÛTRA II. 8, 18.

विपर्ययेख तु क्रमोत उपपद्यते च ॥२।३।१३॥

शिवकीय Viparyayena, through the reverse. तु Tu, but. आव: Kramaḥ, order. यह: Ataḥ, from this, from the Supreme Lord. अपवास Upapadyate, becomes possible. य Cha, and.

13. The reverse order (of creation or involution) mentioned in other Upanisads, becomes also possible if Brahman is the supreme cause of all—231.

COMMENTARY.

The word "but," has the force of "only," here. In the Mundaka Upanisad we find the following:--(II. 1. 3.)

पतसाकायते प्राचे मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाचि च । सं वायुज्येतिरापः पृथिवी विश्वस्य वारिकी व

From this is born Prana, Manas and all the senses, ether, air, light, water and the earth, the support of all.

Here Prana and Manas come first, while in the Subâla Upaniead, Pradhana and Mahat come first. This reversing of the order of succession, can be reconciled only then, if every thing comes directly from Brahman, the Lord of all. In that case, it matters little, in what order you describe the various emanations, and hence the scriptures do not follow any particular order, when they describe the coming out of these elements from Brahman. The Supreme Lord being the Inner Controller of every element, produces the next element through the first. Hence we say that from Him, the Supreme Lord, is produced all this, and the various texts can be reconciled if we hold that from this Supreme Lord, endowed with His different energies, are produced the various effects, Thus when he Sruti says "from fire is produced water," it means that from the Supreme Lord endowed with the energy of fire, is produced water. If this meaning is not given, then the text becomes irreconcileable. "The Supreme Lord is the material cause of every thing, is the creator of every thing, and by knowing Him alone, every thing else is known." This declaration of the scripture would be stultified, if we hold the contrary view that these Tattvas are produced not by Brahman directly, but from the Tattva preceding it. The Tattvas like the Pradhana and the rest being insentient, cannot modify themselves into their succeeding Tattva, without the co-operation of an intelligent cause. This is the force of the word "cha" in the Sûtra. Therefore it follows that Brahman is the direct cause everywhere.

Adhikarana IX.—Buddhi and Manas also are directly produced from Brahman

The author now raises a doubt se to whether Buddhi and Manas, mentioned in the Mundaka Upanisad, as coming after Prana are also directly produced from Brahman or from Prana.

8ÛTRA II. 8. 14.

अन्तरा विज्ञानमनसीक्रमेण तिर्क्किगादिति चेक्नाविशेषात् ॥२।३। १७ ॥

- 14. If it be objected that the organs of cognition and mind, occurring between Prâna and the Elements, in the Mundaka Upanisad, are mentioned in their order of succession, owing to an inferential mark of this; we say, no, because on account of non-difference.—232.

COMMENTARY.

By the word "Vijnana" is meant here the sense-organs of the body. An objector says, that the text of the Mundaka Upanisad "from Him is born Prana, Manas and all the sense-organs, ether, air, fire, water and the earth the support of all," declares not only the creation of these tattvas by the Supreme Lord, but their order of succession also. In fact this Sruti is specifically confined to teach the particular order of emanation. You cannot press this text in upholding your theory that all tattvas originate directly from Brahman, as you have done in your last Sûtra. The order of succession of ether, air, fire, water and earth may be learnt from other texts also such as that of the Subâla Upanisad. The mention of this in the Mundaka Upanisad is confirmatory of the order of succession already taught in the Subala. This text, therefore, has the indicatory mark in it, of teaching the order of succession; just like the text of the Subala Upanisad. Consequently, Manas and the Indriyas, mentioned in this text, between the Prana and the Elements, show the order of the origination of these, namely, first comes out Prana, from Prana comes out Manas, from Manas all organs of cognition, from them Akasa, from Akasa Air, from Air Fire, from Fire Water, and from Water Earth. You cannot employ this text in determining the direct origination of the tattvas from Brahman.

This objection raised in the first half of the Sûtra is answered by the last portion of it. Na-avisesât—it is not so, because there is no difference. All the various tattvas mentioned in the Mundaka Upaniṣad, beginning with Prāṇa and ending with earth, are taught as coming out directly from the Lord, and there is nothing particular about Manas and the sense-organs that they should have come out from Prāṇa and not from the Lord. In fact, the word "Etasmât" of that text, is to be read along with every one of these Prāṇa, Manas, etc. Thus, "from Him is born Praṇa, from him is born Manas, from Him is born the Indriyas, etc." The sense is this, the Lord desired to become many, and as a result of such desire, all these things Prāṇa, Manas, etc., came out of Him.

Note.—The inferential mark or lings mentioned in this text is to be found in the Sübäla Upanişad, where the same order is given as in the Mundaka. Since the Sübäla Upanişad text is explained by all authorities as teaching the particular order of succession, and the present commentator also admits the same, as in the first Sütra of the present Päda; the Mundaka text must also be interpreted as teaching the order of succession, because there is no difference between the texts of the Mundaka and the Subäla in this respect. Thus the similarity of the two texts, is an inferential mark, teaching us that both texts are meant to declare the order of succession. The full Pürva-pakşa is this. In the Mundaka text the word Prana means the Mahat Tattva, the Sütra-Atma, the first emanation. Manas means the Sättvic Ahamkara. Indriya means the Rajas Ahamkara; and "Ether etc." all mean the Tamas Ahamkara, the effects being everywhere taken for their cause. For Manas has its cause the Sättvik Ahamkara; the Senses the Rajas Ahamkara; and the five elements the Tāmas Ahamkara. Thus there is absolute identity between the Subäla and the Mundaka texts, and as the Subäla text teaches the order of succession, the Mundaka text must also teach the same. The reply to this is that the Mundaka text has a separate purpose altogether. It teaches the direct emanation from Brahman of every thing. The most important word in this text is "Etasmāt", "from Him," namely, "Etasmāt Pranah," "Etasmāt Manah, etc., from Him Prana, from Him Manas, etc.

In the Gita (X 8) also we find that the Lord declares:-

बाई सर्वस्य प्रभवो मक्तः सर्वे प्रवर्तते । इति मत्वा भवते मां बुधा भावसमन्विताः ॥

I am the origin of all; all evolves from me, understanding thus, the wise adore Me in rapt emotion.

So also in the Vâmana Purâna:-

तत्र तत्र सिता विष्युस्तत्तव्यक्तिं प्रवेष्वयेत्। एक एव महाशक्तिः कुस्ते सर्म्वमञ्जला ॥

The Lord Vişau entering into each tattva awakens the energy latent in it. He, the one Great Energy, alone produces all this in its beautiful order.

All these Smriti texts show that from the Supreme Lord directly come Pradhana and the rest. There is no conflict between the texts of the Subala and those of the Taittiriya and the Chhandogya Upanisadas. No doubt the word Tamas or Darkness does not occur in the latter Upanisad. But the Subala text means that the Supreme Lord possessed with the energy of Tamas and the rest, creates in succession the various effects, beginning with Pradhana and ending with Vayu. This is all understood in the Chhandogya Upanisad and is to be read into it from the Subala Upanisad to complete the text.

Thus supplying the omission of the Chhândogya from the Subâla, every thing becomes reconciled. Therefore, where the Chhândogya says, "He sent forth fire," the word "He" here means the Lord endowed with His energies of Tamas, Imperishable, the Unevolved, the Mahat, the Ahamkâra, the Âkâsa and the Vâyu. The Lord endowed with all these energies and vivifying all these energies said, "May I be many, May I grow forth, and then He sent forth fire." Similarly, the Taittiriya text is also incomplete, it begins the creation with Âkâsa by saying, from this Âtman arose Âkâsa. There also we must supply the same omission as we did in the case of the Chhândogya, namely from this Âtman endowed with the energy of Tamas and the rest up to Ahamkâra came out Âkâsa. In other words, that Supreme Lord who had awakened the energies of Tamas, of the Imperishable, of the Unevolved, of Mahat and of Ahamkâra created Âkâsa, etc.

Thus the full text of creation given in the Subâla Upaniead is the standard to judge and supply the omissions of the other texts.

Adhikarana X.—All words are names of God primarily and secondarily they denote other things.

An objector says, if Hari, the Lord of all, is the self of every thing, then all words denoting moveable and immoveable objects are really names of Hari. But as a matter of fact, we all know that those words are employed primarly to denote those objects and secondarily to denote the Lord. Therefore, you will have to admit that when the Sruti uses the phrase "the fire thought, May I be many, May I grow forth," the word fire can denote Brahman only in a secondary sense, and not primarily. This objection is answered by the next Sûtra which declares that all things moveable and immoveable abide in the Lord, and the terms denoting those things are the primary names of God and secondarily they are names of things.

BÛTRA II. 8. 15.

स्वात ॥२।३।१५॥

चराचर Charachara, moveable and immoveable. चराचर: Vyapasrayah, being the abode or who abides.in. तु Tu, but. स्वाच Syat, may be. तृत् Tat, that, those. व्यवस्थः Vyapadesah, designation, denotation. चराचर: Abhaktah, nonfigurative. त्रशाच Tad-bhava, that denotation expressing Him, denoting the Lord. अधिकाच Bhavitvat, on account of being in the future.

15.—But these words may denote primarily the Lord, because He abides in the things moveable and immoveable, though this meaning of the word as denoting Brahman primarily is learnt in a future time after hearing the scripture.—233.

COMMENTARY.

The word "but" removes the doubt raised in the last paragraph. The words which in ordinary use are names of things moveable and immoveable, are primarily the names of the Lord, because these moving and stationary objects are His bodies and because He abides in them. Those objects get their particular names from the particular aspect of Brahman residing in them. This Tad-bhava or the power of words to denote the names of the Lord, is not known to all men at once, but it is a matter which they come to know after studying the sacred Vedanta scriptures. In fact, the object of the Vedanta is to give rise to the knowledge that every word is really the name of the Lord. As says the Sruti "He desired May I be many," "He is Vasudeva, than whom there is nothing else." (Gopala Upanisad). In the Vienu Purana (III. 7-16) also:—

कटकमुक्तटकविकादिमेदैः कनकममेदपीच्यते यथैकम् । सुरपञ्जमतुकादि कस्पनामिद्देरिरिकछामिक्दीर्य्यते तथैकः ॥

As the gold is one, though manufactured into different objects like the bracelet, the crown, the ear-ring, etc., similarly, one Lord Hari pervades all jivas whether they be angels, men, or animals.

In the Svetasvatara Upanisad I. 9, we find the same idea.

The sense is this, all words denoting power or energy primarily denote the person possessing the power or energy, because energies have for their substratum the person possessing the energies.

Adhikarana XI.—Jîva is not created but is eternal.

In the previous Satras we have defined the Lord and determined His nature. He was defined as that from which every thing originates but which has no origin, because He is the root cause. Now the author begins to describe the jiva and to determine his nature. Therefore, he at first sets aside the wrong notion that the jiva has any origin.

Note.—The Lord possesses two powers (Sakti), namely, the Chit (all the jivas) and Achit or inanimate nature. In the previous Sûtras the inanimate nature or Achit has been discussed in various texts relating to this aspect of the Lord. And it has been shown how they arise from the Lord. Now upto the end of this Pâda the nature of the jiva is described. One class holds the view that jiva is not eternal, but is born and dies and the scriptural ceremonies relating to birth and death show that the jiva is non-eternal. The author however proves that jiva is eternal, and the scriptural ceremonies refer to the bodies of the jiva and not to the jiva.

The texts like the following give rise to the above doubt, "From whom arose the mother of all universe." The mother of the universe is the primary energy of the Lord. This we find in the Mahanarayana Upanişad I. 4, which is a part of the Taittiriya Aranyaka.

यतः प्रस्ता जगतः प्रस्ती तेयेन जीवान्यसस्तं भूभ्याम् । यदोषभीभिः पुरुषान्पराध्यक्ष विवेश भूतानि चराचराचि ॥

From whom is the birth of the creatrix of the universe, who poured down the souls along with the cosmic water on this earth, He who through the herbs entered into men and animals, all moveables and immoveables.

So also in the Chhandogya Upanişad we find "O dear, all these beings have the Sat for their origin."

Doubt.—Here arises the doubt whether the jivas have origin or . not.

Pûrva-pakşa.—The Pûrva-pakşin says the whole universe consisting of sentient or insentient creatures admittedly being an effect, it follows that souls are created like every other thing. If they were not created, but be held to be co-eternal with God, then you violate the promissory statement made in the Chhândogya Upanişad (VI. 1. 1) that by knowing which every thing else is known. For if jivas were co-eternal with God, then by knowing Brahman, jivas will not be known.

Siddhânta.—The souls however have no origin, but are eternal as shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 2. 16.

मात्माभुतेर्नित्यत्वाच्च ताभ्यः ॥२।३। १६॥

म Na, not. माना Atmà, self, jiva, soul. मुते: Éruteh, on account of scriptural statement. निसंसाद Nittyatvat on account of the eternity. प Cha, and. सुन्द: Tabhyah, from them, i.e., from the Éruti and Smriti.

16. The soul has no origin, because of the scriptural statement to that effect; it is eternal and intelligent, because from them (Sruti and Smriti) this is the conclusion.—234.

COMMENTARY.

The self or Atman here means the jivatman or the soul. It has no origin. The Sruti declares it to be so.—(Kath. Up., I. 2. 18).

न जायते ज्ञियते वा विपश्चिकायं कुतश्चिक वभूव कश्चित्। स्रजा नित्यः शाध्व-ते।ज्यस्पुराक्षे न इन्यते इन्यमाने शरीरे ॥

This experiencer of different pleasure and pain is not born nor does it die; it sprang from nothing, nothing sprang from it. The ancient is unborn, eternal, everlasting; he is not killed though the body is killed.

So also in the Svetasvatara Upanisad, I. 9.

शाही हावजावीशावजा शका भेकिभोगार्थयुक्ता । सनन्तश्चात्मा विश्वक्षेप हरकर्ता त्रयं यदा विंदते ज्ञामेतत् ॥ ९ ॥

There are two, one knowing (livara), the other not-knowing (jiva), both unborn, one strong, the other weak; there is she, the unborn, through whom each man receives the recompense of his works; and there is the infinite Self (appearing) under all forms, but Himself inactive. When a man finds out these three, that is Brahma.

This also shows that the jiva is without any birth. Moreover from these two, namely from the Sruti and the Smriti, we learn that the jiva is eternal. The force of the word "Cha" in this Sûtra is to indicate that the jiva is intelligent also. The Srutis like the following declare the soul to be eternal—(Kath Up., II. 5. 13).

नित्ये। जिल्लानाञ्चेतनश्चेतनश्चेतनानामेको बहुनां या विद्धाति कामान्। तमात्मस्यं वेश्चपद्यन्ति धीरास्तेषां ग्रान्तिः शाभ्वती नेतरेषाम् ॥ The Eternal among the eternals, the Consciousness among all consciousnesses, the One who bestows the fruits of Karmas to many jivas, the tranquil-minded ones who see Him seated in their Âtmå, get eternal happiness, but not the others.

Similarly it is unborn, eternal, everlasting; He is not killed though the body is killed.

This being the nature of the soul, the phrases like this "Yajāa-datta is born, he is dead"; and all worldly ceremonies relating to birth and death, have reference only to the bodies taken up by the jivas and not to the jivas themselves. In fact, the Brihadāranyaka Upanisad clearly says that a man is said to be born, when he assumes a body; and he is said to die, when he dissociates himself from the body. Thus birth and death are with reference to the body and not the soul. The text of the Brihadāranyaka Upanisad is the following (IV. 3. 8):—

स बाओं पुरुषा जायमानः शरीरममिसम्बद्यमानः पाप्यमिः सञ्चलते स उच्छा-मन् ज्ञियमाकः पाप्यमे। विज्ञहाति ॥ ८ ॥

On being born the soul assumes a body, and becomes united with all evils; on dying he departs from the body, and leaves all evils behind.

So also in the Chhandogya Upanicad (VI. 11. 3.) we find:— This body verily dies when the jiva abandons it, but the jiva never dies.

If this is so, how do you reconcile the statement made by the scripture that by knowing one every thing else is known, which implies that God is the only existence, and jiva also is an effect and has an origin. This. however, we reconcile by saying that the word "effect" is only the name of the same Brahman, when existing in a different condition as a manifestation. Brahman has two energies. When both of them are latent in Him, they are said to be non-existent; when they come out of Him the world is said to originate. The difference, however, between the jiva and the Pradhana is this. The non-sentient objects like Pradhana and the rest, which are the objects of enjoyment of the soul, undergo a change of essential nature when they originate from Brahman. But the souls (jivas) being the enjoyers, do not undergo any such change of essential nature when they come out of Brahman. The only change in their case consists in the contraction and expansion of intelligence. In the state of pralaya, the intelligence of the soul is in a state of contraction: and during the creation, the intelligence of the soul is in a state of expansion. In both cases, however, whether of contraction or expansion. the soul undergoes no change of essential nature. No doubt, both Soule and Matter are effects, or creatures of Brahman, as sent forth by Brahman: and hence they may be called as effects. And in this way, there is no contradiction in the statement that by knowing Brahman every thing elecis known. For by knowing the cause the effect is certainly known. This view harmonises all the Srutis. The conclusion is that the jiva has no origin.

Adhikarana XII.—The nature of the jîva is that it is the knower and the knowledge both.

Now the author determines the essential nature of the soul. There are some texts which show that the soul is the knower and others that it is knowledge. Thus the Antaryamin text of the Brihadaranyaka Upanişad shows that soul is knowledge.—(Brihadaranyaka, III. 7. 22).

या विज्ञाने तिष्ठन्विज्ञानावृत्तरो यं विज्ञानं न वेद यस्य विज्ञानक्ष शरीरं योविज्ञान्त्रम्यस्य स्वात्मास्यांम्यस्यः ॥

He who dwells in knowledge (vijffins), and within knowledge, whom knowledge does not know, whose body knowledge is, and who pulls (rules) knowledge within, He is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the immortal.

In another text we find "I slept soundly, I didn't know any thing." It thus appears that in one place the soul is called vijnan or knowledge in another it is the knower; knowledge being only its temporary attribute, for in deep sleep it has no knowledge.

(Doubt).—Therefore arises the doubt whether the soul is merely knowledge, or whether its essential nature is that of a cognising subject.

(Parva-pakea).—The essential nature of the soul is intelligence or knowledge, because the text of the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad shows that the soul is vijuaña or intelligence. The self-consciousness or cognition is merely the attribute of Buddhi and the assertion "I slept soundly," is really the assertion of Buddhi, when in contact with the soul. The soul is not the knower.

(Siddhanta).—The soul is however the knower, and it is not the superimposition of Buddhi on the soul, that makes soul appear as a knower, as is shown in the next Satra.

80TRA II. 8. 17.

ज्ञोतएव ॥२।३।१७॥

इ: Jfiah, the knower. चत्र्य Ataeva, for this very reason.

17. The Jîvâtman is the knower, for this very reason; because the scripture says so.—235.

COMMENTARY.

The jivâtman is not knowledge alone, and though its form is that of intelligence, its essential nature is that of a knower. As says the Prasna Upaniead (IV. 9.),

प्य हि द्रशा स्त्रशा भोता ज्ञाता रसयिता मन्ता बेाद्या कर्ता विद्यानात्मा पुरुषः । स परेअरे पात्मनि सम्मतिहते ॥

Verily he is the beholder, the toucher, the hearer, the smeller, the taster, the thinker, the determiner, the door the Vijfianatma, the Purusa. (Re who knows this Purusa becomes established in the Righest Self).

The phrase for this very reason means, that because the scripture declares it to be so. We hold the soul to be the knower, because the scripture declares it to be so, and we do not allow our reason any scope here. In fact, we take our stand on the text of the Vedanta Sûtra, II. 1. 27, which declares that the scripture alone is the root from which we learn any thing about these transcendental subjects. The jiva is declared in the Smritis also to be the knower, having knowledge as its essential form. On the strength of the assertion "I slept soundly, I had no knowledge of any thing," we cannot say that the soul is mere intelligence, and that it becomes the knower, only when it comes in contact with Buddhi; for then you contradict all those texts which declare the soul to be the knower. Therefore it follows that the soul is both the knower and has knowledge for its essential nature.

Adhikarana XIII.—Jîva is atomic.

Now the author tries to ascertain the size of the soul. In the Mundaka Upanisad, it is said that the soul is atomic in its size.—(III. 1. 9.)

६वेाऽसुरात्मा चेतसा वेदितब्या यक्षिन् प्राचः पञ्चषा संविवेश । प्राचैक्षित्तं सम्बंभातं प्रजानां यक्षिन् विद्युक्ते विभवत्येष चात्मा ॥

This atomic soul is to be known by that mind alone, in which the chief prana has completely withdrawn the five-fold activities; for the mind of all created beings is entirely interwoven by these five pranas and is never quiet. This atomic soul is to be known by that mind which being perfectly pure makes the soul manifest its power.

(Doubt). -Now arises the doubt, is the soul atomic as declared in the above Sruti or is it all-pervading?

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The soul is all-pervading, because another text says that it is Mahat or big. Even the opponents also admit the validity of the following Sruti (IV. 4. 14.—22.) Brihadâranyaka Upanişad where it is said, this Âtman is Mahat and unborn:—

स वा एव महानज झात्मा योज्यं विवानमयः प्रावेशु य एवे।असर्हेव्य साकाशस्त-विवन्तेते ॥

And he is that great unborn Self, who consists of knowledge, is surrounded by the Pranas, the other within the heart, wherein it reposes.

Here the soul is called great and so it cannot be atomic. It is called atomic in a figurative sense only.

(Siddhanta).—The soul is really atomic, as the next Sutra shows it.

607RA, H. & 18.

उत्क्रान्तिगत्यागतीनाम् ॥२।३। १८॥

gunfen Utkränti, passing out. of Gati, going, weifing Agatinam, returning.

18. The soul is atomic, because the scripture declares that it passes out, it goes and returns; while such declarations would be unmeaning if the jiva were omnipresent—236.

COMMENTARY.

The word "atomic" is understood here, and is to be read in this Sûtra from II. 3. 20, where it is used by the Pûrva-pakşin. The Sûtra is in the genitive case (gatinam) but the force of the genitive is that of the ablative. This jiva is atomic in its size, and not all-prevading and that for three reasons, (1) the scriptures declare its passing out; and an all-pervading substance cannot pass out. The following text of the Brihadaranyaka Upanişad (IV. 4. 2) shows the method of the soul's passing out at the time of death.

तस्य दैतस्य इष्यस्यातं प्रचोतते तेन प्रचोतेनैय चात्मा निष्कामति चधुना वा मूर्जो वाज्येन्या वा शरीरदेशेन्यसमुक्कामन्तं प्राचाऽन्त्कामति प्राचमन्त्कामन्तश्रसर्वे प्राचा सन्तकामन्ति स विद्याना भवति स विद्यानमेवान्यकामति ॥

The point of his heart becomes lighted up, and by that light the Self departs, either through the eye, or through the skull, or through other places of the body. And when he thus departs, life (the chief prana) departs after him, and when life thus departs, all the other vital spirits (pranas) depart after it. He is conscious, and being conscious he follows and departs.

2. Another verse of the same shows where souls of some persons go after death (Brihadaranyaka Upanişad, IV. 4. 11.)

सनदा नाम ते क्रोका चन्चेन तमसाऽभ्यताः ॥ ताश्चरते प्रेखामिनच्छ्यविद्वाशः सोऽजुवेर सनाः ॥

There are indeed those unblessed worlds, covered with blind darkness. Men who are ignorant and not enlightened go after death to those worlds.

3. Similarly in IV. 4. 6 of the same Upanisad is shown that the तदेव रहोको भवति ॥ तदेव सका सह कर्मावैति किन्नुं मना यत्र निष्कामस्य ॥ त्राचान्तं कर्मावतस्य वरिकानेद् करोत्वयम् ॥ तकाक्कोकारपुनरेत्वस्मै केकाय कर्माव इति ॥

And here there is this verse: "To whatever object a man's own mind is attached, to that he goes strennously together with his deed; and having obtained the end (the last results) of whatever deed he does here on earth, he returns again from that world (which is the temporary reward of his deeds) to this world of action."

These three texts of the Brihadaranyaka Upanisad show the passing out, moving and returning of the soul. If the soul were all-pervading, then these things could not be possible for it.

In the Bhagavata Purana also it is declared :-

चपरिमिता भुवास्ततुभृते। यदि सम्बेगतास्तर्हि न शास्प्रतेति नियमे भुव नेतरचेस्वाविका दि स्वृतिः ॥

O Lord, if the soul were measureless, fixed and all-pervading then there would not arise the relationship of being ruled and the ruler. Thou, O Lord! couldst not be its ruler nor it the ruled. But if it were atomic that would be possible.

The Lord, however, is both atomic and all-pervading at the same time; and moving and returning, when attributed to the Lord are not contradictions, because he possesses mysterious powers, and all paradoxical statements are appropriate in his case.

The soul may be all-pervading and unmoving, and still the epithet of going out may be applied to it in a figurative sense, as it is applied to the ruler of a village, when he ceases to be its ruler. The all-pervading soul, when it ceases to rule the body, is said to pass out of the body. There is no real passing out. When it has the Abhimâna of a body, it is said to be born, there is no real birth. The word "Utkrânti" therefore, may possibly be explained in a figurative sense. But the Sûtra uses two other words "Gati" and "Âgati," going or returning. These words cannot be explained metaphorically. A non-inoving soul cannot be said to go out or come back. The next Sûtra shows this.

SÛTRA II. 8. 19.

स्वात्मनश्चोत्तरयोः ॥२।३।१९॥

- न: Svåtmanah, through the self. च Cha, and, only. उत्तरको: Uttarayoh, of the latter two, namely, of Gati and Âgati.
- 19. The latter two, namely moving and returning, can be effected only through the self (and cannot be explained in a metaphorical way).—237.

COMMENTARY.

The two last attributes mentioned in the previous Sûtra can only have relation with the self, because the actions denoted by these verbs reside in an active agent. They cannot be explained metaphorically. That being so, the word Utkranti or "passing out" must also be taken in its literal sense. It must mean that the soul is a definite something, which passes out of the body at the time of death; and not that it is an all-pervading substance that ceases to have any connection with the body. In fact, the method of passing out shows that particular portion of the heart is lighted up and catching hold of that ray of light, the soul passes out of the body. The same idea is expressed in the Gita also (XV-8.)

शरीर' यद्वामोति यचाप्युत्कामतीम्बरः। युद्दीत्वैतानि संवाति वायुर्गवानिवाद्यात् ॥

When the soul acquireth a body and when He abandoneth it, He seizeth these and goeth with them, as the wind takes fragrances of flowers from their receptacles (from the anthers of flowers in which fragrances reside).

The statement "these three words, 'passing out,' moving' and returning' have a metaphorical sense only, and mean souls abandoning the idea of rulership over the body or assuming such idea," is wrong, because in that view the statement of the Kausitaki Upanisad (III. 3.) will be irreconcileable. There it is said:—

यत्रैतत्पुरुष चार्तो मरिष्यजाबस्यं न्येत्य मेाहं नेति तदाहुददक्रमीश्चितं न श्वेतित न पदयति वाचा बदत्ययासिन्माय प्रवेजवा मवति तदैनं वाच्सवेंनांमिकः सहाप्येति बक्षुः सर्वे क्यैः सहाप्येति भोत्रं सर्वैः द्याद्येति मनः सर्वेष्यातैः सहाप्येति स यदा प्रतिबुच्यते यथाग्नेर्ज्यस्तो विस्कुद्धिङ्गा विप्रतिष्ठेरचे वमेवैतसादात्मकः प्राचा यथायतमं विप्रतिष्ठान्ते प्राचेन्यो देवा देवेग्यो छोकाः ॥ ३ ॥

When a man is thus sick, going to die, falling into weakness and faintness, they say:
"His thought has departed, he hears not, he sees not, he speaks not, he thinks not." Then he becomes one with that prana alone. Then speech goes to him (who is absorbed in prana) with all names, the eye with all forms, the ear with all sounds, the mind with all thoughts.
And when he departs from this body, he departs together with all these.

The word used in the original is "Saha" or together. This would not have been used, had soul been all-pervading. When the same action is done by two subjects, one principal and the other subordinate, there the word "Saha" is used, as in the sentence "The father eats together with the son." Therefore, when this Upanisad uses the phrase "He departs together with all these," it must mean actual departing and not metaphorical The illustration given in the Gita of the wind taking up the fragrance from the recepticle of the flower, also shows the actual taking up of something and carrying it away, for the relationship of the wind with the fragrant substance is that of the seizer and the seized. This also answers the theory of the Mayavadins who consider soul to be like the portion of space, enclosed within a jar, and that its passing out or coming in are merely phrases having no meaning, except that breaking up of the iar or coming into existence of it. It is only through ignorance that one thinks that the soul goes out or comes into the body, say the Mayavadins. Their theory has no scriptural authority.

SÛTRA II. 8. 20.

नाग्रुरतच्छूते रितिचेन्नेतराधिकारात् ॥२।३।२०॥

न Na, not. सञ्च: Anub, atom. सत्तत् Atat, not that, namely opposite of Anu. भूते: Sruteh, because of a Sruti or scriptural text. इति Iti, thus. केल Chet, if, न Na, not. इत्तर Itara, the other, namely, the Supreme Self and not the jiva self. स्थिताराङ् Adhikarat, because of the context or topic.

20. If this be said that "the soul is not atomic because there is scriptural text contrary to that," we reply, it is not so. That text refers to the Supreme Self, because that is the context.—238.

COMMENTARY.

(Pârea-pakşa).—The jiva is not atomic, says the Pûrva-pakşir, because in the Brihadâranyaka Upanişad he is described as infinite. The original text is given below (IV. 4. 22):—

स वा एष महानज बात्मा थेऽयं विज्ञानमयः प्रावेषु य एषेऽन्तर्ह्वय बाकाइस्त-स्मिन्छेते सबस्य वशी सबस्येशानः सबस्याधिपतिः स न साधुना कर्माका भूयाचो एषा साधुना कनीयान् एष सर्वेश्वर एष भूताधिपतिरेष भूतपाछ एष सेतुविधरक एषा छोका-नामसम्मेदाय तमेतं वेदानुष्वनेन ब्राह्मका विविदेषन्ति यह न दानेन तपसाऽनाशकेनैतमेव विदित्वा मुनिर्मवति एतमेव प्रवाजिनो छोकमिष्कन्तः प्रवजन्ति ।

And he is that great unborn Self, who consists of knowledge, is surrounded by the Pranas, the ether within the heart. In it there reposes the ruler of all, the Lord of all, the king of all. He does not become greater by good works, nor smaller by evil works. He is the Lord of all, the king of all things, the protector of all things. He is a bank and a boundary, so that these worlds may not be confounded. Brahmanas seek to know him by the study of the Veda, by sacrifice, by gifts, by penance, by fasting, and he who knows him, becomes a Muni. Wishing for that world (for Brahman) only, mendicants leave their homes.

Here the Âtmâ is described as Mahat or great, it therefore cannot be small or atomic. This objection is raised in the first part of the Sûtra and the answer is given in its second half.

(Siddhānta).—The Ātmā referred to in this Sruti is not the Jiva atman, but the other or the Param Atman, because the topic here is of the Supreme Self, and not of the individual soul. No doubt the subject is started in the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad, IV. 3. 7, by the following description of the jiva self:—

कतम चात्मेति योऽयं विद्यानमयः प्राचेतु इचन्तज्योतिः पुरुषः स समानः समुमा क्षेत्रकाषतुराज्यपति ज्यायतीय केळायतीय सहि स्वप्नो भृत्येमं क्षेत्रकामति सुखो कपाचि ।

Janaka Valdeba said :- "Who is that Self?"

Yajāavalka replied:—"He who is within the heart, surrounded by the pranas (senses), the person of light, consisting of knowledge. He, remaining the same, wanders along the two worlds, as if thinking, as if moving. During sleep (in dream) he transcends this world and all the forms of death (all that falls under the sway of death, all that is perishable.)

Yet in the middle IV. 4. 13, the topic started is that of the Supreme Self and consequently the word Mahat refers to Param Atman and not to the Jiva. The passage is given below:—

यस्यातुषिकः प्रतिबुद्धं चात्माऽस्मिन्सन्देद्यो गहने प्रविच्छः । स विश्वकृतस दि सर्व स्य कर्तां तस्य क्षेत्रकः स तु क्षेत्रक पद ॥ १३ ॥

Whoever has found and understood the Self that has entered into this patched-together hiding-place, He indeed is the creator, for He is the maker of every thing, His is the world, and He is the world itself.

This verse and the verses which follow it all describe the Supreme Self and consequently the word Mahat used in one of these verses (IV. 4. 22) cannot refer to the jiva-atman but shows the greatness of the Supreme Self. To understand the whole argument, those verses are also given below:—

हरैव सन्तोऽय विश्वस्तद्वयं न वेदवेदीर्महती विनष्टिः। य पतव्विदुरसृतास्ते भवन्त्ययेतरे दुःवार्मणि यन्ति ॥ १४ ॥ यदैतमनुप्रयत्यास्मानं देवमञ्ज्ञसा । ईशार्मभृतमयस्य न तता विद्वगुण्सते ॥ १५ ॥ यस्माव्वांक्संवत्सरोऽहोभिः परिवर्ष ते । तहेथा ज्योतिषां ज्योतिरायुद्देपास्तेऽमृतम् ॥ १६ ॥ यस्मिन् पञ्च पञ्चजना भाकाशस्य प्रतिष्ठितः । तमेव सन्य भात्मानं विद्वान्मद्यामृतेऽमृतम् ॥ १७ ॥ प्रावस्य प्रावमृत वश्चवस्यश्चरत भोजस्य भोजं मनसो ये मनो विद्वः । ते निविष्युक्तं पुरावमध्यम् ॥ १८ ॥ मन सैवातु-द्वस्यं नेद नानास्ति किञ्चन । मृत्योः स मृत्युमाप्नोति य इह नानेव पद्यति ॥ १९ ॥ पक्षवात् द्वस्यमेतव्यमेयं भ्रवम् । विरजः पर भाकाशाव्ज भात्मा महान्भुवः ॥ २० ॥ तमेव धीरो विद्याय प्रवां कुर्वात भाद्यकः । नातुष्यायावृत्वस्थ्यवान्ताचे विकापमधः हि तदिति ॥ २१ ॥

- 14. While we are here, we may know this; if not, I am ignorant, and there is great destruction. Those who know it, become immortal, but others suffer pain indeed.
- 15. If a man clearly beholds this Self as God, and as the Lord of all that is and will be, then he is no more afraid.
- 16. He behind whom the year revolves with the days, Him the Gods worship as the light of lights, as immortal life.
- 17. He in whom the five beings and the ether rest, him alone I believe to be the Self,—I who know, believe Him to be Brahman; I who am immortal, believe Him to be immortal.
- 18. They who know the life of life, the eye of the eye, the ear of the ear, the mind of the mind, they have comprehended the ancient, primeval Brahman.
- 19. By the man alone it is to be perceived, there is in it no diversity. He who perceives therein any diversity, goes from death to death.
- 20. This Eternal Being that can never be proved, is to be perceived in one way only; It is spotless, beyond the other, the Unborn Self, great and eternal.

21. Let a wise Brahmana, after he has discovered Him, practise wisdom (meditation). Let him not seek after many words, for that is more weariness of the tongue.

SÛTRA II. 8. 21.

स्वराज्योन्मानाभ्यां च ॥२।३।२१॥

स्यतका Sva-sabdah, its own word, the very word Anu or atom. उञ्चातानवाद् Unmanabhyam, on account of the measure: or comparison. च Cha, and.

21. The soul is atomic, because the very word atom is applied to it, and because its measure is also given in the scriptures.—239.

COMMENTARY.

In the Mundaka Upanisad, II. 1. 9, already quoted before, the word "Anu" is directly applied to the soul. Similarly, comparison of the soul is made with very small things, to show its measure or size. The word Unmana means "measuring a thing by comparing it with another." Thus in the Svetasvatara Upanisad, V. 9, we find the following comparison:—

बालाप्रशतमागस्य शतथा कल्पितस्य च । भागा जीवः स विश्वे यः स चानन्याय कल्यते ॥

The jiva is to be known as part of the hundredth part of the point of a hair divided a hundred times, and yet it is to become immortal, and mukta.

The word "Anantya" in the above verse does not mean infinity but deathlessness, namely Mukti. The word "Anta" means death. The condition of deathlessness is called "Anantya." These two scriptural texts—the direct statement of the Mundaka Upanisad, and the simile of the Svetasvatara Upanisad show that the soul is atomic.

If it be objected that soul being atomic must be confined to a particular portion of the body and it could not perceive sensations extending over the whole body, the reply is thus given by the author.

SÛTRA II. 8. 22.

म्रविरोधश्चन्दनवत् ॥२।३।२२॥

चरियेश: Avirodhaḥ, non-conflict, non-contradiction. चन्दनगर Chandanavat, like sandal-wood.

22. There is no contradiction, because the sensation is felt as in the case of sandal oil.—240.

COMMENTARY.

A drop of sandal oil of the first quality called Hari Chandana placed in one part of the body causes a pleasant sensation all over the body, similarly, the soul though residing in a particular portion of the body perceives all that is going on throughout the world. Thus it is in the Brahmanda Purana:—

ससुमात्रोहप्ययं जीवः स्वरेहं व्याप्य तिष्ठति । यथा व्याप्य शरीरावि हरिकन्दनविमुनः ॥

This soul though of the size of an atom pervades the whole body, just as the drops of Hari Chandana, placed in a particular part of the body, pervade throughout the body with their pleasant sensation.

Soul dwells in the heart.

SÛTRA 11.8.28.

श्रवस्थितिवैशेष्यादिति चेन्नाऽभ्युपगमाद्धृदि हि ॥२।३।२३॥

स्वतितात Avasthiti, residence, abode. देशेष्ट्रात् VaidesyAt, on account of specialisation. इति lti, thus. चेत् Chet, if. न Na, not. सम्युपनगत् Abhyupagamāt, on account of acknowledgment, on account of acceptance. इति Hridi, in the heart. दि Hi, because.

23. If it be said, "the sandal drop has a particular abode, while the soul has no such abode; and therefore it is not atomic;" we say this is not so, because it is acknowledged that the soul has a particular abode, namely, in the heart.—241.

COMMENTARY.

We see the sandal oil to be in actual contact with some particular portion of the body, but the soul is not seen to be in any particular part of the body; nor can we infer its existence in any particular part of the body, for the reason would show that it must be all-pervading throughout the body, because it perceives the sensation throughout. The illustration, therefore, of the sandal oil is not to the point. This objection is answered by the latter part of the Sûtra. There is no occasion to employ our reason in trying to find out the particular spot of the body where the soul resides. The scripture, distinctly mention that the soul resides in the heart. Thus in the Prasna Upanisad (III. 6) we find:—

द्ववि द्येष चात्मा

The Soul is in the heart.

In the next Sûtra, the author shows his final opinion, declaring that though the soul is atomic, it can perceive sensations all over the body, through its rays; as shown in the case of a flame; and even thus there would be no conflict.

SÛTRA II. 8. 24.

गुणाद्वालोकवत् ॥२।३।२४॥

Gunat, on account of its quality (of intelligence). वा Va, or. आसीकावस् Aloka-vat, like light.

24. Or the soul may pervade the whole body, by its quality of intelligence, as the flame pervades the whole room by its rays.—242.

COMMENTARY.

The soul, though atomic, pervades the whole body by its attribute of intelligence, namely, by its power of sentiency just as light. The sun or a candle, though placed in a particular spot, illumines the whole universe or the room, by their rays. Similarly the soul, though residing in the heart, perceives all sensations. As says the Lord in the Gita (XIII, 33):—

यया प्रकाशयत्येकः इत्स्नं क्षेक्तिमं रक्षिः। क्षेत्रं क्षेत्री तथा इत्स्नं प्रकाशयति भारत ॥ ३३ ॥

As the one sun illumineth all this universe, so the soul illumines the whole of this body. You cannot say that the rays of the sun are particles detached from it, and spread themselves all over the world; for if it were so, then the sun will be constantly losing its mass and decreasing in size; but this is not the case. Moreover, gems like rubies, etc., give out rays of light without losing their weight, as may be observed by any one. In the case of gems, we know that no material particles are given out by them. Their light is their quality, and not any portion of their substance.

Note.—This theory is however now an exploded one. The rays of the sun are really particles of matter, so light that they cannot be weighed. The loss of the sun's mass is constantly being replenished by the fall of meteors into it. In the case of gems, like radium, which emit light, it is a scientific fact that that light is matter and a portion of the substance of the radium and not its quality. Similarly, the soul pervades the body, by its light which is really a substance of the soul. The highest vesture of the soul consists of the Karana saira and it is through the particles of this Karana Sarira that the soul comes in contact with the external world, namely, its body. The Karana Sarira is constantly being replenished by the matter of the highest plane.

In the above Sûtra it has been shown that a quality can function in a place apart from the substance of which it is the quality. As light can function and illumine an object in a place different from the place where the flame is, of which the light is a quality. The author shows this by another illustration.

SUTRA II. 8. 25.

व्यतिरेकोगन्धवत् तथा हि दर्शयति ॥ २ । ३ । २४ ॥

व्यक्तिः: Vyatirekah, distinction. difference. गण्यस् Gandha-vat, like the odour. त्या Tatha, thus. हि Hi, verily. र्यायति Darsayati, the scripture shows or declares.

25. The quality may function in a place distinct from the thing qualified, as in the case of smell, for thus the scripture also declares.—243.

COMMENTARY.

As smell of flowers and the rest, being the quality of flowers, etc., are perceived even in a place distinct from the objects of which they are the qualities, so the sentiency, which is the quality of the soul, may function in head, feet, etc., namely, in places other than the heart, where the soul dwells. The scripture also declares this, for we find in the Kausitaki Upanisad the following (III. 6)

प्रवा वाचं समावद्य वाचा सर्वाचि नामान्याप्तीति प्रवया प्राचं समावद्य प्राचेन सर्वान्नन्यानाप्तीति प्रवया चक्षुः समावद्य चक्षुवा सर्वाचि क्याच्याप्तीति प्रवया औषं समावद्य ओषेच सर्वान्छन्दानाप्तीति प्रवया जिद्वां समावद्य बिद्वया सर्वान्वरसा-नाप्तीति प्रवया इस्ती समावद्य इस्ताम्यां सर्वाचि कर्माच्याप्तीति प्रवया इस्ति समावद्य शरीरेच सुचादुःचे चाप्तीति प्रवयापस्यं समावद्योपस्येनानन्त् रति प्रजातिमाप्तीति प्रवया पादा समावद्य पादाभ्यां सर्वा इत्या चाप्तीति प्रवयेच चियं समावद्य प्रवयेच थियो विद्यातस्य कामानाप्तीति ॥ ६ ॥

Having by Prajfiå (sentiency or the power of feeling) taken possession of speech (tongue), he utters by the tongue all words. Having by sentiency taken possession of the nose, he smells all odours. Having by sentiency taken possession of the eye, he sees all forms. Having by sentiency taken possession of the tongue, he obtains all tastes of food. Having by sentiency taken possession of the two hands, he performs all actions. Having by sentiency taken possession of the body, he obtains pleasure and pain. Having by sentiency taken possession of the organ, he obtains happiness, joy and offspring. Having by sentiency taken possession of the two feet, he performs all movements. Taving by sentiency taken possession of the two feet, he performs all movements. Taving by sentiency taken possession of the brain (dhi), he generates all thoughts and perceives all thought-forms.

Though the smell of a flower extends to a great distance from the flower, yet it is not cut off from it, just as the light of a gem, like radium, though extending to a great distance is not cut off from the gem. As we find in the following Smriti.

If any one finding smell in water may say, the smell is the quality of water, he is verily mistaken; for smell is always the quality of earth, though it may be found in different places, such as in water or air. One mistakes the air or water to have scent, because temporarily the scent has taken these objects as its place of manifestation.

In the Sruti we find it declared :—(Praina IV. 9).

यत्र हि ब्रह्म कान्या भोता ज्ञाता रस्तियता मन्ता बाह्य कर्या विद्यानात्मा पुरुषः । स परेज्ञारे चात्मनि सम्मतिष्ठते ॥ ९ ॥

For he it is who sees, hears, smells, tastes, perceives, conceives, acts, he whose essence is knowledge, the person, and he dwells in the highest, indestructible self.

(Doubt).—Now arises the doubt, whether intelligence which is an attribute of the soul is eternal or not.

(Pûrva-pakşa)—The Pûrva-pakşin says, the soul is inert like stone; and intelligence manifests in it, when mind comes in contact with it. Had intelligence been a permanent quality of the soul, then it would not have been lost in deep sleep; when according to all texts and experience, the soul knows nothing. The intelligence of the soul is therefore an accidental quality, manifested in the soul by its contact with mind; just as the fire which is not the quality of the iron, manifests in the iron when it is heated in the fire. Had knowledge been the permanent attribute of soul, then it would not have been lost in deep sleep. Moreover, if intelligence were the natural and inseparable quality of the soul, then there was no necessity of an organ of intelligence like the mind; for just as if seeing was the invariable attribute of the soul, there would be no necessity of an organ like the eye to perceive an object. In fact, the Sruti which declares that the soul has no consciousness in deep sleep, and the Sruti (Brihad-aranyaka IV. 5. 14) which declares that the attributes of the soul are never lost, but are eternal and indestructible, conflict with each other. Hence it follows that the intelligence is an accidental quality of the soul.

sûTRA II. 3. 26.

पृष्णुपवेशात् ॥१।३।२६॥

कुषक, Prithak separate. क्योगात, Upadesat because of teaching or statement.

26. The intelligence of the soul is permanent, because there is a separate statement in the scripture to that effect.—244.

COMMENTARY.

In the text of the Prasna Upanisad as well as in that of the Brihadâranyaka we find a distinct statement made to the effect that the attributes of the soul also are eternal. The Brihad-âranyaka Upanisad (IV, 5. 14) distinctly says that not only is the jivâtman imperishable, but its qualities also are indestructible. It is not by contact with mind that the soul manifests its quality of intelligence, for both being partless there can be no contact between them. The intelligence of the soul becomes obscured when it turns its face away from the Lord, and it manifests when this obscuration is destroyed by turning its face towards the Lord. As we find in the following text of Saunaka:—

वंधा न क्रियते ज्योत्स्ना मक्त्रमास्नान्यकः। देशकादानात् न बानमास्मनः क्रियते तथा ॥ १ ॥

ययोदपानवानात् क्रियते न जहान्तरम् । सदेव नीयते व्यक्तिमसतः सम्भवः कृतः ॥ २ ॥ तथा देयगुक्तवंसादवरोषादयो गुकाः । भकादयन्ते न जन्यन्ते निस्या प्यात्मना दि ते इति ॥ ३ ॥

As by rubbing off the dust from a gem the light is not created in the gem, but the light, which is the inherent attribute of the gem, manifests itself owing to the removal of the covering dust, similarly the intelligence of the soul manifests itself when the faults are removed. As by digging the earth, water, comes out of a well, but is not created by the act of digging, similarly the soul manifests its intelligence when the layers of ignorance concealing it are removed; just as the water of the spring bubbles up when the super-incumbent layers of earth are removed by digging. In fact when the obscuring faults are destroyed, the innate qualities of the soul manifest themselves; they are not created, because they are the eternal attributes of the jiva.

The text of the Brihad-aranyaka Upaniead (III. 7. 22) says:-

थे। विज्ञाने तिष्ठन्विज्ञानावृत्तरो यं विज्ञानं न चेव् यस्य विज्ञानॐ शरीरं ये। विज्ञानमन्तरो यमयत्वेच त चात्मानार्याम्बद्धतः ॥ २२ ॥

Re who dwells in Vijfans (knowledge, jfratma), and within knowledge, whom knowledge does not know, whose body knowledge is, and who pulls (rules) knowledge within, he is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the immortal.

This declares that the soul is knowledge, and not the knower. The apparent doubt raised by this Sruti is answered in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA IL 8. -27.

तद्गुणसारत्वात्तद्व्यपदेशः प्राज्ञवत् ॥२।३।२०॥

तम् Tat, that. सुद्ध Guna, quality, that quality or those qualities, on account of the quality or qualities of that, that quality, namely, the quality of intelligence or knowledge. श्रारकार Saratvat, being the essence. सह Tat, that, namely knowledge, अपरेश: Vyapadesah, designation. नास्तर Prajna-vat, like the term Prajna, when applied to the Lord.

27. The soul gets the designation of knowledge, because that quality is its essential attribute, as the Lord Visnu is called Prajaa or omniscience, because it is His essential attribute.—245.

COMMENTARY.

Though the jiva is the knower, yet it is sometimes designated as knowledge, because that quality of knowledge is its essential nature. The word 'Sara' means a quality which never can be discarded, which is the essential nature of the thing, the absence of which makes the thing non-existent. The above text of the Brihad-Aranyaka Upanisad no doubt designates the soul by the term knowledge and not knower, but it is just like the other texts of the same Upanisad where the Lord Vienu is called Truth, Knowledge and Infinity, and which does not mean that the Lord is not Omniscient, because He is called Omniscience; that He is not the Knower because He is called Knowledge, etc. In fact, these texts show that the soul is Knower and its essential attribute is knowledge. The next stars shows this more clearly.

SÛTRA II. 8. 28.

याववास्मभावित्वाच्च न दोषस्तदर्शनात् ॥२।३।२८॥

खाद Yavat, wherever, so long as. खाल Âtma, the soul, the individual self. जारियाच Bhavitvat, on account of existing. च cha, and. च Na, not. क्षेत्र: Doşah, objection, fault. तह Tat, that, वर्षमास Darsanat, on account of being seen.

28. There is no objection in designating the soul, whose essential nature is knowledge, as knower also, because the knowledge exists so long as the self exists, and this we observe also.—246.

COMMENTARY.

There is no fault in our reasoning if we assert the soul to be both knowledge as well as the knower. We perceive that the knowledge of the soul is co-eternal with the soul, and exists so long as the soul exists, namely, for ever. The soul verily exists from beginningless time to eternity, and such is also its knowledge. An illustration of this we observe in the case of the sun. The sun and its light are co-eternal, and the sun though essentially luminous, is also the maker of illumination of others; it is both the light and the illuminator. And so long as the sun will exist, we can apply both these designations to it, and though the two are really identical, yet they appear as two, hence their different designations.

An objector may say, knowledge is an attribute of the soul, and is not eternal, because it does not exist in the state of deep sleep and it originates because there are objects of knowledge to produce it. This is answered by the following Sûtra.

BÛTRA II. 3. 29.

पुंस्त्वादिवत्तस्य सतोभिव्यक्तियोगात् ॥२।३।२९॥

दुस्त्वादिवस् Punistvådi-vat, like the virile power, like the power of procreation. ह Tu, but. प्रस्य Asya, its, namely, of knowledge. सह: Satah, of the existing. अविध्यक्तिवीगात् Abhivyakti-yogåt, on account of manifestation

29. But this knowledge always exists in the soul even in deep sleep (though in latency) like the procreative and other powers in the child, and there is manifestation of it only in the waking state.—247.

COMMENTARY.

The word "but" is employed in order to set aside the objection above raised. The word "Na" is understood in this Sûtra. It is not the case that in deep sleep knowledge does not exist, but it originates in the waking state. Why do we say so? Because this knowledge exists, though potentially, even in the state of dreamless sleep, and makes its manifestation only in the waking state. An illustration of this is seen in the case of virile power and others. They remain latent in an infant, though these powers exist in the soul yet they are not apparent, it is only in youth that they manifest themselves. Similarly, the knowledge exists even in Susupti, though it manifests itself in the Jagrata and Svapna. The scripture itself shows that there is such manifestation, and that knowledge does exist even in deep sleep. In the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad (IV, 3. 30) and the rest we find the following:—

यद्वे तच विज्ञानाति विज्ञानाति विज्ञानन्तै तच विज्ञानाति न हि विद्यातुर्विद्याते-विपरिक्षोपो विद्यतेऽविनाशित्वाच तु तवृद्धितीयमस्ति ततेऽन्यद्विमक्तं यद्विज्ञानीयात् ॥

And when (it is said that) there (in the Suşupti) he does not know, yet he is knowing, though he does not know. For knowing is inseparable from the knower, because it cannot perish. But there is then no second, nothing else different from him that he could know.

This shows that knowledge exists even in Susupti, but it does not manifest itself because there are no external objects to manifest it. Otherwise the jiva itself could not exist in a state of deep sleep. It is the conjunction with the senses which is the exciting cause of knowledge and manifests it. Had knowledge not at all existed in the soul, it could never have manifested itself in the waking state, as when the virile power is not in a man, as in congenital ennuchs, it never manifests itself, even when such eunuchs attain youth. Therefore, it is established that jiva is atomic in size, has knowledge for its essential nature, and that this attribute knowledge is the eternal property of the soul.

Now the author refutes the view of the Sankhya philosophers who maintain the opposite doctrine, namely, that the knowledge of the soul is not eternal.

(Pûrva-pakşa).—Now the Pûrva-pakşin says, it is appropriate to seert that soul is more knowledge and all-pervading. It is all-pervading because its effect is perceived everywhere. Had it been atomic it would not have perceived pleasure and pain in all parts of its body. Had it been of medium size, then it would be non-eternal, which is not accepted by any orthodox school of philosophers.

(Siddhanta.)—The following Sûtra sets forth the Siddhanta view.

SÛTRA II. 8. 30.

नित्योपसञ्चनुपसञ्जिप्रसङ्गान्यतरनियमोवान्यचा ॥२।३।३०॥

शिक्ष Nitya, always, permanent. उपाधिप Upalabdhi, perception, consciousness. अवस्था An-upalabdhi, non-perception, non-consciousness. अवस्था Prasangah, result, consequence. अवस्था Anyatara, otherwise, either of the two. निकाः Niyamah, restrictive rule. वा Va, or. अवस्था Anyatha, otherwise, namely, if the soul were mere knowledge and omnipresent.

30. Otherwise there would be permanent consciousness or permanent unconsciousness, or else a restriction with regard to one or the other.—248.

COMMENTARY.

If the view be maintained that the soul is mere knowledge and omnipresent, then would result the undesirable consequence that it would be either always conscious, or always non-conscious. Not only this, there would be a restriction or prohibition with regard to one or the other. The sense is this. It is a well known fact, that there is consciousness and nonconsciousness. Of these two states, if the cause were a soul which was omnipresent, and mere knowledge; then these two states would be perceived simultaneously and always, by all people. If such a soul be the cause of consciousness only (but not of unconsciousness) then no one no where would ever be unconscious. If the soul be the cause of non-conscious. ness, then no one nowhere would ever be conscious. We cannot say that consciousness and unconsciousness depend upon sense organs, and the soul is conscious when it is in contact with the sense organs; and it is unconscious when there is no such contact. For according to your theory. the soul being omnipresent is always in contact with sense organs. Moreover in this theory all souls being omnipresent, are in contact with all bodies, and therefore should experience the pleasure and pain everywhere. This Sûtra also indirectly refutes the view, that the particular experiences which a particular soul undergoes are the results of its past Karma and its Adrista, which Adrista depends upon the particular thoughts and desires entertained by that soul. The objection raised in this Sûtra applies to systems cognate to the Sankhya. In our system the soul being atomic is separate for every other separate body, and so our theory is not open to this objection. Though it is atomic, it can work in all places, in succession, not simultaneously; and hence the objection based on the souls being omnipresent does not apply to this theory. The atomic soul perceives the pleasure and pain, by the pervasion of its attribute, as has already been mentioned in Sûtra II. 3, 24.

Note.—The Stakhya theory is that souls are many, separate for every body, but every soul is omnipresent and pure knowledge.

The Stakhya Stira, VI, 36, declares that Pradhina is all-prevading, and VI 45 that the souls are many. And Stira, VI 59, declares that the soul is all-pervading.

Adhikarana XIV.—The Jîva.is an agent.

Now the author considers the following text of the Taittiriya Upanişad (II. 5. 1).

विदानं वदः ततुते । कर्मावि ततुतेऽपि च । विदानं देवाः सर्वे । अद्या क्वेडमुपासते । विदानं अद्या वेड् व । तस्माविक ममायति । सपीरे पायम्य दित्या । सर्वान्कामान्समस्तुत इति ॥

Vijūšna performs the sacrifice, it performs all sacred acts. All Devas of the senses attend upon Vijūšna as the great, as the oldest. If a man knows Vijūšna as the great, and if he does not swerve from it, he leaves all evils behind in the body, and attains all his wishes.

(Doubt)—Now arises the following doubt. Is the soul, described in the above text by the word "Vijnana," an agent? It apparently is, for the text says "Vijnana or soul performs all sacrifices," and all the devas of the senses are attendant upon Vijnana. But, says the Pûrvapakein, the soul is not an agent, because we have the following text to the contrary.—(Kath. II. 18.)

न जायते जियते वा विपश्चिताचं कुतिश्चित्र वसूव कविकत्। जजा नित्वः शास्त्रते।प्रयमुदाके न इत्यते इत्यमाने शरीरे ॥ १८ ॥

The Soul is not born, it dies not; it sprang from nothing, nothing sprang from it. The ancient is unborn, eternal, everlasting, he is not killed, though the body is killed.

This text of the Katha Upanisad declares that the soul is not an agent, but that Prakriti is the agent. The Gita also says to the same effect (III, 27):—

प्रकृतेः क्रियमाकानि गुकैः कर्माकि सर्वेशः । सर्वकारविमुद्धारमा कर्ताञ्जमिति मन्यते ॥

All actions are wrought by the qualities of nature only. The self, deluded by egolsm, thinketh: "I am the doer."

So also Gita, XIII. 20:-

कार्यकारककर् त्वे हेतुः प्रकृतिरूप्यते । पुरुषः सुक्षपुःकानां भेष्यत्वे हेतुस्प्यते ॥

Matter is called the cause of the generation of causes and effects, Spirit is called the cause of the enjoyment of pleasure and pain,

Therefore we have the following:-

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The soul is not an agent, Prakriti is the agent. By realizing the truth one comes to know that she is the true agent, while one wrongly attributes to himself the idea of agency. The soul is merely the enjoyer of the fruit of action, and not an agent.

(Siddhanta).-To this Purva-pakes the answer is given by the following Sûtra which declares that the soul is an agent.

SÛTRA II. 8. 81.

कर्ता शासार्थवस्वात् ॥२।३।३१॥

कर्ता Karta, agent. जारवार्यस्थास् Sastra-artha-vattvat, on account of the scripture having a purport.

31. The soul is alone the agent, and not the Prakriti, for thus the scriptures can have a rational interpretation.—249.

COMMENTARY.

The itva alone is the agent and not the gupas of Prakriti. Why do we say so? Because the scriptures can have no purport if the gunas were the agents. In the scriptures we find injunctions like the following:-"Let the person who desires heaven perform sacrifice." "Let the person meditate on the Supreme Luminous Self," etc. These texts can have a meaning only if the sentient souls were the agent, for agent alone can enjoy the fruit. They are meaningless if the gunas were to be the agents, for if the non-sentient gunas were the agents, the injunctions would not have been addressed to the sentient souls, but to the insentient gunas. The object of the scriptural injunction like the above is to produce in the soul a motive or desire to perform certain actions, in order to enjoy certain fruits. The injunctions produce the idea in the soul that certain acts are followed by certain results. and when that idea is produced, then the soul enters upor action, in order to enjoy the fruits thereof. This idea of cause and effect between certain action and its result or consequence cannot be produced in Prakriti, which is insentient and consequently incapable of having any such conception. Therefore, Prakriti is not the agent but the soul.

In the next Sûtra the author further shows that soul is the agent.

Note.—The following quotation from Ramanuja gives a more detailed reasoning.

If a non-sentient thing were the agent, the injunction would not be addressed to another being (viz. to an intelligent being—to which it actually is addressed). The term "sāstra" (scriptural injunction) moreover comes from sas, to command, and commanding means impelling to action. But scriptural injunctions impel to action through giving rise to a certain conception (in the mind of the being addressed), and the non-senticet Pradhina cannot be made to conceive anything. Scripture, therefore, has a sense only, if we admit that none but the intelligent enjoyer of the fruit of the action is at the same time the agent. Thus the Pirva Mimima declares "the fruit of the injunction belongs to the agent" (III. 7. 18).

The Parvs-pakein had contended that the text "if the slayer thinks, &c.," proves the self not to be the agent in the action of slaying, but what the text really means is only that the Self as being eternal cannot be killed. The text, from Smriti, which was alleged as proving that the gunas only possess active power, refers to the fact that in all activities lying within the sphere of the samears, the activity of the Self is due not to its own nature, but to its contact with the different gunas. The activity of the gunas, therefore, must be viewed not as permanent, but occasional only. In the same sense Smriti says "the reason is the connection of the soul with the gunas, in its births, in good and evil wombs" (Gità, XIII, 21). Similarly it is said there (XVIII, 16) that "he who through an untrained understanding looks upon the isolated Self as an agent, that man of perverted mind does not see," the meaning being that, since it appears from a previous passage that the activity of the Self depends on five factors (as enumerated in Sl. 16), he who views the isolated Self to be an agent has no true insight.

विद्वारोपदेशात् ॥ २। ३। ३२॥

Regret Vihara, play, sporting about. events Upadesat, on account of declaration.

32. The soul is the agent, because the scripture declares that even in the state of Mukti it has pleasant activities.—250.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhandogya Upsinsad the soul of the Mukta is thus described, (VIII. 12. 3):—

प्रमेषेष सम्मसावे। आक्टरीरात्समृत्याय परं ज्योतीवपसम्बद्ध स्वेन क्रेय्याभि-निष्पद्यते स उत्तमः पुरुषः स तत्र पर्योति जसन्कीडन्रममानः स्नीभिनां वानैनां वातिभिनां ने।पजनश्च सरविदश्च शरीरश्च स यथा प्रयोग्य बाजरवे युक्त प्रवमेषायमिक्षम्बरीरे प्राचे युक्तः ॥ ३॥

He through whose grace this released soul, arising from its last body, and having approached the Highest Light, is restored to its own form is the Highest Person. The Mukta moves about there laughing, playing and rejoicing, with women, with carriages, with other Muktas of his own period or of the past Kalpas. (So great is his ecstacy) that he does not remember even the person standing near him, nor even his own body. And as a charioteer is appointed by his master to drive the carriage, just so is this Prana appointed to drive this chariot of the body.

This shows that even the Mukta jive plays about. Thus we arrive at the conclusion that mere activity is not the cause of sorrow, (for then the Mukta jives would not have been active), but it is perverted activity alone which is the cause of pain, or to use the technical phrase of the Gltâ, "It is the connection of the Soul with the Gunas which is the cause of pain."

8ÛTRA II. 8. 33.

उपादानात् ।२।३।३१।

33. The soul is agent because in the state of sleep it takes the Prânas along with it.—251.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihad-áranyaka Upanisad (II. 1. 18.) we find the following:—
स यत्रैतत्स्यमायाचरति ते द्वास्य क्षेत्रकासदुतेच महाराजा अवस्युतेच महामाद्याच
क्रेतेवाचाचचं निगच्छति स यथा महाराजा जानपदान् युद्दीत्वा स्वे जनपदे यथाकामं
परिचर्जतेचमेववैच पत्तमाचान् युद्दीत्वा स्वे दारीरे यथाकामं परिचर्जते ॥ १८ ॥

But when he moves about in aleep (and dream), then these are his worlds. He is, as it were, a great king; he is, as it were, a great Brahmana; he rises, as it were, and he falls. And as a great king might keep in his own subjects, and move about, according to his pleasure, within his own domain, thus does the sull control the various pranas and move about, according to his pleasure, within his own body.

In the Gita also we find (XV. 8).:-

शरीर' यदबामोति यचायुक्तामतीम्बरः। यदीनैतानि संयाति चायुगंचानिवाद्ययात्॥

When the soul acquireth a body and when he abandoneth it, he seizeth these and goeth with them, as the wind takes fragrances from their flowery receptacles.

This shows that the jiva is an agent, because it takes up the Prâṇa. As the magnet draws the iron, so the jiva draws the Prâṇas No doubt, the Prâṇas are the agents in seizing external objects. They are the agents in all physical activities of the body, but the soul is the direct agent in catching hold and seizing the Prâṇa, and making it work or not work. There is no other agent with regard to the taking up of Prâṇa.

The author gives another reason in the next Sûtra.

BÛTRA II. 8. 34.

व्यपदेशाश्व कियायां न चेन्निर्देश विपर्ययः ॥२।६। ३७॥

व्यवस्थात् Vyapadesát, on account of direction, designation. च Cha, and. किवाबार् Kriyayam, in action, in the performance of sacrifices. ज वेस् Na-chet, if not so. विशेष Nirdeáa, grammatical construction विश्ववदः Vipavyayah, difference, opposite.

34. The soul is an agent also on account of the scriptures directing it to perform actions. If it were not the agent, the grammatical construction would have been different.—252.

COMMENTARY.

In the Taittiriya text, already mentioned before under Sûtra Il. 3. 31. the word "Vijnana" is used in the nominative case, meaning "the soul performs the sacrifice, it performs all works." This shows that the soul is agent principally in all worldly and Vedic works, and it is the soul which is designated as performing all works sacred and secular. the word "Vijnana" there did not denote the soul, but the Buddhic principle, then the grammatical construction would have been different. It would not have been put in the nominative case, but in the instrumental case—instead of "Vijnanam" the form would have been "Vijnanena," for Buddhi is merely the instrument of action and could not be put in the nominative case. But the text does not show it so. If Buddhi were the agent, then we have to imagine some other instrument through which it performs action, for all activities are accomplished through instruments only. Therefore the dispute is nominal only, for there is no agency without an instrument, and where an instrument is spoken of as an agent, there the agent and the instrument are considered indentical.

An objector may say, if jive was the agent, then he would create only that which was beneficial to it, and not that which was injurious, for an agent is always independent. This is no valid objection. Though the jive intends to create all conditions beneficial to itself, yet owing to the counteracting force of its past karmas, which are concomitant causes, sometimes its efforts result in producing undesirable effects. Therefore, it follows that the soul alone is the agent.

This being so, the texts which declare that soul is not an agent are to be explained as declaring that the soul is not an independent agent. Its activities are dependent on the will of the Lord.

The scriptures—says an opponent—do not really mean to say that the soul is an agent, because the soul suffers pain; and had it been the creator of its conditions, it would not have suffered pain, for it would have created such conditions only which would have been joyful. This argument goes too far, for then the texts which declare explicitly that a man should perform full-moon and new-moon sacrifices are to be explained in a different way, namely, that Buddhi has to perform these sacrifices, not man. Thus the non-agency of the soul would make the scriptural texts absurd.

The author now shows the objections to which the theory of Pradhana being the agent is open.

- 35. If the soul were not the agent, then there would be indefiniteness of all activities, just as in the case of consciousness, if it were all-prevading —253.

COMMENTARY.

In the previous Satra (II. 3. 30) it has been shown how indefinite would be the consciousness of the soul if it were omnipresent. On similar reasoning it can be shown that if all activities belong to Prakriti, and not to the soul, then there would be similar vagueness with regard to all activities. For Prakriti being all-pervading and the common possession of all souls, all actions would result in producing experiences in all souls, or in not producing experiences in any soul.

Note.—As air is all-prevading, any vibration in air such as sound, produces the same sensation in all persons, similarly Prakriti, being all-pervading, any activity in or of Prakriti will produce the same experience in all souls, and any injectivity would stop the activity of all souls.

You cannot say that the activity of the Prakriti in a particular locality would only produce experience in that soul, which is in proximity with it, and not in another which is at a distance from that locality, (as sound is heard by persons near its source, and not at a too great distance). For in your theory the souls being equally omnipresent with Prakriti, will experience the activities of Prakriti, wherever it may be active, for its proximity with Prakriti is present everywhere.

SÛTRA II. 2. 26.

शक्तिविपर्य्यवात् ॥२।३।३६॥

36. If Prakriti were the agent, then there would be the inversion of the power of enjoyment attributed to the soul, and that power of enjoyment would belong to Prakriti.

—254.

COMMENTARY.

If Prakriti were the agent and not the soul, then the Power of enjoyment which is attributed to the soul, must be attributed to Prakriti, for enjoyment always is experienced by the agent, and not by a third person. There is no such vicarious punishment or reward. If a man does an act, he experiences its result, and not a third party. If Prakriti be the agent, there is no reason why the soul should be the enjoyer. In the Svetāsvatara Upanişad (I. 8) the existence of the soul is established, because it enjoys the fruit of its action. If the soul were not the agent, that argument also will be invalid. For this reason also soul is the agent, for vicarious suffering or enjoyment is unreasonable.

SÛTRA II. 8, 37.

सनाधि-धनापान् Samādhi-abhāvāt, on account of the absence of Samādhi. च Cha, and.

37. If Prakriti were the agent, then there would be the absence of Samadhi also.—255.

COMMENTARY.

The theory that Prakriti is the agent is open to this objection also, that under it Samadhi itself becomes impossible; and consequently there can be no release, because Samadhi is the instrument of release. Now Samadhi consists in the realisation of the idea 'I am separate from Prakriti.' If Prakriti were the agent, then the Prakriti would have to formulate this notion, "I am separate from Prakriti," which would mean "I am separate from myself." Now Prakriti cannot formulate any such notion, because it is non-intelligent; and because the idea itself of being separate from one's ownself is an impossible notion. Even the extremists who would attribute no activity to the soul are forced to admit its activity so far as Mukti is concerned. They admit that it is the soul which by its effort of Samadhi realises its difference from Prakriti and thus gets Mukti. But if the soul were absolutely inactive this effort of realising Samadhi would be impossible for it. Hence it follows that the soul alone is the agent.

Adhikarana XV.—Activity is an essential attribute of the soul, though it may not be always actually active.

Now the author shows by an illustration, that the soul is active by its inherent power, as well as by employing instruments.

SÚTRA II S. SS.

यथा च तत्त्रोभयथा ।२।३।३८।

and Yatha, as. Tha, also, and. Takea, the carpenter. The Ubhayatha, in both ways.

38. The soul is active in both ways like unto the carpenter.—256.

COMMENTARY.

As a carpenter is agent in the act of carpentry through the medium of his instruments such as axe, plane, saw, borer, etc., and is agent also directly in the act of holding those instruments and grasping them in his hands, so also the jiva is an agent in a two-fold sense. It works on the external world indirectly through the instrumentality of the sense organs, and it is also directly agent in the act of controlling the pranas. In other words, the soul has double agency, one through the prana, the other by seizing hold of the prana itself and directing it into different This explains why in certain scriptural texts agency is attributed to Matter and not to the Soul. It is because importance is given to the instrument, therefore, it is said that the gunas act and not the itva. Thus, as in ordinary language, one may say that the axe cuts. etc., such phrases are figurative only, and as there is preponderance of gunes in such acts, so the action is attributed to the gunes. In fact, the Gtta declares it clearly that "re-incarnation of the soul in good or bad family is regulated by the use it has made of its implements, namely the gunas." (Gitâ, XIII. 21):-

पुढवः प्रकृतिको हि भुंके प्रकृतिजाम्युवान् । कारवं गुव संगाऽल सबसयोनिजन्मसः॥

Soul, ruling matter, useth the implements (gunas) made of matter. The cause of its birth in good and evil wombs is the right or wrong employment of these implements (gapas).

This explains those passages which declare gunas to be the agent, such as the Glta, III. 27:—

प्रकृतेः क्रियमाबानि गुबैः कर्मांब सर्वग्रः। प्रदृकारविमृहात्मा कर्ताञ्ज्ञमिति मन्यते॥

All actions are wrought by the gunas of nature only. The self, deluded by egoism, thinketh: "I am the door."

If the soul is the real agent, why does the above verse say that the man who thinks himself to be the agent is a fool? And why is this repeated again in verse, XVIII. 16:—

तमैयं सति कर्तारमात्मानं केवलं तु यः । परक्तकतुर्वित्वाचं स पश्यति दुर्मतः ॥ १६ ॥

That being so, he verily who—owing to untrained Reason—looketh on his Self, which is isolated, as the actor, he, of perverted intelligence, seeth not.

The reply to this is that every act has five factors. The man who ignores the four and thinks himself to be the sole agent, is called in these verses a fool, one of perverted intelligence. The five factors are mentioned in the same (XVIII. 14.)

सविद्यानं तथा कर्ता करवं च पृथन्वियम् । विविचास पृथक्षेणा देवं वैदान पंचसम् ॥ १४ ॥

The body, the soul, the various organs, the divers kinds of energies, and the Supreme Lord also, the fifth, are the five factors in all acts.

We cannot take these verses in the superficial sense as teaching that the soul is isolated and never an agent, for in that very book we find that the soul does perform act, for the sake of getting mukti. If the soul could perform no action, no direction could be issued to it to exert for salvation. Such as we find in the Gita. XVIII. 65:—

मन्मना भव मञ्जूको मचाबी मा नमस्कृद । मामेषेन्यसि सावं ते प्रतिसाने प्रिवेशस्त मे ॥

Merge thy mind in Me, be My devotee, sacrifice to Mc, prostrate thyself before Me, thou shalt come even to Me. I pledge thee My truth; thou art dear to Me.

So also IX. 34:-

मचना भव मञ्जूको मचाबी मां नमस्कृद । मामेषेष्यसि युक्षेषमात्मानं मत्परायकः ॥ ३४ ॥

On Me, fix thy mind; be devoted to Me, sacrifice to Me; prostrate thyself before Me; harmonised thus in the Self, thou shalt come unto Me, having Me as thy supreme goal.

Sc also XVIII. 55 :-

मक्ता मामामिजानाति यावन्यश्चावित तस्वतः । तता मा तस्वता बात्वा विश्वते तद्वनंतरम् ॥ ५५ ॥

By devotion he knoweth Me in essence, who and what I am; having thus known Me in essence he forthwith entereth into the Supreme.

These verses show that mukti is for that soul only which performs the act of meditation on the Lord. No doubt, there are passages declaring that the soul neither kills nor is killed such as II. 19, etc. They mean that the effect of slaying, as cutting asunder into two pieces, never accrues to the soul. The soul, being eternal, can never be cut asunder or slain. But those passages do not mean that a person, who unrighteously kills another, will not suffer the moral consequences of that act, for the Gita has already established that the agency belongs to the soul, and the soul must enjoy or suffer the good or bad effects of its deeds. This also explains how the saints or devotees are said to perform no action, though they are ordered to worship the Lord. The great Saints, the Bhagavatas not only worship the Lord in this world, but in heaven also after they have attained mukti; but their worship is considered to be no action in the ordinary sense of the word; for they worship without any taint of gunas, and their devotion is of pure spiritual energy, and the gunas are completely submerged in their case, and play a very subordinate part.

Referring to this we find in the Bhagawata Purana the following:-

सारिकः कारके।असङ्गी रागान्यो राजसः स्वृतः। तामसः स्वृतिविद्वद्यो निर्धु वा मदपाभयः॥

The Sattvic agent is he who performs all acts without attachment to the gupas, the Rajas a agent performs all acts blinded by his attachment to the gupas, the Tamasic agent has no memory, and performs all actions ignorantly, while the Nirgupa agent is he who does every act with perfect resignation to My will.

The experiencing of pleasure and pain is always the function of the soul, pure and simple, and never of matter or gunas, as says the Gita very clearly (XIII. 20):—

कार्यकारककत्त्वे हेतुः प्रकृतियथते । पुरुषः सुबदः सानां भाषतृत्वे हेतुस्यते ॥

Matter is called the cause of the generation of causes and effects; Spirit is called the cause of the enjoyment of pleasure and pain.

Though pleasure and pain always co-exist with gunas, yet they being of the nature of consciousness or feeling, have the soul element predominating in them, for the power of consciousness belongs to the soul alone and the gunas do not predominate in these sentiency of pleasure and pain, for matter is opposed to consciousness. It is a well known fact, that the essence of soul is consciousness, the feeling of pleasure and pain. The soul is self-luminous, and hence intelligence as well as agency must be understood to be the essential qualities of the soul. In fact, the Sruti also declares the same (Prasna Upanişad, IV. 9.

यत्र हि ह्या स्प्रच्या भोता बाता रसयिता मन्ता बेखा कर्ता विद्यागाला पुरुषः। स परेअसे बात्मनि संप्रतिष्ठते ॥ ९ ॥

For he it is who sees, hears, smells, tastes, perceives, conceives, acts, he whose essence is knowledge, the person, and he dwells in the highest, indestructible Self.

The illustration of the carpenter also shows that the agency of the soul is not perpetual but depends upon its volition. It may or may not be active as it pleases. It is not subject to the law of inertia of Matter. A material particle once in motion, is always in motion without any power of stoppage unless some external force comes in.

Adhikarana XVI.—Soul in its activity is dependent on the Lord.

Now another doubt is raised as regards this activity of the soul.

(Paroa-paksa.)—It is self-dependent, because injunctions and prohibitions of the scriptures have a meaning only if the soul were self-dependent in its activity and not otherwise. When the scripture says "let a person desirous of heaven perform sacrifice," "let a Brahmana not drink wine, and let him forsake all sins," etc., it means that the soul is independent in its activity, for orders are addressed only to those who of their own free volition and thought have the power of entering on an action or refraining from an action.

(Siddhanta).—The soul is not independent in its activity, but depends on the Highest Self, as is shown in the following Sûtra:—

SÛTRA II. 3. 39.

परानु तच्छूतेः ॥२।३।३९॥

que Parât, from the Supreme Lord दु Tu, bu'. तव-श्रुते: Tat strutch, on account of this being declared by scriptures.

39. But the activity of the soul is from the Highest Lord as its cause, because the scriptures declare it so.—257.

The word "but" is employed in order to remove the doubt raised by the Pûrva-pakşin. The activity of the soul proceeds from the Highest Lord as its cause, Why do we say so? Because the scripture declares it to be thus. Such as "The Lord is within all, the ruler of all creatures." "Who dwelling in the jîva-âtman is disferent from jîva-âtman, whom the jîva-âtman does not know, whose body the jîva-âtman is, who rules the jîva-âtman from within, He is thyself the Inner Ruler, the Immortal.

So also in Kausitak Upanişad III. 8:-

प्यः श्रेषेनं साधु कर्म कारयति तं यमन्त्रानुनेष्त्येच प्रवेनमसाधु कर्म कारयति तः यमन्त्रानुनेष्त्येच प्रवेनमसाधु कर्म कारयति

For the Lord makes him whom he wishes to lead up from these worlds, do a good deed; and the same makes him, whom He wishes to lead down from these worlds, do a bad

All these texts show that the Lord is the highest motive power of the soul.

Let it be so. If the agency of the soul is dependent on the Highest Lord, then all injunctions and prohibitions of scriptures become useless, for the man then becomes a mere automaton moved by the Spirit within. The scriptures only enjoin acts and omissions on persons who have power of their own to do an act or to refrain from doing an act.

To this objection the following Sûtra gives a reply.

SÚTRA IL 8, 40.

कृतप्रयक्षापेकस्तु विद्वितप्रतिषिद्धावैयर्घ्यादिभ्यः ॥२।३।४०॥

कुत Krita, made. वृष्ण Prayatna, effort. प्रवेष: Apeksah, having regard to, with a view. g Tu, but विश्वित Vihita, ordained, injunction. व्यक्तिक Pratisiddha, prohibited. प्र-वेद्यविष्य: A-vaiyarthya-adibhyah, on account of non-meaning-lessness.

40. The Lord makes the soul to act having regard to the effect unade by it, so that injunctions and prohibitions of the scriptures may not become meaningless.—258.

COMMENTARY.

The word "but" removes the doubt raised. The Lord causes the ilva to act in a particular way, not arbitrarily, but having regard to the tendencies generated by it, by the good or evil deeds performed by it in its past lives. Hence the above objection is no longer valid. The different fruits, which the souls experience are the results of the differences of their actions good or bad, just as the different fruits which the trees produce are the results of the differences of seeds. The Lord is the exciting cause of the growth of the tree, like the rain. The seed is the particular cause of the particular kind of fruit produced, the rain is the general cause. If there were no rain, we shall never see the diversities of smell, taste, of the fruits, flowers, etc., which we find in the vegetable creation, for no plants will grow in the absence of water. Similarly, there may be abundance of water and still no plants will grow if there be The result is that the good or bad experiences are the consequences dependent upon the actions of the soul and not the arbitrary act of the Lord. Similarly, a man may be an agent, though impelled to that action by another, and be still responsible for his acts. Therefore. the responsibility of the soul does not cease, though the impelling cause is the Lord.

On what authority do we say so? Because otherwise the injunctions and prohibitions of the scriptures would be meaningless.

The words "Âdi, etc." in the Sûtra suggest that the grace and punishment of the Lord are also not arbitrary acts, but regulated by the actions of the ilva. It is only in this way that acriptural commands do not become purportless. If the soul were a mere automaton, like a piece of wood or stone, impelled by the Lord to do good or bad deeds, then the words of the scripture will lose their authoritativeness and the responsible agent would be the Lord Himself. In the Kausitaki Upanisad it is certainly said 'the Lord makes him whom He wishes to lead up do a good deed, etc.' There also the Lord wishing to lead up a particular soul impels that soul to do good act, for the phrase "wishing to lead up" means the grace of God and impelling a jive to good deeds. Similarly, the phrase "wishing to lead down" means punishment and impelling a jiva to perform evil deeds. If the jiva was like an automaton, then the grace and punishment would have no meaning with regard to his actions, nor could the charge of cruelty brought against the Lord be answered in that view of the case. Therefore, soul is a responsible agent, though no doubt a secondary agent, while the Lord is the causative agent, because without His permission, the soul can do nothing. Thus there is a complete reconciliation of the two views.

Adhikarana XVII.—The soul is a part of God.

Now the author in order to strengthen the view set forth in the previous Sûtras teaches that the jiva is a portion of Brahman. In the Mundaka Upanisad, III. 1. 1., we find the following:—

द्वा सुपर्का सयुजा समाया समानं वृद्धं परिचस्तजाते । तयारम्यः पिप्पस्तं स्वाह्यस्थनसम्बन्धाःश्रीमचाकशाति ॥ १ ॥

Two birds, inseparable friends, cling to the same tree. One of them eats the sweet fruit, the other looks on without eating.

This reference to two birds in this verse is evidently to the Lord and the jiva, to the God and the soul.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, Is the Lord Himself the jiva, appearing as such owing to the limitations of Maya, or is the jiva a part of the Lord dependent on Him, invariably related to Him, but separate from Him, like the rays of the sun?

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin says the Lord Himself limited by Mâyâ is the jiva. As says the Atharvan Śruti (Brahma-Bindu Upanişad, Verse XIII):—

घटसंवृतमाकाशं लीयमाने घटे यथा । घटेा लीयेत नाऽकाशं तहकीवा नमापमः ॥ २३ ॥

As a space enclosed in a jar remains in its own place even when the jar is moved to another locality—for it is the jar that is moved and not the space, or as a jar enclosing a space may be broken into pieces but the space remains the same and is not destroyed, so is the soul like space.

The Srutis like "Thou art that," etc., also become harmonised in this view of the case, namely, that the soul and the Lord are identical.

(Siddhanta).—The soul and the Lord are not identical as shown by the following Sûtra:—

SÛTRA II. 8. 41.

श्रंशो नाना व्यपदेशादन्यथाचापिदासकितवादिस्वमधीय-त एके ॥२।३।४१॥

चंद्रः Amsah, part. जाना Nana, many, multifarious, difference. व्यक्तिसह Vyapadesat, on account of the declaration. जान्यदा Anyatha, otherwise. च Cha, and. जाने Api, also जान Dasa, servant. क्लिन Kitava, gambler. जानित्य Aditvam, and the rest. जानेक्स Adhtyate, record, एके Eke, some (texts).

41. The soul is a part, because the Lord is described as having manifold relations with the soul, and also because some texts record him as identical with Brahman, like slaves and fisherman, etc.—259.

COMMENTARY.

Jiva is a part of the Supreme Lord like the rays of the sun, which are separate from it, but which continually accompany it and which in a way are dependent upon it. Why do you say so? Because the scripture describes the manifold relations of the soul with the Lord. Thus in the Subäla Upanisad we hear "One God Nûrâyana is the creator, is the destroyer, is the Divine, is the mother, is the father, is the brother, is the abode, is the refuge, is the friend, verily He, the Nârayâna, is the goal of all." So also in the Gitâ, IX. 18:—

गतिर्भेषां प्रशुः सासी निवासः शरवं सुद्धत्। प्रभवः प्रस्यः सानं निवानं बोजमन्ययम् ॥ १२ ॥

The Path, Husband, Lord, Witness, Abode, Shelter, Lover, Origin, Dissolution, Foundation, Treasure-house, Seed imperishable.

The scriptures declare manifold relation of the Lord with the soul, such as He is the creator the jiva is the created. He is the ruler the other is the ruled. He is the support the other is the supported. He is the Lord the other is the servant. He is the lover the other is the beloved. He is the object of attainment the other is the attainer and so on. On the other hand the Atharvan Sruti also describes Him in another way, namely, His unity with jiva, showing all-pervasiveness by which He pervades the jiva, and thus the jiva is looked upon as identical with Brahman. In other words, the texts declare both the difference of the Lord and the jiva, and His unity with the Jiva in the sense of its pervading the Jiva. Thus the following text.

मान्ता मान्ता मोने कितवाः।

Brahman are the slaves, Brahman are these fishermen and Brahman are these gamblers, etc.

These declarations of unity would not be possible, if there were no difference in essential nature between God and Soul. No one can himself be the creator as well as the created, himself the pervader as well as the pervaded, nor the Supreme Lord who is the highest intelligence can be the slave, the fisherman, etc. If He were to be so, then all those texts would be stultified which teach indifference to all worldly objects. Nor can it be said that the Lord limited by Maya is transformed into slave, fisherman, etc.

Note.—The jiva is said to be a part or aniss, of Brahman, because in that view only the apparently conflicting texts of the Upaniands can be reconciled. Some texts declare the difference of Brahman from the soul in very distinct terms. Brahman is the creator soul the created, Brahman the ruler soul, the ruled, etc. While there are equally contrary texts, which declare Brahman to be identical with every soul, whether that of a slave, a fisherman or a gambler, etc. How are these texts to be reconciled? Some texts declare Nanatva or difference, others declare Anyatha or non-nanatva or unity. According to Badarayana the reconciliation consists in considering the soul as an amia or part of the Lord, for in that view only, it is possible to consider it as different from the Lord, as well as non-different from Him.

The soul is not a part of Brahman in the sense of a piece of stone cut off from a rock by the chisel. Jiva is not in that sense, a cut off portion of the Lord, for if it were so then it would contradict all those texts which declare Brahman and soul to be incapable of division, and not liable to any change. Therefore the jiva is described as a part of Brahman, in the sense of being a subordinate member of Brahman, separate from Him, but related to Him, as the created, the ruled, the supported, etc. The subordinate relation of the soul to Brahman is established by the fact that all energies of the soul are from the Lord. As says the Smriti (Vişnu Purâna, Book VI, Ch. 7, verses 61—64):—

यतत् सर्व्यमिदं विश्वं जगहेतचरावरम्। पण्ड्यस्वकपस्य विष्वाः शक्तिसमन्वतम् ॥ ६० ॥ विष्कुशक्तिः परा प्रोक्ता क्षेत्रवाक्या तथापरा। प्रविद्या कर्मकंवान्या तृतीया शक्तिरिच्यते ॥ ६१ ॥

The whole of this universe consisting of moveable and immoveable jivas is energised by the energy of Vienu, the Supreme Brahman. The energies are of three sorts, the divine energy which is the highest, and called the Vienu sakti, the jiva energy which is lower than this and is called the Keetrajfia éakti, and third the material energy called the Avidya or karma energy.

The word améa used in this Sûtra is to be understood in a sense similar to that when we say the orb of Venus is a hundredth part of that of the moon. This definition of améa or part does not transgrees the definition which says "part is the particular localisation of a whole or a particular portion of one substance, inhering in that substance but not separate from that substance." Thus Brahman as possessor of all energies is one entire substance, while jiva has a portion of this Brahma energy, and in that sense it is a part of Brahman, and thus is subordinate to Brahman. In other words, the word améa or part is to be taken in the sense of subordinate. When we say "jiva is a part of Brahman." we mean "jiva is subordinate to Brahman."

The statements that the human soul is like a space enclosed in a jar, not different from the space outside the jar are to be reconciled by holding that when the limiting condition or Upadhi is destroyed then there is the union of the two. It does not mean absolute identity. The phrases like "thou art that," etc., also declare that "the thou" is dependent upon "the that," for all its functions. In other words the sentence "thou art that" means "all thy functions are dependent upon Brahman." In fact all the previous texts and illustrations of the Chhandogya Up. show this to be the real meaning of the great saying "thou art that," it has no other meaning. Consequently it follows that the jiva is different from the Lord and this difference is manifest, for one is the ruler the other is the ruled. one is omnipresent the other is atomic and so on. The opposite view that the itva and the Lord are identical cannot be fairly deduced from the scriptural texts. In support of this view that the jiva is a part of Brahman in the sense of being subordinate to Him, the author now quotes a Vedic Śruti.

SÛTRA II. 8. 42.

42. The jiva is a part of Brahman because the mantra also describes it to be so.—260.

COMMENTARY.

Even the Rig Veda, X. 90. 3, declares:-

ताबानस्य महिमा तता ज्यायाश्चरं पूरुषः। पादेश्चर सर्वा भूतानि निपादस्यासृतं दिषीति ॥ ६॥ Such is Ris greatness, yea the Lord is even greater. All souls constitute one quarter of Him. His immortal three quarters are in Heaven.

This mantra, which is to be found in the Chhandogya Upanisad, III. 12. 6, declares distinctly that all jivas constitute a Pada or portion of Brahman. In fact the word Pada and amia are identical. Both mean "a part," or "a portion." This mantra uses the word 'Sarva-bhûtani' in the plural number, while in the Sûtra the word Amia is in the singular number. The singular here is used in a generic sense to denote all souls. Incidentally it may be mentioned that the souls are many as declared in this mantra. In other places also singular must be taken as denoting the whole class, thus as in Sûtra, II. 3. 19, the word "Atman" is used in the singular number, but denotes the whole class of jivâtmans.

BÛTRA II. 8. 48.

भ्रपि च स्मर्यते ॥ २ । ३ । ४३ ॥

43. The Smriti also declares the soul to be a portion of Brahman.—261.

COMMENTARY.

In the Gita XV. 7, we find:-

ममैर्चारोा जीवलोके जीवमृतः सनातनः। मनः पद्यानीन्द्रयाचि प्रकृतिसाचिकर्पति ॥ ७ ॥

A part of me verily has become the jiva in this world of jivas and is eternal. It draweth round itself the senses of which the mind is the sixth, veiled in matter.

The Lord has used the word "eternal" in the above showing that the jivas are eternal and not fictitious portions like space enclosed in a jar. Here also the word amás is used showing that the jiva is always dependent upon the Lord and that all its activities are subordinate to Him.

In the Padma Purana the essential nature of the jiva is more definitely stated:—

वानाभया वानगुबद्धतनः प्रकृतः परः । न जाता निर्विकारस्य पक्रकरः स्वक्रपंगक् ॥ १ ॥ सञ्जीत्वो व्यासशीक्षस्यदानन्यात्मक्तया । सद्मर्थोद्द्ययः सासी भिजकरः सनातनः ॥ २ ॥ सदाक्षोऽक्केयोऽक्रेयोऽशाम्योऽसर पव च । पवमादिगुबैर्युकः शेषमृतः परस्य व ॥ ३ ॥ मकारेबाच्यते जीवः क्षेत्रकः परवान् सदा । दासमृता हरेरेव नाम्यस्यैव कदावनेति ॥ ४ ॥

The jiva is an intelligent receptacle having intelligence as its quality, it is the giver of sentiency to its various vehicles and is beyond Prakriti. It is not born, it is not subject to modification, it has one form, unchanging in its essence. It is atomic, and eternal, having the quality of pervasion and consisting of knowledge and bliss. It is designated by the word "I," is unchanging, is the witness and eternal. It is incombustible, uncleavable and can neither be wetted nor dried away. It is imperishable as well. Possessing these attributes it is a part of Brahman, a servant of the Lord. The letter "Ma" denotes the jiva called also the knower of the field. It is the slave of the Lord but of no one else ever.

The words "possessing these attributes and the rest" refer to the other qualities of the itva not definitely mentioned in the above extract. such as the jiva is an agent, the enjoyer, the self-luminous, etc. Luminosity is of two kinds according to the difference of the substance and the quality. The first depends for its enkindling on its own self, the second is the particlar substance which is the cause of enkindling himself as well as another. Such is the Self or jivatman. The flame of a candle illumines the eye and is itself a lighted mass and its burning is dependent upon itself and it manifests itself by its own light and is not like jar, etc., which manifest themselves through another's light. Therefore, the flame is selfluminous. But there is this difference between the flame and the soul that the flame being material cannot shine forth or illumine itself, in other words, has no self-conciousness. But the soul is self-luminous like the flame and illumines others like the flame, but has the additional attribute of selfillumination, of self-consciousness, which the light has not. Therefore, it is said that the soul illumines itself, is self-luminous and of the form of intelligence.

Adhikarana VIII.—The Avatâras like fish, etc., are not part of Brahman but Brahman itself.

As a digression the author here considers the subject of Avataras. In the Gopalatapani Upanisad it is said (page 195. Thirty-two Upanisads, Ananda Asram Series.)

पक्ते बशी सर्वगः कृष्य इद्धा पक्तेऽपि सम्बद्ध्या या विभाति । तं पीठलं येऽनुभवन्ति भीरास्तेषां सुवां शाभ्यतं नेतरेषाम् ॥

There is one ruler, all-pervading, the Lord Krisna, the adored of all and though one shines forth as many, the wise who worship Him as seated in the throne of the heart enjoy eternal happiness but not so the others.

Similarly in the Visnu Purana it is said (I.2.3.):—

पकानेकस्वरूपाय स्थूसस्कात्मने नमः। सम्बक्तस्यक्रमुताय विष्यवे मुक्तिहेतवे ॥ ३ ॥

Salutation to that Lord Vianu whose essential nature is one as well as many, who is both subtle and the gross, who is both manifest and unmanifest, who is the cause of salvation.

Here the Lord is called as one, in the sense of being the whole, and is called as having many forms, in the sense of having taken many Amda-kala Avataras.

(Doubt.)—Now the doubt arises. Are these Ama-kala Avataras portions of Virau, in the same sense as the jiva is a portion of the Lord, or is there any difference?

(Parva-pakia).—There is no difference between the jivas and these Amsa Avataras, for both are amsas or parts of Brahman, and as such there is equality of attributes between them.

(Siddhanta).—This is not so, as shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA 11. 8. 44.

प्रकाशादिवक्रेवंपरः ॥ २ । ३ । ४४ ॥

मचाचावित्र Prakasa-adi-vat, like light and the rest. भ Na, not. एक्ट्र Evam, thus. पर: Parah, the highest, the supreme, the Avataras like the Fish, etc.

44. The supreme avatâras like the Fish and the rest, are not thus ainsas of Brahman as the jîva is; like the light. and so on.—262.

COMMENTARY.

Though denominated by the term Amsa, the avataras like the Fish and the rest, are not amsas in the same sense as the jiva is said to be. The word amsa, applied to the avataras, means the entire Brahman. This the author explains by the example of "light and the rest":—As sun is said to be light, and the firefly also is said to be light, yet the word light applied to the sun has altogether a different meaning from the word light applied to the firefly. There is no oneness of form between the sun and the firefly. Similarly though the nectar and the wine are both liquids, and are equally termed liquids, yet they are not the same; in the same way the avataras and the jivas, though amsas of Brahman, yet are not the same.

8ÛTRA II. 8, 45.

स्मरन्ति च ॥ २ । ३ । ४४ ॥

स्परित Smaranti, the Smritis declare. प Cha, and.

45. The Smritis also declare the same.—263.

COMMENTARY.

In the Mahavaraha Purana we read as follows:— स्वाहाआय विभिन्नाहा इति हे घाँदा इच्यते । चंद्रीका यस सामर्थ्यं यसस्ववर्षं यथा स्थितिः ॥ १ ॥

तदेव नासुमात्रोऽपि मेदः स्वांशाधिना कव्यत् । विभिन्नाशोऽस्पराक्तिः स्यात् किम्बत् सामध्यमात्रयुगिति ॥ २ ॥ सन्त्रं सन्त्रेगुकैः पूर्वाः सर्वदेशविवज्ञिः ता इति च ।

The amia is used in two senses, (1) the amia or part of one's ownself and hence identical with himself, (2) a part separate from one's ownself. The first called Svama is absolutely identical with the whole, of which it is a part. It has all the powers, the nature and the condition of the original; there is not the slightest difference between it and its prototype. The second called Vibhinna Amia has lesser power, lesser energy, lesser attributes than the original. The Sva-amias are all full of perfect attributes and free from all defects.

The sense of the above is this:—In the Bhagavata Purana it is said, "these avataras are the partial manifestations (amsa kala) of the Supreme Person, but Krisna is the Lord Himself." This verse does not mean that other Avataras, like the Fish and the rest, are in any respect inferior to the Lord; but that they are the Supreme Lord in His entirety, and are not amsas in the same sense as the jivas are the amsas of the Lord. On the other hand, they are like the various aspects of the same Lord manifesting different powers, just like the crystal and the rest, which show different attributes at different times. When the Lord in his Avatara manifests all His powers, then He is called a full Avatara, but when He manifests only a portion of His powers, then he is said to be a partial Avatara. In His avatara as Krisna, all the six powers were fully manifested, but in other avataras, a fewer number of these powers were shown forth, and hence they were called amsa kalas. It may be illustrated by the example of a great professor, who is master of all the sciences, and who is, therefore, called a perfect master; but when he addresses a lower class of intellects, he may not expound to them all the six sastras, but only a particular portion: and in that aspect of his teaching, he may be called a partial teacher: though as a matter of fact, he is master of six sciences. It is only in the Lord Krisna, the infant sucking at the breast of mother Yasoda, that we find the perfect manifestation of all the six attributes which constitute the Godhead, such for example, supreme love for all humanity or an object of supreme love for all humanity, the maker of the supremely sweet heavenly music which turns the head of even the wisest Gods like Brahmâ and the rest, the possessor of the most ravishing and beautiful form, which enchants all who behold it, and immeasureable compassion and the rest. These attributes are fully mentioned in the tenth Skandha of the Bhagavat Purana. The Lord in His manifestation of Sri Krisna was attended by all His energies. like Radha and the rest, as described in the Purusa Bodhint But in His other avatâras, like those of the Fish and the rest, He did not bring down all His energies, nor did He manifest all His attributes.

But these avataras were identical with the Lord and though called amsas, they were not parts of Brahman in the same sense as jivas are said to be His parts. In the Rik-parisista the various powers of the Lord are fully described.

The author now adduces another argument to prove the same conclusion.

SÛTRA II. 3. 46.

अनुज्ञा परिहारो देहसम्बन्धात् ज्योतिरादिवत् ॥ २ । ३ । ४६ ॥

चतुरा Anujña, permission (to do good or bad deeds). Hence activity. परिश्रपे Pariharau, exclusion, cessation from activity (1.e., Mukti or Release). देखस्यकास् Deha-sambandhat, on account of connection with a body. कोतिरादिवस् Jyotir-adi-vat, as in the case of light and so on. The word jyotin means 'eye.'

46. In the case of the jivas, there is wordly activity or cessation therefrom (Release), on account of their connection with bodies, but not so in the case of the avatâras. The jivas are like light in the eye (depending for its vision upon the activity or cessation of the light of the sun).—264.

COMMENTARY.

Though the jiva is an amsa of the Lord, yet on account of its connection with Avidya from beginningless time, and on account of its connection with a body, it is under the control of the Lord, and with regard to it we find texts declaring permission and exclusion. But no such control by the Lord is related with regard to the avataras like Fish and the rest. On the other hand, they are described as the Lord and as uninfluenced by their bodies which they assume. Thus there is a great difference between the avataras and the jivas.

The word permission means inciting a person to do good deeds, as we find in the Kauşîtakî Upanişad, that the Lord makes him whom he wants to raise up do good deeds, etc. (Kauşîtaki, III. 8.)

The word exclusion means cessation from work (good or bad), hence Mukti, as we find in the texts "knowing Him one transcends death."

As an illustration of this, the author says, "it is like light and the rest." The word 'light' here means 'eye' or the power of vision. As the eye, though a part of the sun, is yet manifold on account of its relation with the various bodies, and as it depends for its activity on the permission of the sun, and ceases to be active when the sun does not permit it; in other words, the vision depends on the presence or absence of the light of the sun, so the jivas depend for their activity or release on the permission or will of the Lord. But the Avataras are parts of the Lord, like the rays of the sun which are identical with the sun, and can never be excluded from the sun, and do not depend upon any permission or exclusion of the sun. Thus there is a vast difference between the jivas and the avataras.

SÛTRA II. 2. 47.

भ्रसन्ततेश्वाव्यतिकरः ॥ २ । ३ । ४७ ॥

सरान्तर: Asantateh, on account of non-connectedness or non-perfection. च Cha, and. अव्यक्तिकर: Avyatikarah, want of confusion.

47. The jiva is incomplete and hence there is no possibility of confusion between the jiva and the avatâra. —265.

COMMENTARY.

The jiva is incomplete and not perfect like the avatara, hence it can never be confounded with the avatara, like the Fish and the rest. The jiva is atomic in size and hence non-full; as we find it described in texts like that of the Svetaswetara Upanisad, V. 9. which says "the jiva is to be known as part of the hundredth part of the point of a hair." While the avataras are declared to be full as in the text:—

पूर्वमदः पूर्वमिदं पूर्वात्पूर्वमुद्ययते । पूर्वस्य पूर्वमादाय पूर्वमेवावशिष्यते ॥

That (the root of all avataras) is full, this the (visible avatara) is also full, from that full this full emanates. Taking away this full from that full the full still remains behind.

The Pûrva-pakşin had adduced the reason for holding the jiva to be identical with Avatāras, because of the epithet 'ama' being applied to both. The author shows in the next Sûtra the logical fallacy in the reasoning of the Pûrva-pakşin.

SÛTRA II. 8. 48.

द्याभास एव च ॥२।३। १८॥

चानासः Åbhāsaḥ, fallacy. एव Eva, mere. च Cha, and.

48. The reason for holding the jiva and the avataras to be similar is a mere fallacy.—266.

COMMENTARY.

The reason adduced by the Pürva-paksin to prove the similarity of the jiva with the avatara is that both are equally designated by the word 'amas.' There is a logical fallacy (of undistributed middle) in this argument. The reasoning may be fully set out in this form:—

The jive is a part or amise of Brahman—the avatars is a part or amise of Brahman; therefore the jive is an avatars.

It is the same reasoning the absurdity of which is apparent to every body if stated fully thus:—

All dogs are animals—all men are animals; therefore all dogs are men.

The word 'cha' in the Sûtra implies that other illustrations of such fallacious arguments may also be given here. Thus though the earth and the ether are both substances, yet we cannot infer that both are therefore similar; or as existence and non-existence are both categories, but we cannot infer that therefore both are similar. In short, there lurks the fallacy of undistributed middle in all these reasons.

The conclusion, therefore, is that the word 'amis' when applied to the avatara means the non-manifestation of the entire Divine powers, while the same word when applied to the jivas means subordination to Divinity.

Adhikarana IX.—Jîvas are not all similar and equal.

Having thus finished the digression, the author now takes up the context about the attributes of the jivas. In the Kathopanisad we find the following text. (II. 5. 13)

निस्योऽनिस्यानां चेतनस्चेतनानामेका यहूनां या विद्धाति कामान् । तमात्मस्यं येऽनुपदयन्ति धीरास्तेषां शान्तिः शाम्बती नेतरेषाम् ॥

The eternal among the eternals, the consciousness among all the consciousnesses, the one who bestows the fruits of Karmas to many Jivas, the tranquil-minded ones who see Him seated in their Atms, get eternal happiness, but not the others.

(Doubt). This text shows that the jivas are many, but have all the same attribute of being eternal and intelligent. Are they therefore all similar?

(Pârva-pakşa). The Pûrva-pakşin maintains that because all jivas possess the same attributes of eternality and intelligence; therefore they must be all similar.

(Siddhânta).—The jivas are not all similar as shown in the next Sûtra.

श्रदृष्टाऽनियमात् ॥ २ । ३ । ४६ ॥

सहस्र Adrista, the fate, the karmas. शनिवनाम् Aniyamât, on account of non-determinateness, on account of non-similarity,

49. The jivas are not similar, because their karmas are various.—267.

COMMENTARY.

The word not is understood in this Sûtra from Sûtra II. 3. 44. The jivas do not all experience the same kind of pleasure and pain, because though their essential nature is the same, yet on account of the variety of their karmas, they are all different in their experiences, etc. The karmas or adristas are beginningless. The jivas have different adristas, in this sense also that they have worshipped the Lord in different ways.

If it be said that the difference between the jivas is owing to the differences in their loves and hatreds, in their desires and affections, that also does not fully explain the case, as the author shows in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 8. 50.

श्रमिसन्ध्यादिष्यपि चैवम् ॥ २ । ३ । ५०॥

् Abhisandhy-âdiṣu, in regard to their purposes and the rest. आपि Api, also. च Cha, and. एक्ट् Evam, thus.

50. And thus they are different with regard to their inclinations and the rest.—268.

COMMENTARY.

The differences of desires and hatreds are not final causes which determine the differences of the jivas; these desires and inclinations, loves and hatreds have for their cause the adristas of the jivas, and thus adristas are the final causes which determine the differences of the jivas. Desires and inclinations are only the secondary causes. The word 'cha' in the Sûtra indicates that the momentary differences also between the souls are to be explained on similar grounds.

If it be said that the differences between the jivas rise from the differences of environments in which they are placed, in favourable environments like Svarga and the rest, or in unfavourable environments like the earth, etc.; to this also we reply that it is not so. For the environments themselves require a cause behind them. The next Sûtra explains this.

SUTRA II. 8. 51.

प्रादेशादितिचेन्नान्तर्भावात् ॥ २ । ३ । ५१ ॥

विदेशाह Prådesåt, on account of locality or environments. इति Iti, thus. वेद Chet, if. व Na, not. अन्तर्भावाद Antarbhavar, because of being included or comprehended.

51. If it be said that on account of the differences of environments there is caused the diversity among the souls, we reply it is not so, because the differences of environments are comprehended under adrista.—269.

COMMENTARY.

The souls are placed in heaven or hell, in favourable or unfavourable environments owing to their different karmas or adristas; therefore, the ultimate cause of the diversity observable among the souls is not the environments, but the adristas of the soul. For it is observed that two jivas placed under exactly the same environments do not act in an identical way, but show forth a diversity of nature; thus it follows that diversity among the souls is caused by the beginningless adristas of the jivas.

Here ends the third Pâda of the Second Adhyâya of the Govinda Bhâeya on the Brahma Sûtras.

SECOND ADHYÂYA

FOURTH PADA.

त्वज्ञाताः कक्रितात्पाता मत्त्राबाः सम्स्यमित्रमित्। यतात्र् शाधि तथा देव यथा सत्पर्यगामिनः॥

O, God, (the sportful one, who creates the prana), born of thee my life-breath and the senses are constantly prone to evil and absorbed in worldly matters. Control them thus, O Lord, that they may follow the path of virtue. These my life-breaths and senses created by thee are naturally prone to evil and lead me astray. O destroyer of evil, train them so, that they may change their course and follow the path of virtue.

Adhikarana I.—The prânas have their origin from Brahman.

In the third Pâda, the author has reconciled the conflict of the texts regarding the origin of the various elements. In the fourth Pâda he reconciles the conflicts of the texts regarding the super-elements, namely the prânas. The prânas are divided into two classes, namely the prânas strictly so called, and the prânas metaphorically so called. The eleven senses, sight, hearing, etc., are called prânas in a secondary meaning. The five prânas known as prâna, apâna, vyâna, samâna and udâna are the principal prânas. Among these the author first takes up the eleven senses, which also are called prânas in a secondary sense.

We find in the Mundaka Upanigad II. 1. 3. the following:-

एतस्माजायते प्रांबा मनः सर्वेन्द्रियावि च ॥ कं वायुज्योतिरापः पृथिवी विश्वस्य धारिकी ॥

From this is born Prana, Manas and all the senses, ether, air, light, water and the earth, the support of all.

(Doubt).—The origin is mentioned here of the senses. Is this origin to be taken in a metaphorical sense, like the origin of the souls; or is it to be taken in its literal sense, like the origin of ether, etc.?

(Pûrva-pakşin).—The Pûrva-pakşin says that the pranas have no origin, for they are eternal, like the jivas; and existed even before creation. The following text shows this:—

स्ता इदमप्र सासीत् तदाहुः किं तदासीदिति ऋषया वाव ते ससदासीत् 'तदाहुः के ते ऋषया इति प्राचा वाव ऋषयः।

Non-being, truly this was in the beginning. Here they say, what was that? Those Risis indeed were that Non-being, thus they say. And who were those Risis? The pranas indeed were those Risis.

This text shows that the Risis existed before creation and the Risis in the plural number are explained by the text to mean the prapas. Hence the senses existed before creation and have no origin. The text of the Mundaka Upanisad, quoted above, showing that prans have an origin, must be taken in a metaphorical sense.

(Siddhanta.)—The pranas have origin, as is shown in the next Satra.

BÛTRA II. 4. 1.

तथा प्राखाः ॥ २ । ४ । १ ॥

सचा Tatha, thus, for the same reason. शाबा : Pranah, the pranas.

1. The prânas also originate in the same way as ether and so on.—270.

COMMENTARY.

As ether and other elements originate from the Supreme Brahman, in the same way do the pranas or the senses also originate from Him. we say because before creation it is declared that everything was one, and direct texts also show that from the Supreme Lord come out the pranas, manas and all the senses. The text of the Mundaka Upanisad, II. 3, 1, already quoted above clearly shows this. The origin of the prana is not to be taken in a metaphorical sense, like the origination of the soul. the jivas have intelligence as their essential nature, and are free from all those six modifications, which we find with regard to material objects. Therefore, the origin of the itvas mentioned in some texts have rightly been explained in a metaphorical way, while the origin of the senses ought not to be so explained, because the senses are modifications of Prakritic matter and with regard to them the origin is to be taken in its primary sense. This being so, the word Risi or Prana mentioned in the text quoted by the Pûrva-pakein is to be interpreted as meaning Brahman. and the Prana here means the Omniscient Lord, the Great Risi or the Seer.

But in the above text the word Prana is in the plural number, how can it refer to the Supreme Brahman? The word Risi also is in the plural number therein. The plural number is to be taken in a secondary sense, as we find in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 4. 2.

गौएयसम्भवात् ॥ २ । ४ । २ ॥

नीवी Gaunt secondary, चसन्त्रवास् Asambhavat, on account of imposesibility.

2. The plural number as applied to Brahman must be taken in a secondary sense, because it is impossible that Brahman should be many.—271.

COMMENTARY.

The plural number is figurative only, because the Lord being essentially one, and there not being many Lords; the plural number is not literally applicable to Him. Of course, He may be looked upon as plural with regard to His various manifestations. One Lord, like an actor, plays many a part on the stage of the world; or like a crystal shows many a facet scintillating with diverse hues. The sacred texts also say the same, "who essentially one appears as manifold," "reverence to Him who is one and yet manifold."

SÛTRA II. 4. 8.

तत्प्राक्बूतेश्च ॥ २ । ४ । ३ ॥

त्रम् Tat, that, namely Brahman. ज्ञास Prak, before (creation.) ज़ारे : Sruteh on account of the sacred text. प Cha, and,

3. Because before creation, the texts declare that Brahman alone existed.—272.

COMMENTARY.

In pralaya, there do not exist many objects, so the plural number is inappropriate for that reason also. All substances, whether Spirits or Matter, are resolved in the Para-Brahman in Pralaya. There is in pralaya a state of unity and the texts repeatedly declare this unity. Therefore, the plural number in the above text describing Pralaya, must be taken in a secondary sense.

Note.—In Pralaya the matter is resolved in Brahman's tamas sakti and does not retain its nature as Matter. The jivas also are resolved in Brahman, but in a different sense. They retain their individuality. They are like bees in a lotus flower, when the flower closes up its mouth. The bees are there inside the flower; but as they do not manifest or appear outside as bees, but are in the heart of flower; the flower only is said to exist. This is the merging of the jivas in Pralaya. The Lord withdraws them all into His bosom, and there they go to sleep in pralaya, and as they do not appear as jivas; the Supreme Brahman is said to be the only entity existing then.

The author gives another reason to show how the word Prâna is here to be interpreted as meaning Brahman.

BÛTRA II. 4. 4.

तत्पूर्वकत्वाद्वाचः ॥ २ । ४ । ४ ॥

त्रकृत्यात् Tat-pûrvakatvât, having for its antecedent that, because before creation. वायः Vachaḥ, of speech, of name, the Brahmaṇ in His subtle energy.

4. Because the Speech existed even before the creation of Pradhâna and the rest.—273.

COMMENTARY.

The word Speech here means names of all objects other than Brahman. The 'Vak' or the Word existed even before the creation of the Pradhana and the rest. In that state of pralays, there did not exist any objects having name and form. Consequently there did not exist any instruments, namely, any senses.

The prans, therefore, as meaning senses, did not exist then, consequently the word Prans in the above text must be taken to mean Brahman. The following text also shows that before creation there did not exist any objects having name and form.—(Brihad-aranyaka, I. 4. 7.)

तद् दं तर्श्वयाकृतमासीत्तवामकपाभ्यामेव व्यक्तियतेऽसा नामायमिद्शक्य इति ॥ ७ ॥

Now all this was then undeveloped. It became developed by form and name, so that one could say, "He, called so and so, is such a one."

Therefore, the sense is that the Pranas have an origin just like the elements, ether, etc., and are not eternal.

Adhikarana II.—The senses are eleven.

Note.—The author now attempts to reconcile the number of the senses. The Pûrva-pakşin says the senses are seven and he rolies upon Katha Upanişad, VI. 10, where the senses are said to be seven. He also relies on the text of Brihad-åranyaka, IV. 4. 1, where also the enumeration of the senses is seven.

Having reconciled in the previous Adhikarana the conflict of the texts as regards the senses—whether they are eternal or created—the author now reconciles the conflict as regards the number of the senses. The following text shows that the senses are seven.—(Mundaka Upanisad, II. 1. 8).

सप्त प्राचाः प्रभवन्ति तस्मात्सप्ताचिषः समिधः सप्त होमाः ॥ सप्त इमे छोका येषु चरन्ति प्राचा गुहाशया निहिताः सप्त सप्त ॥ ८ ॥

The seven sense-currents are produced from Him, with their corresponding seven perceptions, the seven kinds of objects of perception, the seven co-relations and these seven organs in which move the sense currents. For the purpose of producing knowledge, the seven are placed in every human being.

The following text shows that the senses are eleven, (Brihad-Aran-yaka Upanisad, III. 9. 4).

कतमे बद्धा इति दशेमे पुरुषे प्राचा चात्मैकादशस्ते यदास्माच्छरीरान्मर्त्यापुतकाम-म्यय रादयन्ति तचद्रोदयन्ति तस्मादुद्धा इति ॥

He asked: "Who are the Rudras?" Yajūavalkya replied: "These ten vital breaths (prāṇas, the senses, i.e., the five jūanendriyas and the five karmendriyas), and Atman, as the eleventh. When they depart from this mortal body, they make us cry (rodayanti), and because they make us cry, they are called Rudras.

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The senses are seven and the author shows this in the following Sûtra of the Pûrva-pakşa.

SÛTRA II. 4. 5.

सप्तगतेर्विशेषितत्वाच ॥ २ । ४ । ४ ॥

सप्त Sapta, seven. गते: Gateh, on account of the going. विशेषितचार Visegitatvit, on account of the specification. च Cha, and.

5. The senses are seven because the seven senses accompany the departing soul and because the text also specifies these seven.—274.

COMMENTARY.

The senses are seven only, because we find scriptural text showing that the seven accompany the departing soul. Thus the Kathopanisad, VI. 10, enumerates these seven senses.

यदा पञ्चावतिष्ठन्ते द्वानानि मनसा सह ॥ बुद्धिस्य न विषेद्यति तामाद्वः परमां गतिम् ॥ १० ॥

When the five organs of perception, along with emotions are at rest and apart from their objects, and the Intellect even does not exert itself, that state they call the highest road (to God-Vision).

This text of the Katha-Upanisad describes the condition of Yoga and specifies the senses as Jñanani or the senses of perception. The seven senses are the five well-known senses and Manas and Buddhi. These are the only senses of the jiva. The so-called five Karmendriyas hands, feet, speech, etc., are called indrivas or senses in a secondary meaning only; because they do not accompany the departing jiva and because they are of smaller use to him.

SÛTRA II. 4. 6.

हस्तादयस्तु स्थितेऽतो नैवम् ॥ ६ ॥

इश्ताब्ब: Hastadayah, hands and the rest. तु Tu, but. स्थिते: Sthite, while abiding in the body. चतः Atah, therefore. म Na, not. एवस् Evam, thus.

6. But the hands and the rest are also senses, so long as the soul abides in the body, therefore it is not so that the senses are seven only.—275.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'but' sets aside the Pûrva-pakṣa. The hands and so on must also be considered as praṇas, though not included in the seven. Because so long as the soul abides in the body, they also assist the soul in the accomplishment of its desires and in experiencing enjoyment, and because they have different functions. Thus in the Brihad-aranyaka Upaniṣad we find that hands, etc., are also called senses. (III. 2. 8.)

इस्ती वै प्रदः स कर्मकातिप्राहेव गृहीतो इस्ताभ्याश्चीह कर्म करोति ॥ ८॥

The hands are one Graha, and these are seized by work as the Atigraha, for with the hands one works work.

The above text thus enumerates more than seven senses, and so we cannot say that the senses are seven only. In fact, they are eleven, namely the five senses of perception, the five organs of action and Manas as the eleventh. The word 'Atma' as used in the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad, III. 9. 4, means the inner organ or the Antahkarana.

There are five objects of perception, namely sound, touch, form, taste and smell, to perceive these there are required five senses called the five organs of perception, namely the ear, the skin, the eye, the tongue and the nose. Similarly there are five actions namely speech, seizing, locomotion, excretion and reproduction. So there are required five organs to perform these five kinds of action and which are the hands, the legs, the tongue, the anus and the organ of generation. To unite all these activities, which are diverse, it is necessary that there should be an organ which must exist as a unifying agent, with the memory of the past and the present, together with the anticipation of the future; for without such an organ, the activities of these other ten senses would be unharmonised and discordant. This unifying organ, therefore, is what we call the inner organ or the Manas. This one inner organ has many functions, and sometimes it is spoken of as one, and sometimes as many. The various functions of the mind are enumerated in Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad, I. 5. 3.

कामः संकल्पो विविकित्सा भद्राष्ट्राद्धा धृतिरधृतिहीं घीं मीरित्येतत्सर्वं मन पव।

Desire, representation, doubt, faith, want of faith, memory, forgetfulness, shame, reflexion, fear, all this is mind.

Sometimes the mind is spoken of as four-fold as Manas, Buddhi, Ahathkara and Chitta. Manas is the faculty of representation, Buddhi is that of determination, Ahathkara is the egoity, and Chitta is the thinking faculty. In whatever way, we may look upon this inner organ, it is a unit, with a diversity of functions. Thus the senses are eleven, Adhikarana III.—The elevn Indriyas are atomic.

(Doubt).—The author now considers the question of the nature and size of the senses. Are these senses all-pervading or are they atomic?

(Parva-pak;in). —The Pûrva-pakṣin says that the senses are all-pervading, because we can hear sounds at a distance and see objects far off.

(Siddhanta).—The Siddhanta view, however, is that the senses are atomic, as shown in the next Sútra

SÚTRA II. 4. 7.

श्चरावश्च॥२।४।७॥

चांच: Anavah, minute atoms. च Cha, and, indeed, verily.

7. The senses are verily atomic.—276.

The word 'cha' has the force of certainty. It means that the senses are not all-pervading, but atomic. The eleven prânas are indeed atomic.

Note.—These are the so-called permanent atoms of the Theosophists A graphic description of these is to be found in Chapter IV of 'The Study in Consciousness' by Mrs. Resant.

The reason for holding the senses to be atomic is to be supplied from the previous Sûtra, which declares that the soul is atomic because it goes out of the body and comes back into the body. Scriptural texts (like Brihad-âranyaka Upanisad, V. 4. 2) declare that the soul is accompanied by the senses when it goes out; and when the soul takes a new body the senses accompany it too. The question arises, in what form do the senses accompany the soul. The answer to this is, that the senses are permanent atoms, which always accompany the soul, wherever it migrates: whether to regions physical or super-physical. The hearing or seeing objects at a distance is accomplished by these senses or rather permanent atoms, by the vibratory length of their waves. In other words by the expansion of their qualities. As the jiva pervades the whole body, though the particular place of its residence is the heart, so the senses are the ministers of the jiva and surround the jiva, but pervade the whole body through their qualities. This Sûtra thus refutes the doctrine of the Sankhyas who maintain that the senses are all-prevading.

Adhıkarana IV.—The chief Prâna has also an origin.

In the Mundaka Upanisad, II. 1. 3, we read:-

पतस्माजायते प्राक्षा मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाकि च ॥ कं वायुज्योतिरापः पृथिकी विश्वस्य घारिकी ॥ From Rim (when entering on creation) is born prana, mind, and all organs of senses, ether, air, light, water, and the earth, the support of all.

(Doubt.)—The above text evidently refers to the chief prana. The question therefore arises, does the chief prana come out of Brahman like the jiva or does it originate from Brahman like the ether and other elements? If it comes out like the jiva it would be eternal, otherwise it is a creature and hence transient.

(Pûrva-pakṣa.)—The Pûrva-pakṣin maintains that the chief prana has no origin, because of the Sruti which declares this prana verily does not rise, nor does it set. To the same effect is also a Smriti text:—

यत् प्राप्तियत् परित्वाग उत्पत्तिमेरवं तथा । तस्यात्पत्तिम् तिस्वैव क्यं प्रावस्य युज्यते ॥

Birth and death, entering the body or abandoing it, have only reference to the body. It is body which is born and dies and it has no reference to the chief prana.

Note.—The ordinary phrases such as, the prana has entered, the prana has gone out, really do not mean that the prana has an origin or that it is destroyed. They are to be explained in the same way, as the jiva has entered the body, the jiva has gone out.

Hence the Pûrva-pakşin maintains that the prâna is eternal like the jîva, and has no origin.

(Siddhanta.)—The next Sûtra declares that even the chief praya has an origin.

श्रेष्ठश्च ॥ २ । ४ । ८ ॥

बेह: Śrefthah, the best, the chief prana. च Cha, and.

8. The chief prâna has also an origin.—277.

COMMENTARY.

The chief prana originates like akasa and the rest, because the above text of the Mundaka Upanisad distinctly uses the word 'Jayate Pranah,' the chief prana is born. Moreover, having regard to the promissory statement of the Mundaka Upanisad 'He created all this,' we must infer that prana also is created by the Lord, otherwise the general proposition 'He created all this' would not be accurate. This being the case, the texts that declare the chief prana is not created are to be interpreted in a metaphorical way. The chief prana is called the best, because it is the cause of the maintenance of the body. The going out of the chief breath is followed by the decomposition of the body. The separation of this Sûtra from the last is in order to carry the Anuvritti of the word "chief prana" into the next Sûtra. The word 'chief prana' is to be supplied in that Sûtra in order to complete the sense, and not the word 'Anavascha.' The next Sûtra refers to the chief prana and not to the pranas in general. Had the present Sûtra and the preceding Sûtra 7 been enunciated as one Sûtra, it would not have been possible to read the Anuvritti of the chief prâna alone into the next Sûtra.

Adhikarana V.—The chief Prâna is not air.

The author now examines the essential nature of the chief Prana.

(Doubt).—Is this chief Prâna nothing else but air or is it the vibration of air, one of the activities of air or is it air that has assumed some special condition on account of its having entered the animal body?

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin maintains that the chief prâna is nothing but external air, because the Brihad-âranyaka Śruti declares:—(Brihad-âranyaka Upanişad, III. I. 5.)

योऽयं प्राचः स वायुः ॥

That which is the prana that is verily the air. The full text is given below:--

Yājūavalkya said, "By the Udgātri priest, who is Vāyu (the wind), who is the breath. For the breath is the Udgātri of the sacrifice, and the breath is the wind, and he is the Udgātri. This constitutes freedom and perfect freedom.

Or the mere air may not be called Prana, but that particular modification of air which performs the function of respiration in animal bodies is prana. Thus prana is either air, pure and simple, or it is that particular motion of air which we find in inhalation and exhalation, for prana is not applied generally to mere air.

(Siddhanta).--To this Pûrva-pakşa, the next Sûtra supplies the answer.

SÛTRA II. 4. 9.

न वायुक्रिये पृथग्रपदेशात्॥ २।४।६॥

भ Na, not, बायु-किसे Vayu-kriye, air or the function of air. पुषक् Prithak, separate. उपयोग Upadesat, because of the teaching.

9. The chief Prâna is neither air, nor any function of air, because the text enunciates it separately from air.—278.

COMMENTARY.

The highest Prana is neither Air nor any motion of it. Because in the Mundaka text quoted above "from Him there is produced Prana, mind, and all sense organs and Vâyu, etc." shows that Prana and Vâyu are not identical, for they have been separately mentioned. If Vâyu and Prana were identical, then there was no necessity of mentioning these separately.

If Prâna was merely a function of Air, still there was no necessity of mentioning a function along with its root, for we do not find any mention made of the functions of fire and other elements, side by side with these elements, as separate things. The text of the Brihad-âranyaka Upanişad "That which is Prâna is verily Vâyu," intimates not that breath is identical with Air, but that breath is air having a special form and that it is not a separate element like ether, fire, etc.

The Sankhyas hold that Prana is the common function of the senses. In the Sankhya Sûtra, II.?1, it is declared:—

सामान्यकरचश्रुसिः प्राचाचावायवः पञ्च ॥ २ । ३१ ॥

The five Vayus (prana, apana, etc.) are the modifications in common of the three internal instruments, namely of Buddhi, Ahawkara and Manas.

This opinion of the Sankhyas is not correct because Prana being one, cannot have conflicting functions, like those of the various senses.

Adhikarana VI.—The chief prâna is also an instrument of the soul.

In the Brihad-Aranyaka Upanisad it is said that when speech and other senses are asleep, Prana alone remains awake; that Prana alone is untouched by death, Prana is the absorber, it absorbs all the senses like speech, etc.; that Prana is the great protector, it protects all lower pranas as the mother...protects her children.

Note.—The reference to the Brihad-åranyaka Upanişad appears to be incorrect, it is rather in the Prasna Upanişad that we find similar references (Prasna II. 18., III.-3.), in fact the whole of the Second and Third Prasna has reference to this chief prana.

(Doubt.)—Is this chief prans an independent entity residing in this body like the jiva or is it merely an instrument of the jiva helping it.

(Púrva-pakṣa).—Praṇa is an independent entity dwelling in the body along with the jiva, because the texts declare his manifold perfections.

Note.—This Pûrva-pakşa is really the view of Srî Madhva. According to him, Prâna is a separate entity and dwells in the body along with the soul. This chief Prâna, corresponds with the Christ principle of the Gnostics. All souls dwell in Christ and the Christ dwells in the Lord. Madhva quotes Vâyu Parâna in support of his view:—

भूतानिचेष्टामन्त्राक्ष मुस्यप्राचादिदं जगत्। मुस्यः प्राचः परस्माच न परः कारकात्वित इति वायु प्रोक्ते ॥

The elements, human senses, the sacred Scriptures and all this world came forth from the Supreme Prana (Christ), the Supreme Prana came out from the Highest Lord, but the perfect Lord is without a cause.

This trinity of God, Christ and Soul is more in harmony with the occult teachings, than the exoteric expositions of these Sútras.

(Siddhanta.)—The Prana is not an independent entity, but subsidiary to the jiva, as is snown in the following Sûtra.

BÛTRA II. 4. 10.

चचुरादिवचु तत्सइ शिष्ट्यादिभ्यः ॥ २ । ४ । १० ॥

चतुपादिवत् Cnaksur-a il-vat, like the eye and the rest. तु Tu, but. तद-- तह Tat-saha, along with them. शिष्ट्यादिन्द्व: Sistyadibhyah, on account of being taught.

10. The Chief Prâna is also an instrument of the jîva like the eye and the rest, because it is taught along with these organs in the scriptures.—279.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' removes the doubt. Prâna is also an organ of the jîva like eye and the rest. Why do we say so? Because in the section relating to the controversy between the prâna and the senses, the prâna is described as one of the senses of the jîva. Things having similar attributes are always taught together, as the metres called the Brihadrathantra, etc. (See Prasna Upanişad II Prasna; and also the Chhândogya Upanişad V. l. l., etc.)

The word 'Adi,' etc., used in the above indicates that the word 'Prana' is also used in the sense of sense-organs. As we find in the sentence, 'whatever is verily this chief prana, that is verily this middle prana."

The prana is enumerated along with the senses, in order to indicate that it is not independent.

Adhikarana VII.—The Chief Prâna is the prime minister of the soul.

If the chief prâna is an instrument of the soul, like the eye and the other organs, there must be some special function of the chief prâna, by which it assists the soul. But we do not find any such function given to this chief prâna, for there are not mentioned twelve senses but only eleven. Had the chief prâna been one of the senses, then it would have been said that the senses are twelve. Therefore there is no similarity between the senses like the eye, etc., and the chief prâna.

This objection is answered by the next Sûtra.

8ÛTRA IL 4. 11.

भ्रकरणस्वाश्च न दोषस्तथाहि दर्शयति ॥ २ । ४ । ११ ॥

Akaranatvat, on account of its not having any special function or activity. प Cha, and. ज Na, not. शोष: Doşah, objection, fault. सुबह Tatha, thus, हि Hi, because. वर्षेक्ट Darsayati, declares, shows.

11. There is no objection to the chief prana being a sense, though it has no special activity, for the scriptures declare it to be so.—280.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'and' has the force of but here, and is employed to remove the doubt above raised. The word 'karana' in the Sûtra means activity. Though the chief prana is not useful to the Jiva in any special way, like the senses of sight and hearing, etc., yet that is no serious objection to its being an instrument of the soul, because it is of the greatest help to the soul, by being the support of all the other senses. Not only does it support the senses, but it is the organising life of the body, and hence of the greatest importance to the Jiva. Because we thus find in the Chhandogya Scuti Chapter V., Khanda I., verses 1 to 5.

या ह ज्येष्ठम्य से हम्य वेद ज्येष्ठस्य ह वै से इस भवति प्रावेत वाद ज्येष्ठस्य से इस ॥ १॥

He who knows verily the Oldest and the Best becomes himself the Oldest and the best (among his peers). The chief Prans is indeed the Oldest and the Best.

ये ह वै विराष्ट्रं वेद विराष्ट्रो ह स्वानां अवति वाग्वाय विराष्ट्रः ॥ २ ॥

He who verily knews the Best of the Dwellers, becomes the best of the residents among his own people. (The Prana working through) Agni is indeed the Best of the Dwellers.

या ह वै प्रतिष्ठां वेद प्रति ह तिष्ठत्यस्मिश्रस्य क्षेत्रकेऽमुप्मिश्रस्य चसुर्वाय प्रतिष्ठा । ३ ॥

He who knows the Firm Stay, stays firmly (as he desires, either) in this world or in the next. (The Prana working through) the Surya'is indeed the Firm Stay.

या ह वै सम्पदं चेद सछहास्मै कामाः पदान्ते दैवाश्च मानुवाश्च भोत्रं वाव सम्पत् ॥ ४ ॥

He who knows the Success, succeeds in (getting all) his desires, both divine and human. The (Prina working through) Indra indeed is the Success.

थे। ह वा जायतने वेदायतने इ स्वानां भवति मना इ वा जायतनम् ॥ ५ ॥

He who verily knows the Refuge, becomes a refuge of his people. (The Prana working through) Rudra is indeed the Refuge.

This shows that the chief prana is also an instrument of the Jiva. The senses like the eye, ear, etc., are as if officials of the Jiva, and help him in his enjoyment and activity, but the chief prana is his prime minister and assists him in his highest functions, and in the attainment of all his desires.

Adhikarana VIII.—The chief Prana has five functions.

We find in the Brihad-Aranyaka Upanisad (I. 5. 3).

That which is Váyu that is the Prana, and this Váyu is fivefold, prana, apana, vyana, udána and samana.

(Doubt).—Are these five pranas, apanas, etc., separate from the chief prana or merely modifications of it?

(Parva-pakea).—The Parva-pakein maintains that they are separate from the chief prana, because they have got separate names and because they have separate functions.

(Siddhanta). - The following Satra, however, refutes this view.

SÛTRA II. 4. 12.

पंचवृत्तिर्मनोवद् व्यपिदश्यते ॥ २ । ४ । १२ ॥

पंचवृत्तिः Pañcha-vrittih, having five functions. ननोपस् Manovat, like the mind. ध्यपृक्षियसे Vyapadisyate, it is designated.

12. The chief Prâna is designated as having five functions like the Manas.—281.

COMMENTARY.

The Prana, though one, becomes fivefold, according to the particular organ of the body which it occupies for the time being, and which it vitalises. Its functions become fivefold and diverse, owing to the diversity of the organs through which it works. The Chief Prana, therefore, is designated by these five names of prana, apana, etc. These five are consequently the five aspects or functions of the Chief Prana, and not separate from it. The difference of nomenclature is owing to the difference of their activities. There is no essential difference in their nature, and the word prana is a common name for them all. (As one energy of steam by moving different machines such as a printing press, the fan, the drilling machines, etc., may perform different functions, according to the machine through which it acts, so the chief Prana has different functions according to the different organs through which it works). In fact there is a distinct text of the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad which says that these five are verily Pranas. (I. 5. 3).

The prana, the spana, the vyana, the udana and the samana all that is breathing is Frana only.

It is just like the functions of the mind mentioned in the same text. The full text is given below. (Br. Up., I. 5. 3).

श्रीण्यातमञ्जूनसेतिमने। वाचं माखं । मना चमूचं नामीचमिति मनचा होच परपति मनचा श्रुकोति कामः समूचं विचिकित्सा

श्रद्धाःश्रद्धाः भृतिरभृतिर्धीर्मीरित्येतत्सम्बं मन यव तस्माद्यि पृष्ठतः उपस्पृष्ठो मनसा विज्ञानाति यः कद्द्य दान्दो बागेव सैवा झन्तमायचैवा हि न प्राक्षेऽपानाः व्यान उदानः समानाऽन इत्येतत्सम्बं प्राच पवैतन्त्रयो वा चयमात्मा वाकुया मनामयः प्राचमयः ॥

When it is said, that 'he made three for himself,' that means that he made mind, speech, and breath for himself. As people say, 'My minu was elsewhere, I did not see; my mind was elsewhere, I did not hear,' it is clear that a man sees with his mind and hears with his mind. Desire, representation, doubt, faith, want of faith, memory, forgetfulness, shame, reflexion, fear, all this is mind. Therefore even if a man is touched on the back, he knows it through the mind.

Whatever sound there is, that is speech. Speech indeed is intended for an end or object, it is nothing by itself.

The prana or up-breathing, the apana or down-breathing, the vyana or back-breathing, the udana or out-breathing, the samana or on-breathing, all that is breathing is breath (prana) only. Verily that Self consists of it; that Self consists of speech, mind, and breath.

Here though the names and the functions are different, yet desire, purpose, doubt, etc., are all forms of mind and not different from it, but only modifications of it; so Prana, Apana, etc., are merely modifications of the Chief Prana.

The word 'Manovat' may also be explained as "according to the mind having five functions as taught in the Yoga philosophy." As the five functions of the mind are not different from the mind, so the five functions of the prana are not different from the prana.

Adhikarana IX.—The Chief Prâna is also atomic.

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Chief Prâna is all-pervading as the following Sruti describes it. (Bihad-âranyaka, I. 3. 21 & 22).

पच उ पच ज्याबस्पतिर्वाग् वै अग्र तस्या पच पतिस्तस्मातु ज्ञाबस्पतिः ॥ २१ ॥ पच उ पच साम वाग् वै सामैच सा चामक्वेति तत्साग्नः सामस्वं यहेच समः प्कुषिका समा मराकेन समा नागेन सम पमिक्तिमिक्ठीकैः समाओन सम्बंब तस्माहेच सामाक्तुते साग्नः सायुज्य अस्तोकता जयित य पचमेतत्साम वेद ॥ २२ ॥

He (Chief Prana) is also Brahmanaspati, for speech is Brahman (Yajur Veda), and he is her lord; therefore he is Brahmanaspati.

He (Chief Prana) is also Saman (the Udgitha), for speech is Saman (Sama Veda), and that is both speech (sa) and breath (sma). This is why Saman is called Saman.

22. Or because he is equal (sams) to a grub, equal to a gnat, equal to an elephant, equal to these three worlds, nay, equal to this universe, therefore he is Saman. He who thus knows this Saman, obtains union and oneness with Saman.

This shows that Prana is all-pervading as it is the same in all the three worlds.

(Siddhânta).—The Chief Prâns is atomic as shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 4. 18.

ष्ट्राध्य ॥ २ | ४ । १३ ॥

चन्द्र: Anuh; atom, atomic. च Cha, and,

13. The Chief Prâna is also atomic.—282.

COMMENTARY.

The Chief Prana is also atomic, because the text declares that it passes out of the body along with the jiva. Had it not been atomic, the passing out would be inappropriate regarding it. The Brihad-aranyaka, IV. 4. 2, says that the Chief Prana also passes out along with the jiva.

पक्षीमवित न पश्यतीत्याहुरेकीमवित न जिन्नतीत्याहुरेकीमवित न रसयत इत्या-हुरेकीमवित न वदतीत्याहुरेकीमवित न श्रुकातीत्याहुरेकीमवित न मनुत इत्याहुरेकी-मवित न स्पृश्वतीत्याहुरेकीमवित न विज्ञानातीत्याहुत्तस्य हैतस्य हृद्यस्याग्रं प्रधोतते तेन प्रधोतेनैव शासा निष्कामित वश्चुचा वा मूर्जो वाऽन्येभ्यो वा शरीरदेशेभ्यस्तमुत्कामन्तं प्राक्षाऽन्तृकामित प्रावमन्त्कामन्त्रश्चवं प्राचा यन्त्कामन्ति स विद्याने भवित स विद्यान-मेवान्यवकामित तं विद्याकर्माची समन्वारभेते पृथ्वप्रवा च ॥ २॥

He has become one, they say, he does not see. He has become one, they say, he does not smell. He has become one, they say, he does not taste. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not touch. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not hear. He has become one, they say, he does not

Then both his knowledge and his work take hold of him, and his acquaintance with former things.

The all-embracingness ascribed to Chief Prana in the text quoted by the Pûrva-pakşin must be interpreted to mean only that the life of all living and breathing creatures, depends upon the Chief Prana.

Adhikarana X.— Brahman as light is the inciter of pranas.

In the sruti "when the speech and other senses are asleep, the prana alone keeps awake," we find the function of the Chief Prana. In the text "these senses are seven in which the pranas move about," we find the function of the secondary pranas.

(Doubt).—The question arises, do the senses along with the prana perform their respective functions of their own motion, or is there some other Being who moves these pranas to activity? Are these the Devatas who are the moving spirits of the pranas or does the jiva move them or is it done by the Supreme Lord?

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin maintains that the pranas move of themselves, because they are endowed with energy of action, or the Devatas may be the movers of pranas. As we find in the text "Agni becoming speech, entered the mouth, etc." (Aitareya Upanişad, II. 4.) Or the Soul may be the mover of prana, because the prana is subsidiary to the jiva, and is an instrument with which it experiences pleasure and pain.

(Siddhânta).—The Supreme Brahman is the inciter of Prâna and not the Jiva or the Devatâs.

SÛTRA II. 4, 14.

ज्योतिराद्यधिष्ठानं तु तदामननात् ॥ २ । ४ । १४ ॥

ज्ञोति: Jyotir, of fire and the rest, the Supreme Brahman called the light, आधाधिश्वानम् Âdy-adhisthanam, the Chief Ruler. तु Tu, but. तुस् Tat, that state-ment of rulership. श्वाननगृष्ट Âmananât, on account of being so described.

14. The Light is the prime mover of the prânas, because the text so describes it.—283.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'but' is used in order to remove the doubt. The Great Light, namely the Supreme Brahman, is the first ruler or the Chief inciter of these pranas. The affix 'lyut' in the word 'adhisthanam' has the force of agency here. Adhisthanam equal to Adhisthanam' has the say so? Because in the Antaryami Brahmana of the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad we find the Supreme Lord as the ruler of the Chief Prana as well.—(Brihad-aranyaka, III. 7. 16).

यः प्राचे तिष्ठन् प्रचादन्तरा यं प्राचा न वेद यस्य प्राचः शरीरं यः प्राचमन्तरा यमयस्येष त श्रात्मन्तर्याम्यस्यः ।

He who dwells in the Prana, and within the Prana, whom the Prana does not know, whose body the Prana is, and who pulls (rules) the Prana within, he is thy Self, the puller (ruler) within, the immortal.

This and similar texts of the same chapter show that the Supreme Ruler is the Brahman, though the secondary rulers are the Devas and the human jivas. Prana of itself can have no motion, because it is inert matter.

The jiva also rules the pranas, in order to get experiences, as is shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 4. 15.

प्राणवता शब्दात् ॥ २ । ४ । १४ ॥

शासन्त Prana-vata, by the jiva, by the soul having or possessing the pranas. शासन् Sabdat, on account of the scriptural text,

15. The soul controls the Prâna for its own enjoyment, because there is scriptural text to that effect.—284.

COMMENTARY.

The Soul is called Prana-vat because the pranas belong to it. The soul rules the pranas and all the senses, in order to accomplish its objects of enjoyment. Why do we say so? Because there is a scriptural text declaring the rulership of the jivas over the pranas.—Brihad-aranyaka, II. 1. 18, says:—

स यत्रैतस्स्मायाचरित ते हास्य क्षेत्रकास्तवुतेष महाराजा भवत्युतेष महामाझव उत्तेवाचावचं निगच्छति स यथा महाराजा जानपदान् गृहीत्वा स्वे जनपदे यथाकामं परिवर्त्ततैषमेवैष पतत्मावान् गृहीत्वा स्वे शरीरे यथाकामं परिवर्त्तते ॥ १८ ॥

But when he moves about in sleep (and dream), then these are his worlds. He is, as it were, a great king; he is, as it were, a great Brahmana; he rises, as it were, and he falls. And as a great king might keep in his own subjects, and move about, according to his pleasure, within his own domain, thus does that person (who is endowed with intelligence) keep in the various senses (pranas) and move about, according to his pleasure, within his own body (while dreaming.)

To sum up; the Devas and the Jivas both rule the senses, in subordination to the over-lordship of the Supreme Brahman. The Devas rule the senses by merely giving them their activities; the Jivas rule the senses in order to enjoy pleasureable experiences, while the Supreme Lord by His mere will, empowers the Devas and the Jivas to act as subordinate rulers.

To this rule there is no exception as will be shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA II. 4. 16.

तस्य च नित्यत्वात् ॥ १६ ॥

तरब Tasya, of this. च Cha, and. निरासाइ Nityatvāt, on account of the permanence or eternity.

16. And on account of the eternity of this (relationship between the Supreme Lord and the Devas and Souls, He is the real ruler).

COMMENTARY.

The Devas rule the body through the mere will of the Supreme Lord, because of the eternity of the relation between the Devas and the Supreme Self who is the real agent in all activities. In other words, the chief agency belongs to him. As we find from the Antaryami Brâhmana (Brihad-arapyaka, III. 7.)

Adhikarana XI.—The Chief Prâna is not an Indriya.

The author now raises another doubt with regard to this subject.

(Doubt.)—Are all the Pranas senses or only the lower Pranas and not the Chief Prana? In other words, is the Chief Prana also an Indriya or a sense organ?

(Pûrvu-pakşa).—The chief Prâṇa is also an Indriya because it is implied by the term Prâṇa or Sense, and hecause it assists the Jîva. Hence all the Prâṇas are Indriyas.

SÛTRA 11.4.17.

तइंद्रियाणि तद्व्यपदेशादन्यत्रश्रेष्ठात् ॥ २ । ४ । १७ ॥

ने Te, they, namely the Pranas. दुन्तियांचा Indriyani, sense organs. तह— व्यवदेशाङ् Tat-vyapadesat, because designated as such. च्यव्य Anyatra, elsewhere except. विशास शिल्डामीका, than the best or the Chief Prana.

17. All Prânas are sense organs, because of their being so designated, with the exception of the Chief Prâna.—286.

COMMENTARY.

All these Pranas, with the exception of the Chief Prana, are certainly sense organs, because in the Mundaka Upanisad they are so designated (Mundaka Upanisad II. 3.) While in the case of the Chief Prana, the mention is separately made from the Indriyas. In fact, the word Indriya or sense organ is applied to the organs like sight, hearing, etc., and never to the Chief Prana. The Smriti also says that the Indriyas are eleven. Had the Chief Prana been one of Indriyas then the number of organs would have been twelve and not eleven. (See Bhagavad Gita, XIII. 5.) There is a Sruti text also to the effect that the Chief Prana is not an Indriya.

An objection is raised to this view. In the Brihad-âraṇyaka Upaniṣad, I. 5. 21., it is said that all the sense organs are but modifications of Prâṇa and are different forms of it. The Chief Prâṇa must also therefore be an Indriya, since every Indriya is but a form of it. The text of the Brihad-âraṇyaka is given below:—

तानि बातुं वृज्ञिरे चयं वै नः भ्रेष्ठो यः सम्बर्ध्वश्चासम्बर्ध्वस्य न व्यथतेओ न रिच्यति बृत्तास्येव सम्बं कपमसामेति त एतस्येव सबं कपममब्ध्यसस्मादेत पते-नाक्यायनो प्राचाः ॥

Then the others tried to know him, and said: 'Verily, he is the best of us, he who, whether moving or not, does not tire and does not perish. Well, let all of us assume his form.' Thereupon they all assumed his form, and therefore they are called after him 'breaths' (pranas).

How do you reconcile this statement with your view that the Chief Prana is not an organ? To this the next Sûtra gives the reply.

SÛTRA II. 4. 18.

भेदश्रुतेः ॥ २ । ४ । १८ ॥

18. The Chief Prâna is not an organ, because there is a scriptural statement of its being different from sense organs.—287.

The text of the Mundaka Upanisad, II. J. 3, clearly mentions "From Him is born Prana, and the Manas and all organs." Thus the Prana is separated from organs and therefore it is not an organ. But Manas is also mentioned separately from organs or Indriyas in the same text, and it also ought not to be called an Indriya. To this we reply that Manas is an Indriya, because it is formally included in the organs in the Bhagavat Gita, XV 7, where it is called distinctly the sixth organ. For reference the Mundaka and the Gita texts are given below:—

पतस्माञ्जायते प्राचा मनः सर्वेन्द्रियाचि च। कं वायुज्योतिरापः पृथिवी विश्वस्य धारिकी ॥

From him (when entering on creation) is born breath (prana), mind (manas), and all ergans of sense, ether, air, light, water, and the earth, the support of all.—(Mundake Upanisad, II. 1.3.)

मिनेवांशा जीवलोके जीवभूतः सनातनः। मनः पद्यानीन्द्रियाचि मकृतिस्थानि कर्षति ॥ ७ ॥

A portion of Mine own Self, transformed in the world of life into an immortal Spirit, draweth round itself the senses of which the mind is the sixth, veiled in Matter. (Bhigawat Gita, XV. 7.)

The Lord also speaks of Himself as Manas among the Indrivas (Bhagavat Gita, X. 22.)

वेदानां सामवेदे।ऽस्मि देवानामस्मि वासवः । इन्द्रियाकां मनक्वास्मि भूतानामस्मि केनना ॥ २२ ॥

Of the Vedas I am the Sama-Veda; I am Vasava of the Shining Ones; and of the senses I am the mind; I am of living beings the intelligence.

Note.—As a general rule Manas is not included in the Indriyas in many passages of the Upaniaads. Compare, for example, Katha III. 4, 10., VI 7., Svetasvatara II. 8., Prasna III. 9., Gitá II. 7 and 40 and 42, and XVIII. 83.

SÛTRA II. 4, 19.

वैलक्तरायाच्च ॥ २ । ४ । १६ ॥

देशस्यवाद Vailakṣaṇyāt, on account of difference of characteristics. च Cha. and.

19. The Chief Prâna is not an organ, because it has not the characteristics of an organ.—288.

COMMENTARY.

There is moreover a difference of characteristic between the Chief Prana and the senses. In deep sleep we still perceive the activity of the Chief Prana, for the breathing goes on, while the senses like hearing, sight, etc., are dormant. The Chief Prana supports the body and the senses, while the senses are instruments of knowledge and activity only. Thus there is a difference between the sense organs, and the Chief Prana, both in their essential nature and in their activities. In the Brihad-aranyaka, no doubt, the sense organs are said to be of the form of the Chief Prana. The phrase 'they became its form' means that their activity is dependent upon the Chief Prana, and not that the sense organs became the Chief Prana. It is similar to the statement that the Jiva has become Brahman, which does not mean that the Jiva has really become Brahman, but that the activity of the Jiva is dependent on Brahman.

Adhikarana XII.—The production of individual forms is also from Brahman.

In the previous Sûtras it has been shown that the creation of the elements and the organs and their collective aspects (Samaşti) and the activity of the Jivas proceed from the Highest Self. Now, is being determined, the question 'From whom proceeds the creation of the world in its discrete aspect (Vyaşti), namely who creates the individual forms." In the Chhandogya Upanişad after having mentioned the creation of fire, water and earth, the Sruti goes on to say (Chhandogya Upanişad, VI. 3, 2 to 4).

सेयं देवतैशत हम्ताहमिमास्तिको देवता चनेन जीवेनात्मनाऽनुप्रविश्य नामक्ये व्याकरवाकीति ॥ २ ॥

That Being (i.e., that which had produced fire, water and earth) thought, let me now enter those three beings (fire, water, earth) with this living Self (jivatmam), and let me then reveal (develop) names and forms."

तासां त्रिवृतं त्रिवृतमेकैकां करवाकीति सेर्य देवतेमास्तिको देवता सनेनैव जीवे-नात्मनातुप्रविषय नामक्षे व्याकरात् ॥ ३ ॥

Then that Being having said, "Let me make each of these three tripartite (so that fire, water, and earth should each have itself for its principal ingredient, besides an admixture of the other two) enter into these three beings (devata) with this living self only," revealed names and forms.

तालां त्रिवृत त्रिवृतमेकैकामकरायया तु कलु साम्येमास्तिको देवतासिवृत्रिवृदे-कैका भवति सम्मे विजानीहीति ॥ ४ ॥ He made each of these tripartite, and how these three beings become each of them tripartite, that learn from me now, my friend.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, is this differentiation of name and form work of the Jiva however high he may be, such as the Solar Logos), or is it the work of the Supreme Lord?

(Pûrva-paksa) - The differentiation of name and form, in other words, the creation of the organised world is the work of the four-faced Brahma, who is a jiva and not of the supreme Lord directly. This we say because in the Chhandogya Upanisad, the creation of the pure elements of fire, water and earth is from the Lord, but the creation of the mixed elements of fire, water and earth called the triplicities, is from a jiva. The words of the Sruti are 'Anena Jivena Atmana,' "Let me now enter those three Devatâs--fire, water, earth-with this Jîvâtmâ, and let me then differentiate names and forms." This shows that the differentiation of names and forms and the creation of compound elements is from a Jiva. The instrumental case in 'Jivena Atmana' (with the Jiva-atma), has not the implied meaning of association (together with this Jivatma); for if a case can be taken in its primary sense, it should not be taken in a sense which has to be expressed by means of a preposition. Nor can you object to the insturmental case in the 'Jivena' to be understood in its primary sense. namely that of the instrument of an action. (The literal meaning of the third case is, that which is most suitable to accomplish the end of action. the Jivatma or the four-faced Brahma in this view would be the most suitable instrument of the Lord to produce the world). No Jiva, however high he may be, can be said to be the most suitable instrument to accomplish the ends of the Lord. He brings about everything by His mere will. for His sankalpa is true, and so Brahma cannot be called His 'Sadhakatama or the most suitable instrument. Nor can it be said that the Jiva (four-faced Brahmå) finishes his activity by merely entering into the pure elements of fire, water, and earth, while the act of differentiation of names and forms is the work of the Lord; because entering and differentiating must refer to the same agent, and not that the entering should be referred to Brahma and differentiating to the Lord The word 'Pravisya' is a participial form and denotes a prior action having the same agent as the subsequent action. The phrase 'Pravisya vyakaravani' "By entering I shall differentiate" must therefore refer to the same person. But if the four-faced Brahma is the secondary creator and not the Supreme Lord; why is the word 'Vyakaravani' used in the first person, for it means "I shall differentiate." The first person shows that the Supreme Lord is the creator of the organised universe of name and form as well. To this we reply that the first person is also consistent with our view, just like a king who may say, "I shall estimate the strength of the hostile army, by entering into it through my spy." Here the estimation is really made by the spy, but the use of the first person by the king is not inappropriate. Similarly Brahman may as well say "I shall differentiate names and forms, by entering into these three pure elements with this four-faced Brahma." Nor is this merely a fancy of our own, evolved from our inner consciousness, but we have the authority of the scriptures in our favour.

विरिज्या वा इदं विरेचयति विद्धाति ज्ञद्धा वाच विरिज्य यतस्मादीमे रूप नामनी।

The four-faced Brahma is called Viriacha, because he ordains (virechayati) or organises the universe. From him proceed all these organised creatures having particular name and form.

There is Smriti text also which attributes the creation of name and form to Brahmā.

नाम रूपम्ब भूतानां कृत्यानां च प्रपञ्चनम् । वेद शब्देभ्य पवादै। देवादीनां चकार सः ॥

He (the four-faced Brahmå) in the beginning made, from the words of the Veda, the names and forms of beings, of the Devas and the rest, and of actions.

Compare also Manu, Chapter I, verse 21.

सर्वेषां तु सनामानि कर्माबि च पृथक् पृथक । वेद शब्देश्य येवादी पृथक संस्थाअ निर्ममे ॥

He (four-faced Brahma) too first assigned to all creatures distinct names, distinct acts, and distinct occupations; as they had been revealed in the pre-existing Veda.

Therefore, the creation of name and form is not the work of the Supreme Brahman directly, but of the four-faced Brahma a jiva.

(Siddhanta).—The creation of the organised forms and of compound elements is also the work of the Supreme Lord, as is shown in the next Sûtra.

80TRA II. 4. 20.

संज्ञामृर्तिकलृतिस्तु त्रिवृत् कुर्वत उपदेशात् ॥ २ । ४ । २० ॥

संज्ञा Safijña, name. सृति Murti, form. स्वति: Kliptih, creation, making differentiation. तु Tu, but. चित्र Trivrit, tripartite, compound. द्वर्गेत: Kurvatah, of the maker. उपरेशार Upadesat, on account of the teaching (of scripture).

20. The making of names and forms is the work of the Supreme Brahman, who compounds the pure elements into triplicities, because the scripture teaches it so.—289.

The word 'but' removes the objection raised above. The differentiation of name and form belongs to him who mixes the pure elements into their compounds by the method of tripartition, as shown in the Chhandogya Upanisad, VI. 3, and 4 Khs. The visible elements fire, water and earth are not pure elements. The making of this mixture (what the Theosophists call the Monadic essence) is admittedly the work of the Lord, (or the second life wave of the Theosophists). The creation of organised forms—nama, rupa—from this Monadic essence or tripartite fire, water and earth, is also the work of the Supreme Lord in his third life wave and not of any jiva, however high he may be, like the four-faced Brahma. Why do we say so? Because the text quoted above expressly mentions that the differentiation of name and form, is the work of the same agent who makes the mixture of the pure elements, by the method of tripartite.

The method of tripartite is given in the following verse:-

त्रीष्येकैकं द्विषा कुर्यात् व्यक्तीन विमजे द्विषा । तत्त्रम्युष्याव मुख्यत्व योजयेष त्रिकपता ॥

Divide each of the three elements into two equal halves, then divide one of those halves into two equal parts. Then add the smaller parts of the one element into the larger one of the other and thus we get the tripartite elements.

Note.—Thus divide pure fire, water and earth into halves, then divide each half into half again. Thus we have of fire three divisions—half, one-fourth and one-fourth, and so of water and earth. The compound fire is equi to or is made up of a mixture of half pure fire, one-fourth pure water and one-fourth pure earth. Similarly the compound water is made up of half pure water, one-fourth pure fire and one-fourth pure earth. The compound earth is in the same way a mixture of half pure earth, one-fourth pure fire and one-fourth pure water.

This triviti-karana is analogous to the 'Panchikarana' of the modern Vedantins, who evolve the five compound elements from the pure elements or five tanmatras by a process similar to the above.

It cannot be said that the making of the tripartite mixture is the work of the four-faced Brahmâ. Because the manifestation of the four-faced Brahmâ takes place then only, when these compound elements have already come into existence. The four-faced one abides within the Brahma egg, and that egg itself is produced from fire, water and earth, after they had become the compounds. As we find in Manu, I. 9.,

तब्ब्हममबर्दे मंसहस्रांगुस्मममम् । तस्मिन्त्रहे स्वयं ज्ञ्जा सर्वक्षेत्रपितामहः ॥

The seed became an egg bright as gold, blazing like a luminary with a thousand beams, and in that egg was born Brahmå himself, great fore father of all the worlds.

Therefore in the text of the Chhandogya Upanisad, VI. 3. 2., the differentiation of name and form is the work of the same agency as that of the compounding of the pure elements, and the succession shown in that text must not be taken to mean that first He created the nama-rûpa, and then He made the compounding of elements. Though the text is liable to that interpretation, for it says that Brahman thought "let me now enter those three beings with this Jivâtmâ, and let me then develop name and forms." And then that being said "Let me make each of these three tripartite," yet the tripartition or compounding of elements takes place first, and then the creation of species (of names and forms). The Cosmic egg cannot be produced from the pure elements of fire, water and earth, but from their compound forms. The simple elements have not the power of producing the Cosmic egg.

Thus in the Bhagavata Purana, Il. 5. 32 and 33, we find the following:—

यदैतेसंगतामाचा भूतेन्द्र्यमनागुचाः । यदायतननिर्माचे न शेनुजद्य विश्वमम् ॥ ३२ ॥ तदासंहत्य चान्यान्यं मगवष्ठकिवादिताः । सदसरवमुपादाय चामयं सस्जुद्यदः ॥ ३३ ॥

Because these pure elements so long as they remained uncombined and consisted of mere elements, senses, mind and attribute, they were not capable, O, best of the knowers of Brahman, to construct the organised body. Then they were combined one with the other impelled by the Divine energy, and the Lord created all this, both the discrete and the universal forms by taking up Pradhana and her Gunas—the Being and the Non-being.

In the same Smriti the method of 'Panchikarana' is also described. The five elements ether, air, fire, water and earth are divided into halves each, and then each half is divided into four parts. The one-eighth part of each of the four elements is added to the half of the remaining element and thus the gross element is produced. For example, the gross ether is made up of half pure ether plus one-eighth pure Vâyu, one eighth pure water, one-eighth pure fire, and one-eighth pure earth. Similarly, the gross Yâyu is equal to half pure Vâyu, plus one-eighth pure ether, plus one-eighth pure fire, plus one-eighth pure water and one-eighth pure earth, and so on with the other elements.

In the Chhandogya Upanisad, V1. 5. 1 to 4, we find the following :—
सन्तमितं त्रे था विभीयते तस्य यः स्थविष्ठो धातुस्तस्युरीचं अवति या मध्यमस्तस्माश्रदी वेशक्ष्यसम्मनः ॥ १ ॥

The earth (food) when eaten becomes three-fold; its grossest portion becomes fasces, its middle portion flesh, its subtlest portion mind.

ज्ञापः पीतास्त्रे चा विधीयन्ते तासां यः सविद्यो धातुस्तन्भूत्रं भवति या मध्यमस्त-क्वोहितं याऽविद्यः स प्रावः ॥ २ ॥

Water when drunk becomes three-fold, its grossest portion becomes water, its middle portion blood, its subtlest portion breath.

तेजाऽदीतं त्रेषा विधीयते तस्य यः लविष्ठी घातुस्तव्स्ति मंत्रति या मध्यमः स मक्षा योऽक्षिष्ठः सा वाक् ॥ १ ॥

Fire (i.e., in oil, butter, &c.) when eaten becomes three-fold: its grossest parties becomes bone, its middle portion marrow, its subtlest portion speech,

चन्नमयश्रदि सोम्य मन चापोमयः प्रावस्तेज्ञामयी बागिति भूय एव मा भगवान्वि-बावयत्विति तथा सोम्येति देवाच ॥ ४॥

For truly, my child, mind comes of earth, breath of water, speech of fire.

Here the three-fold modification of earth, fire and water is not to be confounded with the process of tripartition. It is not the earthy portion of the earth that becomes feces, the watery portion flesh and the fiery portion mind. The whole compound earth, when eaten, is disposed of in three ways, namely feces, flesh and mind. Similarly, the whole compound water when drunk is disposed of in three ways, namely urine, blood and breath. So also the entire compound fire when eaten is disposed of in three ways, namely bone, marrow and speech.

In the sentence Chhandogya, VI. 3. 2, it is mentioned that the Lord entered with the Jiva-Self. That text should not be confounded as teaching that the Jiva is the creator of names and forms. On the other hand the words 'Atmanâ Jivena' being in the case of apposition mean that the Atman of the Supreme Lord through His aspect called Jiva, namely, through His Jiva energy produces names and forms. For Brahman has three energies, one of which is the Jiva energy. This explains also the verse quoted above which ascribes the evolution of name and form to the four-faced Brahmâ. In this explanation the first person (in "Let me differentiate") and the agency conveyed by the form of 'Pravisya' may without any difficulty, be taken in their primary literal senses. This also shows that the form 'Pravisya' and 'Vyākaravāṇi' have one person as the agent of both actions. Therefore it follows that the Lord alone is the maker of names and forms. As we find in the Taittiriya Āraṇyaka, III. 12. 16.

वेदाइमेतं पुरुषं महान्तम् । चादित्यवर्षं तमसः परस्तात् । तमेव विद्यानस्तरहः भवति । नान्यः पन्था विद्यतेऽयनायः॥

I know this great personage whose colour is refulgent like that of the sun and who is beyond darkness, who having created specific forms and names is ever making use of them. By knowing Him, one becomes immortal, there is no other way to walk upon.

Adhikarana XIII.—The vehicles of Soul are all made of earth.

Now the author considers the question of the bodies of individuals. The body is denoted by the term Mûrti or form. The text of Brihad-Aranyaka, III. 2.13, declares that the body is resolved into earth when the Soul leaves it and that this shows that the body is earthy. While the Kaundinya Sruti declares that the body consists of water. The original texts are given below:—

याक्राक्नयेति हेावाच यत्रास्य पुरुषस्य मृतस्याप्तिं वात्येति वातं प्राचम्रभूरा-दित्यं मनभ्रन्तं दिशः भोत्रं पृथिवीश शरीरमाकाशमासीवधीर्धोमानि वनस्पतीन्केशा स्रन्तः क्षेत्रहितम्ब रेतस्य निधीयते कावं तदा पुरुषो भवति ।

Yājāavalkya! he said, 'when speech of this dead person enters into the fire, breath into the air, the eye into the sun, the mind into the moon, the hearing into space, into the earth the body, into the ether the self, into the shrubs the hairs of the body, into the trees the hairs of the head, when the blood and the seed are deposited in the water, where is then that person? (Brihad-4ranyaka, III. 2. 13).

चक्रचोहीदमुत्पठको चपाचाच मांस मस्ति च भवंत्वापः शरीरमापपवेदं सर्वमिति ।

From water indeed is produced all this; water is verily flesh as well as bone; water is verily the body; water is verily all this.—(Kaundinya Śruti).

While there is a third text which says: -

ब्राप्यः सः बन्ने देवयोग्याः।

He reaches the fire the source of Devas.

These three texts are conflicting.

(Doubt).—Thus arises the doubt, is the body made up of fire or of water or of earth, or of a combination of all these three; for we have three different texts describing three sorts of origin of the body.

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin says that it is indeterminate, because these three Śrutis are irreconciliable.

(Sjddhanta.)—The body is of earth as is shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA 11. 4. 21.

मांसाऽऽवि भौमं यथाशब्दमितरयोश्च ॥ २ । ४ । २१ ॥

नांसाऽदि Māmsādi, flesh and the rest. भीतव् Bhaumam, of earth, composed of earth. वया-वास्त्व Yatha-savdam, as declared by the scripture. इत्रको: Itarayoh, of the other two, namely of fire, and water. च Cha, and.

21. Flesh and the rest are of earthy nature, because of the text to that effect. And so also in the case of the two others.—290.

COMMENTARY.

The flesh and the best portion of the body are the products of earth. Similarly of the other two, namely of water and fire the products are blood and bone, etc. This we must admit because of the text of the Chandogya Upanişad, VI. 5. 1 to 4, quoted above. There is also an express text to the effect that body is of earth. In the Garbha Upanişad we find the following:

भें पञ्चात्मकं पञ्चसु वर्ष मानं वडाभयं वड्गुक्योगयुक्तम्। तं ससवातु विमलं द्वियोनं चतुर्विधाहारमयं शरीरम् ॥ भवति पञ्चात्मकमिति कस्मात् पृथिवा-पस्तेजावायुराकाशमित्यसिन् पञ्चात्मके शरीरे का पृथिवी का भापः किं तेजः को वायुः किमाकाशमित्यसिनपञ्चात्मके शरीरे तत्र यत्किर्विनं सा पृथिवी यदृष्ट्यं ता भाषः यदुष्यं तत्ते जः यत्सञ्चरति च वायुः यत्सुविरं तदाकाशमित्युच्यते।

This body consists of five elements, it has five kinds of perceptional activities, it has six sorts of essences in it, it has six musical tones, seven humours, three kinds of excrecenses (nails, hairs of the body and hairs of the head), two origins (father and mother) and is maintained by four kinds of food. Why is it called made up of five elements? Because earth, water, fire, air and ether go to form it. What portion of the body is earth, what water, what fire, what air and what ether? The solid portion is earth, the liquid water, the heat fire, the respiratory system is air and the cavities and hollows (such as the frontal cavity) are ether.

Thus all bodies are threefold, whether they be the bodies of Gods or animals.

If all bodies (elements and elementals) are threefold, then why is it said, "this is fire, this is water, etc.?" For the so-called fire is after all not pure fire, but fire plus two other elements, nor is water pure water. And why is it said that the bodies of the Devas are made of fire, those of the Apsaras of water and those of the terrestrials of earth. To this the next Sûtra gives the reply.

SÛTRA II. 4. 22.

वैशेष्याचु तद्वादस्तद्वादः ॥ २ । ४ । २२ ॥

रेशेच्यात् Vaigesyat, on account of the distinctive nature, on account of preponderance. तु Tu, but. तब्-बाद: Tat-vadaḥ, the designation of that. तब्-बाद: Tad-vadaḥ, that designation, namely their designation of fires, ether, etc.

22. The compound elements are so called because of the preponderance of the pure element in their composition.

—291.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' or 'but' is employed in the Sûtra in order to remove the doubt raised in the previous section. Though each compound element is indeed three-fold in its nature, yet it gets its particular designation from the particular element that preponderates in its composition. Thus the compound fire is called fire because of the preponderance of pure fire in it. Similarly, the Devas are called fiery, because their bodies are made of substances in which fire preponderates. The repetition of the word 'Tadvadah? in the Sûtra is in order to indicate the completion of the Adhyava.

Here ends the Fourth Pada of the Second Adhyava of Govinda Bhasya

THIRD ADHYÂYA.

FIRST PADA.

न विना साधनेदेंचा ज्ञानवैरान्यमिकिमाः। ददाति स्वपदंशीमानतस्तानि वुषः भयेत् ॥

The Lord God does not manifest His highest state, unless there be the proper 54dhanas or practices, consisting of wisdom, dispassion and love. Let, therefore, the wise have these S4dhanas.

In the two previous Adhyayas, has been determined the essential nature of Brahman, who is the only cause of the world, who is free from all imperfections, who is an ocean of perfect attributes, who is existence. intelligence and bliss, and who is the highest person. It is shown therein, that all men desirous of release, must meditate on Brahman: for all Vedanta texts establish Him to be the proper object of meditation The two previous Adhyayas have proved this by refuting the argumenta of the opponents of Vedanta. Now in this Third Adhyava are being determined those Sadhanas or practices, which are the means of attaining the highest Brahman. In the First and Second Padas of this Adhyava are being taught two things, namely, a strong yearning or desire to obtain Brahman, and an equally strong disgust towards all objects other than Brahman: for these two are the principals among all Sadhanas, namely, Vairagya and Prema. In order to teach Vairagya (disgust), the Sûtras show in the First Pada the imperfections of all worldly existences: and this they base on the Panchagni Vidya of the Chhandogya Upanisad in which is taught how the soul passes after death from one condition to another. The First Pada, therefore, teaches the great doctrine of re-incarnation, the going out of the soul from the body, its sojourn into the lower or higher regions, and its coming back on this earth. This is done in order to teach Vairagya or disgust. In the Second Pada are described all the glorious attributes of the Supreme Brahman. His Omniscience. Omnipotence, Loveliness, etc., in order to attract the soul towards Him, so that He may be the only object of quest.

The Panchagni Vidya is described in the Chhandogya Upanicad (V. 3 to 10). Commencing with the verse "Svetaketu Aruneya went to an assembly of the Panchalas. Pravahana Jaibali said to him:—'Boy, has your father instructed you?' 'Yes, Sir,' he replied."

The whole of that discourse, contained in eight Khandas, shows prima facie that the soul goes to the next world after death, and again comes back to this world.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, does the soul going to the next world, do so by throwing off all its subtle rudiments—the permanent atoms—or does it go there accompanied by the subtle rudiments?

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin maintains that these subtle rudiments or permanent atoms do not accompany the soul, but they being universally spread, are taken up by the soul, from the surrounding atmosphere, when it makes a new body for itself. Therefore, the soul goes on its journey to the higher world, unaccompanied by the subtle rudiments or permanent atoms.

(Siddhanta).—The soul is accompanied on its sojourn, by these permanent atoms, as is shown in the following Sûtra.

Note.—The whole passage is given below for facility of reference:—

ADHYAYA V.—KHANDA III.

6. Then Gautams went to the king's place, and when he had come to him, the king offered him proper respect. In the morning the king went out on his way to the assembly. 1. In order to obtain another body, the soul goes accompanied by permanent atoms; as appears from the question and answer in the Chhândogya text.—292.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'that' refers to the word body mentioned in Sûtra II. 4. 20. because the Anuvritti of the word 'Mûrti' is understood in this Sûtra from that already mentioned. The jiva goes surrounded by the subtle rudiments. when it goes out of one body in order to obtain another. How do we know this? Because the question and answer in Chapter five of the Chhandogya Upanisad shows this. The question there put is "Do you know to what place men go from here?" And then the answer is given in the Fourth Khanda, namely, "the altar is that world, O, Gautama," etc. The story as given in the Chhandogya Upanisad is this. The king of the Pañchâlas, a Keatriya, called Pravahana, asked five questions from a Brâhman boy named Svetaketu who had come to his court. Those questions related to (1) the regions where the performers of sacrifices go, (2) the method of return from that region, (3) the persons who do not attain that world. (4) and the two paths called the paths of the Devas and the paths of the Pitris, (5) The last question was "Do you know why in the fifth libation water is called Man?" That boy not being able to answer these questions. returned to his father Gautama, and expressed his sorrow to him. The father also did not know the answer to these five questions, and in order to learn it, he went to Praváhana. The king received him with proper honour, and expressed his desire to give him riches, but Gautama begged of him the answers to those five questions. The king then answered those questions, commencing with the last one, saying "that world, O Gautama, is the altar, etc." He described this as five fires, the first fire is the Heaven world, the second is Rain, the third is the Earth, the fourth Man, and the fifth Woman. In these five fires, five sorts of libations are poured by the Devas, namely, Śraddha, Soma, Rain, Food and the Seed respectively. The sacrificial priests in these libations in every case are the Devas. The Home is the throwing of the soul which is surrounded by its subtle rudiments into the various worlds, beginning with heaven; in order that it may attain enjoyments of heaven and the rest. The senses of the Jiva which has departed from its body, are called Devas. These Devas sacrifice in the fire of heaven Sraddha. That Sraddha becomes transformed into a celestial body called Some-raja, and it is through this body that the soul enjoys heavenly felicities. Then the period comes that the jiva should be thrown down from the heaven-world, then at the end of its enjoyment, the soul in this vehicle called Soma-raja is thrown into the fire called Parjanya, where it becomes Rain. The body which the soul now gets is called the Rain-body. This Rain-body is thrown into the fire of Earth, namely, it falls on Earth. From this offering arise plants. This plant or food is the third body of the soul. Then the food is eaten by some male which represents the fourth libation and the male represents the Fire. From this Home of food in the Fire of male arises the semen which is the fourth body of the Soul. This Semen is poured into Fire of the Female where it gets its fifth body and becomes the embryo. Having mentioned these five oblations, the King says in answer to his fifth question, "For tais reason is water in the fifth oblation called Man." The meaning is, that the Soul when offered in the fifth Fire as seed, becomes incarnated, and assumes the human body, which is called the man. The Soul returns to the womb of woman along with all those waters (permanent atoms or senses) with which it went to the heaven-world, and thus it appears that the Soul in its return to the higher world goes enveloped by the subtle rudiments of organs, that is, by the permanent atoms.

But the text in the Chhandogya Upanisad speaks of 'water' as going up to heaven and coming back as rain and ultimately becoming man. It shows that water only accompanies the soul, and not any other element. How do you then say that the Soul goes enveloped by all the elements? To this objection the next Sûtra gives the reply.

SÛTRA III. 1. 2.

वि-बालक्षात् Tri-Atmakatvåt, on account of consisting of three, three-fold. ह Tu, but. धूतस्तात् Bhûyastvåt, on account of preponderating

2. The water which envelopes the Soul being three-fold, it denotes all the other elements by implication; and the text specifies water, because it preponderates in the human body.—293.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'But" denotes the removal of the doubt above raised; as the compound water has in it all the other elements, because it consists of water, fire and earth. Therefore when the Soul goes enveloped by this compound water it follows that the other elements also go with it. In the embryo of the body, which is made up of the sperm and the germ cells, it is apparent that liquid is the predominant element, though the solids are also there. It is owing to the predominance of the watery elements that the word 'water' is called the great destroyer of heat. In fact on account of this preponderance of water in the constitution of the human body, the water alone is mentioned as going along with the Soul.

बाब Prāṇa, of the prāṇas (the sense organs). जते: Gateh, on account of the going out. च Cha and.

3. Since the Soul goes out with the Prânas, all the elements must accompany it.—294.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad (IV. 4. 2.) it is mentioned that when the Soul goes out, in order to take another body, the Pranas also accompany it.

तमुक्तामन्तं प्राचाऽन्कामित प्राचमन्कामन्त्रः सर्वे प्राचा चन्कामन्ति स विज्ञाना भवति स विज्ञानमेवान्ववकामन्ति तं विद्याकर्मची समन्वारमेते पूर्वप्रज्ञा च ॥ २॥

And when he (soul) thus departs, the chief Prana departs after him, and when the Prana thus departs all the other vital spirits (pranas) depart after him. He is conscious, and being conscious he follows and departs.

But the prânas cannot exist without a substrate. During life the prânas exist in the elements; therefore, after death, if they have to accompany the soul, they must accompany with their substrate, the rudiments of elements. We must, therefore, admit that the rudiments of elements, the permanent atoms, must accompany the Soul, because they are the vehicles of prânas.

If it be said that the scriptural text mentions also the going of the various senses into various elements, like fire, etc., and therefore, the senses do not accompany the Soul, when it goes out of the body; to this we reply, that the going of the senses to the elements is metaphorical only.—295.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad we find the following:

याद्यवक्येति हेावाच यत्रास्य पुरुषस्य मृतस्याग्निं वागयेति वातं प्रावहचश्चरा-दित्यं मनद्यन्त्रं दिशः श्रोत्रं पृथिवीश शरीरमाकाशमात्मीवधीलोंमानि वनस्यतीन्केशा अन्तु क्षेत्रितं च रेतद्य निधीयते कायं तदा पुरुषा भवतीत्यादर सोम्य इस्तमार्तमागावामे-वैतस्य वेदिप्याचा न नावेतत् स जन इति ता है।कम्य मन्त्रयांचकाते ता ह यद्चतुः कमे हैव तद्चतुर्य यत्मशशक्षतुः कमे हैव तत्मशशक्षततुः पुण्या चै पुण्येन कमेवा भवति पापः पापेवेति तता ह जारस्कारव चार्तमागं उपरराम ॥ १३॥

'Yajūavalkya,' he said, 'when the speech of this dead person enters into the fire, breath into the air, the eye into the sun, the mind into the moon, the hearing into space, into the earth the body, into the ether the self, into the shrubs the hairs of the body, into the trees the hairs of the head, when the blood and the seed are deposited in the water, where is then that person?'

This going of the sense organs like speech, etc., into fire, etc., shows that they do not accompany the soul when it leaves the body. The text which says that the senses accompany the soul must, therefore, be interpreted in a different way. To this objection, the Sûtra replies that it is not so. The merging of the speech in fire, etc., is to be explained in a metaphoric sense, because in its literal sense they are not true. For the hairs of the body do not enter into the herbs, nor do the hair of the head into trees. Manifestly, Lomas and Kesas do not enter into herbs and trees; and in their case we are forced to explain the statement as figurative only. Why should then the entering of speech into fire, breath into the air, the eye into the sun, the mind into the moon, etc., be taken in its literal sense? For both being read in the same sentence, must be explained in the same way. Either the whole is metaphorical, or the whole is literally true. But it is not literally true, because the Lomas and the Kesas are never seen to jump out of the human body and enter into herbs and trees. The entering of speech into fire, etc., means that at the time of death, these senses cease to perform their functions, and not that they are absolutely lost to the Soul. The conclusion, therefore, is that the soul does go accompanied by the senses, and the permanent atoms, for the gross accompanies the subtle.

8ÛTRA. III. 1. 5.

- 5. If it be objected that water is not mentioned in the first oblation, and therefore the soul does not go accompanied by water, we reply, that even in the first oblation, water is verily meant by the word Sraddhâ, for that is the most appropriate meaning of this word in that passage.—296.

(Objection).—If water be the oblation in all the five offerings, then, of course, it will be appropriate to say that the soul goes enveloped in water, and that in the fifth oblation water gets the name of man. But that is not the case. In the first fire we do not find that water is mentioned as an oblation, on the other hand Sraddhâ or faith is mentioned there as first oblation; for the text says:—"In that fire the Devas offer Sraddhâ." Sraddhā is a well known name of a mental attitude and means faith or belief, and it never means water. The other four oblations of Soma, Rain, etc., have something of water in them, and they may be explained as water, but Sraddhâ, by no stretch of language, can be called water. Therefore, from this text of the Chhândogya Upanişad, we cannot deduce the conclusion that the soul of the dead goes enveloped by water.

(Reply).—To this objection, the Sûtra replies in its second portion, that in the first fire also, "water" is the oblation, because the word Śraddhâ there must be interpreted as meaning 'water.' Why should it be so interpreted? Because of its fitness, in connection with questions and answers. The question is 'Knowest thou why water in the fifth oblation is called man?' This shows that all the five oblations are of water. But in the first answer Śraddhâ is mentioned as an offering. Consequently, Śraddhâ must be taken there to mean water, otherwise the question and answer would not agree with each other. If the word Śraddhâ there did not mean water, then there would be a conflict between the question and the answer. Water is connected with all the five offerings here. If Śraddhâ did not mean water, then water would be connected with four offerings only. Moreover, the other four offerings Soma, Rain, Food and Seed are described there to be the effects of Śraddhā. It is Śraddhā which becoming more and more dense, modifies itself into these four. Therefore, it must be a substance belonging to the same category as these four, for the cause cannot be different from its effect. And an effect is only a modification of the cause. Therefore, it is reasonable to interpret Śraddhā to mean water here, whose effects are the Soma (or the Devachanik body), Rain (the astral body), Food (the etherial body), and Seed (the physical body). Hence Śraddhā there must be interpreted as water. Moreover, in the Śruti "Śraddhā indeed is water" (Taittirtya Samhitā I. 6. 8. 1) this word is expressly used to denote water. It cannot mean here "belief" or "faith," which is a function of the mind, and which no one can take out of the mind and offer as an oblation to fire. Hence it follows that the soul goes surrounded by waters, when it departs from the body.

But another objection is raised by the opponent. The text mentions or may be interpreted to mention that the waters go up and come down, but throughout the whole section there is no mention of the Jiva going surrounded by water. In fact, the word Jiva does not occur at all in that section of the Chhândogya Upanişad. It cannot, therefore, be deduced that the Soul goes enveloped by waters. To this objection the next Sûtra gives the reply.

SÛTRA III. 1. 6.

अभुतत्वाविति चेन्नेष्टाविकारिणां प्रतीतेः ॥ ३ । १ । ६ ॥

चनुस्ताम् Aérutatvât, on account of this not being stated by the scriptures; because not proved, शृति lti, this, so. चन् Chet, if. न na, not, no. शृशिक्वारिवास् Işṭa-âdi-kāriṇām, in reference to those who perform sacrifices, &c. ब्रह्मित: Pratteh, on account of being seen in the Sruti, on account of being understood.

6. If it be said, that the word Jiva is not mentioned at all in that section, we reply, it is not so, because the whole section is to be understood as referring to those who perform sacrifices and other good works.—297.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'Asrutatvåt' means because not proved. In that Chhandogya Upanisad the going of the performer of good works to Moon is mentioned. The performers are Souls and not Waters. In the Chhandogya Upanisad (V. 10. 3 and 4) the Pitriyana is thus described:—

चर्च य इमे ज्ञाम रहापूर्वे दचमित्युपासते ते धूममभिसंभवन्ति धूमाद्राविं रावेर-मासाधाताचे ते संवत्सरमभिमाञ्जवन्ति ॥ ३॥ But they who living in a village practise (a life of) sacrifices, works of public utility and alms, they go to the smoke, from smoke to night, from night to the dark half of the moon, from the dark half of the moon to the six months when the sun goes to the south. But they do not reach the year.

मासंभ्यः पितृक्षेकं पितृक्षेकावाकाशमाकाशचन्द्रमसमेव सोमा राजा तहेवा-नामकं तं देवा मक्षयन्ति ॥ ४ ॥

4. From the months they go to the world of the fathers, from the world of the fathers to the ether, from the ether to the moon. That is the sparkling Soma. Here they are eaten by the Devas, yes, the Devas eat them.

From this we understand, that the performers of sacrifices and so on, having reached the astral plane (Chandra-loka), get the name of "Somaraja." This technical name "Somaraja" is applied here to the Soul. That very word we find used in connection with the first offering (Chhandogya Upanişad, V. 4. 2.)

तिसम्बतिसम्बद्धी देवाः अर्था जुड्डति तस्या चाडुतेः सोमा राजा संमवति ॥२॥

On that altar the Devas (or primas represented by Agni, &c.) offer the Sraddhå libation (consisting of water). From that oblation rises Somaraja.

Now, therefore, the same word being employed in both places, we hold that the Soul, in the moon plane, gets a body consisting of Sraddhå, a body called Soma. Though the word Jiva is not expressly used in connection with these oblations, yet body being the abode of Jiva, and its nature being to be the abode of Jiva and Jiva only, the word body is sometimes used to denote the Soul. In other words, the connotation of the word body extends up to the Soul. Hence the "waters" only do not go, but the Jiva surrounded by waters goes up.

Now another objection is raised. This celestial body which the jiva assumes in the heaven world is called Somaraja-Refulgent nectar. The same text, Chhandogya Upanisad, V. 10. 4, also mentions that this Somaraja, the sparkling nectar, is the drink of the Devas, and that the Devas eat this body. Since the Devas eat this Somaraja body, we cannot say that it means the Soul in his heavenly garb, for no one can eat the Soul. To this objection the next Sûtra gives the reply.

SÛTRA III. 1. 7.

भाक्तं वानात्मवित्वात्तया हि दर्शयति ॥ ३।१।७॥

7. The Jiva called Somarâja is said to be the food of the Devas in a figurative sense only, because they do not know the Self, for thus the Sruti declares.—298.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'Va' or "or" has the force here of removing the doubt. The Jiva termed Somaraja is said to be the food of the Devas, in a metaphorical sense only, and not literally. It is said to be the food, because it gives pleasurable enjoyment to the Devas. The reason being, such souls are servants of the Devas. They are servants, because they do not know the Self. The Sruti also declares that those who do not know the Self become servants of the Devas. In the Brihad-aranyaka Upanisad we find (I 4. 10):

महा वा इदमम मासीत् तदात्मानमेवावेद्दं महास्मीति तस्माचत् सर्वमभवत् तयो यो देवानां प्रत्यबुष्यत स पव तद्मवच्चर्यां वा मनुष्यावां तस् तत्पद्यकृषि-वांमदेवः प्रतिपेदेऽदं मनुरमवछ स्प्रदेवेति तदिद्मप्येतिहें य पवं वेदाहं महास्मीति स इदछ सर्वं भवति तस्यह न देवादच नाभूत्या ईवते। प्रात्मा खेषाछ स भवत्यय योज्या देवतामुपास्तेज्योऽहमस्मीति न स वेद यथा पग्रुरेवछ स देवानां यथा ह वै बहुवः पश्चे। मनुष्यं भुष्ण्युरेवमेकैकः पुरुषा देवान् भुनक्त्येकस्मिन्नेव पशावादीयमानेऽप्रियं भवति किम् बहुव तस्मादेषां तन्न प्रयं यदेतन्मनुष्या विद्यः ॥ १०॥

Verily in the beginning this was Brahman, that Brahman knew (its) Self only, saying, 'I am Brahman.' From it all this sprang. Thus, whatever Deva was awakened (so as to know Brahman), he indeed became that Brahman; and the same with Rigis and men. The Rigi Vamadeva saw and understood it, singing, 'I was Manu (moon), I was the sun.' Therefore, now also he who thus knows that he is Brahman, becomes all this, and even the Devas cannot prevent it, for he himself is their Self.

Now if a man worships another deity, thinking the deity is one and he another, he does not know. He is like a beast for the Devas. For verily, as many beasts nourish a man, thus does every man nourish the Devas. If only one beast is taken away, it is not pleasant: how much more when many are taken. Therefore, it is not pleasant to the Devas that men should know this.

The sense is this. It is not possible to eat the soul as food; therefore the soul becoming the food of the Devas means that it is a source of enjoyment or satisfaction to the Devas; and the word food is used in a figurative sense. In fact we find the use of the word food in this sense, in sentences like the following:—"The Vaisyas are the food of the Kings, the cattle are the food for the Vaisyas," where the word food is evidently used in a metaphorical sense, and means the source of enjoyment; for the King derives the greatest part of his revenue from the Vaisyas (the great agricultural and mercantile class); while the source of the wealth of the Vaisyas is their cattle.

If the word food were to be taken in its literal sense, then all the rules about sacrifices like Jyotistoma and the rest, would be useless. If the Devas were to eat the souls, that go to the lunar world, why would men then exert themselves to go there, and why would they perform sacrifices like Jyotistoma and the rest by which they reach that world. Hence, the conclusion is that the soul goes to the other world enveloped by permanent atoms, (in order to serve the Devas).

Adhikarana II.—Does the soul come back on earth with a portion of its karmas or after totally exhausting all its karmas.

Vijaya.—In the Chhandogya Upanisad (V. 10. 5), we find the following text after "But they who live in a village sacrificing, etc.," which describes the method of return from the heaven-world, of those who go there by the Pitriyana path.

तकान्यावर्त्तपातमुपित्वाऽयैतमेवाध्वानंपुनर्निवर्त्तने यथैतमाकादामाकादायुः वायुर्भृत्वा घृमा भवति घृमामूत्वाऽद्यं मवति।॥ ५ ॥ flaving dwelt there, till their (good) works are consumed, they return again that way as they came, to the ether, from the ether to air. Then the sacrificer, having becomes air, becomes smoke, having becomes smoke he becomes mist.

बस् भूत्वामेथा भवति मेथा भूत्वामवर्षत तर्ह मीहियवा प्रोपधिवनस्पतयस्तिकमाचा इति बायन्तेऽता वैबलुं दुर्मिष्णपतरं या या प्राचमत्ति यारेतः सिम्बति तद्भूयप्य भवति ॥ ६॥

Having become mist, he becomes a cloud, having become a cloud he rains down. Then he is born as rice and corn, herbs and trees, sesamum and beans. From thence the escape is beset with most difficulties. For whoever the persons may be that eat the food, and beget offspring, he henceforth becomes like unto them.

(Doubt).—Now arises the doubt, is the soul returning from heaves accompanied by any remainder of its works or does it descend having exhausted all its karma.

(Pārva-pakṣa).—It returns having fully enjoyed the fruits of its karmas, and without any remainder. The words 'Yāvat-sampātam' in the above text show, that they do not return till all their works are consumed. Another text also shows that when the end of the karma is reached, then the soul returns from heaven. That text is of the Brihad-āranyaka Upaniṣad (IV. 4. 6.)

तदेच महोको भवति ॥ तदेच सकः सह कर्मकैती किन्नं मने। यत्र निचक्रमस्य ॥ प्राच्यानां कर्मकरतस्य यत्किंचेह करोत्ययम् तस्राङ्कोकात्युनरैत्यस्मै क्षेषकाय कर्मक इति वुकामय मानाऽयाकामयमानायोऽकामोनिकाम चासकाम चात्मकामो नतस्यमाका कन्ना-मन्ति इद्यौ वसन्वद्याप्येति ॥

And here there is this verse: "To whatever object a man's own mind is attached, to that he goes strenuously together with his deed; and having obtained the end (the last results) of whatever deed he does here on earth, he returns again from that world (which is the temporary reward of his deed) to this world of action.

So much for the man who desires. But as to the man who does not desire, who, not desiring, freed from desires, or desires the Self only, his vital spirits do not depart elsewhere,—being Brahmap, he goes to Brahman.

Here also the words 'Antam-karmanah' show that all karmas are exhausted, before the soul returns to earth. Therefore, the descent of the soul is without any remainder. The word 'Sampāta' means literally karma, that which carries one to Swarga Loka, (Sampatante anene svargalokam iti sampātah). The word Anusaya means that part of the karma which remains over and above the part enjoyed in heaven, and which causes experiences in another life, (anusete kartāram phala bhogāya). Hence it follows, that when the fruit of entire karma has been enjoyed, there is no remainder which can follow the soul, and start a new series of experiences.

(Siddhanta.)—The soul, in its descent from heaven, comes with a remainder of its karmas, namely, that portion of it which is not exhausted in heaven world, and for which the proper place of fruition is the lower world. This is shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 8.

कृतास्ययेनुशयवान् दृष्टस्मृतिभ्याम् ।३।२।२॥

हत Krita, of what is done, of the karma. च्याचे Atyaye, at the end, at the exhaustion. चतुराव्यात् Anusayavan, with a remainder of the (karma). रहस्यति वात् Drista-smritibhyam, from Śruti and Smriti.

8. The soul returns on earth with a remainder of the karmas, as is proved by the Smriti and Sruti texts.—299.

COMMENTARY.

The fruits of karmas, like sacrifices and the rest, which were performed with the object of attaining the heaven world, and enjoying happiness there, are entirely exhausted in heaven. Then the body of enjoyment, which the soul had assumed in the Chandraloka, (literally, the world of gladness) is burnt up in the fire of grief, caused by the coming approach of the fall to the earth; and the soul returns with the remainder of karmas other than the good ones. The heaven-carrying karmas called Sampāta (literally, heaven-soothing energy), are all exhausted in their entirety. But there are many good and bad deeds, besides the Sampāta works, performed by the soul. Those karmas are the Anusaya or remainder, with which the soul returns. This we find from the very text of the same Chhāndogya Upanişad in the next verse (V. 10. 7).

तद् य इह रमजीयचरका चभ्यासा ह् यत् ते रमकीयां यानिमापचे रन्, ब्राह्मक्यानिं वा वैश्ययोगिं वा । चय ये इह कपूयचरका चभ्याशा हयत् कपूर्या यानिमापचे रन् श्ययोगिं वा सकरयोगिं वा बच्डालयोगिं वा ॥

Those quickly falling souls, whose conduct has been good, will indeed attain some good birth, the birth of a Brahmana, or Kantriya, or a Vaisya. But those quickly falling souls whose conduct has been evil, will indeed attain an evil birth, the birth of a keeper of a dog or of a hog, or a Chandala.

The word 'Ramaniya-charana' means works which are Ramaniya or good, that is to say, the remainder of works which is good. If the remainder of the work is good, it is called 'Ramaniya-charana.' The word 'Abhvyāsa' means the quick-comer and is derived from the root 'As' with the affix 'Kvip' preceded by the proposition of 'Abhi.' The word 'Ha' means indeed, 'Yat' means when. The following Smriti text is also to the same effect:—

इह पुनर्भवे ते उमयशेषाम्यांनिविद्यन्ति

They enter into this world with the remainder of both their good and bad works in order to reincarnate.

Hence it follows that the soul descends with a remainder.

The word 'Yavat-sampatam' does not mean the exhaustion of all karmas, but the exhaustion of the heaven-mounting energy, the energy that took the soul to heaven, and which is exhausted in heaven-world by the enjoyment of unalloyed bliss.

In the next Sûtra the author shows the peculiar mode of descent of these souls.

SÛTRA III. 1. 9.

यथेतमनेवं च ॥ ३ । १। २ ॥

वया Yatha as इतन् Itam, gone, went. भ्रत्नेवन् An-evam, not thus by different steps: च Cha, and,

9. The soul descends partly by the same path as it ascended and partly by a different path.—300.

COMMENTARY.

The soul, returning from the Chandra-world, with a remainder of its work, does so by the path it went but not wholly in that way, but by a different way also. The ascent takes place by the following stages:—smoke, night, etc., as mentioned in the following verses of the Chhandogya Upanişad, V. 10. 3 and 4.

श्रथ य इमे प्राम इद्यापूर्वे दसमित्युपासते ते धूममभिसम्मवन्ति धूमाद्रात्रि रात्रे-रपरपक्षमपरपक्षाचान्यडदक्षित्रैति मास्यस्तात्रैते संवत्सरमभित्राम् बन्ति ॥ ३ ॥ But they who living in a village practise (a life of) sacrifices, works of public utility, and alms, they go to the smoke, from smoke to night, from night to the dark half of the moon, from the dark half of the moon to the six months when the sun goes to south. But they do not reach the year.

मासेभ्यः पितृक्षेकं पितृक्षेकादाकादामाकादामकाम्मसमेष सोमा राजा तद्दे वाना-मर्च तं देवा मसयित ॥ ४ ॥

From the months they go to the world of the fathers, from the world of the fathers to the ether, from the ether to the moon. That is Somraja. Here they are eaten by the Devas, yes, the Devas eat them.

The method of descent, given in the next verse, shows that it agrees to a certain extent with the way of ascent, namely, so far as smoke and ether are concerned, for these two are common to both the ascending and descending paths. But on the descending line, there is no mention of the night or the dark half of the moon and the rest. On the other hand, there is the additional mention of the cloud, the rain and the rest. This shows that the journey on the descending path, is partly by the same road as the roul ascended, and partly by a different road.

चरणादितिचेत् नोपनचाणार्येति कार्ष्णाजिनिः ॥३।१।१०॥

चरवान् Charanat, through conduct. हति lti, thus, so. चेत् Chet, if. न Na, no, not. तर् Tat, that. वदमञ्जाची Ubalakṣaṇa-arthā, meant to imply, meant to connote हति lti, so, thus. काच्यांजिनि: Kārṣṇājiniḥ, (says, holds, thinks) Kārṣṇājini.

10. If it be objected, that the birth of the re-incarnating soul is determined by its conduct, and not by the remainder of its unexhausted karmas, we say it is not so, for according to Kârṣṇâjiri the word 'Charaṇa' or 'conduct' is illustrative of karmas not exhausted in the heavenworld.—301.

COMMENTARY.

(Objection).—An objector says, it is not right to say that the soul gets a particular birth on account of the remainder of its unexhausted karmas, when it falls from heaven. The words 'Ramaniya-charana' and and 'Kapûya Charana,' generally translated as 'good conduct' and 'bad conduct,' show that the birth is regulated by conduct and character, and not by unexhausted karmas. The word 'Charana' (conduct) and

'Anusaya' unexhausted karma or the remainder) are not synonymous. In fact, we find the word Karma and Charana used in different senses. In Briliad-aranyaka Upanisad the re-birth is said to be regulated by Karma and Charana both, for the words used there are 'Yathakari' (as one behaves). Therefore, Karma or act (special performance of ritualistic acts) and Achara or conduct (observance of the general rules of good conduct) are different things and have different significance and are differently employed in language.

Though the word 'Anusaya' means the remainder of unexhausted karmas and 'Charana' means "conduct," yet it is not a serious objection to their denoting the same thing. For the text about 'Charana' is illustrative of remainder of karmas and the word 'Charana' is used there in a larger sense than the ordinary. This is the opinion of the sage Karanajini. According to him, the word 'Charana' is used in the Chhandogya Upanisad (V. 10. 7) as connoting by implication Karmas or ritualistic works. Because, it is a well-known maximathe Sastras, that karmas or sacrificial works are the causes of everything that we see, including good conduct, etc.

आनयक्यमितिचेन्नतदपेचत्वात् ॥३।१।११॥

चान्यंत्रवर् Ånarthakyam, purposelessness, it is purposeless. इति Iti, thus as. चेत् Chet, if. न Na, not. तत् Tat that, (conduct). चपेचलात् Apekşatoât, on account of the dependence, because it depends on that.

11. If Karma be the cause of all objects, then good conduct would be purposeless. It would not be so, we reply, because the right to perform karmas is dependent upon good conduct.—302.

COMMENTARY.

An objector says, character and conduct would not regulate re-birth, if the due performance of sacrificial works be the cause of all that happens to a man. To this, we reply, that the rules enjoining good conduct are not useless, because the right to perform sacrifices is itself dependent upon the possession of good conduct. A person devoid of good conduct is not entitled to perform those works. As says a Smriti "A person who does not perform his daily prayers, and is always impure, is unfit for all religious works." This being so, religious works are fruitful in the case of that person only who possesses good conduct.

Karma

Therefore by the word conduct is to be understood Karma here. Thus the opinion of Karsnajini is that the word 'Charana' of the text implies

SÛTRA III. 1. 12.

सुक्रतदुष्कतप्वेति तु बादरि: ॥३।१।११॥

शुक्रत Sukrita, good or righteous deeds. दुष्कृते Duskrite, and bad or unrighteous deeds. वृद Eva, only. इति lti, thus. तु Tu, but. वादि: Badarih, says or thinks Badari.

12. But Bâdari is of opinion that the phrases 'Ramaniya-charaṇa' and 'Kapûya-charaṇa' mean good and evil works.—303

COMMENTARY.

The word 'but' is employed in the Sûtra in order to set aside the view of Kârsnâjini mentioned above. Bâdari is of opinion that by the word 'Charana' is meant here good and bad deeds. In the phrases like Punyam karma âcharati, the verb âchara takes for its object the word karma. Therefore, the word 'charana,' means karma. When it is possible to give to a word its principal meaning, it is not desirable to interpret it in a figurative sense. The word 'charanam' Anuşthânam, and Karma are synonymous. Good conduct is also a particular kind of Karma only.

Note.—Every holy work enjoined by the scripture is technically a Karma. Good conduct is also enjoined by acriptures, sometimes, by direct texts and sometimes by implication, and thus it may also be called Karma in the broader sense of the word.

Though Achara and Karma in this view are one, yet they are speken of sometimes as different, on the maxim of "Kuru Paṇḍavas." Though the Paṇḍavas were also Kurus, yet in the phrase Kurus and Paṇḍavas the word Kuru is used in a narrower sense. The force of the word only in this sûtra is to indicate that this is the opinion of the author of the Sûtras. The conclusion is that since by the word Charaṇa is mentioned a particular kind of Karma, therefore, the soul descends with a remainder of its karmas.

Adhikarana III.—Do the evil-doers also go to the Chandra-loka?

It was mentioned above that those who perform sacrifices and so on, go to the moon-world and descend from it with the remainder of their works. Now is discussed the question, whether the sinners, who do not perform any holy works, also go to the Moon-world, and what is their method of ascent and descent? In the Isávasya Upanisat, verse 3, it is said:—

प्रसुर्या नाम ते क्रोका प्रन्येन तमसाइताः ॥ ताध स्ते प्रेत्वामिगच्छन्ति ये के चारमको सनाः ॥ ३ ॥

There are the worlds of the Asuras, covered with blind darkness. Those who have destroyed their self go after death to those worlds.

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin maintains that the evil-doers also go to the world of Gladness. The author summarises their view in the next Sûtra which is really a Pûrva-pakşa Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 18.

श्रनिष्टादि कारिगामिप च श्रुतम् ॥ १२ ॥

चनिशारिकार् Aniştâdikârinâm, of those who do not perform sacrifices. चित्र Api, also, च Cha and. चुत्र Érutam, stated in the Éruti, declared by scripture.

13. The scripture declares that the non-performer of sacrifices and so on, also go to the world of gladness.—304.

COMMENTARY.

(Objection.)—The scripture declares the ascent to the world of gladness even of those persons who are non-performers of sacrifices and so on, just like those who perform these works. In the Kausitaki Upanisad (I. 2) it is declared that all go to the Chandra loke.

स होबाच ये वैके बास्माहोकात्मयन्ति बन्द्रमसमेव ते सर्वे गण्डान्त ॥

All who depart from this world (or this body) go to the Moon.

The word all shows that it is a universal proposition, without any qualifications. Since all who die, must go to the world of gladness, it follows that the sinners also go there. This being so, the above text of the landsya Upanişat must be interpreted as a threat, in order to make men desist from evil deeds: for there is no such place like the land of the Asuras.

If this be so, then what is the difference between the sinners and the holy men, for both go equally to the land of joy, after their death. Both have the same fruit. To this we reply, there is a vast difference in their conditions. The sinners in the world of joy, do not experience any happiness (because they have not got the vehicles to enjoy that world), they remain there in a state of swoon.

(Siddhanta).—The sinners do not go to the Moon-world, but to the world of punishment, as is shown by the next Sûtra.

SUTRA III. 1. 14.

Aroha-avarohau, ascent and descent (i.e., coming to worldly existence and going to still nether regions.) वह Tat, of them. नित्त Gati (about their) courses. वर्षनाम् Darsanat, owing to or from the Scripture.

14. But of the others (namely, sinners) the going is to the city of reform. Having suffered there, they come down on earth. Such is their ascent and descent. And this is the path described in the scriptures.—305.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'but' indicates the setting aside of the Pûrva-pakṣa. Of the others who do not perform holy works and the rest, going is to the city of Yama called Sathyamana. There having suffered the punishment inflicted by Yama, they come back here again—such is the nature of their ascent and descent. How do you know this? Because of the following text of the Katha Upaniṣad. (I. 2. 6.)

न साम्परायः प्रतिमाति बालम्प्रमाचन्त वित्तमोहेन मृदम् । चयं क्षेको नास्ति पर इति मानो पुनःपुनर्ध्वद्यमापयते मे ॥ ६ ॥

The way to the supreme Liberation does not appear to the child deluded by the illusion of wealth and acting carelessly. He who thinks that this world only exists and not the other, falls again and again under my control.

This shows that the souls of sinners go to the world of Yama and are there punished by him.

स्मरन्ति च ॥ १४ ॥

In the Bhagavata Purana it is thus mentioned.

तत्र तत्र पतन् भान्ता मृष्कितःपुनवत्यितः। पथापापीयसा नीतस्तरसायमसादनम्।

They are quickly carried to the abode of Yama, by the path of the sinners, on which they travel with great pains, constantly rising and falling, tired and swooning.

In another verse it is said :-

All these sinners come under the control of Yama, O Lord.

Sages thus declare that the sinners come under the jurisdiction of Yama.

Thus the Bharata, "The temporary Hells are said to be Raurava, Maharaurava, Vanhi, Vaitaraui, and Kombhipaka; and the two eternal Hells are called Darkness and the Blinding Darkness. These are the seven chief hells in the ascending order of be ribleness. By regularly going through these only, ascent or descent takes place."

Thus seven Hells are declared in the Smriti to be the place of punishment for the sinners. They go to those places and not to the land of Joy. The force of the word also in the Sûtra is to include all those other Hells mentioned in the Bhagavata Purana at the end of the fifth Skandha, where twenty hells are described.

If Yama has jurisdiction in Hell to punish all the sinners; does it not contradict the rule that all power belongs to the Lord, and that He punishes and gives rewards. The answer to this objection is given in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 17.

तत्रापितद्व्यापारादविरोधः ॥ १७॥

सूच Tatra, there (in those hells). चार Ani, also. सूच् Tad, of those (the others, the jivas in hell) or of Him. ब्याप्त Vyaparat, on account of activity, guidance. चारियोप: Avirodhah, no contradiction.

17. There is no contradiction because His activity is present there also.—308.

COMMENTARY.

The saying that the Lord is the punisher is not contradicted by the fact that Yama and the rest are the actual inflicters of punishment. They are guided by the command of the Lord, in the act of punishment. It is a well-known fact in the Purāṇas, that Yama and others punish the sinners, under the command of the Lord.

An objector says, it may be possible for the sinners also to ascend to the world of Joy, after having expiated for their sins by suffering punishment at the hands of Yama. This must be so, because the Kauşltaki Upanişad uses the word all, when it says: "All who depart from this world go to the land of Joy." This view is set aside by the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 18.

विचा Vidya, of knowledge, कार्यकोः Karmanoh, and of karma or action. हु Tu, only, bat. बृद्धि lti, as, so. ब्रह्मतुरवात् Prakritatvat, on account of these being the topics.

18. But the sinners never go to the world of Joy, because the topic relating to the two paths in the Chhândogya Upanişat is confined to men of knowledge and men of work and has no reference to sinners.—309.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'But' sets aside the view propounded by the objector. The word 'Not' is to be read into the Sûtra from the preceding Sûtra (III. 1. 11). The sinners never go to the world of Joy, because the two paths Devayâna and Pitriyâna are trod by two sorts of men, and by none other. Men of knowledge go by the path of the Devas to the world of the Gods, and men of work go by the path of the Fathers to the land of Joy. The Chhândogya Upanişat (V. 10. 1) declares that men of knowledge go by the path of the Devas; while V. 10. 3. declares that men who perform sacrifices go by the path of the Fathers. Thus the world of Joy which is reached by the path of the Fathers is meant only for those who living in a village practise a life of sacrifices, works of public utility and alms. It is not meant for those who do not perform sacrifices. This being so, the word 'All' in the Kauşttaki Upanişat (I. 2), must be interpreted in a restricted sense, namely all those persons who perform sacrifices go to the Moon.

If the sinners do not go to the world of Moon, then no new body can be produced in their case; because there is no fifth oblation possible in their case, and the fifth oblation is dependent on one's going to the Moon. Therefore, all must go to the Moon, in order to get new embodiment. This objection is answered by the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 19.

न तृतीयेतथापनब्धेः ॥३।१।१६॥

न Na not, no. पुरी Tritiye, in the third. तथा Tatha, so, such, thus. स्वार्धिः Upalabdheh, it being perceived or seen to be.

19. The fifth oblation is not necessary in the case of those who go to the third place, because it is thus declared in the Scriptures.—310.

COMMENTARY.

Those who go to the "third" place, do not depend on the fifth oblation for getting a new body. Why do we say so? Because it is thus perceived in the Scriptures. In the Chhandogya Upanisad Praváhana Jaibali puts this question to Svetaketu, "Do you know why that world never becomes full?" In answer to this question he says (Chhândogya, V. 10. 8.) "On neither of these two ways those smaller creatures (flies worms, etc.) are continually returning of whom it may be said live and die. Theirs is a third place. Therefore that world never becomes full." Those creatures who do not go either by the path of Devayana or of Pitriyana, are the small creatures, who are classed as insects, mosquitoes, &c. They return by a different path, and their return is very quick. About them it is said "live and die." That is to say these small creatures are continually being born and are dying. This constitutes the third The sinners are called small creatures because they assume the bodies of gnats, insects, &c. Their place is called the "third" place, because it is neither the Brahma loka, nor the Dyu loka. Therefore, those who are not entitled to go by the path of the Devas to Brahma loka, because they do not possess knowledge, nor are entitled to go by the path of the Fathers, because they have not performed sacrificial works, are the pitiable creatures who are born as mosquitoes. gnats, &c. They constitute a third class. Hence the Heaven-world never becomes full, because these sinners never go there. The origination of their bodies is in the third plane, the fifth oblation is not necessary in their case.

SÛTRA III 1. 20.

स्मर्यतेऽपि च लोके ॥ २० ॥

লেকি Smaryate, is recorded, is said in the Smritis. আণ্ডি স Api cha, and as well as, mureover. কাই Loke, in the world.

20. The Smritis record that in this world also the fifth oblation is not necessary in their case.—311.

COMMENTARY.

In the Smritis there are accounts of some holy persons being born without the fifth oblation. The getting of body by the fifth oblation is the usual course of nature. But holy men like Drona, &c., were born without a mother and Dhristady umna, &c., without a father. In their case the number of oblations was incomplete. It is possible that an embodiment may take place without passing through the five oblations or stages mentioned in the Chhandogya. In other words, sexual generation is not a universal law of nature, for we see exceptions to it in the cases of lower creatures; and in the cases of some specially meritorious human beings like Drona, Dhristadyumna.

SÛTRA III. 1. 21.

दर्शनाच ॥२१॥

वर्षमान् Darsanat, on account of direct perception, or being seen. च Cha, and.

21. And it is seen that beings originate independently of sexual union, and the Scriptures so describe it.—312.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhandogya Upanişat (VI. 3. 1) we find three origins mentioned with regard to all beings:—

तेषा चलु एतेषां भूतानां त्रीण्येव बीजानि भवन्त्यव्यजंजीवजमुद्धिजमिति ॥

Of these beings verily there are three sources only (namely, the Fire, the Water and the Earth). All living beings are produced either from an egg, or are viviparous, or are produced by fission.

Here the Heat born and the plants are mentioned as originating without sexual union, and so the fifth oblation is not absolutely necessary to procreate the body. It thus follows that procreation by sexual union is possible in the case of those Jivas only who ascend to the world of Moon, and descend therefrom to take up a human birth. But those whose karma is not such as to take them to the Moon world, their re-birth takes place in lower organisms, without the fifth oblation. In their case the re-birth may take place from mere water without the fifth oblation. In the Scriptures we do not find any prohibition to the contrary.

But—says an objector—we do not find any mention in the text quoted by you of beings orginating from heat. It only mentions three kinds of reproduction, namely egg-born, live-born, and born by fission. This objection is answered in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 22.

22. The heat-born is included in the third word (namely, udbhijjam of the above text.)—313.

COMMENTARY.

In the third word Udbhijjam is included the sweat-born or the heat-born also. The word Udhijjam literally means born by bursting through; and it applies (to the plants, because they burst through the earth and to the heat-born also, for they burst through water.) Thus the origin of both is similar, because both are born by bursting through. The difference between them consists only in the fact that the plants are permanently rooted to the soil, while the heat-born are moving creatures. It is looking to this characteristic of locomotion or its absence that they are differently classified. But if the method of reproduction be taken as the basis of classification, then the plants and the heat-born may be put in the same category, for both reproduce by fission. Thus the settled conclusion is that those who do not perform sacrifices and so on, do not go to the land of Joy.

Adhikarana. IV.—The soul on its descent from the Moon world does not become identified with its temporary abode.

It has been shown above that those who perform sacrifices and the rest, go to the world of Moon, and having dwelt there till their works are consumed, return to this earth with a remainder of their karmas (anusaya); and accompanied by the permanent atoms (bhûta sûkṣma). The method of this descent is given there (Chhandogya V. 10. 5) thus:

Raving dwelt there, till their works are consumed, they return again that way as they came, to the ether, from the ether to the air. Then the sacrificer, having become air, becomes smoke, having become smoke, he becomes mist, having become mist, he becomes a cloud, having become a cloud, he rains down. Then he is born as rice and corn, herbs and trees, sesamum and beans. From thence the escape is beset with most difficulties. For whoever the persons may be that eat the food, and beget offspring, he henceforth becomes like unto them.

This passage shows that on its descent, the soul becomes ether, air, &c.

(Doubt).—Does this "becoming ether, &c." mean becoming absorbately ether, &c., or attaining similarity with it?

(Pûrva-pakşa).—The Pûrva-pakşin maintains that becoming ether, &c., means attaining identity with ether, &c. It does not mean merely getting similarity with it. If it meant similarity, then the passage would require to be explained metaphorically, and by lakṣaṇâ. It is a maxim of interpretation that lakṣaṇā should be avoided as far as possible. The result is that the soul, in its descent, does absolutely become identical with ether, air, &c.

(Siddhanta).—The soul does not become identically ether, &c., but becomes similar to them only, as is shown in the next Sûtra.

80TRA III. 1. 28.

तत्साभाव्यापत्तिरुपपत्तेः ॥३।१।२३॥

सङ् Tat, with those, the others. सामाध्य Sabhavya, being similar, similarity, a similar state. सामाध्य: Apattih, attaining, entering into. उपयो: Upapatteh, there being a reason or possibility, it being reasonable or possible.

23. The descending soul enters into similarity of being with ether and so on; since there is a reason for this.

—314.

COMMENTARY.

"Becoming ether," &c., means getting similarity with these. Why do we say so? There is a reason for it. The astral body (Soma-raja) assumed by the soul in the Chandra loka was taken for the sake of enjoying the pleasures of that world: that astral body (literally, the body of water) melts away like ice under the rays of the burning sun; and when the karma is exhausted, that body is evaporated by the fire of grief, at the prospect of impending fall; and thus the soul becomes disembodied like ether and then it comes under the control of air, and then it becomes united with smoke and the rest. This is a more reasonable construction to put on the above passage. For it is not possible for souls to become ether, &c., for one substance cannot become another. And if a soul did really become ether, &c., then there would be no possibility of descent for it.

Adhikarana V.—The soul does not stay long in ether up to rain.

(Doubt.)—Next arises the question, does the soul in its descent through ether down to rain, stay at each stage for a very long time, or passes through it quickly?

(Pûrva-pakşa.)—There being nothing to define the time of its stay, it remains indefinitely long at each stage. This Pûrva-pakşa is set aside by the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 24.

नातिं चिरेण विशेषात् ॥ ३ । १ । २४ ॥

न Na, not. चतिषिश्च Atichirena, very long after. विशेषास् Videsat, on account of special (inference) it being distinctly stated.

24. The soul does not stay very long in its stages through ether up to rain, on account of special statement to that effect.—315.

COMMENTARY.

The descent of soul through ether and the rest, is accomplished in a very short time, because there is a special inference to that effect. In the sentence following the description of the passing of the soul from ether up to rain, occurs the statement that the soul becomes rice or grain or the like. And the special statement is made that the passing out of that state is beset with great difficulties. The exact words are:—

Then he is born as rice and corn, herbs and trees, sesamum and beans. From thence the escape is beset with most difficulties.

The staying in rice and corn, &c., is for a comparatively long period; from which we infer that the soul's stay in the preceding stages is short. The escape from the condition of rice, corn, &c., being specially stated to be difficult, it follows that the escape from the condition of ether up to rain is not so difficult and hence quick.

Adhikarana VI.— (Human soul is but a co-tenant with plants and animals, but does not become so.)

(Vijaya).—After rain, the Sruti declares that the soul is born here as rice and corn, herbs and trees, sesamum and beans.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, are these souls descending with a remnant of their karmas, themselves born as rice, corn &c., or do they merely cling to those plants, &c.

(Parva-paksa).—The souls are born as rice, corn, &c., and do not merely cling to them.

(Siddhanta).—The souls are not born as rice and corn, &c., literally, as is declared in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 1. 25.

अन्याभिष्ठिते पूर्ववदिभनापात् ॥ ३ । १ २४ ॥

The Anya, by another soul. The Adhisthite, in what is occupied. The Parvavat, like the previous, in the manner already explained. The Abhilapat, on account of the scriptural statements.

25. The souls merely cling to plants, which are animated by other souls, and do not become plants, because the statement here is similar to that in the previous cases of ether and so on.—316.

COMMENTARY.

The souls merely cling to the bodies of plants, &c., and do not themselves become these, because these plants, &c., have animating jivas of their own. The souls are not born there, for the purpose of retributive enjoyment. Why do we say so? Because the present statement is just like the previous one about the soul's becoming ether and the rest. As the souls do not actually become ether and the rest, but are merely in contact with them, and are in a state of perfect dormancy, without enjoying pleasure and pain, so they are merely in contact with rice, corn, &c., without experiencing pleasure and pain. They are perfectly inactive in that state, and have no experiencing. Where the text intends to declare that the soul experiences pleasure and pain as a result of its karmas, it uses a different phraseology, as in verse 7 of the Chhândogya V. 10.

तचरह रमबीयचरका सम्याशोहयचे रमबीयां या निमापचे राजाहाक्योनि वा शक्ति-ययानि वैश्ययोनि वाथ यहहरूपूय बरका सम्याशोहयचे रूपूर्यायोनिमापचे रत् श्रयोनिंवा बकास्योनिं वा ॥ ७ ॥

"Those whose conduct has been good, will quickly attain some good birth, the birth of a Brahmana, or a Kaatriya, or a Valsya. But those whose conduct has been evil, will quickly attain an evil birth, the birth of a (keeper of a) dog, of a (keeper of a) hog, or a Chandala."

Therefore, the souls descending from the Moon-world merely cling to rice, corn, &c., and are not literally born as such.

SÛTRA III. 1. 26.

श्रग्रद्धमितिचेन्नराष्ट्रात् ॥ २६ ॥

सञ्चान Asuddham, impure, hurtful, unholy. इति lti, so, thus. चेट् Chet, if. न Na, no. सम्बास Sabdat, on the ground of the Scripture, on account of the Word.

26. If it be said that every sacrificial act is unholy, we say it is not so, because the scripture declares it so.—317.

COMMENTARY.

(Objection). - An objector says it is wrong to assert that the desceuding soul merely clings to the bodies of rice, corn, &c., which are themselves animated by other souls, and that they are not born there for the purpose of retributive enjoyment; for there are no karmas left to be enjoyed in the bodies of plants, &c. Some karmas are left, whose proper place of retributive enjoyment is the body of plants. All karmas are of two sorts the sacrificial karmas and non-sacrificial karmas or conduct (Charana). The fruit of sacrificial karmas is not fully exhausted in the Moon-world. No sacrifice performed with the object of attaining heaven is free from a tinge of impurity. All such sacrifices require the killing of animals and cannot be said to be pure. For every killing is really a sin. The Scriptures declare "ma himsyat sarva bhûtani" let him not kill any animal. This declares a universal rule. The killing of animals in sacrifices like "agnisomlya" is unholy. Such a sacrifice is thus a mixed karma. Its holy portion takes the soul to the Heaven-world, and is exhausted there completely. Its sinful portion causes the soul to be born as rice, corn, &c. As says Manu in XII. 9.-

श्रारिका कर्मदेविकावरतांगरः । वाकिकेपसिख्यतां मानसैरस्यकातिताम् ७
"The soul is born as plant owing to the sins committed by the body; it becomes a bird or a beast for the sins of speech, and an outcaste for the mental sins."

The soul is, therefore, actually born as rice, corn, &c., and is not a mere co-tenant with the jivas of plants.

(Reply).—The objection thus raised is not valid. The sacrificial acts are not unholy, because the scriptures enjoin it. The Veda declares "Agnicomiyam pasum alabheta" "Let him sacrifice an animal sacred to Agnicomiyam pasum alabheta" "Let him sacrifice an animal sacred to Agnicomiyam pasum alabheta" "Let him sacrifice an animal sacred to Agnicomiyam pasum alabheta" "Let him sacrifices of animals, it cannot be unholy. For the right or wrong, holiness or unholiness of an action, is to be learnt from the Veda alone. Therefore, those sacrifices which enjoin killing of animals must be considered to be holy and cannot be considered unrighteous, because killing of animals in sacrifices is enjoined by the Vedas. Let him not kill any animal is a general proposition, but to this there is the exception that animals may be killed in Yajñas like the Agnicomiya sacrifice. Hence every killing is not a sin. A general proposition and an exception have different scopes, settled by usage, and so there is no conflict between them. Hence it follows that the soul on its descent becomes rice, corn, &c., not to expiate for the sins of having killed animals in sacrifices, for such killing is no sin; but it becomes rice, &c., in the sense of clinging to those plants and not really becoming plants. The soul is perfectly unconscious in these stages.

What becomes of the soul after its clinging to the plants is next mentioned.

SÛTRA III. 1. 27.

रेतःसिग्योगोऽय ॥ ३ । १ । २७ ॥

सारिक् Retah-sik, the sprinkler of the seed; one who performs the act of generating. भेष: Yogah, conjunction with. भूष Atha, first, or after.

27. Then the soul unites with the being who performs the act of fertilisation.—318.

COMMENTARY.

After its passing through the stage of contact with plants, the soul enters the body of a person who performs the act of generation. This is mentioned in the same Upanisad (Chhandogya V. 10. 6) In the same verse which mentions its becoming rice, corn, &c., it is said:

यञ्च भूत्वामेघामवति मेघाभृत्वाप्रवर्षेति तर्द मीहियवा काविवनस्यतय-त्रिकमाचा इति आयग्तेऽतो वैक्कषु दुर्गिकापतरंथायाद्यसमित यारेतः सिम्बति तद्भूपव भवति ॥ ६॥

"Having been in the mist, he enters the cloud, having been in the cloud, he enters the rain (and falls down). Then he is born as a rice or barley, herbs or trees, sessmum or beans, &c. From this point there is constant (tantalising) rise and fall. For whoever cats the food and begets offspring (the jiva) is there in that food and that seed."

The text literally says for whoever the persons may be that eat the food, and beget offspring, he henceforth becomes like unto them. This does not mean that the soul really takes the form of and becomes identical with its procreator, for one thing cannot take the form of another thing. If it were to become literally the "Retas sik," then there would be no possibilty of its getting another body. Therefore, it must be admitted that the soul merely clings to the body of the "Retas sik" and does not become that body. This being so, the soul clings to plants, &c., in the preceding stages of plant life also. For there is no reason why it should be anything else.

80TRA III. 1. 28.

योनेःशरीरम् ॥ ३ । १ । २८ ॥

We: Yoneh, (after entering) the mother. with Sarlram, (obtaining) the gross body.

28. The soul next passes from the father into the mother and then obtains the gross body.—319.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Yoneh" is in the ablative case in the Sûtra, but it must be construed in the accusative case here, and is governed by the participle "pravisya" understood here. The soul having left the father's body, and having entered the mother's womb, obtains a physical incarnation, in order to experience the consequences of the remaining karmas. The family into which it is to be born is regulated by the nature of this remainder, as mentioned in Chhandogya, V. 10. 7.

"Of these those whose conduct here has been good will quickly attain some good birth, the birth of a Brâhmana, or a Kastriya or a Vaisya. But those whose conduct here has been evil will quickly attain an evil birth, the birth of a dog, or a hog, or a Chandâla."

Thus it has been demonstrated that the soul becomes plant, &c., in the same sense as it becomes ether, &c. The whole object of teaching this law of reincarnation is, that the wise should realise that God alone is the highest bliss, and ought to be the sole object of quest; and that the soul should get disgusted with this world of sorrow and try to seek the eternal bliss of the Lord.

Here ends the first Pâda of the third Adhyaya.

THIRD ADHYAYA.

SECOND PADA.

विक्तिविरक्तिश्चकताञ्चलिः पुरे। यस्याः परानन्दत्तने।वितिष्ठते । सिद्धिश्च सेवासमयं प्रतीक्ते भक्तिः परेशस्य पुनातु सा जगत् ॥

May that love (Bhakti) for the Supreme Lord purify the world. He has the body of Supreme Bliss and in His Presence stand Wisdom and Dispassion with folded hands, obedient to His call; and Occult powers are ever attendant upon Him, seeking for an opportunity to serve.

In this Pâda is described Bhakti or intense love for God, which consists in a yearning to obtain the object of desire. The object to be attained is Brahman, and in order to strengthen soul's love towards Him, this Pâda describes the various powers of the Lord, such as His being a creator of the dream-world, His various Avatâras and their unity with Him, His essential form, His Self, His being separate from the worshipper, yet being his inmost Self, and to be obtained by Bhakti alone, His illumining the both worlds, His being all bliss, His manifestation being according to the idea of the person worshipping, His being beyond all, the giver of everything, and various other qualities like these. All these are described in this chapter. When a person desires to cultivate love, he requires to be convinced that the object of love has these qualities. When he is convinced of it, then he begins to love Him, otherwise not.

Therefore, in the beginning, the author describes the creation of the dream-world by the Lord. If any one else than the Lord was the creator of the dream-world, then the all-creatorship of Brahman would not be true; and so far as dreams were concerned, He would not be the creator, but the Jiva or time would be the creator. If Brahman be a partial creator only, then there cannot be that intense Bhakti towards Him, which the worshipper wants to cultivate. Therefore, in order to show the glory of the Lord, it is described that He is the creator of the dream-world as well.

Adhikarana I--God creates the dream-world.

(Vieaya.)—In the Brihadaranyaka Upanişat (IV. 3. 9-12) we have the following:—

तस्य वा पतस्य पुरुषस्य हे पत लाने भवत इदम्य परक्षेकलानम्य सन्ध्रं तृतीयश स्वप्नलानं तिहान्सन्ध्ये लाने तिहास्त ते उमे लाने पहचतीदम्य परक्षेकलानम्य चय ययाक्रमाऽवं परक्षेक्त्वाने भवति तमाक्रममाक्रम्योभयान् पाप्मन चानन्वाः अन्य पर्वति स यत्र प्रस्विप्तस्य क्षेक्रस्य सर्वावतो मात्रामपादाय स्वयं विद्यस्य स्वयं निर्माय स्वेन भासा स्वेन जोतिना प्रस्विपत्यत्रायं पुरुषः स्वयं जोतिभिवति ॥९॥ न तत्र रथा न रचयोगा न पन्याना भवन्त्यय रथान् रथयोगान् पथः स्वति न तत्रानन्दा मुदः प्रमुदे। अवन्त्ययानन्दान् मुदः प्रमुदः स्वति न तत्र वेद्यन्ताः पुन्करित्यः क्षवन्त्यो भवन्त्यय वेद्यन्ताः पुन्करित्यः क्षवन्त्यो स्वयं स्वति स्वति ॥१०॥ तदेते मुतेना भवन्ति ॥ स्वति ति व्यापीरमामस्त्वासुतः स्वतानिभवाक्योति ॥ शुक्रमादाय पुनरेति स्वान्धः हिरन्मयः पुरुष पद्मद्रशसः ॥ ११ ॥ प्रावेन रक्षव्यदं कुलायं विद्यक्रस्यायाद्युत्वस्तित्वा ॥ स र्वयते अनृतो वय कामश्र हिरन्मयः पुनर पद्मद्रशसः ॥ १२ ॥

"And there are two states for that person, the one here in this world, the other in the other world, and as a third an intermediate state, the state of sleep. When in that intermediate state, he sees both these states together, the one here in this world, and the other in the other world. Now whatever his admission to the other world may be, having gained that admission to, he sees both the evils and the blessings.

And when he falls asleep, then after having taken away with him the material from the whole world, destroying and building it up again, he sleeps (dreams) by his own light. In that state the person is self-illuminated.

There are no real charlots in that state, no horses, no roads, but he himself sends forth (creates) charlots, horses and roads. There are no blessings there, no happiness, no joys, but he himself sends forth (creates) blessings, happiness and joys. There are no tanks there, no lakes, no rivers, but he himself sends forth (creates) tanks, lakes and rivers. He indeed is the maker. On this there are these verses:

"After having subdued by sleep all that belongs to the body, he, not asleep himself, looks down upon the sleeping senses. Having assumed light, he goes again to his place, the golden person, the louely bird.

"Guarding with the breath (prina life) the lower nest, the immortal one goes wherever he likes, the golden person, the lonely bird."

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt whether this dream-creation of chariots, &c., is the work of the human soul or the creation of the Supreme Self?

(Pûroapakşa.)—The dream is the creation of the soul, for the saying of Prajapati in the Chhandogya Upanişat (VIII. 7. 1.) shows that the human soul also has the power of creating by mere will-force, and has its sankalpa true, i.e., has the power of realising all its wishes.

(Siddhanta.)—The human soul is not the creator of the dream-world, as is shown by the following Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 3. 1.

सन्त्ये सृष्टिराष्ट्रहि । ३ । २ । १ ॥

सन्ते Bandhye, in the intermediate (state or sphere). वृद्धिः Sristih, the creation. आह Aha, says (the Scripture). दि Hi, because.

1. Because the Scripture declares that in the dreamstate also the creation is by the Lord—320.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Sandhya" means dream, as we find from the above passage, "and as a third an intermediate state, the state of sleep." It is called "Sandhya" or the intermediate state, because it is midway between waking and the deep sleep state; between the "Jagrata" and the "Susupti." The creation of chariots, &c., is verily by the Lord and not by the human self. Why do we say so? Because the same text says "Sa hi karta." "He indeed is the maker." The seuse is this, the Supreme Self creates chariots, &c., in the dream state, which exist so long as the dream lasts, and which are perceived not by all the Jivas, but by the person seeing the dream alone, and which are created as fruition of the minor works of the Jiva. In order to reward the soul for very minor karmas, the Lord creates the dreams. The Lord possesses mysterious powers, creates by the mere force of His will and so it is possible for Him to create these dream-objects, while the human soul has no such power. In another text also the dream-creation is said to be the work of the Lord: (Katha Up. IV. 4.)

स्थानं जागरितान्तञ्चामा वेनाजुपश्यति । महान्तं विमुमात्मानं मत्वा धीरो न शोत्वति ॥ ४ ॥

"The wise, when he knows that that by which he perceives all objects in aleep or in waking is the great Omnipresent Self, grieves no more."

The Jiva has also the power of creating by mere will-force, and is also "Satya-sankalpa," but only in the state of Mukti. The Mukta Jiva creates the world there, but that is not a dream-world. The Mukta Jivas, like Masters, have divine creative power, but it has nothing to do with the dream-creation.

SÛTRA III. 2. 2.

निर्मातारञ्चेके पुत्रावयश्च । ३ । २ । २ ॥

निर्मात्त्व Nirmataram, the maker. च Cha, and क्षे Eke, some. प्रवादवः Putradayah, sons, &c. च Cha, and.

2. Because one class of texts declares the Lord to be the creator of the dream-world as well, as of sons and the rest—321.

COMMENTARY.

The followers of one Śńkha, namely the Kathakas, state in their text that the Supreme Lord is alone the creator of all Kamas in the dream-state, for the dreamers. (Katha Up. V. 8.)

य पर सुत्तेषु जागति कामं कामं पुरुषा निर्मिमाकः । तदेव शुक्रंतद्वद्वा तदेवासृत-मुख्यते । तस्मिद्वोकाः भ्रिताः सम्में तदु नात्येति कम्बन । पतद्वै तत् ॥ ८ ॥

"He the Highest Person, who is awake in us while we are asleep, shaping one lovely sight after another. That indeed is the Bright, that is Brahman, that alone is called the Immortal. All words are contained in Him, and no one goes beyond Him. This is that."

The term Kama here denotes such things as sons and the like, which are objects of desires, and does not denote mere desires. It is used in this sense in the previous passage also, such as "Ask for all Kamas according to thy wish." (Katha Up. I. 25.) And that the word Kama there means sons, &c., we infer from Katha I. 23, where we find these Kamas described as sons and grandsons, &c. We give these three verses in the original here:—

द्यातायुवः पुत्रपात्रान् वृत्वीच्य बहुन् पश्न् हस्तिहिरस्थमभ्यान् । भूमेमंहदायतमै वृत्वीच्य स्थयञ्च जीव दारदे। यावदिन्छसि ॥ २३ ॥ पतत्तुन्यं यदि मन्यसे वरं वृत्वीच्य वित्तं चिरजीविकाञ्च । महाभूमी नन्तिकृतस्त्वमेधि कामानान्त्या कामभाजं करोमि ॥ २४ ॥

ये ये कामा दुर्लमा मर्ख्लाके सम्बान् कामाश्रद्धन्दसः प्रार्थयस्य । इमा रामाः सरधाः सत्यां नहीहशा लम्मनीया मनुष्यैः । षाभिर्मस्प्रताभिः परिचारयस्य निकतेगमर्खं मानुप्राक्षीः ॥ २५ ॥

Death said: "Choose sons and grandsons, who shall live a hundred years, herds of cattle, elephants, gold, and horses. Choose the wide abode of the earth, and live thyself as many harvests as thou desirest.

"If thou canst think of any boon equal to that, choose wealth, and long life. Be King, Nachiketus, on the wide earth. I make thee enjoyer of all desires.

"Whatever desires are difficult to attain among mortals, ask for them according to thy wish;—these fair maidens with their chariots and musical instruments,—such are indeed not to be obtained by men—be waited on by them, whom I give to thee, but do not ask me about dying."

In the Gaupavana Sruti we find the following:-

पतसादाचे व पुत्रो जायते पतसावसातै तसाद्रार्या यदैनं पुरुषमेष स्त्रा नामि इन्ति ॥

"From this Lord when He overpowers the soul through sleep is born verily the son (seen in dream) from Him the brother, from Him the wife."

In the next Sûtra, the author mentions the material and the means, with which the Lord creates the dream objects.

BÙTRA III. 2. 3.

मायामात्रं तु कार्त्स्न्येनानभिव्यक्तस्वरूपात् । ३ । २ । ३ ॥

नावानावन् Mayamatram, produced from the will of Him and with impressions (stored in the mind of the soul). तु Tu, but, काल्येन Kartsnyena, fully. जननिव्यक्तस्वक्रप्रवात् Anabhivyakta avarūpatvāt, being destitute of tangible forms occupying space, not being fully manifested.

3. Mâyâ or the will of the Lord is the only means through which He creates dream-objects. (They are not made of objective matter), because they are not perceptible to all persons, but are seen only by the dreamer—322.

COMMENTARY.

The mysterious Mâyâ is the only material with which the dreamobjects are created. They are not made of the gross elements, nor are they created by Brahmâ, the four-faced. Why do we say so? Because they do not become manifest, as objects of perception, to everyone. Thus it is demonstrated that the dream creation is the work of the Supreme Self.

Adhikarana II-The dreams are not all false.

Next arises the question—are the creations of dream all false or true? The Purrapakea is that the dream is altogether unreal, because it is sublated by the waking consciousness. On waking from dream, one realises its unreality. This view is set aside by the next Sûtra.

SÚTRA III. 2.4.

सूचकश्चहि श्रुतेराचचते च तद्रिवः । ३ । २ । ४ ॥

स्पत्र: Sûchakaḥ, indicatory, suggestive. च Cha, and दि Hi, because. भूते: Sruteḥ, from Sruti. चाचन्नते Achaksate, say, affirm. च Cha, and. तदिवः Tadvidaḥ, those who know that.

4. The dream creation is indicatory of good or evil, (hence it is not unreal). The scriptures also teach the dreams to be indicatory, and the experts thereof also declare the same---323.

COMMENTARY.

The dream creation is true. The objects seen in dream are indicatory of good or bad luck, or of certain mantras. Scriptures teach this.—(Chhândogya. V. 2, 8 and 9.)

निर्केज्य कछसं चमसं वा पश्चादग्नेः संविदाति चर्माखं वा स्विद्धिः वा वाचंय-माध्यसादः स यदि स्वियं पदयेत् समुखं कर्मेति विद्यात् ॥ ८ ॥ तदेव म्होको यदा कर्मसु काम्येषु स्वियंशस्त्रप्रेषु पदयति । समृद्धिं तत्र जानीयात्तसम्स्वप्रनिद्दीनं तसिनस्स्यप्र-निद्दीनं ॥ ९ ॥

"Then having washed the mantha vessel, which should be either of bell-metal or of wood, let him lie down behind the fire, on a skin or on a bare ground, silently and singly. If in his dreams he sees a woman, let him know this as an omen that his sacrifice has been successful.

On this there is the following verse:—"If in Kamya sacrifices, he sees a woman in his dreams, then let him know this bodes success—this vision shown him in a dream, this vision shown him in a dream."

Similarly, in the Kausitaki Brahmana we find the following:-

च थ स्वप्ने पुरुषं कृष्यं कृष्यं वंतं पृश्यति स एनं इन्ति ॥

"If one sees in a dream, a black person with black teeth then it forebodes that he will kill him."

The word "Tadvid" or expert means those who know how to interpret dreams, such as Bihaspati and the rest. They declare that some dreams bode good, others evil. Such as dreaming that one is riding on an elephant bodes good: while if he dreams that he is riding on a doukey, it forebodes evil.

Sometimes one gets in dream Mantras, as we find from the following verse:-

चाविष्टवान् यथा स्वप्ने रामरक्षां यथा हरः। तथा लिकितवान् प्रातः प्रबुद्धो कुच केतिहाकः ॥

"As the Lord Siva taught Visvâmitra (Budha Kausika) in dream the mantra called Ramarakşa, he exactly wrote it out, in the morning, when he awoke from sleep."

This shows that poems and stotras can also be obtained in dreams.

Therefore, the dream creation is as real as the waking state. Because the dream objects indicate future true objects; secondly, because works of genius like poems, etc., are found in dreams, and remedies for diseases are prescribed therein; and sometimes the exact object seen in dreams is seen afterwards in waking state. Such as the person who will kill one.

The author now answers the objection based on the fact that because dream consciousness is sublated by the waking consciousness, therefore all dreams are unreal.

SÛTRA III. 2. 5.

पराभिष्यानाजुतिरोहितं ततोद्यस्य बन्धविपर्ययौ ।३।२।४॥

प्र Para, of the Lord, of the highest. खनिष्यानात् Abhidhyanat, by the will. हु Tu, only. तिरोहितम् Tirohitam, is withdrawn or hidden. ततः Tatah, from that (Lord). हि Hi, for. सस्य Asya, of this (Jiva). सम्भविषयी Bandha-viparyayau, bondage and release.

5. The dream consciousness is sublated by the will of the Supreme Lord alone, because from Him proceed the bondage and release of the soul—324.

COMMENTARY.

From the meditation or formative will of the Supreme Lord, proceeds the vanishing of the dream object, like chariots, &c. The dream is not unreal, like the illusion of silver in the shell. This is so, because the Supreme Lord is the cause of the bondage and release of the soul, as says the Sruti (Svetasvatara, VI. 16):—

स विश्वकृद्धिश्वविदात्मयोनिकः कालकाक्षा गुबी सर्वदिद् यः । प्रधानक्षेत्रकपति-गंबेकाः संसारमाक्षक्षितिकश्वदेतः ॥

"He makes all, He knows all, the self-caused, the knower, the time of time (destroyer of time), who assumes qualities and knows everything, the master of nature and of man, the Lord of the three qualities, the cause of bondage, the existence and the liberation of the world."

He who can cause the bondage and release of the soul, can easily bring about the dream and its withdrawal for the soul. There is nothing wonderful in it. Therefore, it must be understood, that the manifestation and withdrawal of the dream-world is also from that Lord. The same idea is expressed in the following verse of the Kûrma Purāna:—

स्वमादिवृद्धिकर्तां च तिरस्कर्ता स एव च। तदिष्क्रया यता ग्रस्य कथमोदी प्रतिष्ठिता ॥

"It is He (the Lord) that makes the soul perceive the dream creation, &c., and He it is who hides them from his view; for on His will, the bendage and release of this soul depend."

Therefore the dream creation is real and is of the Lord.

Adhikarana III—The state of wakefulness is also created by Brahman.

Now the author describes that the waking consciousness is also caused by the Lord and by no one else. In the Katha Upanisad (IV. 4) we read:—

स्वप्रान्तं जागरितान्तञ्चामै। येनातुपश्यति । महान्तं विग्रमात्मानं मत्वा धीरो न शोचति ॥ ४ ॥

"The wise, when he knows that that by which he perceives the state of the dreamless sleep (Sugupti), and the dream state is the Great Omnipresent Self, grieves no more."

(Parvapakya.)—The waking consciousness is not caused by the Lord, because we see it dependent on time and the rest.

(Siddhanta.)—The waking state is also caused by the Lord, as is shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 2. 6.

वेष्टयोगाद्वा सोऽपि । ३ । २ । ६ ॥

देखीगात Deha-yogst, from the connection with the body, the waking state. भ Va, or. ज: Sah, (that withdrawing or hiding of the dream), आपि Api, even, 6. The waking consciousness also, which is found in connection with the body, is from the Lord -325.

COMMENTARY.

The waking consciousness, which is experienced by the soul when it is in connection with the body, is also from the Supreme Lord as is mentioned in the above text of the Katha Upanizad, and which properly translated runs as follows:—

"The wise, when he knows that that by which he perceives all objects in sleep or in waking, is the Great Omnipresent Solf, grieves no more."

The time and the rest being inert, cannot produce anything. The word "api" or "also" of the Sûtra indicates that the states of consciousness known as deep sleep (susuppti) and swoon, (mûrchchha) are also created by the Lord. For the texts releatedly declare that to Him belong the all-creative power.

Adhikarana IV --- The state of deep sleep is caused also by God.

Now is being considered the question, what is the place, abiding in which, the soul experiences deep sleep. The following are the Sruti texts relating to deep sleep or (Susupti). One declares that deep sleep is felt when the soul is in the Nadis, the other, when the soul is in the pericardium, and the third when it is in Brahman. These three texts are given below. In the Chhandogya (VIII. 6. 3.) we find:—

तद्यत्रैतत्सुसः समस्तः सम्प्रसन्नः स्वप्नं न विज्ञानात्याद्वतदा नाडीषु सुप्तो भवति तत्र कञ्चन पाप्मा स्पृराति तेजसा ॥ तदा सम्पन्नो भवति ॥ ३॥

"This being so, when this Jiva sleeps, k ing at perfect rest and all senses withdrawn (experiencing the joy of his essential nature) and dreams no dream, then he enters (into the Lord dwelling in) these vessels and there no evil one can touch him, because he is protected by the light of the Lord."

In the Brihadaranyaka Upanişat (II. 1. 19.) we read :--

ग्रथ यदा सुबुतो भवति यदा न कस्यचन वेदहितानाम नाझ्यो द्वासप्ततिसहस्राचि हृदयात्पुरीततमभिप्रतिष्ठन्ते ताभिः प्रस्यवस्य पुरीतित रोते स यथा कुमारो व महाराजा वा महाज्ञाद्वाचो वातिभीमानन्दस्य गत्वा रायीतैवमेवैव पतच्छेते ॥ १९ ॥

"Next when he is in profound sleep, and knows nothing, there are the seventy-two thousand arteries called Hita, which from the heart spread through the body. Through them he moves forth, and rests in the surrounding body. And as a young man, or a great king or a great Brâhmana having reached the summit of happiness, might rest, so does he then rest,"

In the same (II. 1. 17.) we find:-

स द्वांबाबाजातश्रुवेतेव पतत्सुतोऽमृद्य एव विद्यानमयः पुरुवस्तदेषां माळानां विद्यानेन विद्यानमादाय य प्याञ्चद्वय चाकाशस्त्रक्षिम्छेते तानि यदा युद्धास्यथ देतस्युक्यः स्विपित नाम तद्यप्रदेत एव माळा भवति युद्दीता वाग् युद्दीतम्बसर्यदेतियः भोतं युद्दीतं मनः ॥ १७॥

"Ajstasatru said: 'When this man was thus asleep, then the intelligent person (purusa), having through the intelligence of the senses (prans) absorbed within himself all intelligence, lies in the ether, which is in the heart. When he takes in these different kinds of intelligence, then it is said that the man sleeps. Then the breath is kept in, the mind is kept in."

There are many other verses like these. In the above verse the word Akasa means Brahman. From the above three texts we find, that the soul enjoys deep sleep when it is in those three places, namely, in the Nádis (arteries), in Puritad (pericardium), or in Brahman.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt: Are these three abiding places of the soul to be taken distributively or collectively?

(Pûrvapakşa.)—The Pûrvapakşin says they are to be taken distributively. For when words of equal force are employed in a sentence and there is no mutual dependence between them, then the passages should be construed as stating an option. In other words, Suşupti is experienced when the soul is in any one of those three places.

(Siddhanta.)—Susupti is experienced by the soul abiding simultaneously in all those three places, as is shown in the next satrs.

SÛTRA III. 2. 7.

तरभावो नाडिषु तच्छूतेरात्मनि च । ३ । २ । ७ ॥

तब्-सानाव: Tad-abhavah, the absence of that (the state of dreams or wake-fulness). नाहिषु Nadisu, in the Nadis. तह Tat, about it. भूते: Éruteh, from the scriptural statement. चालानि Åtmani, in the self, or in the Lord. च Cha, and.

7. The Susupti, which is the absence of dream and waking consciousness, takes place in the Nâdis, in the Self, and in the pericardium collectively, because of the scriptural statement to that effect—326.

COMMENTARY.

By the word "and" in the Sûtra, pericardium is to be included. "Tad abhâvah" means the absence of those two, namely, the absence of wakefulness and dream. In other words, "Tad abhâvah" means the "susupti" or deep sleep This deep sleep takes place collectively in the Nadîs, pericardium and the Lord. Why do we say so? Because in the scriptures all these places are mentioned as the localities in which the soul enjoys deep sleep. If it was intended that they were to be taken alternatively or optionally, then there would be partial refutation of scriptural text. We find Nadis and Pranas mentioned collectively in deep sleep. In them the soul resides in deep sleep. In the Kauditaki Upanisad (IV. 19.) we find that Prana also becomes united with the soul in deep sleep.

तं देशवावाजातदाषुर्वत्रेय पतहाक्षेके पुरुषाश्रायिष्ट यत्रैतदभूचत पतव्गादिता नाम हृदयस्य नाड्यो हृदयात्पुरीततमभिमतम्बन्ति यथा सहस्रवा केदो विपारितस्तावद्व्या पितृकस्याक्षिता तिहन्ते गुक्रस्य कृष्यस्य पीतस्य केदितस्येति तासु तदाभवति यदा सुप्तः स्वाः न केवन पद्यस्यधाविष्टमाच पवैक्षा भवति तथैनं वाक् सर्वैन्नांमिमः सदा-व्यतिवक्षः सर्वे करेः सद्दाव्यति भोतं सर्वेः द्वाः सद्दाव्यति भातं सर्वे। विप्तिक्षः सर्वे करेः सद्दाव्यति भोतं सर्वे। देशः सद्दाव्यति स्व व्यत्वे। विप्तिक्षः विभितिक्षः विभितिक्षः प्राच्या विष्कं स्वाः विभितिक्षः भावः विष्यः स्वाहिष्यं विभितिक्षः भावः स्वाः स्वाः विषयः स्वाहिष्यं विभितिक्षः स्वाः स्वाः स्वाः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः स्वाः स्वाः विषयः स्वाः स्

"And Ajata'atru said to him: 'Where this person here slept, where he was, whence he thus came back, is this: the arteries of the heart called Hita extend from the heart of the person towards the surrounding body. Small as a hair divided a thousand times, they stand full of a thin fluid of various colours, white, black yellow, red. In these the person is when sleeping he sees no dream.

"Then he becomes one with that Prana alone. Then speech goes to him with all names, the eye with all forms, the ear with all sounds, the mind with all thoughts. And when he awakes, then, as from a burning fire, sparks proceed in all directions, thus from that self the Pranas (speech, &c.) proceed, each towards its place, from the Pranas, the gods; from the gods, the worlds. And as a razor might be fitted in a razor-case, or as fire in a fire place, even thus this conscious self enters the self of the body to the very hairs and the nails."

Nor can we have option on the strength of the maxim quoted by the Pârvapakşin, because that maxim applies where two statements are of equal force (tulyârtha). In the present case, there is no such equality of meaning. They do not serve the same purpose. It is only when several things may serve the same purpose equally, that an option is allowed. The case is here similar to the statement "entering by the door, he sleeps in the palace, on the couch." Here the three things—the door, the palace and the couch—are to be taken jointly and no option can be allowed as regards them, for they do not serve the same purpose. Similarly, the soul enters through the Nâdis (which are like a door), into the palace called the pericardium, where Brahman is, and sleeps in the bosom of Brahman, which may represent the couch. Thus the nâdis, pericardium, and Brahman, subserving different purposes, must be taken collectively, and not separately. Therefore, Brahman alone is the direct place, resting on which, the soul enjoys deep sleep.

The "Puritat" or pericardium is the covering which surrounds the lotus of the heart.

8ÛTRA III. 2. 8.

भतः प्रवोधोऽस्मात् । ३ । २ । ८ ॥

चवः Atah, hence, व्योषः Prabodhah, waking. चकास् Asmat, from him (the Lord).

8. Therefore the waking of the soul is from that (Brahman)—327.

COMMENTARY.

Because Brahman alone is the immediate resting place of the soul, in deep sleep, the nadis being merely the gate-way to him; therefore, in the Chhandogya Upanisad it is described that the soul awakens from Brahman in deep sleep. There in VI. 9. 2. and in several Khandas following it, it is repeatedly declared that the soul awakens from Brahman called Sat, "coming out from Sat they do not know that they have come out of the Sat." Had option been allowed, it would have been mentioned that the soul comes out from the nadis, or from the pericardium, or from Brahman. If there were optional places, to which the soul might resort in deep sleep, the scripture would teach us that it awakes sometimes from the nadis, sometimes from the pericardium, and sometimes from the Self. For that reason also, the Self is the place of deep sleep. We give the original passage of the Chhandogya below.

यथा सेम्ब मञ्ज मञ्जुकते। निस्तानित नानास्यानां वृक्षाबाधरसाव् समबद्दार-मेकताध रसं गमयन्ति ॥ १ ॥ ते यथा तत्र न विकेतं कमन्तेअनुष्यादं वृक्षस्य रसोऽस्य-मुष्यादं वृक्षस्य रसोऽकीत्येवमेव बखु सोम्येमाः सर्वाः मजाः सर्ति संपद्य न विदुः संति संपद्यामद् इति ॥ २ ॥ त इद व्यामो वासिद्दे। वा वृक्षो वा वरादे। वा कीदे। ना पत्रकृते वा वृंशो वा महाके। वा यद्यम्बन्ति तदामवन्ति ॥ ३ ॥ स य व्येऽकिमैतदास्यक्षेत्रध सर्वं तत्सत्यक्ष स वात्मा तत्त्वमसि इवेतकेते। इति भूय पव मा भगवान् विद्याः तिवति तथा सोम्येति होवाव ॥ ४ ॥

"As the bees, my child, make honey, by collecting the juice of Fiferent trees and bring together and mix them in one place. And as these juices have no discrimination, so that they might say 'I am the juice of that tree,' 'I am the juice of that tree,' in the same manner, my child, all these creatures, when they get mixed in the Sat, do not know that they have got mixed in the Sat.

Whatever these creatures are here, whether a tiger or a lion or a wolf, or a bear, or a worm, or an insect, or a grat, or a mosquite, that they become again and again.

That highest God is the Essence and Ruler of all, the desired of all, and known through all the subtlest intellect. All this universe is controlled by Him, He pervades it all and is the Good. This God is the destroyer of all and full of perfect qualities. Thou, O Svetaketu, art not that God."

"Please sir, instruct me still more," said the son. "Be it so my child," replied the

The father then goes on to give other illustrations, the burden of which all is to show "stat tvam asi"—" thou that art not."

Adhikarana V—The same person comes back to the body on waking.

In the above it is stated that coming out of the Sai, they do not know that they have come out of the Sat.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, does the same individuality which had gone to sleep in Brahman arise therefrom when awaking or does another individuality arise after sleep?

(Pircapakea.)—The same individuality does not arise in awaking from deep sleep. When a cup of water is thrown into a river, and another cupful is taken out of it, it cannot be said that the water is identically the same. Similarly, when a person merges in Brahman in deep sleep, it is impossible, that he should, on awaking, come back into the same body.

(Siddhanta.)—The same personality awakes in the same body, which it left, when it went into deep sleep, as is shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 2. 9.

स एव तु कर्मानुस्मृति शब्दविधिभ्यः । ३ । २ । ६ ॥

- श्वः एव Sah eva, that very person who went to sleep. हु Tu, but. आर्थ Karma, activity, on account of his finishing the action left unfinished. चतुरस्ति Anusmritt, on account of memory of identity. शक्य Sabda, from the Scuti, विविध्यः Vidhibhyah, from the commandments.
- 9. But the same person arises from sleep, because of his completing the work left unfinished, because of his retaining the memory of his identity, because of the texts of the scriptures, and because of the injunctions of the Sastras—328.

COMMENTARY.

The word "but," "tu" removes the doubt. The same person who had gone to sleep arises from it and no one else. The reason for it is four-fold. First, he finishes the work which he had commenced before going to sleep. The word "karma" of the text means ordinary worldly works. Secondly, he has memory, that is recollection, in the shape of

"I am the person who had gone to sleep and who have now awakened." Thirdly, the express text of the Chhandogya quoted above also shows the same. (Chhandogya, VI. 9. 3).

"Whatever these creatures are here, whether a tiger or a lion, or a wolf or a boar, or a worm or an insect, or a gnat or a mosquito, that they become again and again."

This means the creatures like tigers, wolves, etc., come back on awakening into the same body, which they had, before they went to sleep. Fourthly, the scriptural injunctions like those of Brihadaranyaka, I. 4. 15, declare that the man must worship the Self as his true state. This shows that he must try for release. If everyone who went to sleep got release, then these injunctions about Mokea, would be useless.

When a Jiva enters into Brahman, he enters like a jar full of salt water, with covered mouth, plunged into the Ganges. When he awakens from sleep, it is the same jar, taken out of the river with the same water in it. In the same way the Jiva, covered by his desires, goes to sleep and for the time being puts off all sense activities and goes to the resting place, namely, the Supreme Brahman, and again comes out of it, in order to get further experience. He does not become similar to Brahman, like the person who has obtained release. Thus we learn from this four-fold reason, that the same soul which had gone to sleep, awakes again into the same body.

Adhikarana VI-The state of swoon.

Now we shall consider the state of swoon, which is similar to that of deep sleep.

(Parvapakea.)—Swoon being a special kind of deep sleep, the soul attains to Brahman fully as in deep sleep. The next Sûtra sets aside this view.

80TRA IIL 2. 10.

मुग्धेऽर्द्धसम्पत्तिः परिशेषात् । ३ । २ । १० ॥

हुन्से Mugdhe, in the swooning person or state. आर्थ Arddha, half. सम्बद्धिः Sampattih, combination or attaining Brahman; entering into Brahman. Baladeva's reading is Sampraptih. परिशेषाच् Parisesat, on account of the remaining.

10. In the swooning condition, the Jiva is in half combination with Brahman; because the rule of the remainder shows this—329.

COMMENTARY.

When a man is in a swoon, or in a stunned condition, he is in half combination with Brahman, because of the rule of the remainder. In this condition Brahman is not reached in the same way fully as in deep sleep, because the soul is conscious of pain. Nor is there total want of attainment to Brahman, like the waking state, because the soul is unconscious of external objects. Thus by the rule of remainder, we conclude that there is half combination. This we find described in the following verses of the Varahapurana:—

इदयसात्स्राज्ञीचा दूरको जामदेव्यति । समीपस्त्रताचा स्कांस्विप्रस्थित्ववं मजद् ॥ भत् पर्व प्रयोजन्या मोहस्तु परिशेषतः । जज्ञातिरितिष्ठं ये। दुःजमार्च मतिस्कृतेः ॥

"When the soul is at a distance from the Supreme Lord in the heart (that is, when it is in the eyes), then it is in waking consciousness; when it is nearer to the Lord (that is, in the throat), then it is in the dream consciousness. But when it has entered into the Lord, it is in deep sleep. Therefore, these are the three states, thus described; but swoon is an intermediate state, in which there is half combination with Brahman, because on recovery, there is remembered the consciousness of pain."

The objector says:—The books describe only three states waking, dreaming, and deep sleep. Where do you get this fourth state called "Mugdha"? or swoon? This is not a new state, but one of the above three.

To this objection we reply, that this is a separate state altogether. It is not the waking state, because external objects are not perceived in this state through the senses. Nor is it the dreaming state, because the person is unconscious. Nor is it the deep sleep state, because there is not that peaceful look of the face and want of movement of the limbs. Therefore, it is a different state altogether and is to be inferred by the rule of the remainder. Moreover it is a well-known state, recognized both by the physicians and by the world. Thus the purport of the whole topic is that the Lord God Hari alone must be worshipped and served with devotion, for His glory is such that he is the Maker of every thing, even of the conditions of consciousness like waking, dreaming, and the rest.

Adhikarana VII—The Lord is one though manifesting in various forms.

In the preceding passages, has been shown the glory of the Lord, as the controller and ordainer of every thing. Now will be described, His that inconceivable nature, by which He does not abandon His unity in himself though He appears manifold in many places. Though in the Sûtra II. 3. 44. it was described that the powers of the Lord are mysterious, yet in those Sûtras, no reconciliation has been made of the paradoxical statements that the Lord though one, appears simultaneously in many forms, which are apparently different from each other. That reconciliation will now be made, by means of the doctrine of inconceivability.

We have the following text showing that the Lord though One manifests as many.

पक्रेजि सन् बहुवा वेज्यमाति।

"Though being One, He manifests as many."—(Gopåla Pûrva Tāpini).

(Doubt.)—Are the various forms of the Lord, found in diverse places, mutually different from each other or not?

(Pureapalea.)—The difference of locality presupposes the difference in the objects occupying that locality; for substances occupying different places cannot be identical; for the quality of being in different places separates them from each other. The above text is merely a general statement and does not mean that One Lord exists in different places. Therefore, the fact is that the gods are many, occupying different places and having different jurisdictions. Thus the gods being many, there cannot be that one-pointed devotion to one God, which you have been trying to establish.

(Siddhânta.)—The God is one only, and not many as will be shown in the next Sûtra.

RÛTRA III. 2. 11.

न स्थानतोऽपिपरस्योभयालिङ्गं सर्वत्र हि । ३ । २ । ११ ॥

न Na, not. स्वानतः Sthanatah, on account of place. चाप Api, even. प्राच्य Parasya, of the Highest, the Lord. उनविक्षत् Ubhaya-lingam, having twofold characteristics; not different on account of differences of locality. स्वान Sarvatra, everywhere. दि Hi, because.

11. (The essential nature) of the Supreme Lord, though (differentiated) by space, does not undergo any change of characteristics; because, (He simultaneously exists), everywhere—330.

COMMENTARY.

"Of the Supreme," namely, of the Adorable Lord, there is not twofoldness of characteristics or change of nature, by the mere fact of his being in two different places. Though there is difference of locality, there is however no difference in the substance occupying these localities. Because His essential nature, through His Inconceivable power, simultaneously manifests itself in every place, as mentioned in the above Sruti:—eko'pi san bahudhā yo' va bhāti.

The word "sthanani" or localities are the centres (aspada) where the Lord manifests His glory; where are displayed His various sportive activities (Ltlas). These sacred places are called also samvyoma (the Highest Ether or Vacuity).

The devotees of the Lord are also of various kinds (bhavas). [Such as, some worship Him as their Master and themselves as His servants; others as their Beloved, and they His love:s, etc.

In all these various localities (samvyomas), and various devotees, the Lord, though manifesting His different aspects, is essentially the one and the same. He undergoes no change.

BÛTRA III. 2. 12.

न भेदादितिचेन्न प्रत्येकमतद्वचनात् । ३ । २ । १२ ॥

म Na, not. नेवास Bhedat, on account of difference, on account of the statement of difference. द्वि Iti, as, so चेस Chet, if. न Na, no मध्येक्स Pratyekam, distinct, each (with reference to). स्वत् Atad, the absence of that (i. e., difference). न्यान्य Vachanat, on account of the statement.

12. If it be said "This is not valid, because of the statement of difference," we reply, "No. Because (with reference) to every statement (declaring difference), (there is always) a counter-statement (in the scriptures) declaring non-difference—331.

COMMENTARY.

The statement made in the preceding stitra, namely, that the Lord remains One, in all His manifestations, is not reasonable, says the objector. For in reality, these different manifestations are different entities, and cannot be called one. In fact, there is bleds or difference in the Lord.

This objection is raised in the first part of the sûtra, and is answered in the subsequent portion. With regard to every one of these manifestations, the texts take the precaution of saying, that the Lord is one.

Thus in the Brihadáranyaka Upanisad (II. 5. 19.) we have the following:—

इदं वै तन् अनु दृष्यकाथवैकाऽभ्यिभागुवाच । तदेतह्विः पदयचवेष्यत्। करं करं प्रतिक्रो वभूव तदस्य करं प्रतिचक्षयाव । इन्हो मायामिः पुरुक्त ईक्ते, युक्ता सस्य इरयः

शतवृशेखवं वै इरवे।अं वै दश च सहचाचि बहुनि चानम्तानि च । तदेतव् अद्यापूर्वनव-वरतनसरजवाह्यम् । चवनाता आ सर्वातुमृतिसनुशासनम् ।

Verily Dadhyach Atharvana proclaimed this honey to the two Asvins, and a Bigi, seeing this said (Rig Veda VI. 47. 18):--

"An image of the Lord is in every one of the forms, (in which a Jiva, or soul is embedded for every Jiva has the image of the Lord in it). That Image is for the sake of the seeing (and worshipping by that particular Jiva). The Lord (Indra—Almighty Rules) appears multiform through His Energies (Mayle). Therefore it is right to say that these hundreds and ten forms, called Haris are His. (The Rari or Logos of every system is a ray of Brahman).

This (Brahman) is verily these Haris (Logol); this (Brahman) is the Ten (Avatarus such as the Matsya, etc.), this (Brahman) is the Thousand (Avatarus, such as Visva, etc.), this the Many (such as Para, etc.), this the Endless (such as Ajita, etc.). This is the Brahman, without cause and without effect; besides whom there is nothing, and outside whom there is nothing. This Âtman is Brahman, omnipresent and omniscient. This is the teaching of the Upanisada."

Thus the above text of the Brihadaranyaka Upanicad shows that every form of the Lord abiding in different individuals is the supreme Brahman, full and entire, and not a portion of Him, for an Infinity can have no parts.

80TRA III. 3. 18.

भ्रपि चैवमेके । ३ । २ । १३ ॥

चारि Api, also. च Cha, and. एक्ट्र Evam, thus. एके Eke, some,

13. And also some teach thus (that the Lord is one though multiform).—332.

COMMENTARY.

The words "and also" mean "moreover." Thus in the Mandukya Upanisad (IV. 7 S. B. H., Vol. I, page 318, second edition):—

समात्रोजन्तमात्रश्च हैतस्योपशमः शिकः। स्रोकारा विदिता येन स मुनिर्नेतराजनः ॥

"He who knows the Om-kara, as partiess and yet full of infinity of parts, as the destroyer of all false knowledge, and as blissful, he verily is a sage and no one else."

Thus these Sakhins teach that the Lord is One Partless whole, having infinity of parts, each one of which is a whole infinity. The word 'partless' means devoid of differences in itself or in its parts. "Infinity of parts" means having innumerable parts, each one a complete infinity (svamsa). It is thus written in the Matsya Purana:—

वक वय परे। विष्युः सर्वत्रात्रपे न संशयः। केवर्वाद् क्योकम्य सूर्ववद् बहुचेयते॥

"The Supreme Vienu is One only undoubtedly, though existing everywhere. He has one $2m, though through His Glory, he appears as r any, like the Sun."

The sense is this. As a prismatic crystal, though one only, appears to emit different colours, such as red, or blue, &c., to the eyes of the spectators when viewed from different angles; or as an actor on the stage, appears playing different parts in different Acts of the Drama, but all the while he is one and the same, though expressing diverse emotions, appropriate to the part he is enacting for the time being; so the Lord Hari never abandons His essential unity of nature, though He appears as many, according to the different nature of the ideas (bhava, or mental attitudes) of His devotees meditating upon Him, or according to the different nature of the works He is engaged upon accomplishing.

So also in Visnu Tentra :-

मिर्वेया विभागेन नीसपीतादिमिर्वे तः । स्पमेदमवामोति ज्वानमेदात् तवाञ्युतः ॥

"As a prismatic crystal when looked at from different sides appears possessed of blue, yellow, &c., colours, so the Unchangeable Lord gets (in the eyes of Ris devotees) different forms, according to the different kinds of their meditation."

So also in the Bhagavata Purana:-

यत् तद् वपुर्माति विभूववायुपैर् श्रम्बावपुर्मात्रमवारयद् परिः। वभूव तेमैव स वामना वद्धाः संपद्धतार्षिमगतिर्यया नटः॥

"Harl, whose essential nature is unmanifest pure Intelligence, manifested Hisself in a form shining with radiant ornaments and holding diverse weapons. And as a divine magician capable of going to heaven, quickly changes his form in the very presence of his spectators, so that very body of the Lord with four arms, &c.) instantaneously assumed the form of the Dwarf (Vāmana), while (His Parents, Aditi and Kasyapa) were looking on." (In their very sight He changed into the Dwarf-Form.)

Thus that One Reality, having Inconceivable Powers, and being the substrate of all contradictory attributes, simultaneously becomes manifold in Its manifestation. This gives rise to the notion of His possessing paradoxical qualities; and this instead of detracting from His greatness, strengthens the love of the devotees towards Him—the Lord of Mysterious Powers. Thus Bhakti towards the Lord increases by such contemplation over His contradictory attributes.

Adhikarana VIII—The form of Brahman.

Now the author establishes the point that the Lord has Atman for His body. [There is no body of the Lord]. If the body of the Lord were separate from the Self (Atman) of the Lord, then Atman being a subcrdinate member, the devotion towards it would also be of a subordinate kind and not a primary bhakti. But this is not the case. For devotion is always felt (or rather experienced, as if it was drawn) towards the primary object. [The attraction or Love which the soul feels for the beautiful form of the Lord is not an attraction towards something secondary but primary. It follows, therefore, that the form of the Lord, is the Self of the Lord, is the very Lord itself. It thus differs from other forms. As a rule, the form embodies the soul: but the form of the Lord is the very soul or self of the Lord: otherwise why such an attraction towards it.]

(Visaya.)-Thus the Srutis declare :-

सविदानम्बदाय इंप्लयाहिस्तारिके !—(Gopal Parva Tapant Up. I).

"Salutation to that Krispa, the destroyer of pain, whose form is Being, Intelligence and Bliss."

ग्रेषिन्दं सचिदानन्दवित्रहम्।

"To Govinda whose form is Boing, Intelligence and Bliss."—[Atharva Sirasa].

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, Has Brahman any form or not?

"Pitropukea.) - Brahman has a form: which consists (of the fine matter of the planes of) Being, Intelligence and Bliss. The phrase Sachehidananda rūpa is a Bahuvrihi compound, meaning he whose form is Being, Intelligence and Bliss. Therefore Visnu has a form (mūrti).

(Siddhânta.)—The Lord has no form distinct from His Self: as is shown in the next sûtra.

BÛTRA III. 2. 14.

श्ररूपवदेवष्टि तस्प्रभानत्वात् । ३ । २ । १४ ॥

Tat, of that, of that form. अभावसाझ Pradhanatvat, on account of being the chief (or the supreme) thing and soul.

14. Brahman has no (ordinary) form indeed, because the form itself is the principal (life)—333.

COMMENTARY.

Brahman has no rûpa or form, vigraha or shape. Hence He is called arûpavat—formless. The word "indeed" is used in order to refute the argument of the Pûrvapkşin. Why do we say so? Because that Form itself is the Chief. [In ordinary cases, form is always subordinate to the soul which it embodies. But in the case of Brahman, the form itself is the Atman: there is no difference between the form and the self of Brahman. They are identical]. The form possesses all the attributes of Brahman—namely; it is all-pervading (vibhu), it is the knower (jäätritva), it is the inner self of all Jivas, &c. It is both the substance and the attribute.

But it is a well known fact, says an objector, that by meditating on Brahman, the supreme self and substance, the knowledge and bliss there ceases to exist. Its opposite, namely, the prakriti, which is essentially inert and painful—how is it then possible that with regard to such a Brahman, the author of the sûtras should predicate a Form, (for all form is a limitation of life, and is inconsistent with the true conception of Brahman, as set forth above) This objection is answered in the next sûtra.

8ÛTRA 11L 2. 15.

प्रकाशवद्यावेयर्घ्यात् । ३ । २ । १४ ॥

Tanget Prakasavat, in the same way as in the sun consisting of light. This word removes the doubt above raised.
15. And (the conception of a Form with regard to Brahman) is not meaningless, just as (the idea of a form with regard to the Sun which is) pure light—334.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'and' in the sûtra is employed in order to remove the doubt raised above. The affix 'vat' in prakasavat, has the force of 'iva' or 'like unto'; and it is added to the word 'prakasa' in the locative case. Namely, Raises at in the case of the Sun, whose single form is pure light, there is conceived a form for the sake of meditation; and as such conception with regard to the Sun is not purposeless, for it helps concentration of the mind; similarly, in the case of Brahman, who, though the pure light of knowledge and bliss, is conceived to have a Form, to facilitate meditation on Him. For meditation is impossible without ascribing a form. The word dhyana or meditation is always used in connection with some form. As in the sentence, "the wife, parted from her husband, meditates (dhyayati) or him (i.e., on his form pictured in her mind)."

Nor must it be said, that this mental picture, formed for the sake of meditation, is an unreality after all and Brahman has no form actually. Because there is evidence of His having a form.

SUTRA III. 2. 16.

ब्राष्ट्र च तन्मासम् । ३ । २ । १६ ॥

चार Aha, (the Sruti) declares. च Cha, and, however. स्थापम् Tanmatram, only that much, or consisting of the essence of His Self.

16. The Sruti declares, however, that the Form of the Supreme consists of the very essence of His Self—335.

COMMENTARY.

The force of the word "matra" in tanmatra is to denote exclusiveness. Since the Scriptures declare this Form alone to be the Supreme Self, hence this Form is a Real Entity, (and not an imagined thought-picture created by the mind of the devotee). In the same Atharva Siras, the Lord is thus described:—

सत् पुण्डरीकनयने मेघामं वैद्युताम्बरम् । हिसुनं मानमुदास्यः वनमास्निमीम्बरम् ॥

("Meditate on) the Lord as having eyes like full-blown white lotus, a body of the (blue) colour of clouds, garments of lightning, with two arms, and adorned with the symbol of silence, and having a garland round his neck, which is made up of all the spheres of the heavenly orbs."—(Gopála Párva Tápanî, p. 185 of the Ånandásrama series).

Note.—Vanamaia means a garland made of flowers, fruits and leaves all strung together. In the case of Vinnu, the Vanamaia means all the globes strung together:—

यनमाखामधार् विष्युर्भ यनानि चतुर्दश ।

Or it may mean a garland made of flowers of five colours, yellow, white, red, blue and black. In the case of Vignu, it means a garland made of five elements - earth, etc.:—

पृथ्वी पीता, बारि शुक्तं, रक्तोऽप्तिरसिता मस्त्। नभा नीछं पञ्चवर्षा वनमाछा इरेरिति ॥

In the above, the attributes like "lotus-eyed," &c., are shown to be the essential qualities of the Lord and the Lord and the Form are identical clearly, for this Form is called the Lord in the above.

So also in the Padma Purana we read: --

देवदेविभिदा चैव नेस्वरे विचते कवित् .

"In the Lord there is no distinction of Life and Form—(the Form itself is the Life)."

In every thing else, the form embodies the life, but in the case of the Lord, the Form Itself is the Life manifest. In other words, the deha (body) is verily the dehin (the embodied)—the Body of the Lord is verily the Lord Himself.

COMMENTARY.

In answer to the question "How did Gopala, the Supreme Self, who essentially is above all Prakriti, descend on this earth (and incarnate limself in matter)," the Sruti goes on to describe the Form of this Supreme Self: and shows that the Supreme Self is identical with His Form. The word Gopala is primarily applied to that Entity who is the Supreme Lord having the most beautiful face, hands, feet, &c., and with a body of the color of the blue cloud. In the Gopala Pûrva Tapani, the sages ask Brahma the following question: "What is the form of the Lord, what is His sacred formula of worship, and what is the method of His worship, tell that to us who are anxious to know." In reply to this question, Brahma says:—

गैत्रवेषं ब्रह्ममं तदबं कस्पदुमाधितम् । तदिः दक्षेषा अवन्ति— सत् पुण्डरीकनयनं मेघामं वैद्युतास्थरम् । द्विसुत्रं मैतममुद्राक्तं वनमाकिनमीम्बरम् ॥ गेतिगोत्तरावा वीतं सुरद्युमतकावितम् । विव्यासंकरकेपेतं रक्षपङ्कुमम्बरम् ॥ कासिन्वीजस्कक्कोसासीकृ मावतसेवितम् । विकायंद्वेतसा इच्यं मुको भवति संस्तेः ॥

"Krispa is dressed as a Gopa (a cow-herd, or a World-Saviour), has the colour of a cloud, is a youth, and stands under the Tree of all Desires. On this subject are the following verses:—

He who meditates, with his heart, on Krispa as described below is freed from re-births:—

He has eyes like full-blown white lotus, a body of the colour of clouds, garments of lightning, with two arms adorned with the symbol of silence (a particular position of fingers), a garland of heavenly orbs, the supreme Lord. He, rarrounded by cows, cowherds, and shepherdesses, under the heavenly Tree, adorned with divine ornaments, is seated on a throne inlaid with lotuses of jewels, and fanned by the cool wind resonant with the music of the waves of the River Kälindi."

Note.—The cows are celestial orbs, the cowherds (male and female) are the Rulers of these solar and planetary systems. The River Kalindi is the daughter of Time—or rather Time (Kāla) personified.

The Smritis also declare that the Self of the Lord and the Form of the Lord are identical. Thus in the Brahma Samhitâ it is said:—

र्श्वरः परमः कृष्यः संविदानस्विप्रहः।

"Krispa is the Supreme Lord the Form of Being, Intelligence and Bliss."

By these two sûtras (16 and 17) the mutual co-extensiveness is declared: i.e., the Form is verily the Life, and the Life is verily the Form, in the case of the Lord the Lord that with the form is even the Self and the Self is even the form.

Thus it is established that the Form is the Self. In inconceivable verities known only through the Revelation, there can be no room for argument, and so it must not be doubted how can the Form be the Atman. It is one of the mysteries of Godhead, revealed by the Sruti and must be believed so.

Therefore, Bhakti or love for the Form of the Lord is not an inferior kind of Bhakti, but the highest Bhakti; for the Form of the Lord is the Lord itself.

Though the Atman, Being, Knowledge and Bliss, logically excludes the idea of form, yet in matters transcendental, where the Revelation is our sole guide, we must believe that the Atman has a form, which is identical with itself. That Form verily is to be perceived by the heart alone when it is purified by love: just as the form of the music is perceived by the ear trained to appreciate musical notes. [Every music is supposed to have a form which is perceived through the trained ear.]

If the Lord were formless, then the Sruti texts like Autour: "image of intelligence," whereast "image of bliss," &c., would become meaningless, for these phrases employ the word "ghana" which means form. Thus the Form of the Lord is not only all Intelligence and Bliss, it has the other attributes of being the all-pervading and the Inner Self of all. To have any other conception about this form would be wrong and based upon error. As it is said by the Lord to Narada in the Moksa-dharma—

पतत् त्ववा न विश्वे यं कपवानिति दृश्यते । इच्छन् मुद्रतीन् नर्ययम्, देशोऽदं अगता गुकः ॥ मायान्ति वा म्या सद्दा यन् मा पृश्यत्व नारद । सर्वमृतगुर्वेयं कं नैवं त्वं शातुमद्वति ॥

"O Narada! Do not think so "I see this Form because it is a form, (and every thing that has a form is visible)." For (this Form is not like other forms, because) in a moment on my merely so willing, I can become invisible to thee. For I am the Lord and the Teacher of the world (by being the linner Guide of all). That which thou seest Me as having all the qualities of all the beings, that is a Mâyâ created by Me. Thou caust not know me thus."

Adhikarana IX—The worshipped is different from the worshipper.

Now the author establishes the difference between the worshipper and the worshipped—between the Jiva and Brahman. For if the worshipper were identical with the worshipped, the result of the advaita notion "I am That"—then there would arise no Bhakti (love), for no one entertains the notion that his own self is the fit object of adoration. [For Bhakti is really worship, and it is a feeling entertained to a being who is superior to one's own self.]

Though the author has repeatedly established the proposition that the Jiva is different from the Lord, yet he again reverts to that topic, dealing with it from a different sapect, in order to enlighten those misguided souls, who through the false teaching that the Jiva is a reflection of Brahman, are deluded into the idea that they are verily the Supreme Brahman, (and prayers and pûjas are useless for them).

(Viçaya.)—Says a Sruti :-

बहुवः सूर्यका यहत् सूर्यस्य सहका अछे। प्रविवासका क्षेत्रि प्रात्मसहका मताः ॥

"As many images of the sun are seen in various vessels of water, so in this world the various selfs are to be considered as the reflection of the Supreme Self."

Says another Sruti, Brahma Vindu Upanisad :--

पक पव हि मृतात्मा भूते भूते व्यवस्तितः। पक्तवा बहुधा वैच हृदयते जसवन्त्रवतः॥

"The Bhûta-Âtman is indeed One, existing in every being. It appears as one or as many, like the reflection of the moon in water."

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. It has been demonstrated before that the Supreme Self is an Image of Bliss and Intelligence. Does that Supreme Self become Jiva under certain conditions, or is He always separate from the Jiva.

(Parcapakea.)—The opponent urges that the Supreme Self itself becomes the Jiva. For a Jiva is nothing but the reflection of the Supreme in the Nescience. A reflection is identical with the original, for it exists so long as the original source exists, and ceases to exist, when the source exists no longer. Therefore it has been said: "If a person looks at a mirror in front of him, he sees his own face only therein, but if he turns away his eyes, he sees nothing." Therefore the Supreme Self, by its conjunction with Avidya (Nescience), has become Jiva.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside by the next sutra. The Jiva is not a reflection of Brahman.

SÙTRA III. 2. 18.

श्रतएव चोपमा सूर्यकादिवत् । ३ । २ । १८ ॥

स्तः इव Atali, eva, for this very reason. च Cha. and. (Another reading has - म Na, not.) चलना Upama, similarity, or absolute identity. स्वंकादिवर् Sûryakadivat, just as between the sun and its images.

18. Therefore the simile of the sun and its reflection (holds good with regard to the Jiva and the Supreme Self as showing difference)—337.

COMMENTARY.

Because the Jiva is separate from the Supreme Self, therefore it is spoken of figuratively like the reflection of the sun. This is the meaning of the satra, when the residing is under instead of displaces. For in two (?) substances which are identically one, there cannot exist the relationship of the reflector and the reflected. For if the reflection were identically the same as its source, then the shadow of the fire would also cause burning, the reflection of a sword would cut substances.

But there is, however, no such identity, for the two are different.

The word 'and' in the star includes other causes of differences also.

Therefore, it follows that the Jiva is different from the Supreme Self.

Adhikarana X-Jîva not a reflection of God.

Admitted that the Jiva is different from the Supreme, on account of the above simile, but that very simile however shows that the Jiva is a reflection at least of the Intelligence. As the reflection of the sun in water is called Sûryaka, so the reflection of the Supreme in the Avidya, is called Jiva. Where is the harm in it?

This doubt, however, is also set aside by the next sûtra.

8ÛTRA III. 2. 19.

अम्बुवरपञ्चातु न तथास्वम् । ३ । २ । १६ ॥

सम्बद्ध Ambuvat, like in or of water, like the reflection of the sun in water. The affix, vat, has the force of "like" and the word before it is either in the sixth or in the seventh case. समायान Agrahanat, in the absence of perception. सु Tu, but, has the sense of exclusion. म Na, not. समायान Tathatvam, that state (i.e., that of equality). The simile does not hold good.

19. The Jiva is not a reflection of the Supreme, like the sun reflected in water, because it is not so perceived—338.

COMMENTARY.

The similarity of the sun and water does not hold good here. The sun is at a distance from the water, and so it is possible for its reflection to be in the water. But the Supreme Self is all-pervading, so no object can be at a distance from Him. So the similarity of the sun and water cannot hold good with regard to the Self and the Jiva. The sun is reflected in water, &c., because of its distance from water, &c., but there can be no such distance between the Supreme Self and any object. So "reflection" in this connection is a meaningless term.

Therefore the Jiva cannot be a reflection of the Supreme Self. The Sruti also says "He is colourless, reflectionless."—(Praina Up. 1V. 10.)

On the other hand, the Jiva is an intelligent entity like the Supreme Self. As says the Sruti: "He is the Eternal among the eternals, the conscious among the conscious ones."—(Katha Up. V. 13).

This refutes the illustration taken from the space and its reflection. The space has no reflection, the so-called reflection of the sky seen in water is really caused by the rays of the sun, &c., in particular limited portions of the space. It is a wrong notion of the ignorant when they say they see the reflection of space, otherwise one would also see the reflection of the directions, east, west, &c. Nor the sound and its echo are a proper illustration, for echo is not a reflection of sound. Therefore, the Lord has no reflection.

The next stitra shows the reconciliation of these Srutis, mentioning reflection.

SÛTRA 111. 2. 20.

वृद्धिद्वासभाक्त्वमन्तर्भावादुभयसामञ्जस्यादेवम् ।३।२।२०॥

पृथ्यि Vriddhi, increase, a higher degree. आप Hraan, decrease, a lower degree. आपन्य Bhaktvam, participation, being admitted of the difference. क्यानीयार Antarbhavat, because of being included in that. The purport of the scriptures ends with teaching only so much. द्वार Ubhaya, towards both. क्यान्यवाद Samañjasyat, because of the justness, appropriateness. १९२१ Evam, thus.

20. (The comparison is not appropriate in its primary sense, but in its secondary sense) of participating in increase and decrease; because (the purport of the scripture) is fulfilled thereby, and thus both comparisons become appropriate—339.

COMMENTARY.

The above comparison of the sun and its reflection does not hold good primarily, but it is a good illustration in a secondary sense. Namely, as showing the increase of the one—the greatness of the one (i.e., the Lord); and the decrease of the other, i.e., the smallness of the other, i.e., the Jiva.

This illustration is valid having regard to the particular nature of these. [The sun is great and so the Supreme Self is great, its reflection is small and so the Jiva is small. Taking the illustration in this light, it holds good]. Why do we say so? Because "antarbhavat"—the sense of the scriptures is fully satisfied by this mode of explanation—every thing is contained within it. By explaining it thus, the reconciliation of both takes place: namely, the reconciliation between the illustration and the object of illustration, the standard of comparison and the subject of comparison.

The sense is this. In the preceding sutra, the comparison of the sun and its reflection was set saide as inappropriate in its ordinary sense, but that comparison was taken to be good in its secondary sense, namely, having regard to the attributes found in the sun and its reflection. Looking to the attributes of these two, the illustration holds good. It is to be understood in this way. The sun participates in increase, it is a large luminary, untouched by the limitations of water, etc., in which it is reflected. It is independent, and unvarying. Its reflections, the smaller suns (sûryakas), participate in decrease (they increase or decrease according to the size of the surface on which the reflection is made). They are limited by the conditions of the reflecting surfaces like water, etc., are not independent and unvarying like the sun, but vary according to the variations of the reflecting surfaces. Thus the Supreme Self is all-pervading, untouched by the attributes of Matter (Prakriti); and is independent. The Jivas, which are his ameas (parts) are not allpervading but atomic, are joined with the attributes of Prakriti (are affected by the material environment in which they exist), and are not independent. Thus the comparison holds good showing the difference of the Jiva from the Lord, the subordination of the former to the latter; and similarity also between them, inasmuch as both are conscious. The illustration is not good; if it is taken in the sense that the Jiva is identical with Brahman, as the reflection is identical with its source. Therefore, the Paingi Sruti says that the Jiva is a reflection, but without any upadhi.

सोपाषिरतुपाषिस्य प्रतिविम्ना द्विषेण्यते । जीव देशस्यातुपाषिरिमुचापा यथा रवेः ॥

"The reflection is of two sorts, limited by upadhi and not so limited. The Jiva is a reflection of the Lord, but not in any upadhi: as the rainbow is a reflection of the Sun, but not in any upadhi (like the water, &c)."

Note.—The upadhi limited reflections are such as those in water, or in a mirror, &c.

SÚTRA III. 2. 21.

दर्शनाच । ३ । २ । २१ ॥

दर्शनाइ Darganat, because it is seen (in the world). च Cha, and.

21. Moreover it is thus seen (in the world, that comparisons are sometimes taken in their secondary sense) —340.

COMMENTARY.

In similes like "Devadatta is a lion," we find that the worldly usage also is in favour of taking these comparisons to be good only so far as relevant. (Devadatta is a lion, is good only so far as the similarity between the courage of both is concerned. It should not be strained further to indicate that Devadatta has got claws like a lion, &c).

Therefore, the scriptural texts of comparison between the Lord and the Jiva should be explained in this figurative sense, and not literally.

Adhikarana XI-The Neti Neti text explained.

An objector says:—It is not right to assert that the Jiva is a separate conscious entity like the Supreme Self, but it is merely a reflection of Brahman, and not a substance by itself. In the Brihadaranyaka Upaniaad in chapter II. 3.1, beginning with it "there are two forms of Brahman, &c.," the existence of every thing other than Brahman is expressly denied. That text is as follows:—

"There are two forms of Brahman, the material and the immaterial, the mortal and the immortal, the solid and the fluid, Sat (being) and Tya (that) (i.e., Sat-tya, true.")

Then the Sruti divides all the five elements and their products into two groups—material and immaterial, (gross and fine). It declares all these to be the form of Brahman, and then goes on to declare:—

"And what is the form of that Person? Like a saffron-coloured raiment, like yellow wool, like cochineal, like the flame of fire, like the white lotus, like sudden lightning. He who knows this, his glory is like unto sudden lightning."

The Sruti having thus described that Person as having the colour of a saffron raiment, &c., goes on to state:—

"Now follows the teaching—Neti, Neti, not so, not so. For there is not any thing else higher than this "Neti—Not so." Then comes the Name, Satyasya Satyam, the True of the true: the senses being the true, and he (the Brahman) the True of them."

The sense of the above is this. The Sruti refers to the whole world as material and immaterial, subtle and gross, and having described it as such, states that the highest good is not to be obtained by a knowledge of this world, and therefore it gives next the teaching—Neti, Neti, not so, not so. The thing taught by neti, neti, not so, not so, must be understood to mean Brahman alone. This text denies the existence of all objects, whether they fall under the category of thoughts and things, or matter and mind. [It declares that the only existence is Brahman; everything else is Neti, Neti, not so, not so.] The Sruti itself declares, what is the meaning of the teaching Neti, Neti—it says there is verily nothing else other then this Brahman. But may not the word "Neti, not so" be taken to deny the existence of Brahman also, as it denies the existence of the world: may it not teach pure Nihilism? Not so. For the Sruti teaches that there exists an entity other than all visible worldly objects, higher than all; the end of all illusious, the pure Being, the Brahman. Therefore 'not so' teaches that there exists no other object than Brahman; and consequently there do not exist separate entities like your Jivas (souls); but that the Jiva is nothing other than the reflection of Brahman in Avidys. Your statement that there are two atmans—lower (the Jiva), and the Higher (the Lord); that they are different, because the one is all-pervading, and the other is atomic, &c., is incorrect. All this apparent difference can be explained on the analogy of space in a jar and space outside it: the atomicity, &c., of the Jiva are apparent only; and not sufficient to establish the difference between Jiva and Brahman.

(Siddhânta.)—To this Pûrvapakşa, the next sûtra gives an answer.

Note.—For clearness of understanding the whole text of the Brihad-Aranyaka Upanisad (II. 3. 1 to 6) is given below:—

There are two forms of Brahman, the material and the immaterial, the mortal and the immortal, the solid and the fluid, sat (being) and tya (that), (i.e., sat-tya, true).

Everything except air and sky is waterial, is mortal, is solid, is definite. The essence of that which is material, which is mortal, which is solid, which is definite is the sun that shines, for he is the essence of sat (the definite).

But air and sky are immaterial, are immortal, are fluid, are indefinite. The essence of that which is immaterial, which is immortal, which is fluid, which is indefinite is the person in the disk of the sun, for he is the essence of tyad (the indefinite). So far with regard to the Devas.

Now with regard to the body. Everything except the breath and the other within the body is material, is mortal, is solid, is definite. The essence of that which is material, which is mortal, which is solid, which is deduite is the Rye, for it is the essence of sat (the definite).

But breath and the other within the body are immaterial, are immortal, are fluid, are indefinite. The essence of that which is immaterial, which is the person in the right eye, for he is the essence of tyad (the indefinite).

And what is the appearance of that person? Like a saffron-coloured raiment, like white wool, like eachineal, like the flame of fire, like the white lotus, like sudden lightning. He who knows this, his giory is like unto sudden lightning.

Next follows the teaching (of Brahman) by No, no! (noti, noti) for there is noting else higher than this (if one says); 'It is not so! Then comes the name 'the True of the True,' the senses (the Jivas) being the True, and He (the Brahman) the True of them.

22. (The Sruti, Neti Neti) denies the previously mentioned limitation (only with regard to Brahman), for it declares (Him to be) more than that—341.

COMMENTARY.

This Sruti (Neti, Neti) does not teach that Brahman alone exists, and nothing else exists than it; and that It is without any attributes and qualities. It only denies the so-muchuess of Brahman, as was described in the preceding verses. It says that the material and immaterial is not the wnole of Brahman. It is something more than that. It does not deny the existence of those forms mentioned in the previous verses, but it says "do not fall into the error of thinking that Brahman so much is only Neti, Neti-it is not so much only, it is not so much only." For after the negation of Neti, Neti (which might have been liable to the nihilistic interpretation of the Advaitins, had there been no further statement; the Sruti goes on to describe in positive terms, the further attributes of this Brahman-His name being the True of the true. [By this phrase "the True among the true ones" - not only sets aside the nihilistic theory, but the Advaita also—for it asserts the existence of other true ones—real entities, than Brahman. The Jivas are not unreal shadows but true: Brahman being the True.]

The sense of the above teaching is this. The Sruti at first enumerates all forms of Brahman, such as the material and the immaterial, etc. But since Brahman is limitless in His Form, it declares Neti, Neti, He is not so much only. He is not so much only. The word iti (na + i'i = neti) means here "end"—Neti means "this is not the end." The Neti is, therefore, equal to iti + na, "end not"—the previously mentioned forms are not the end or limit of Brahman. For He is more than them—His name is True, He is the True of the true. The text itself clearly says so much:—

न के तत्काद इति नेति, चन्यत् परम् । चरित, चय नामधेयं सत्तस्य सत्वमिति ॥

"It is not so that this is the end. There is a Higher Form than this. Its name is 'the True of the true.' Moreover it must not be said that higher than these material and immaterial form is the Form of Brahman called the True, etc., and that is the end. For it is not thus-Neti. The "True of the true" is no doubt higher than all marta and amilita forms, but even that is not the limit to the forms of Brahman. These are merely illustrative. The proper thing to say is that His Forms are illimitable and infinite. As an illustration, the text gives one of these Higher Forms and Names, by saying "His name is the True of the true." The name here declares the form of Brahman. The first satyam means the souls, the Jivas; the prants always accompany the Jivas; and so Satya which means prana, is a name of Jiva. The Sruti, hence, explains the phrase Satyasya Satyam, by आबा के सत्यं तेवाजेव सत्यम् । "The Pranas are the True, and He is the True of them." The word prana is used for praninthe life for the living self. The word rûps in the above verse (II. 3. 6) means attributes. This text establishes Brahman to be material (Prakrita), as well as immaterial (Aprakrita), and possessing infinite number of attributes. It does not deny the existence of every substance other than Brahman (for that is not the purport of this text). All forms whether mûrts or smûrts—material or immaterial, are prakritic. The forms shown in the illustrations of saffron-coloured raiment, like yellow wool, like cochineal, etc., are to be understood as non-Prakritic-not consisting of Prakritic matter (Brahman's forms are thus of both Prakritic and non-Prakritic matter, and yet there are forms above them all-Neti, Netifor this is not all, this is not all).

The Jivas are called in the above Sruti Pranas: and are also designated Satyam, the True. The Jivas are called True, because they do not like the elements, ether, etc., undergo modifications causing an alteration in their essential nature. In this respect they are similar to Brahman; and so both the Jivas and Brahman are called True. But Brahman is the True of the True, because the Jivas undergo, in accordance with their Karmas, contractions and expansions of intelligence, but there is no such modification in Brahman.

Therefore the Jiva is an eternal conscious entity (subject to contraction and expansion of intelligence, according to his deeds). The Supreme Self is a mixe of infinite auspicious qualities, (and liable to no modifications whatever). Thus love (Bhakti) for Brahman becomes still more natural when we contemplate on the greatness of his attributes, and the insignificance of the Jiva.

Nor does this Brihadâranyaka Śruti deny form to Brahman. For if that was what the Śruti intended to teach, then it would not have taught the transcendental forms of Brahman as in II. 3. 6 (he is of the colour of a saffron-coloured raiment, a yellow fine wool, etc.); and then deliberately demolish this teaching by saying "Brahman has no form." For no one in his right senses would say at first "Brahman has such and such form" and then say "He has no form—all that I said before is wrong." Moreover the author of the sûtra also would have employed different words, had that been teaching of the Śruti. For, then instead of saying Etâvattva—"the Śruti denies so-muchness only"—he would have said "etad rûpam pratise hati"—"the Śruti denies this form of Brahman." The wording of the sûtra, therefore, also shows that the interpretation of the Śruti above given is the right one and consistent throughout; and more reasonable.

Adhikarana XII—The Form of the Lord.

The author now establishes that Brahman is the Inner Self of all. For if He were as easily attainable as the external objects like the jars, pots &c., there would be no love for Him.

(Visaya.)—In the Sruti already mentioned previously, Brahman is described as having Being, Intelligence and Bliss for His form (Sachchidânand-rûpâya, &c.)

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, has the Supreme Self an external form capable of being perceived through the senses, or is it an Inner Form, not to be apprehended by the senses.

(Parvapakea. —The form is an external one, because men, angels and demon, see the form.

(Siddhanta.)—The form is not external as is shown in the next sutra:—

SÛTRA III, 2, 28.

तवव्यक्तमाइ हि। ३।२।२३॥

तन् Tat, that. प्राथमान् Avyaktam, non-manifest, the Inner. पास Aha, says, (the scripture). दि Hi, for.

23. The form of Brahman is unmanifest, for the scripture declares it so.—342.

COMMENTARY.

The Brahman in his true form is not manifest to the external senses, it is Inner: and is to be perceived by the inner sense. For says the Katha Up. (VI. 9):—

न सन्दरो तिहति कपमस्य न बश्चना परयति करवनैनम् ।

"His form is not object of perception to any one, nor by the eye does any one see Him."

So also the Brihadâranyaka III. 9. 26:-

अयुद्धी न हि युद्धते, अशीर्थी न हि शीर्यते।

"He is non-apprehensible by the senses, for He cannot be apprehended, He is imperishable, for He cannot perish."

So also in the Gita (VIII. 21):-

चवकोआर इत्युक्तसमाद्यः परमा गतिम्।

"He is said to be the unmanifest, and the imperishable, Him they declare to be the Highest goal."

Adhikarana XIII.—Brahman can be seen.

Though Brahman is not an external object, but Praticha or an Inner Substance, yet He is attainable through wisdom and devotion. The author shows this next. Had He been absolutely invisible—even to those whose hearts were purified—then there could not arise any love (Bhakti) for such a being.

(Vieaya.)—It is thus heard in the Kaivalya Upanişad (Verse 2):—

"Know Him through the yoga (union) of faith, love and meditation."

From this it appears that a faithful and devoted person can obtain Hari, through meditation.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. Is the Lord apprehended by the mind—an object of mental perception or is he visible to eyes, &c., also?

(Pareapakea.)—The Lord is an object of mental perception only, and not of external perception through the eyes, &c. The following text of the Brihadaranyaka clearly shows this, by using the term "only" (IV. 4. 19):—

भनसेवात्रप्रच्यां नेह नानास्ति फिंचन 🛊

"He is to be perceived by the mind only, there is in Him no diversity."
(Siddhânta.)—Brahman is visible to eyes also of the purified devotee:
as is shown in the next sûtra.

8ÛTRA III. 2. 24.

चपि संराधने प्रत्यकानुमानाभ्याम् । ३ । २ । २४ ॥

will Api, even though, also: not so. The word 'api' sets aside the purvapakes. direct Samradhane, in conciliation, in an intensely devout worship. The Pratyakes, as apparent, as directly perceptible, through Revelation.

24. In devout love, (the Lord even becomes visible to the eyes, &c., of the devotee, as is taught in the) Sruti and the Smriti—343.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'api' is used in a deprecative sense. The above Pûrvapakşa is not even worthy of consideration. In samrādhana or absorbed devotion, the Lord becomes perceptible even to the eyes, &c., of the devotee. How do you know this? Through Revelation (pratyakṣa or the Direct statement of the Vedas), and through Inference or the indirect inferential statements of the Smṛitis. Thus the Katha Sruti says (II. 4 1):—

पराध्य जाने व्यवस्त् स्वयम्भूतःसात् पराङ् पश्वति वानारातात् । कवित्र भीरः असमात्वानमैकत् जादुःचन्धुरसृतात्वमिन्छन् ।

"The self-existent created the senses with outgoing tendencies; therefore the man sees external objects and not the Internal Self, but the wise, with the eye averted from external objects and desirous of immortality, beholds the Self Within."

So also in Mundaka Up. (III. 1. 8):-

न बश्चवा युक्ते नापि वाचा नान्वेर्वेवेसपसा कर्मण वा । ज्ञानप्रसादेन विशुद्धसस्वसातस्य तं पदवते निष्कतं ज्ञायमानम् ॥

"He cannot be apprehended by the senses like the eye, nor by revealed texts, nor by the grace of any other shining one, nor by austerities and work. Through the grace of wisdom, the pure in heart, see Him who is partiess, in their meditation."

This also shows that the Lord becomes visible to His wise and loving devotee.

So also in the Gita (XI. 53 and 54):-

नाइं वेदैनं तपसा न दानेन न चेज्यवा। शक्य पर्वविधा द्रुपट्टं इष्टवानसि मां यथा ॥ ५३ ॥

'Nor can I be seen as thou hast seen Me, by the Vedas, nor by austerities, nor by alms, nor by offerings :

भक्ता त्वनन्यया शक्य भद्दमेवीवेषोऽर्जुन । बातुं द्रष्टुं च तस्त्वेन प्रवेष्टुं च परन्तप ॥ ५४ ॥

"But by devotion to Me alone I may thus be perceived, Arjuna, and known and seen in essence, and entered, O Parantapa.

Thus it is established that the Blessed Hari is perceptible to the senses even, when the soul is full of entire love. The eyes, etc., then become saturated with His essence and become fit to see Him, and so He is seen through such purified eyes.

This being so, the force of eva in securities "He is to be apprehended by the mind alone" is not that of exclusion of other means of knowing Him, but teaches that the mind also can know Him. [The word eva should be translated by even and not by only. He can be known by the mind even.]

It does not mean that the senses, like the eye, etc., cannot comprehend Him. They also can comprehend Him, under certain circumstances.

SÛTRA III. 2. 25.

प्रकाशादिवचावैशेष्यम् । ३ । २ । २५ ॥

[ब Na, not]. ब्रह्मशादिक्त Prakasadivat, as in the case of fire, etc. च Cha, and. चरित्रकृ Avaisesyam, non-difference, non-distinctions.

25. The Lord is not like fire and the rest, for there are not such distinctions in Him—344.

COMMENTARY.

The word not is to be read into this sutra from the preceding aphorism, III. 2. 19. As the fire has two states, coarse and fine, and is unmanifest when in the subtle state, and becomes manifest when in the coarse state; such is not the case with the Lord. Because there are not distinctions of subtle and gross in Him. The Sruti says: unquantum (Br. Up. III. 8. 8.) "He is neither coarse nor fine, neither short nor long, etc."

So also in the Garuda Purana:-

स्यूकस्त्राविद्योगेऽत्र न करियत् परकेवरे । सर्वत्रेव प्रकाद्योऽसी सर्वकपेणका यतः ॥

"In the supreme Lord there are no distinctions of subtle and coarse, because that Unborn is manifest verily everywhere in every form."

But there are persons who have full devotion and love towards God, how is it that they have not seen Him? It is not a universal rule, therefore, that any one who loves God must see God.

To this objection, the next sûtra gives the answer.

SÛTRA III. 2. 26.

प्रकाशश्च कर्मग्यभ्यासात् । ३ । २। २६ ॥

हवाद: Prakasah, light, manifestation, the shining out. प Cha, and. It] removes the doubt mentioned above. द्वारि Karmani, in practices (of devotion).

26. And the Lord becomes manifest, by repeated practice (in meditation)—345.

COMMENTARY.

[In the Karman or act consisting in meditation on Him, in the acts like worshipping Him, etc., by constant repetition in such acts (of meditation and worship), the Lord verily becomes visible.]

It is by constant repetition of the acts like meditation and worship that the Lord shines forth. [If some devotees have not seen Him, it is because they have not been constant in their practice of meditation. It is ablyaes or constant repetition, which produces the state of ecstasy, in which the Lord is seen.] As says the Dhyana-vindu Up. 18 (so also Brahma Up.):—

स्वदेहं सरिवं इत्वा प्रववं वेश्वरारविम् । भ्वाननिर्मयनाभ्यासाद् देवं पत्थेन् निगृहवत् ॥

"Making one's body as the lower fire stick and the syllable Om as the upper stick, and by the practice of constant rubbing them through meditation, let him see the God, hidden in him."

Thus it is abhyasa or repetition, that makes the hidden Lord manifest, as the constant rubbing of the sticks brings out the fire. It is by abhyasa that one gets the love for the Lord and through such love, he gets ultimately the vision of the Beloved. But no one can see the Lord by mere worship (done for some selfish purpose such as to get heaven, &c.) without love. As says a text (Brahma Vaivarta):—

न तमाराधियत्वापि किश्वद् व्यक्ती करिप्यति । नित्वाव्यक्ती यता देवः परमात्मा सनातनः ॥

"No one by worship alone can make Him become manifest: For the God, the Ancient Supreme Self is ever unmanifest."

This uselessness of worship and prayer refers to selfish prayers and worship, and not to the whole-hearted prayer of love. It is the prayer, devoid of love, which is incapable of producing divine vision

Says an objector, how can the Lord, who is all-pervading and inside all, become manifest and come out. It is a contradiction in terms. Therefore, the statement that the Lord can become directly visible is valueless, inasmuch as it contradicts the all-pervading inwardness of the Lord.

This objection is answered by the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 2. 27.

भ्रतोऽनन्तेन तथाहि लिङ्गम् । ३ । २ । २७ ॥

सन्त: Atah, hence. सन्तिन Anantena, through (the grace of) the Lord who is infinite. त्या Tatha, thus (i.e., direct vision). द्वि Hi, because. विद्वार Lingam, the indication or authority (of the scripture).

27. Hence the direct vision is possible through the infinite grace of the Lord; and there is scriptural authority for the same—346.

COMMENTARY.

There are authorities to support both the statements, that the Lord is unmanifest, and becomes manifest to the sight of the devoutly meditating worshipper. Hence though the Lord is unmanifest, infinite and unbounded, yet when he is pleased with His devotee, lie manifests His essential Form to him, through His mysterious power of grace.

But how do you say this? Because there is scriptural authority for the same. As says the Atharvan Sruti:—

"That Form of Intelligence and Bliss—one mass of Being and Bliss—becomes visible to the devotee through the meditation of love."

Similarly, in the Narayana Adhyatına:-

नित्यान्यकोऽपि भगवान्, देशते निजवाकितः। तामृते परमात्मानं कः प्रदयेतामितं प्रमुम् ॥

"Though the Lord is ever unmanifest, yet He becomes visible through His own powers (to the elect). Without the grace of that Supreme Self, who can see Him, the Unbounded, Infinite Lord."

The Lord Himself has said so in the Gita (VII, 24):-

चन्यकं व्यक्तिमापचं मन्यन्ते मामबुद्धयः । परं भावमजानन्तो ममान्ययमनुक्तमम् ॥ २४ ॥

"Those devoid of reason think of Me, the unmanifest, as having manifestation, knowing not My supreme nature, imperishable, most excellent."

Though the Lord is thus manifest to the eye of love, yet this fact does not detract from the essential invisibility of His Self. For this manifestation to His Lovers is an exercise of His mysterious power of Self. But with regard to persons devoid of love, the Lord never manifests in His essential form, but as a reflection. For says He in the Gita, (VII. 25):—

नाहं प्रकाशः सर्वस्य येगमायासमाइतः । महोत्र्यं नाभिजानाति छोको' मामजमययम् ॥ २५ ॥

"Nor am I of all discovered, enveloped in My creation-illusion. This deluded world knoweth Me not, the unborn, the imperishable."

Therefore, though the Lord is essentially all love, mercy and supreme joy, yet to the worldly He appears as a Being of all Terrible Power, a God of Vengence and Wrath.

Thus the term "unmanifest," when applied to the Lord, means that He is unmanifest to the eyes of those who have no love for Him; [but He suffuses the eyes of His lovers as the fire suffuses through an iron ball, and they see nothing but the Lord].

Adhikarana XIV—Attributes are the substance of the Lord.

Now the author establishes that the attributes of the Lord are not different from the essential nature of the Lord. For if the attributes were different from the Lord, then they would become secondary, and the bhakti for the Lord would also become secondary (for the man loves the Lord for His attributes). But this is not the case. The love for the attributes of the Lord, is a love for the sake of the attributes themselves as something principal and loveable in themselves, and not for something as secondary.

(Visaya.)—We have the texts:-

विशासमानन् आहा। The Brahman is intelligence and bliss.

यः सर्वेदः सर्वेदि । He who is Omniscient and All-knowing.

चानन काले दिवान Knowing that Brahman as bliss,

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, is this Brahman who is to be adored and loved, mere intelligence and bliss, or one possessed of intelligence and bliss? (In other words, is He a personal God, having the attributes of intelligence and bliss, or is it pure intelligence and bliss).

(Parvapak;a.)—As there are texts of both sorts, some showing Brahmau to be personal, others impersonal, it is not possible to determine what is the true nature of Brahmau—whether it is pure intelligence and bliss, or whether He is the all-intelligent and the blissful one.

(Siddhânta.)—The next sûtra shows that the Lord is a personal being.
30TRA III. 2. 28.

उभयव्यपदेशास्त्रहिकुगडलवत् । ३ । २ । २८ ॥

दलब Ubhaya, (about being) both. व्यवदेशास् Vyapadesat, on account of the declaration of the scripture. द्व Tu, but. चारि Ahi, like the scripent. कुवहस्तवस् Kundalavat, like the coils.

28. But the Lord is both (bliss and blissful, &c.,) for the Scripture thus declares Him, as the snake and its coils —347.

COMMENTARY.

Brahman has intelligence and bliss as His essential nature; He is essentially knowledge and bliss, and these are His attributes also: as the serpent and its coils. The coils constitute the serpent, and are not separate from the serpent, yet they are also attributes of the serpent. How do you know this? Because the above Srutis describe Him as two-fold. The force of  $\mathfrak{F}$  but' is to indicate that all Srutis have one purport. The Lord being inconceivable He appears as bliss and blissful, &c. It cannot be said, "as there are both sorts of texts, Brahman is partly blissful, and partly bliss, &c." For there are no Svagata-bheda in Brahman—He is one essence throughout like a diamond; and is not a unity like that of a tree which has internal differences, like root, leaves, flowers.

SUTRA III. 2. 20.

प्रकाशाभ्यवद्वा तेजस्त्वात् । ३ । २ । २६ ॥

त्रकाश Prakasa, like the light. चात्रवस् Åsrayavat, like the abode of light. चा Va, or. त्रेक्स्यास् Tejastvat, on account of His being of a lustrous character, i.e., being essentially all-sentiency and consciousness.

29. Or because Brahman is of a lustrous character, He is designated as the abode of Light—348.

COMMENTARY.

Because Brahman is tejas or all-sentiency. He is designated also as the abode of light, i.e., the abode of knowledge. As the sun which is essentially light is said also to be the abode of light, so the Lord Hari whose essential nature is knowledge (jñāna) is said to be the abode of knowledge also. An object is called lustrous or tejas, who or which is opposite of ignorance or darkness. It is a term applied to both persons and things.

पूर्ववद्रा। ३। २। ३०॥

पूर्ववर Purvavat, as in the prior time. व Va, or.

30. (Brahman is both bliss and blissful, as one indivisible Time is said to be) prior (and posterior)—349.

COMMENTARY.

Or to take another illustration. As time is a duration, and has neither priority nor posteriority in it, but is one, and yet is spoken of as prior and posterior, and itself becomes the measure and the measured, so also Brahman is both knowledge and the knower, both blissful and bliss: both the attribute and the thing having an attribute. This illustration from time is meant for subtler intellects, as that of serpent and his coils was for dull-witted. In fact, each succeeding illustration is subtler than the one given in the preceding sûtra. As it is in the Brahma Purana (Padma according to Madhva):—

चानन्देन त्वभित्रं न व्यवहारः प्रकाशवत् । पृथवहा यथा कालः स्वावच्छेदकतां जजेत् ॥

"Though Brahman is non-different from bliss (He is bliss and blissful), yet conventionally He is spoken of as separate from bliss (as possessing bliss), just like the light (in the case of the sun, which is both light and the abode of light); or like prior and posterior time, where the indivisible Time becomes its own measure."

SÛTRA III. 2. 81.

प्रतिषेधाचा । ३।२।३१॥

वतिवेषात् Pratisedhat, because of the denouncement or prohibition. च Cha, and: has the force of 'only': exclusion.

31. And because of the prohibition (in the Scriptures, which declare that the Lord and His attributes are not to be considered as different)—350.

COMMENTARY.

Thus in the Katha Up. (II. 4. 11 and 14):—

मनसैवेदमासम्यं नेह नानास्ति फिंचन । मूखो स मृत्युं गम्छति य इह नानेव पश्यति ॥

"Even through the purified mind this knowledge is to be obtained, that there is no difference whatsoever here (in the attributes of the Lord). From death to death he goes, who beholds this here with difference."

यथादकं तुर्गे वृष्ट् पर्वतेषु विधावति । एवं धर्मान्यूथक पर्श्यस्तानेवानुविधावति ॥

"As water falling on an inaccessible mountain top runs down, thus seeing the qualities of the Lord as separate from the Lord a man runs down to Darkness."

Nor is there any Svagata bheda in the Lord, as the following text of the Nârada Pañcharâtra shows:—

निर्वेषपूर्वगुविषम् द्यास्मतन्त्रो-निर्वेतनात्मक-शंरीरगुर्वेश्वहीनः। भानन्दमात्रकरपादमुकोदरादिः सर्वेत्र व स्कातमेदविवर्जितात्मा॥

"The Lord is an entity having perfect and faultless qualities. He is the Atman or the Self and free from all the attributes of the body consisting of insentient matter. He too has a body—hands, feet, face, stomach, &c., but all of pure bliss (not of matter). That Atman is everywhere and always devoid of internal differences also."

Thus these texts prohibit any difference between the quality and the qualified, and consequently the qualities of the Lord (are not accidents, as is generally the case with all qualities, but) are the essential nature of the Lord. Therefore the qualities like knowledge, &c., are sometimes designated by the term "Lord." As says the Vişnu Purana:—

ज्ञानशक्तिक्छैश्वर्यवीयतेज्ञांस्यशेवतः। . भगवकुष्ट्वाच्यानि विना हेरेशु जाहितिः ॥

"The word Lord denotes infinite knowledge, power, strength, lordliness, energy and lustre, without the admixture of any baser qualities."

Thus these qualities are called Bhagawan or Lord. The two (the Lord and His attributes) are spoken of separately—though they are essentially one—just as the water and its waves are spoken of separately as two, though it is all one water. The difference arises from this visesa. Therefore the Lord who is ever joy and bliss, is said to be joyful and blissful and to have a body of all delight. All these qualities of the Lord are eternal, and consequently that body of the Lord is also eternal. Though there is no distinction (vises strictly so called), here between the quality and the qualified, yet for conventional purposes such a (visesa) distinction is recognised and spoken of as such. If this conventional (visesa) distinction be not admitted, then the sentences like the following would also become absurd (for they are really tantologies when logically analysed):-"The being exists," "The time always exists," "the space is everywhere." All these sentences are logical tautologies, but they are of constant use and good as conventions. Nor can it be said that such a usage is erroneous and is based upon delusion. For the phrase "the Be-ness exists" conveys as true an information as the sentence "the jar exists." For there is no subsequent experience which sublates this knowledge. Nor is the sentence "the Be-ness exists," is a superimposition or a figurative speech like "Devadatta is a lion." For we can never say of Be-ness that it does not exist, as we can say of Devadatta that he is not a lion. Nor can it be said that such a usage is a natural one, though there is no concrete content of any substance in these sentences like "the Be-ness exists." The very fact that such usage is natural shows that in these sentences also there is a vide a. The existence of such videsa is suggested by the expressive illustration of the water flowing down a hill. The man who makes a distinction between the Lord and His attributes goes down to darkness, like the water that falls on a mountain top. In that verse there is a prohibition of all difference between the Lord and His attributes which are described there. In the absence of such conventional difference, there cannot be the possibility of the relationship of quality and qualified. merely because there are many qualities. The category called visesa (the specific attribute) therefore exists, even here, though it is not here separate from the substance, but still has a particular function of its own. Nor is it open to the objection of regressus in infinitum, that a videsa must have a visesa of its own, and so on. For we have said above, that the vises a here though not separable from the substance (i.e., the Lord) has a function of its own with regard to that substance. Therefore, the existence of visesa is proved here also, as it is an invariable concomitant of the substance to which it appertains.

Note.—The whole discussion about vises is necessitated by the fact that there is a theory held by some Nyaiyâyikas that qualities are non-eternal, and are accidental. Some deny also the category called viseşa. The substance alone is eternal and the viseşa is non-eternal. In this view, the viseşa or the quality becomes non-eternal, if it exists at all. The qualities of the Lord also become non-eternal. But in the case of Brahman the qualities are eternal; therefore, viseşa, which is ordinarily different from the substance, becomes the substance in the case of the Lord. The quality becomes the qualified—the visesa becomes the dharmin.

Adhikarana XV-Bliss of the Lord is the highest.

Now the author establishes that the bliss of the Lord Hari is the highest. Had that bliss been similar to that of the Jiva, there would arise then no love (bhakti) for such a Lord.

(Viçaya.)—The texts under this Adhikarana are all those which describe the bliss of the Lord.

(Doubt.)—Is there any difference between the Brahmic and the Jaivic bliss or is there not?

(Parcapakea.)—There is no difference for the Divine bliss, is described in the terms of ordinary worldly bliss, &c., an object denoted by the term "jar," cannot be different from jar.

(Siddhanta.)—The bliss of the Lord is immeasurable, and cannot be stated in terms of worldly bliss, as shown in the next sutra.

60TRA III. 2. 82.

परमतः सेतृन्मानसम्बन्धभेवव्यपदेशेभ्यः । ३ । २ । ३२ ॥

क्ष्य Param. higher than. आह: Atah, from this (worldly bliss). केष्ठ Setu, about a bridge (as in Chh. Up. VIII. 4. 1.) सम्बन्ध Unmana, about being beyond measure (as in Br Up. VI. 4. 23). सम्बन्ध Sambandha, about relation, the proportionat ratio between the two blisses. भेद Bheda, about difference. अवस्थित: Vyapadesebhyah, from the declarations.

32. (The bliss, &c., of Brahman are) higher than this, as the declarations of "the bridge," "the immeasurableness," "the relative ratio" and "the difference" show this—351.

COMMENTARY.

The bliss, &c., of Brahman must not be considered like those of the Jivas. It is infinitely higher in kind and quality. Why do we say so? Because the words used regarding it such as 'the bridge' &c., show this. Thus in the Chhandogya Up. VIII. 4. 1., it is said:—

चय व बात्मा स सेतुर्विष्टतिरेषां क्षेत्रानामसंमेदाय ।

"Now this Self is a bridge, and a support, so that these worlds may be kept separate."

Here the bliss of Brahman is described as a bridge supporting the whole universe.

So also in the Taittiriya Up. II. 4. 1., the bliss of Brahman is said to be infinite (unmâna):—

यता वाचा निवर्तन्ते ग्रमाप्य मनसा सह, ग्रानन्दं अग्रावे विद्वान् न विमेति कदावन ।

"He who knows this bliss of Brahman—from which the speech together with the mind return (unable to fully grasp it and describe it), without comprehending it, is never afraid."

This shows that the bliss of Brahman is immeasurable.

The ratio between the bliss of the Lord and of a human being is that between infinity and one. As says the Br. Up. IV. 3. 32:—

प्योऽस्य परम ग्रानन्दः, पतस्यैवानन्दस्य ग्रन्यानि भृतानि मात्रामपजीवन्ति ॥

"This is His highest bliss." All other creatures live on a small portion of that bliss."
This shows the relation between the Divine and human bliss.

The difference between the Divine knowledge and the human knowledge is also shown clearly in the following verse:—

अन्यज् बानन्तु जीवानां, अन्यज् बानं परस्य च। नित्यानन्दाञ्ययं पूर्वं परं बानं विधीयते ॥

"The knowledge of the Jivas is one thing, the knowledge of the Supreme is another. The knowledge of the Supreme is declared to be eternal, blissful, immutable and perfect."

In the worldly bliss are not to be found these qualities of being a bridge, &c.

The following sûtra answers the objection that an object designated by the word 'jar' cannot be totally different from a jar.

BÛTRA III. 2. 33.

सामान्याचु । ३ । २ । ३३ ॥

सामान्यात् Samanyat, on account of being perceptable, or from resemblance. श्रु Tu, and, but. This word removes the doubt.

33. But (the word bliss is applied to human joy, merely) on account of generic resemblance (and not because the two blisses are of the similar nature)—352.

COMMENTARY.

As even one word 'jar' is applied to all kinds of jars, because all possess the common quality of being a jar; so the words bliss, &c., are applied to human as well as to divine bliss, &c., merely as a common term, and do not indicate any further similarity between the two. It is not necessary that the two should be individually similar, though they may belong to the same category. Thus says a text:—

परज्ञानमयाऽसङ्गिर्नामज्ञात्वादिभिर्षिभुः। न योगवान् न युक्तोऽभृन् नैव पार्थिव योस्यति ॥

"The all-pervading Lord is possessed of supreme knowledge, &c., is ever untainted with the name and species of the qualities of matter: He is never touched by them, or was touched by them, or will ever be touched by them, O king."

The knowledge of the Supreme is thus different from human knowledge.

If Brahman, the substratum of all attributes, is distinct from the whole universe consisting of sentient and insentient objects, then how do you explain the following teaching of the Chhandogya Up III. 14. 1, which declares the whole world to be Brahman:—

सर्वे कविवदं ज्ञा, तज्जलामिति शान्त उपासीत ।

"All this is verily Brahman. It is produced from Him, lives in Him and merges in Him. Let one meditate calmly on Him thus."

The next sûtra answers this doubt.

80TRA III. 2. 84.

बुध्यर्थः पादवत् । ३ । २ । ३४ ॥

इप्पर्धः Buddhyarthah, to aid the understanding प्रावस Padavat, as in the case of the word " Foot,"

34. This teaching is in order to aid the understanding, just like the word "Foot" (in the Rig Veda, X. 90. 3., where the world is spoken of as the foot of Brahman)—353

COMMENTARY.

The whole world is said to be Brahman in order to help the understanding in realising Him, by cognising that every thing is His and is dependent upon Him. As in the Rig Veda, X. 90. 3, the whole universe is said to be one foot of Brahman while His three other feet are in Heaven. That metaphor is also meant to help the understanding to realise Brahman. When the mind realises that every thing belongs to Brahman, sarvam khalvidam Brahman, and Brahman is in every thing, then its hatred ceases, for then it can hate no one; and when all hatreds and prejudices, national, racial or otherwise, cease, then the mind becomes fit to be inclined towards the Lord. The texts like these do not teach that one should feel attraction for every thing, for then that also would be a distraction of understanding. The sole object of all these texts is to teach that one should hate no one, nor love any one more than God.

Adhikarana XVI -- Brahman is not monotonous.

Says an objector: — Admitted that Brahman has infinite bliss, etc., yet it cannot be an object of devout love, because there is dull monotony in it. The mind seeks variety in its object of love.

The author, therefore, now shows that there is such variety of manifestation also in the object of adoration, the blessed Lord Hari. This variety is necessary in order to meet the wants of the various emotional temperaments, and the various moods of one and the same bhakta. For if the Lord had not this variety, there would not have existed these various sorts of bhaktis. These various manifestations of the Lord are each eternal, because the place, etc., where these manifestations (bhâna) are to be found, are also beginningless. The texts like "though one, He shines forth as many," show that though there are varieties of manifestation of the Lord, yet in all those places, etc., where such manifestations are taking place the Lord is one. It is one Brahman that shines forth in all these places.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, does there occur any decrease or increase—any distinctions—in these manifestations, owing to their being various? Are some manifestations full and complete, and others less full and partial?

(Parrapaksa.)—All manifestations are equally full and perfect, for the substance manifesting is one, and so all its manifestations must be similar, for all words which are synonyms give rise to the same conception. So there is no difference in these manifestations.

(Siddhanta.)-The manifestations are different, as is shown in the next sutra.

SÛTRA III. 2. 35.

स्थानविशेषात् प्रकाशादिवत् । ३ । २ । ३५ ॥

स्थानविशेषात् Sthana-visesat, from the peculiarity of the place, बकागादिकत् Prakasadivat, as in the case of (the sun's) light, etc.

35. There is difference in the manifestations of Brahman, on account of the peculiarity of place, etc., where He manifests, as in the case of the light of the sun—354.

COMMENTARY.

Though the essential form of Brahman is indeed one, yet owing to the differences of the places of manifestation, and the differences of the natures of the souls (bhaktas, devotees), there arise differences in the manifestations of Brahman. In some He manifests His Lordliness, in others His Loveliness, in others His Peacefulness, etc., according as the bhakti relation is that of a master and servant the lover and the beloved, the quiet meditating yogi and the object of meditation, etc. Thus as the one light of a lamp burning in a temple assumes different manifestations, as it falls on the different parts of it, according as it is a crystalline surface, or a wall embedded with rubies, or painted yellow, etc. Or as one air, passing through various musical instruments, produces different notes, sharp, high, flat, etc., as the instrument is a conch shell, lute, drum, etc.: so the one Brahman manifests as many-hued, according to the difference of the receptacle.

The sense is this. Where there is the manifestation of the Supreme Lordliness of Brahman, there the blakti is moved and guided by Law. [All staid and sober blaktas love the Lord, as the slave loves the master: Their God is a God of Power and Glory.] It is like the light of a lamp burning in a temple made of pure white crystal—where the reflected light is pure in its brilliancy and is dazzling in its effect. But where in addition to Lordliness, there is manifestation of the Loveliness of Brahman also, there the blakti is moved not by the fear of the law, but by the force of love. There the light is less dazzling but more sweet—it is the light burning in a temple made of rosy rubies.

Thus bhakti is different according to the emotional nature of the bhaktas, i.e., the worshippers of the Lord.

8ÛTRA III. 2. 86.

उपपत्तेश्च । ३ । २ । ३६ ॥

इपपुत्ते: Upapatteh, because of the possibility: of the reasonableness. प

36. And so the text of the Chhândogya Up. (III. 14. 1.) becomes appropriate—355.

COMMENTARY.

According to this explanation, the text of the Chhândogya Up., III. 14. 1., also becomes reasonable. It says "as is one's faith (kratu), so is his reward" which means that according to the nature of one's blakti, is the vision of the Lord in the next life.

Thus it is established that one Brahman has different manifestations, according to the differences of the receptacles in which He shines forth.

Adhikarana XVII—The Lord is the Highest.

The author now establishes that the Lord is the Highest. For if there exists any other Being higher than the Lord, then there cannot arise bhakti for such a Lord.

(Vişaya.)—In the Svetasvatara Upanisad we read (III. 8):— वेदाहमेतं पूर्व महान्तम्

" I know that Great Person."

This and the subsequent verses describe the Brahman as the Highest. But then it says in III. 10. तता यदु चरतर तद्वरं, etc. "that which is beyond that (Brahman) is without form, etc. This shows that there is something beyond Brahman and therefore higher than Brahman.

(Pitruspakea.)—There is something higher than Brahman, as the above text shows.

(Siddhanta.)--The following sutra refutes this.

SÛTRA III. 2. 87.

तथाऽन्यप्रतिषेधात् । ३ । २ । ३७ ॥

तथा Tathá, similarly, so Brahman is the highest. क्रम्य Anya, of the other, of the higher. श्रतियेशाह Pratisedhát, owing to the denial or prohibition (to look upon).

37. Thus Brahman alone is the Highest, because there is denial of any other higher being-356.

COMMENTARY.

Thus Brahman is the Highest of all, because the Scriptures deny the existence of any other higher entity. In the same Svetasvatara Upanişad we find (111. 9.):—

यसात् परं नापरमस्ति किञ्चिव् यसान् नाबीया न ज्यायास्ति किञ्चित्।

"To whom there is nothing superior, from whom there is nothing different, than whom there is nothing smaller or larger."

Thus this very Upanisad refutes the idea of any higher being than Brahman. The full text of the Svetasvatara is not open to the interpretation put upon it by the Pûrvapakşin. The whole verse is given below:—

वेदाहमेतं पुरुषं महान्तं, चादित्यवर्षं तमसः परस्तात् । तमेव विदित्वाऽतिमृत्युमेति, नान्यः पन्या विचतेऽयनाय ॥

"I know that Great Person of sun-like lustre beyond the darkness. A man who knows Him truly, passes over death; there is no other path to go."

This teaches that the knowing of this Great Person is the only path to liberation, there is no other path than such knowledge. Having taught this the Sruti goes on to strengthen this position by saying (III. 9):—

"This whole universe is filled by this Person, to whom there is nothing superior, from whom there is nothing different, than whom there is nothing smaller or larger, who stands alone, fixed like a tree in the sky."

This verse also shows that the Brahman is the Highest, and that it is impossible for any other being to be equal to or higher than Him.

Then comes the tenth verse (which has been distorted by the Pûrvapakşin, as teaching that there is something higher than Brahman). To show that the interpretation of the opposite party is wrong, the whole of the verse is given below:—

तता यदुत्तरतरं तद्दपं चनामयं, यत्र तद्विदुरम्तास्ते भवन्त्वयेतरे दुःचमेवापि यन्ति ।

"That which is beyond this (world), that is without form and without suffering. They who know Him, become immortal, but others suffer pain indeed."

"That which is beyond this"—does not mean "that which is beyond this Brahman," but "beyond this world." In fact, this verse also teaches the same as the preceding verse—namely, that there is nothing higher than Brahman. The word "tataḥ"—'than this' should not be taken as applying to Brahman. The whole context is against such interpretation. If the interpretation of the Púrvapakṣin be taken as correct, then the statements in the preceding verses 8 and 9 would become false, for they say that there is nothing higher than Brahman. Even the Lord Himself has declared in the Gita (VII. 7.):—

मत्तः परतरं नाम्यत्किष्टिसदित घनष्ट्रय । मयि सर्वमिदं प्रीतं सुत्रे मक्षिगका इव ॥

"There is naught whatsoever higher than I, O Dhananjaya. All this is threaded on Me, as rows of pearls on a string."

Thus there is nothing higher than the Lord.

Adhikarana XVIII--The Lord is All-pervading.

Now in order to show that the object of adoration is always near, the author teaches the all-pervadingness of the Lord. For if the Lord were not ever near, there would be discouragement in the heart, and so there would arise looseness of love. (If the Lord were at a great distance, how could the worshipper reach Him and how could be feel any love for such an absent far-off deity?)

(Vişaya.)—The Srutis declare (Gopâla Pûrva Tâpanî):— पको बशी सर्वगः इन्य ईटाः, पक्राऽपि सन् बहुवा वा विमाति। "Kṛiṣṇa, the adorable, is one, the controller of all, and all-pervading. Though one, Re shines forth as many."

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, is this Hari the object of meditation, something limited, or all-pervading?

(Phroapuksa.)—The Lord is limited. In experience He appears to have a middle size (neither atomic nor all-pervading). Moreover in worshipping Him, He is looked upon as different from all the world and its modifications. Therefore the world is excluded from Brahman—and thus it limits Brahman; for Brahman is not where the world is. Thus for both these reasons, the Lord is a limited entity and is not all-pervading.

8ÛTRA III. 2. 38.

श्रनेन सर्वगतत्वमायामशब्दादिभ्यः । ३ । २ । ३८ ॥

श्चनेत्र Anena, from him, by the Supreme Person. श्वरंगतासम् Sarvagatatvam, being present everywhere. श्वामान Ayama, about eccupying all space, or about extent, शब्दाविश्व: Sabdadibhyah, from scriptural statements, &c.

38. (Even in the Middle Form), there is the all-pervadingness of this Supreme Person, because of the scriptural statements, like occupying all space, &c.—357.

COMMENTARY.

The Supreme Person, even in His Middle Form, is endowed with the quality of all-pervadingness. Not only the atomic and the infinite forms are all-pervading, but this Middle Form—the form worshipped by men, is also all-pervading. Why do we say so? Because the word ayams or occupying all space is used about this Middle Form also. The word "adi," "and the like," in the sutra shows that the Lord possesses also inconceivable powers, &c. by which even in His Middle Form He is all-pervading. Thus the text of the Gopals Purva Tapant quoted above (sarvagah Krisnah) shows that the Middle Form Krisna is all-pervading also. Similarly, the following text of the Taittirlya Aranyaka corroborates the same view:—

यच किञ्चिज् जगत् सर्वे दृश्यते भ्रयतेअप वा। चन्तर्वेद्विस तत् सर्वे चाप्य नारायवः सितः ॥

"Narayana exists pervading all—inside and outside—all whateoever that is seen or heard in this world."

This also shows the all-pervadingness of the Middle Form, the form Narayana. This all-pervadingness of the Middle Form is through the inconceivable mysterious power of the Lord. He Himself says in the Gitá (IX. 4 and 5):—

मया ततमिदं सर्वे जगदव्यसमृतिना । मस्त्रानि सर्वेभूतानि न चार्वं तेष्वदस्तितः ॥

"By Me all this world is pervaded in My unmanifested aspect; all beings have root in Me. I am not rooted in them."

न च मत्त्वानि भूतानि पद्दय मे योगर्वैश्वरम् । भूतभूच च भूतत्वो ममात्मा भृतभावनः ॥

"Nor have beings root in Me; behold My sovereign Yoga! The support of beings, yet not rooted in beings, My Self their efficient cause."

Nor does the Lord become limited by the existence of other worldly objects. The Lord is not excluded from the space occupied by such objects. For the above text says "He is inside and outside every thing." Therefore, another illustration speaks of Him "as the butter in the curd, as the oil in the sesamum seed." Therefore it is proved that Hari is a worthy object of worship, as He is all-pervading. This is further demonstrated in the narrative of Srt Krisna in the Tenth Skandha, where He is bound by a cord, which gave Him the name of Dâmodar. In the Bhâgavata (Tenth Skandha) it is thus said by Sûka:—

" न बान्तर्न बहिर्यस्य न पूर्व नापि बापरम् । पूर्वापरं बहिरवान्तर्, जगता या, जगब यः ॥ तं मत्वात्तजमन्यकं मत्यिक्कमवेशस्त्रम् । गापिकोत्त्वको दासा वक्तम्य मास्तं यथा ॥

"He who has neither inside nor outside, neither front nor back, but who is both inside and outside of the world, in its front and in its back, you who is the world itself—Him considering as her son, as a mortal child, Him the unchangeable and Immutable, the cowherdess bound by a cord, as if He was an ordinary infant."

The reason of this has been given by us before under the sûtra

Adhikarana XIX.—The Lord is the Giver of all fruits.

The author now describes that the Lord is the giver of all fruits. Otherwise, if He did not give rewards of actions, or gave inadequate rewards, He would be considered as a niggardly person and no bhakti would flow towards Him.

(Vieaya.)—In the Prasna Up., III. 7, we read:—

पुज्येच पुज्यं क्षेत्रं नयति ।

"He leads them to the world of the virtuous who have done virtuous deeds."

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt, are the rewards such as Heaven, &c., the effect of sacrifices alone, or are they given by the Supreme Lord?

(Parcapakes.)—They are results of sacrifices, &c. He who does good acts gets heaven, he who does not do good acts does not get heaven. There is no scope for the Lord here.

(Siddhanta.)—The following sûtra refutes this.

SÛTRA III. 2, 29.

फलमत उपपत्तेः। ३। २। ३६॥

प्रसन् Phalam, the fruit. श्वतः Atah, from Him only. अपूर्णः Upapatteh, because it is possible.

39. The fruit is given by Him only, for that is the more reasonable view to hold—358.

COMMENTARY.

Heaven, &c., which are the fruits of sacrifices, &c., are awarded by the Supreme Lord alone, because it is more reasonable to believe that an eternal, omniscient, ommipotent, all-compassionate Being awards such rewards, than that any inert entity like sacrifice, &c., which is transient, gives such reward. The Lord, pleased by the performance of sacrifices, &c., by men gives the reward in proper time, though after a certain lapse of it. But sacrifices themselves are non-intelligent forces, they cease to exist as soon as performed, it is not possible for them to award their fruits. The acts by themselves are non-efficient. It is the moral Ruler who awards rewards and punishments—not arbitrarily, but according to one's deeds.

The author now gives a proof of this in the next sûtra.

SÚTRA III. 2. 40.

श्रुतत्वाच । ३ । २ । ४० ॥

अनुस्ताम् Brutatvat, because of the declaration of the Bruti. Tha, also,

40. Because the Sruti also declares that Brahman awards all rewards of action—359.

COMMENTARY.

In the Br. Up., III. 9. 28, we read:—

विद्यानमानन्द नद्धा रातिर्दातः परायबं, तिष्टमानस्य तिह्वतः।

"Brahman who is knowledge and bliss, is the principle, both to him who gives gifts and also to him who stands firm and knows."

So also in Br. Up. 1V. 4. 24, :--

स वा पव महानज बात्मा सजादे। बहुदाना, बिंदते बहु य पर्व बेद ।

"This indeed is the great, the unborn Self, the strong, the giver of wealth. He who knows this obtains wealth."

Thus these texts of the Brihadaranyaka Upanisad show that the reward is given by the Lord.

The "giver of gifts" in the above passage, means the yajaman, the sacrificer. The word ratin in the above means the fruit-producing.

The author now states a different opinion as held by some.

SÛTRA III. 2. 41.

धर्मं जैमिनिरतएव । ३ । २ । ४१ ॥

धर्मम् Dharmam, Dharma, the performance of the duty (as the reward-giver) जैमिनि: Jaiminib, Jaimini (holds). श्राम: व्य Ataheva, from Him only.

41. According to Jaimini, Dharma (which directly gives the rewards of actions), arises from Him (the Lord)—360.

COMMENTARY.

Jaimini holds that Dharma alone comes from Him, the Supreme Lord, and not the fruit. The very Karma (which directly gives the fruit) comes from the Lord. For says a Sruti (Kauş. Up. 111. 8.):—

एव हा वैन साधु कर्म कारयति तं यं एभ्या लोकभ्य उचिनीवते।

"He makes him do good works whom He wishes to take to higher worlds."

According to Jaimini, it is not necessary to hold that the fruit of work is directly given by the Lord. For Karma alone has the power of producing such fruit, by the rule of agreement and difference. Where there is good Karma, there is good fruit. Where there is not good Karma, there is no such fruit. It is, therefore, useless to suppose that the Lord awards fruit. The activity of the Lord ceases by producing the present per Karma.

But, says an objector, Karmas are transitory, they are not capable of producting an effect at a distance of time. Nor is it possible that something existent should come out of a non-entity.

To this we reply. It is not so. For though a Karma ceases to exist as soon as done, it leaves behind a force called apûrva. The Karma ceases to exist only after producing this apûrva. This apûrva gives the reward to the doer of an act even after a lapse of time, the fruit being appropriate to the Karma. This is the opinion of Jaimini.

The author gives his own opinion in the next satra.

SÙTRA III. 2. 42.

पूर्वं तु बादरायणो हेतुव्यपदेशात् । ३ । २ । ४२ ॥

पूर्वज् Pûrvam, what is aforesaid, i.e., the Lord is the bestower of rewards, हु Tu, but. बाब्रावज्ञ: Bâdarâyaṇaḥ, Bâdarâyaṇa (holds.) हेतु Hetu, of the cause, ब्रब्युद्द्याङ् Vyapadeśât, on account of designation.

42. But Bâdarâyana holds that the aforesaid Brahman is the bestower of rewards, because the reason for it is shown in the scripture—361.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'but' removes the doubt raised in the preceding sûtra. The holy Bâdarâyaṇa holds that the aforementioned Supreme Lord is the immediate giver of rewards. Why does he hold this view? Because the scripture gives the reason for this. The Prasna Up. says, (III. 2.), "Re leads him to the region of the best who does good deeds. He leads him to the region of the sinners who commits evil deeds." This Sruti clearly shows that the bestowing of rewards is the direct act of the Lord and not through the mediation of Dharma. Since Karmas cease to exist as soon as done, they exhaust their force and cannot be instruments in producing any result. Moreover, the very existence of Karma is dependent upon Brahman. For the texts say that Matter, Time, Karma, etc., are dependent upon Brahman. Thus it is proved that Brahman alone sets persons to do good or bad deeds, He is the causative agent in every Karma.

As to the reasoning that Karma, though ceasing to exist, leaves an apûrva behind, and that such apûrva produces rewards, that is a lame reasoning. The apûrva or adrista is as much an insentient object as a clod of earth or a piece of wood, and it has no power to produce any effect. Nor do the scriptures mention any such thing as apûrva.

But, says an objector, the sacrifices go to propitiate devas, and these devas, being so propitiated, give the desired reward. The Supreme need not be dragged in to give the reward of sacrifices, which are done by inferior agents.

To this we reply. It is under the sanction of the Supreme Deva that these inferior devas give rewards of action. This has been proved in the Antaryamin Brahmana where the Supreme Lord is declared to be the Inner Ruler of all devas. Therefore, the Lord is the bestower of rewards. The blessed Sri Krisna himself has said so in the Gita (VII. 21-22):--

ये। यो यो तनुं भक्तः भद्धयाऽर्चितुमिच्छति । तस्य तस्याचलां भद्धां तामेव विद्धाम्यहम् ॥ २१ ॥

"Any devotee who seeketh to worship with faith any such aspect, I verily bestow the unswerving faith of that man."

स तथा भद्धया युक्तस्तस्याराधनमीहते । स्रमते च ततः कामान्मयेष विहितान्ति तान् ॥ २२ ॥

"He, endowed with that faith, seeketh the worship of such a one, and from him he obtaineth his desires, I verily decreeing the benefits."

It is, therefore, said that the Lord, propitiated by sacrifices, &c., gives the reward (either as a temporal bliss or liberation). Nor is there any limit to the generosity of the Lord. Propitiated with devotion, He may give Himself even to his devotee, as will be taught later on in III. 4. 1.

Thus in these two Padas (III. 1 and 2) have been shown the means of attaining Brahman which consist in a deep yearning (literally, thirst) to reach Brahman, and equally strong disgust for anything other than Him: and which mental attitude is acquired by contemplating over the multifarious attributes of the Supreme Self, such as His having the form of Pure Intelligence, His being the Controller of the whole Universe and by realising that he is free from all faults, while this world is full of all faults, in the shape of birth, pain and death.

THIRD ADHYÂYA.

THIRD PADA.

परया निरस्य मायां गुक्कमांदीनि या भजति निर्यम् । देवक्ष्वैतन्य तत्रमंनसि ममासा परिस्फुरत् कृष्यः ॥

"He who, overcoming Maya by His Para Sakti, ever devotes His attributes and deeds (to the good of his creation) may that God Krisna, whose body is Pure Intelligence, shine forth in my mind."

Note.—The verse may be applied to Sri Chaitanya also whose body Krisna took for the manifestation of his deeds and qualities.

In this Pada is treated the methods of meditating on the various attributes of the Lord. The fact here is this. In the Own Form of the Supreme Self, the Highest Person, there exist always manifest many eternally perfect forms, all mysterious and wonderful, as there exist in the crystalline gem many hues and colors. Understanding that the Lord is fulness and perfection, without being limited by these forms and yet fully mainfest through every one of these, the man selects any one of these, suitable to his taste, a special object of his worship and meditation. Every form of the Lord has a certain number of qualities specific to it. The form has other qualities. The man must meditate on the specific form chosen by him, with the attributes taught about that particular form: but all the same the attributes taught about the other forms. and not taught about his chosen form, should also be meditated upon as existing in his special object of worship. Thus he who meditates on Brahman as mind (as is taught in the Taitt. Up., Bhrigu valli) must collate all the attributes of the mind not only from his own particular Vedic sakha, but from other sakhas also where meditation on Brahman in the form of mind is taught. Of course, in meditating on Brahman as mind. he must not bring together attributes not belonging to mind (such as. those of food, though Brahman is taught to be meditated upon as food also). In fact, only those attributes are to be supplied from other sakhas. which are taught about the particular object of meditation, and not any attributes in general.

Others, however, say thus. One Supreme Brahman manifests as Ráma or Krisna, etc., like an actor, appearing at different times and places, under different characters, and shows forth different qualities and performs various acts, appropriate to the occasion; therefore all attributes taught regarding one manifestation may, without incongruity, be meditated upon with regard to another manifestation. There is nothing impossible or unharmonious in this: because the entity manifesting is one though he shows forth his different aspects.

If it be objected that some attributes and forms are so self-contradictory that they cannot be the object of simultaneous meditation; thus sweetness and luxuriousness are incompatible in the meditation on Rama, while they are perfectly harmonious attributes in Krisna: while peacefulness and austerity are good attributes to meditate in Nara-Narayana, but hardly in others: so also ferocity, power and lordliness go in very well with the meditation on Man-Lion, but not with others: meditation on all these attributes (i.e., sweetness, lordliness, luxuriousness, peacefulness, a ustereness, ferocity, etc.) simultaneously, is evidently incongruous. So also there are certain forms which are incongruous.

Thus meditating on the Avatâras of Fish or Boar as playing on lute, or carrying conch, discus, bow and arrow: or meditating on an Avâtara in human form, such as Râma and Kriṣṇa, as having horns, tail, mane, tusk, etc., would be an incongruous form-meditation. Of such meditations, it is said in the Mahâbhârata:—

याञ्चयासम्तमात्मानमन्यया प्रतिपद्यते । किंतेन न कतं पापं चीरेबात्मापहारिका ॥

"He who meditates on the Atman as different from its true form, has committed the greatest sin, for he is a thief who steals the self."

Therefore, both on the basis of reason and of authority, such incongruous meditation should not be done.

To this, it is answered that by collation of qualities is meant the collation of those qualities only which are suitable for a simultaneous meditation and not of incongruous qualities.

Now, meditating on attributes not taught in connection with a particular upasana but taught with regard to another, may be of two sorts: either meditating on the essence of those attributes, or merely forming a mental idea of them. The first kind belongs to the class of devotees called Svanistha. The last belongs to those called Ekantins. It will be taught in the next Pada, that there are three sorts of worshippers, Svanistha, Parinisthita, and Nirapeksa. Among these three kinds, the Svanisthas (who are generally office-bearers in the Cosmic hierarchy, holding posts like those of the Four-faced Brahma, etc.), are universalists—they have equal love for all forms; and meditate on all forms of the Lord and always collate all the attributes of the Lord found in every form, in their meditation. There is no incongruity in meditating in one form with attributes belonging to all diverse contrary forms. For it is possible to realise all these contradictory attributes in one form, in a succession of time, as it is possible to see different hues in the prism at different times. The other two kinds of devotees—the Parinisthita and Nirapekeas are, however, less liberal—(they may be called sectarians, jealous to maintain the dignity of their particular God). Their love is not universal, but limited—not Sama-priti, but Visama-priti. They meditate only on those attributes which their particular Form of the Adorable manifests, and they see only those attributes and are blind to others. Though they know that the Lord has other forms and other attributes also, but they, being exclusionists, do not meditate over those attributes nor look at those Forms: for they are of no use to them, nor those forms and attributes become inanifest to them. This will be made clearer in a subsequent adhikarana. As regards the verse from the Mahabharata, it denounces those hard-hearted advaitins who think the Lord to be mere knowledge without bliss and other attributes. (They deny bliss to Brahman, and hold that joy is an attribute of matter and not of spirit).

But they forget that the whole purport of the scriptures is to teach that Brahman is full of all auspicious qualities, and is not Nirguna; and that by knewing this Saguna Brahman, a man becomes free from all fears; and that the scriptures teach that this Saguna Brahman should be searched after by the seeker of liberation. In the Dahara Vidya (Chhandogya Up. VIII. 1. 1-6) the Lord is taught to possess all auspicious qualities, and it is said: "That which is within this lotus, He is to be sought for, He is to be understood." Similarly, in the Taitt. Up., II. 4. 1, it is declared that knowing Brahman as bliss a man does not fear anything.

The advaitins hold that these gunas do not really belong to Brahman but are attributed to It as a convention or as a superimposition. But this is a mere fancy of theirs. There can be no superimposition—for it occurs there where a quality really exists in one thing, and is wrongly imagined to exist in another, as the red color of the lotus is superimposed on the white crystal. But these gunas (e.g., omnipotence, omniscience, bliss, &c.) are not found in anybody else; and so they could not be an object of superimposition in Brahman, when they are non-existent outside of Brahman. Nor can these gunas be said to be merely conventional: for there is no statement to that effect in the scriptures. They are real concrete attributes of Brahman, and are not to be taken in a metaphorical or allegorical sense.

But, says the objector, the scriptures do use metaphorical language: as in the Br. Up., V. 8-1, und language "Let him meditate on speech as cow." But, because in one passage the scriptures make a metaphorical statement, to hold that all statements about Brahman are mataphorical, is a sign of weakness of intellect. For, if this were so, then the statement "Let him meditate on Atman" would also become metaphorical; and meditation of every kind will come to an end. Even the Advaitins admit that some meditations, at least, are not taught metaphorically in the scriptures, but aret rue literally. Thus in explaining the sûtras, III. 3. 12. and III. 3. 38, even the Advaitins hold that meditation on Brahman as bliss is actually taught; Brahman is not to be imagined as bliss, for the purposes of meditation, as the speech is imagined as cow. But Brahman is bliss. Similarly, in explaining III, 3, 38, they say that the Jiva and the Lord must be meditated upon as identical—not imagined as identical, but that they are identical. Thus according to the Advaitins also, the scriptures do teach in some places, meditation on real attributes and not on fictitious qualities. Why should not then the scriptures be construed consistently throughout? Why should some attributes be taken as real gunas of Brahman, and the others as fictitious superimpositions?

But, says the Advaitin, the scriptures describe Brahman as nirguna: and, therefore, we say that all the so-called gunas of Brahman are really crutches for meditation, and do not properly belong to Brahman, who is nirguna. To this we reply, that all such nirguna passages are to be construed as teaching that Brahman has not the gunas of Prakriti (Sattva, Rajas and Tamas)—but He possesses transcendental non-Prakritic gunas In the view that the qualities are not separate from the qualified, every thing is reconciled.

The gunas to be meditated upon are of two sorts—the gunas constituting the spiritual essence of the object of meditation, and the gunas appertaining to the form of such object. The gunas like omnipotence, omniscience, &c., belong to the first kind; the gunas like smiling face, &c., are of the second kind. The gunas of the first kind may all be collated together in a single meditation. In fact, the full conception of the Lord is possible only in this way, by bringing together all His attributes, scattered in different passages of the scriptures.

Adhikaruna I-The Lord is the Quest.

(Visuya.)—Now in order to establish that all gunas may be comprised in a single act of meditation, the author first proves that the Lord is the object of search in all the Vedas; and that all the Vedas declare Him. All texts about meditation may be considered as visaya texts in this connection.

(Doubt.)—Is Brahman to be known according to the modes of meditation taught by one's own £âkhâ, or according to the modes taught in other £âkhâs also?

(Parvapates.)—The sakhas being different, and their teachings being different, Brahman must be realised according to the practices taught in one's own sakha. The omission should not be supplied from other sakhas.

(Siddhânta.)—This view is refuted in the following sûtra:—
SÛTRA III. 8. 1.

सर्ववेदान्तप्रत्ययं चोदनाचिदरोषात् । ३ । ३ । १ ॥

सर्व Sarva, all. वेष Veda, the Vedas. स्वल Anta, the settled conclusion, the truth. इत्यक् Pratyayam, the knowledge, the object or meaning, realisation. विद्यादि Chodanadi, of the injunction and others. By 'others' is meant reasoning, व्यक्तियास् Avidesat, on account of the non-speciality, or non-difference, similarity.

1. Brahman is the object of knowledge taught in the truths of all the Vedas, because the injunctions (and reasonings, &c.) are all similar—362.

COMMENTARY

The word 'anta' in the sûtra means firmly established conclusion: and it is used in this sense in the Gith also (II.16):—

डभयारपि हरोज्यस्यनयास्तरबहर्शिभः।

"The truth about both hath been percieved by the seers of the essence of things."

The truth which all the Vedas seek to teach mankind is the knowledge about Brahman. Why do we say so? Because all the Vedic injunctions and the like, have this in common that they all are directed towards this end. The words "and the like" mean reasoning. Thus the injunction of the Vedas says (Brihadaranyaka Up., I. 4. 7): archivella. "Let men worship Him as Atman." The injunctions like the above, with similar reasonings, prove that the Atman or the Supreme Self is the object of worship enjoined in the Vedas. As the above injunction is found in the Madhyamdina rescension of the Brihadaranyaka, so is it found in the Kanva rescension also. All sakhas are agreed in enjoining the worship of Brahman.

Says an objector:—In some places Brahman is described as knowledge and bliss (विद्यानमानम्बं क्या, Br. Up., III. 9. 28), in other places he is called omniscient and all-understanding ( यः सर्वेशः सर्वेशित् Mund., I. 1. 9.) Thus every sakha gives a different description and so the object described must be different in each. Therefore, Brahman is not the common object described in all the sakhas.

This objection is raised and answered in the next sûtra:—
sûtra III. 2. 2.

भेक्सक्रेतिचेक्नेकस्यामपि । ३ । ३ । २ ॥

भवास Bhedât, owing to the difference (in the statements about Brahman in the different śākhâs). ज Na, not. शृति Iti, as, so. अन् Chet, if. क्यारबाव् Ekasyâm, in the one and the same (śākhâ). जानि Api, also, even.

2. If it be objected that the descriptions being different, one Brahman is not enjoined by all sakhas, we reply it is not so. Because in the one and the same sakha, the other attributes of Brahman are also mentioned—363.

COMMENTARY.

The objection is not valid. The same sakha, which mentions that Brahman is knowledge and bliss, describes him also as omniscient and all-understanding. Thus in the Taitt. Up., Brahman is described not only as True, knowledge, and infinity, but He is described as bliss also. In fact, all these words employed in different sakhaa, convey the idea of one Brahman and His various attributes. Thus there is no conflict even between these various sakhas.

SÛTRA III. 3. 3.

स्वाध्यायस्य तथात्वेन हि समाचारेधिकाराच । ३ । ३ । ३ ॥

स्वाच्यावस्य Svådhyåyasya, of the study of the scriptures, i.e., the Vedas, तपालेन Tathâtvena, on account of being such : being generic in their force. हि Hi, indeed. सनाचार Samachâre, in all ceremonies, in performing all sacred acts, प्रशिकासन् Adhikarât, owing to the eligibility of all to study all and perform all, च Cha and.

3. The injunction about the study of the Vedas being general, (the whole of the Vedas may be studied by all), and because all have the right to perform every ceremony mentioned in the Vedas—364.

COMMENTARY.

In the Taitt. Âranyaka, II. 15, there is the injunction carred sources "The Vedas should be studied." This injunction is in general terms—it does not say "study only a particular sakha, but study all the Vedas." In fact, it enjoins the study as study (tathâtvena) and not as belonging to a particular sakha. Therefore, the entire Veda must be learnt. The Smriti also ordains that the twice-born should study the entire Veda together with its secret doctrine (Manu). Moreover, every one has a right to perform all the various rites laid down in the Vedas—he is not confined to his own sakha, but has the option to perform the ceremonies laid down in other sakhas also, if he has the ability to do so. So also says the Smriti:—

सर्ववेदेशकमार्गेव कर्म कुर्वीत नित्यशः । शानन्दो हि फलं यसाय्कासामेदा शशोकितः ॥ सर्वकर्मकृता यसादसकाः सर्वजन्तवः । शासामेवं कर्ममेवं सासस्त्रसावनीक्रपेत ॥

"The ceremonies may always be performed according to the methods laid down in all the Vedas: because bliss is the fruit of the performance of these rites, under whatever form they may be done. The rule that the ceremonies should be performed according to the method laid down in one's particular sakha is a concession to human weakness, for all have not the power to study the different sakhas. Vyasa, seeing that men were incapable of performing all the ceremonies, divided the Vedas into sakhas, and made obligatory only certain seremonies according to certain sakhas."

Therefore, it is established that Brahman may be realised by all the religious practices taught in all the sakhas of the Vedas, if a man has power to do so. (If he has not such power, let him try to realise Him according to the particular practice laid down in his own sakha.)

The author next gives an illustration of indirect reasoning leading to the same conclusion.

SÛTRA 111, 8, 4,

सववद्य तन्नियमः । ३ । ३ । ४ ॥

स्वयम् Savavat, as in the case of the seven libations or sacrifices. च Cha, and. तव Tat, that. विवान: Niyamah, the injunction, the rule.

4. And that rule is (not) like (the injunction about) the Seven Libations—365.

COMMENTARY.

The Savas are the seven libations (homas) beginning with the Saurya and ending with the Sataudana libation. They are restricted to the Atharvanikas—the keeper of one-fire. The people of other sakhas who keep three fires, are not permitted to perform these Sava libations, since they are connected with those who keep one fire. There being no such restriction with regard to the worship of Brahman, from this indirect reasoning also we learn, that He may be worshipped according to all the methods laid down in any scripture; by those persons who have studied all the Vedas.

Note.—The Sava-rule is restricted to the Atharvanikas, and may not be performed by the followers of the other Vedas. Not so, however, the rule about the Brahman-worship: which is universal, and is not the peculiar heritage of any particular Veda-school.

The proper translation of the sttra requires a "not" in it; for the reasoning is indirect here and is better brought out by such au insertion.

Or the sûtra may be ERECUTE instead of ETALLY 1 If that reading be adopted, then it would mean that as in the absence of any obstacles all water flows down naturally into the sea, so all the texts of the scriptures converge into Brahman and describe Him alone. This rule is dependent upon the power of the individual. If he has mastered all the Vedas, he can worship Him with all the Vedic mantras. In this view, the sûtra should be translated thus:—"And that injunction is but analogous to the case of water."—(Madhva). As is said in the Agni Purâna:—

यथा नदीनां सक्रिछं शक्त्या सागरतां जजेत्। एवं सर्वाचि वाक्यानि पुंशक्त्या अग्र विक्तये ॥

"Just as the waters of the rivers, if unobstructed, go to the sea, so all the words of the Vedas conduce to the knowledge of Brahman, according to the power of the man."

The author next quotes an express text, to prove his position.

SÛTRA III. 3. 5.

दर्शयति च।३।३।४॥

दर्शनाति Darsayati, shows (the scripture). 🔫 Cha, and.

5. And the Scripture shows this directly—366.

In the Katha Up., I. 2-15, we have:-

सर्वे वेदा यत्पदमामनन्ति तपाश्रसि सर्वाचि च यहदन्ति । यदिच्यन्ते। ब्रह्मचर्ये चर्रान्त तत्ते पदश्रसंप्रदेव ब्रदीस्थामित्येतत् ॥ १५ ॥

Whose form and essential nature all the Vedas declare and in order to attain Whom they prescribe austerities, desiring to know Whom the great ones perform Brahmacharys, that Symbol I will briefly tell thee, it is Om.

This text shows that the Blessed Hari is the goal aimed at by all the Vedas. The force of the word 'and' in the sûtra is to imply: 'if the man has the ability.' Therefore, it follows that all men, who have the ability to do so, should worship Brahman with all the methods taught in all the fâkhâs. But those who have no such ability, must worship according to the rules of his own particular śakhâ. Because the Lord is known by oll and each one of these methods.

Though this proposition was established in the sûtra, Tat tu samanvayât (I. 1. 4) also, yet it is re-stated here, in connection with the topic of the collation of all the gunas of Brahman, as appropriate to the occasion. Such repetition is no fault, but helps to strengthen the argument.

Adhikarana II—All the attributes of Brahman may be collated.

The above discussion about the Lord being the goal aimed at by all Vedic teachings, was undertaken as a prelude to the proposition that all the gunas of the Lord scattered in different sakhas should be collated to form a complete conception of Brahman.

Thus in the Gopâla Pûrva Tâpanî Up., the Brahman is described as having the form of a cowherd, blue as Tamâla leaf, dressed in yellow raiment, adorned with the Kaustublin gem, playing on a lute, surrounded by cows, cowherds and cowherdesses, the tutelary deity of Gokula. This is the essential form of Brahman. (See the full extract under sûtra III. 2. 17).

But in the Râma Pûrva Tâpanî, Brahman is described as Râma having Sîtâ on his left, holding a bow in his hand, the killer of Râkṣasas like the Ten-headed Râvaṇa, and the ruler of Ayodhyâ, &c., as follows:—

प्रकृत्या सहितः इयामः पीतवासाखटाघरः । विश्वकः कृष्टकी रक्तमाकी घीरोचनुषरः ॥

"Having Prakriti (Sita) as his companion, of green colour like that of durva, having yellow dress, and matted locks of hair, two arms, adorned with ear-ornaments, and a garland of jewels, wise, and holding a bow in his hand."

Such like is the description of Brahman given in that Upanisad.

While a third description of Brahman is given in the Nrisimha Upanişad, as having a very dreadful face frightening even to the great Deva like Brahma, &c., the Lord in the form of a Man-Lion. In the Mantra sacred to Man-Lion, the word 'terrible' (भीषा) occurs: and the Upanişad asks:—

"Why is he called the Terrible?" and it gives the answer in these words: "Since all the worlds are terrified by looking at this form—all the Devas, and all the creatures run away through fear of him, and he is not afraid of any one, he is called the Terrible. (As says the śruti): From terror of it the wind blows, from terror the Sun rises, from terror of it Agni and Indra, yea Death runs as the fifth."

While another text describes Brahman as Trivikrama—the Dwarf encompassing the universe with his three steps. In the Rig Veda, I. 154. 1, we find:—

विष्यार्तु के बीर्याय प्रवेशवम् यः पार्थिवानि विममे रक्षांसि । या सरकमायद्वर्णरं समसम् विषयकमायसः प्रेमेस्नाय ॥

"I will proclaim the mighty deeds of Vişnu, how he created the earth, the worlds below it, how he fixed fast the vast firmament and the worlds above it (where dwell the Freed ones with Him) and how he encompassed them all with his three glorious strides."

Like the sacrifices which are different, because the Devatas invoked and the offerings made are different, so here also the upasanas must be different, because the qualities are different (and all the above four kinds of meditation cannot refer to one Brahman).

(Doubt.)—Therefore arises the doubt, should the gunas mentioned in one upasana (form of meditation) be comprised in the other upasana or should it not?

(Pûrvapakşa.)—The meditation becomes fruitful by dwelling over the attributes read together in one place. The attributes mentioned in another upasana should not be dwelt upon, and comprised together, because no higher fruit is gained thereby, and because the attributes being contradictory, would create disharmony in meditation.

(Siddhanta.)—The next sûtra refutes this view.

SÙTRA III. 8. 6.

उपसंहारोर्थाभेवाद्विधिशेषवत्समाने च । ३ । ३ । ६ ॥

उपलंदार: Upasamhāraḥ, the combination (of all the qualities). चर्चानेदात् Arthābhedāt, owing to the non-difference in the object, i.e., the object of meditation being Brahman alone in every case. Artha means the characteristics of Brahman. There is no difference in them. विशि Vidhi, of the duties enjoined (by the scriptures), injunctions. श्रेषण प्रेडंड्यथर, as in the case of the remainder, the complementary. स्वाचे Samāne, in the case of a common meditation on the (excellences) befitting (Brahman), being the same, being common to several sakhās. प्र Cha, only.

6. Only in the case of common meditation, the particulars mentioned in each sakha may be combined, since there is no difference in the subject matter, just as in the case of what is complementary to injunctions—367.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'cha' in the sûtra has the force of exclusion. Where the meditation is common, namely, where it is of equal character, having for its sole object the pure Brahman, in that upasana only, all the qualities mentioned in each place should be combined together in one act of meditation. Why so? Because arthabhed at—because there is no difference in the characteristics of Brahman, the subject of meditation. His characteristics are everywhere, non-different, that is to say, identically the same. As an illustration, the sûtra says vidhisesa-vat: just as in the case of what is complementary to injunction. "The case is analogous to that of the things subordinate to some sacrificial performance as, for example, the agnihotra. The agnihotra also is one performance, and therefore its subordinate members, although they may be mentioned in different texts, have to be combined into one whole."—(Dr. Thibaut's Shankara).

In the Rama Uttara Tapani there is a string of mantras about Sri Rama, where all forms are combined. Thus, one of these mantras says:

ची थे। वै श्रीरामबन्दः स भगवान् ये मत्त्यकूर्माध्यवतारा भूर्मृवः स्वस्तस्मै वै नमा नमः ॥ Here the forms of the avatâras of the Fish, the Tortoise, &c., are combined in the meditation of Srt Râma.

Similarly, in the meditation on Śri Kṛiṣṇa, there is the combination of other forms like those of Śri Rāma, &c., in the mantra of the Gopâla Pûrva Tāpani प्राथम वाद्या वा

Similarly, in the Bhagavata Purana, Tenth Skandha, Akrura addresses Sri Krisna as: असकी सुवर्णय रावधान्यकराय च, &c., "Salutation to thee, O best of the race af Raghu (i.e., Rama), the destroyer of Ravana." Here Krisna is identified with Rama. So also in other books there are other identifications.

Note.—This identification is permissible only when the meditation is on pure Brahman—i.e., when the meditation is universal or samina. In such a meditation all qualities of Brahman, scattered over in all the sacred scriptures of all the nations of the world should be combined, because the God, the Arths, the Subject matter, is one, abheda, without any difference. It is only in स्थान द, in the Common Prayer—in the Universal meditation—that this combination should take place. But in the specific or concrete meditation there would be incompatibility in such a combination: and it should be avoided. Thus as in the general agnihotra sacrifice various details mentioned in different sakhās must be combined, but not so in any particular form of agnihotra peculiar to any sakhins.

But, says an objector, the Sruti declares that the âtman alone should be meditated upon—âtmety eva upâsita. (Br. Âr.). The word "alone" shows that one should not meditate on any thing else than the Âtman—the Pure Supreme Self. The combination of meditation on different forms is, therefore, denounced by the Scriptures.

This objection is raised and answered in the next sûtra.

8ÛTRA III. 8. 7.

म्रन्यचात्वं शब्दादितिचेन्नाविशेषात् । ३ । ३ । ७ ॥

चन्यासम् Anyathatvam, the contradictory, the non-combination of gunas. चन्यास् Sabdat, on account of the word of the scriptures. द्वति lti, so. चेत् Chet, if. म Na, not. चनियास Avisesat, for want of special authority to support that view.

7. If it be said that the word of the Scripture teaches just the contrary, we say no: because there is no specific text to that effect—368.

COMMENTARY.

If it be objected that from the words of the Scriptu e, namely, from the text atmetyevopasita, a contrary view is maintained by the dastras, that is to say, there should be no combination of gunas, we reply it is not so. Why? Because there is no specific text saying the following qualities should not be combined. The force of eva (alone) is to point out that non-Atman should not be meditated upon. The Atman alone should be worshipped and not the non-Atman. It does not say that the qualities of the Atman should not be meditated upon. If one says rajaiva drietah—the king alone was seen—it does not mean that the invariable qualities of the king were not seen, such as the royal umbrella, &c. Therefore, it is proved that combination of qualities should take place, in all meditations, according to the ability of the person meditating.

Therefore it is said, in the Supreme Brahman there exist many forms, all eternally perfect; as there exists many hues in the crystal called lapis lazuli. Every one of these special forms is the Perfect Full Brahman. In some He manifests all His attributes, in other of these forms He shows forth only a few. But the knower of truth, should meditate on any one of these forms, by a mental combination of all the guess of the Lord, manifested in other forms, though not manifested in that particular form he is meditating upon.

This combination of all gunas in meditation, is prescribed for the Svanistha devotees of the Lord—who are the worshippers of Brahman in His universal aspect.

(Such a combination would be incompatible to the Ekdntins—the "mono-formists"—if such a word could be coined. These Ekantins who have specialised their meditation, are emotionally incapable of combining different qualities—no more can a devout Roman Catholic meditating on the Christ on the Cross, turn his thoughts on the Lord playing lute and drawing all hearts towards Him.)

Adhikarana III-No combination for Ekântins.

As regards the Ekantins, though they have read many sakhas of the Vedas, (and know intellectually the different gunas of the Lord, as taught in the different sakhas), yet being more deeply versed in the particular Upanisad of their own sakha, they meditate exclusively on those gunas only which have been revealed in their Upanisad, and though they know the gunas taught in other books, they do not meditate on them. The author, therefore, teaches an exception to the general rule of combination mentioned above.

(Viqaya.)--The text to be construed is that of the Gopala Parva Tapani.

(Doubt.)—In the meditation of the Ekantin, should there be combination of the gupss or not. (Parvapaksa.)—There ought to be such combination, because all these qualities are spoken of with respect and veneration: provided that the devotee is capable of it.

(Siddhanta.)—The next satra refutes this view.

SÛTRA III. 2. S.

न वा प्रकरणभेदात्परोवरीयस्त्वादिवत् ।३ ।३ । ८ ॥

- प Na, (the combination is) not (to be done). ज Vå, certainly. प्रवास Prakaraņa, devotion: literally, pra=excellent, karaņa=work. जेवास Bhedāt, according to the difference: according to specialisation. प्रोवरीक्सविवस Parovartyastvādivat, as in the case of the attributes of "Higher than the high and better than the best,"
- 8. There should certainly be no combination of the qualities (in the meditation of the Ekântins), because the bhakti (of the Ekântins) is different (from that of the Svaniştha) as in the case of the attribute of the "Higher than the high" (given to the udgithâ as Âkâśa, is not combined in the meditation on the udgithâ as the Golden Person)—369.

COMMENTARY.

The word va in the sutra means 'certainly.' Those who are exclusively devoted to a particular form-who are Ekantins with regard to that form,-do not combine in their meditation the gunas mentioned with regard to forms other than their own. Thus the exclusive worshippers of the Krisna form, do not combine in their meditation the form sacred to the worshippers of Man-Lion—the flowing mane, the gaping jaw, the terrible teeth, &c. Similarly, the exclusive worshippers of Nri-Simha the (Man-Lion) do not meditate on the lute, the cane, the sweetness, &c., of Sri Kriena, so dear to the hearts of the Krienadevoted. Why is it so? Prakarana-bhedat. Because the devotional temperaments differ. The word prakarana means "the most excellent act-and devotion alone is that excellent act." The devotion of an Ekantin is of a higher kind than that of a Svanistha—it is more deep and absorbing. The author shows this by an illustration. "As in the case of Parovariyas." As the Ekantin worshippers of the Golden Person in the Sun do not combine in the object of their meditation the gunas of Parovariyas, &c., which the worshippers of the Udgitha as Akasa see in their object of meditation. That which is beyond the beyond and is better than the best is called Parovariyas—It is the name of the Udgitha as Akasa. The condition of Parovariyas is parovariyastvam.

Note.—In the First Prapathaka of the Chhandogya Upanisad is taught the meditation on the Udgitha. The word Udgitha is applied there both to the Golden Person and to the Causal Brahman or Akasa. In the Udgitha meditation on the akasa is described the gunas of parovariyas—beyond the beyond and better than the best. But those who meditate on the Udgitha as the Golden Person (and not as the Akasa or the Causal Brahman), do not combine in their meditation the gunas of Beyond-the beyond—and—Better-than-the best peculiarly taught regarding the Causal Brahman. Because the worshippers of the Golden Person are exclusively devoted to the attributes mentioned regarding that Person. The Golden Person or the Person of Joy (for hiranmaya means both Joy and Gold) is thus described in the Chhandogya Up. I, 6, 6 to 7):—

"Now that Being who is seen in the Sun, as full of intense joy, with joy as beard, joy as hair, joy altogether to the very tips of his nails. His two eyes are like fresh red lotus, His name is Ut, for He has risen above (udita) all sins."

The Akisa Udgitha is described in I. 9. 1:-

"Then salavatya asked "what is the goal of Brahma?" "The Akasa" replied Pravahana. For all these beings take their rise from the Akasa, and have their setting in the Akasa. The Akasa is greater than these, the Akasa is their great Refuge. He indeed is the Parovariyas: He the Udgitha, He the Infinite. He who meditates on the Udgitha as the Parovariyas becomes the beloved of the Parovariyas."

Thus the worshippers of the Udgitha as Riranmaya Purusa do not meditate on those qualities which the worshippers of the Udgitha as Âkŝās (the All-luminous) contemplate upon. There is no combination of qualities, though both worship the Udgitha.

But, says an objector, both the Ekântins and the Svanişthas—the exclusivists and the universalists—are called "the worshippers of Brahman"—and since they have got a common name, therefore, the Ekântins also, like the Svanişthas, must meditate on all the attributes of Brahman, wherever they may be found. Just as the meditation on the Gâyatri is universally prescribed for all those who are Brâhmanas and share in having the common designation of Brâhmana.

This objection is raised in the first half of the next sûtra, and answered in the subsequent portion thereof.

Adhikarana IV.

SÙTRA III. 8. 9.

संज्ञातश्चेत्तवुक्तमस्ति तु तविष । ३ । ३ । ६ ॥

सञ्चात: Samjfiatah, from having a common name. चेत् Chet, if, तह Tad, that. इन्हान् Uktam, said. चास्ति Asti, there is (an instance, in the case of two Udgithas). तु Tu, indeed. This removes the doubt. तह Tad, that (namely, difference of treatment, i.e., absence of combination). चारि Api, also,

9. (If it be objected that because both have) a common name, therefore (the Ekântins must also combine the gunas), we reply that the answer to this has already been given (in the preceding sûtra),—and also there is an instance to that effect—370.

COMMENTARY.

The word tw of the sûtra is used in order to remove the doubt raised above. If it be said that since the Ekantins and the Svanisthas have both got a common name of "Brahma-upâsakas," therefore the Ekantins must also combine all the gunas like the Svanisthas; to this we reply that the last sûtra covers this case also. The term Brahma-upāsaka is a general name, while "Ekantin" is a particular name, and he is a higher form of devotee than the Svanistha, and so all the rules of Svanistha cannot apply to the Ekantin, though he is also a Brahma-upasaka. Therefore, the Ekantins should not meditate on all the gunas, for thereby they will lose their peculiar excellence which differentiates them from the Svanistha. soul of the Ekantin is imbued through and through with the love of one particular form, and is deeply drawn to one Form, and therefore he (the Ekantin) is superior to the Swanistha, who has a general love for all forms (and deep love for none). Moreover, even the Swanistha is not capable of meditating on all the attributes of the Lord. For the Sruti (Rig. Veda, I. 154.7) says "विच्यात के वीयांचि प्रवासन " " Who can fully describe all the mighty deeds of Visnu." To the same effect is the following Smriti:-

नान्तं गुवानामगुबस्य जन्मुर्थोगेश्वरा ये भवपात्रमुक्याः।

"The Great Lords of Yoga, like Siva, Brahma and the rest, did not reach (in their conception) the end of the qualities of that Lord without qualities."

Though two things may have a common name, yet they need not have all properties in common. "An instance of this is found in the the scriptures." For both the Akasa worship and the Hiranmaya Purusa worship have this in common that both are worships of the Udgitha. They have a common samjña or name—udgitha-upasana. Yet in the meditation on the Hiranmaya Purusa, the quality of the Akasa (namely, the quality of Parovariyas—Higher than the High) is not combined. This is a scriptural instance.

Therefore, the conclusion is, let the Svanisthas meditate by combining all the attributes of Brahman; but let the Ekantins worship Him with the specific attributes consonant with the form worshipped. This is the summary of the last two Adhikaranas.

Adhikarana IV.(?)

In the previous section it has been said that the attribute of parovarlyas "Higher than the high," applied to the Udgitha contemplated as Âkâ a should not be meditated upon in the Udgitha taken in the aspect of the Golden Person. On the same analogy, the Pârvapakşin now says that in meditating on Hari as a youth, the qualities manifested by Him in Ris infancy should not be meditated upon, as that also breaks the harmonious flow of sentiment.

Now the author begins another topic and shows that the gunas of the Lord manifested as an Infant should be combined in the meditation on the Lord as a youth. In the same Upanisad (Gopála Pûrva Tapant) it is said:—

इप्लय देवकीनन्दनाय भे तत् सत् भृतु वः स्वस् तस्मै वे नमा नमः।

The word Krisna is exclusively applied to the Infant Krisna sucking at the breast of Devaki (Yasoda). This is according to the author of the Nama Kaumudi. The above mantra is, therefore, useful for meditation on the Infant Lord.

Similarly in the Rama Pûrva Tapant, we read :-

भी किमयेऽसिन् महाविष्या जाते दाशरये हरी। रभाःकुमेऽसिसं राति राजते या महीसितः। तथा रामस्य रामाच्या भूवि स्यादयं तस्यतः॥

"On. When Hari is born in the family of Raghu, as the son of Dasaratha, He is called on earth Rama. That Hari whose form is Pure Intelligence and who is the Great Vignu. He is called Rama, because always dwelling on earth (mahisthita) He gives (rati) to the good all desired objects, and is ever shining (rajate). In other words, स्—gives, ——on earth (महीरिया:)

These Upanişad texts show that Infancy, &c., also are gunas of Brahman. The Smritis also are to the same effect, such as the Ramayana and Visnu Bhagavata.

(Doubt.)—Are these gunas of the Lord, as an Infant, to be meditated upon or not?

(Parvapakea.)—These gunas of Infancy should not be meditated upon, because the thought-picture formed in meditation would then vary in size, and would be subject to decrease and increase, and as this change would break the uniformity of the thought-picture, it would be against the Sruti, which says that in meditation the flow of thought should be one harmonious whole. (When picturing the Lord as an Infant, the size would be small, when meditating on Him as a youth it would be larger, and thus there would arise incompatibility of thought-forms).

(Siddhanta.)—This objection is set saide in the next sutra :-

SÚTRA IIL 8. 10.

व्यातेश्व समञ्जलम् । ३ । ३ । १० ॥

eक्षते: Vyapteh, because (of His being) all-pervading. च Cha, and. Other qualities than all-pervadingness should also be included. सन्त्रास्य Samañjasam, justifiable: compatible.

10. Such meditation is compatible, because of the all-pervadingness of the Lord—371.

COMMENTARY.

The Lord is all-pervading though He shows forth the qualities of infancy, etc. He is not limited by those attributes, and consequently such meditation is perfectly justifiable. This has been fully treated before in the sûtra, III. 2. 38, (where it has been shown that through the mysterious power of the Lord, He is all-pervading in His middle form also. The infant-form is, therefore, as all-pervading and all-powerful as the youthform.) In fact, in the case of the Lord, "birth" (which is one of the six modifications) is not a vikâra or modification at all. For the Lord is birth-less, though He appears to take births in many ways unranding and language says the Puruşa Hymn. "Birth," therefore, when applied to the Lord means "manifestation"—because He is birthless.

The force of the word "and" in the sûtra is to show that the Lord is all-sweetness also: for says the Sruti:— The "He is verily sweetness"—(Taitt. Up.) The "and," therefore, includes this sweetness aspect of the Lord. In whatever form His bhaktas wish to taste the sweetness of His Lilâ, in that very form He manifests Himself before them, through His mysterious inconceivable power. The devotees of the Lord are innumerable: some the Ever-Free (like Garuda, etc.): who have been referred to in the well-known verse of the Rig Veda as Sâris:—

तब् विच्छाः परमं पदं सदा पश्यन्ति स्रयः।

"The Sûris always see that Highest Foot of Visnu." The other kind of devotees (like the Freed, who were bound once) see other forms of the Lord. The Lord, though one, simultaneously appears in forms of different ages (infant, youth, etc.) to His different kinds of devotees. This is some what analogous to the single syllable da uttered by Prajapati, by which he gave three different teachings to three different classes of beings: Devas, men, and asuras. In the Br. Up. V. 2. 1: we read:—

"The threefold descendants of Prajapati, Devas, Men and Asuras, dwelt as students with their father Prajapati. Having finished their studentship the Devas said 'Tell us something, Sir.' He told them the syllable  $Da \in \mathbb{C}$ . Then he said 'Did you understand'? They said: 'We did understand.' You told us 'Damyata,' 'be subdued.' 'Yes,' he said, 'you have understood.'

Then the men said to him, "Tell us something, Sir." He told them the same syllable Da. Then he said 'did you understand?' They said: 'We did understand. You told us "Datta," "give." 'Yes,' he said, 'you have understood.

Then the Asuras said to him: "Tell us something, Sir." He told them the same syllable Da.
Then he said: 'Did you understand'? They said: "We did understand. You told us 'Dayadhvam.'" 'Be merciful? "Yes," he said, "you have understood."

The divine voice of thunder repeated the same Da Da Da, that is, Be subdued, Give. Be merciful. Therefore, let that triad be taught, Subduing, Giving, and Mercy.

Therefore though appearing an Infant, etc., there is no break in the uniformity of meditation, for the Lord is conceived as One Essence, all-pervading and ever-unchanging, though manifesting different aspects.

Adhikarana V—The deeds of the Lord are eternal.

Says, an ebjector, If the deeds (karma) of the Lord shown forth in His Infancy, etc., were also eternal, then there can be a combination of all such deeds, though mentioned in different sakhas. But the deeds are not eternal—for the very fact that they are deeds or karmas necessarily implies that they are transitory. The word Karma or a deed, Krlya or an act, and Lila or a sport, are synonymous. The Karmas are known to have a beginning, an end, and having relation with certain individuals. The very essence of a Karma consists in having such relations with others, and as having a beginning and an end, and anything that has a beginning and an end is undoubtedly non-eternal. The Karmas of the Lord, therefore, cannot be eternal.

If it be said that the Karmas are eternal as a current is eternal—one Karma disappears but gives rise to another in the very act of disappearance, and so the Karmic Chain is eternal—this is beside the point. The proposition is that every particular Lilá of the lord is eternal, and not that one Lilá is succeeded by a similar lilá and in that sense the Karma is eternal. For in this view of the eternity of the Karma of the Lord, every Lilá would become transient—having a beginning and an end.

If it be said the Karma is eternal, because it gives rise to the conception that it is the same Karma which was done at a prior time, then that also is incorrect. A particular drama may be played through many a successive night and it may be loosely said "it is the same play as was performed yesterday," but the plays (as actions) are different—though they give rise to the same conception. They are not identically same. The word same is used here in a loose way, as in the sentence "it is the same medicine which you took yesterday. Eat it." The medicine is not identically the same, but similar only—for the medicine taken yesterday no longer exists as medicine, but is absorbed in the system. There is difference between the two as entities.

But it may be said—Let there be no beginning or an end of the Karma. Let it be like the dance of painted pictures, which moving in closed circle, present the same acts over and over again, with the movements of the wheel: and so it may be said there is no break in the continuity of such a Karma, and so it is eternal. For here also, there are beginning and end, though the action is repeated over and over again, and always gives rise to the same sentiment in its observers. Therefore, the play of the lord is not eternal. This is the objection raised and considered in the present section.

(Pârvapakṣa.)—The deeds performed by the Lord in His Infancy, &c. are the attributes of the Lord, and are eternal. Therefore these deeds are to be conceived as performed with his attendants. (There must be other actors in the play, besides the Lord, and so they must also be eternal.) The one, and the same retinue (the troupe of players) must also be conceived to be connected with many acts, prior and posterior in time. The prior act being eternal (according to you) the actor taking part in it must be ever connected with it—his relation with that particular act would be eternal. For that particular act would not be accomplished, without such relationship. That being so, that particular actor would not be able to take part in the subsequent act.

Note.—Thus one actor Yasoda suckles the infant Krisna. If this act of suckling is an eternal Lila of the Lord, then Yasoda must be eternally suckling the child, and would not be free for the subsequent act, where she is found chastising the naughty boy.

If it be admitted that the same actor takes part in the subsequent act, then the prior act becomes transient—for that actor is no longer there. If the first act is eternal, then the actor in the second act cannot be the same person: he must be a different person. But this is both against experience and scripture.

Moreover, every act has two parts—the antecedent and the subsequent, and every part has also a beginning and an end. No act can be accomplished otherwise. The experience of a sentiment depends upon this succession of acts. If every act and every part of an act is eternal, there can be no succession, and so the very object of the Lilâ is frustrated, for there would arise no variety of sentiments in the observers of an eternally unchanging scene. Therefore, if the Lilâs of the Lord give rise to various sentiments, then they are not eternal. For the eternal is that, which like a painted picture, always gives rise to one constant sentiment.

If it be said, that though the play is eternal, its manifestations are different and many, without any break in the continuity, still the beginnings being many, there would arise difference. It would not give rise to the idea—" it is the same as that which was before,"—and without such a conception, there cannot arise any idea of eternity - the play of the Lord, therefore, cannot be eternal.

(Siddhânta.)—This objection is answered in the next sûtra:—

सर्वाभेदादन्यत्रेमे । ३ । ३ । ११ ॥

सर्वो Sarva, all. सनेदात Abhedat, being non-different. समय Anyatra, in another time, in the posterior time, क्षे Ime, these.

11. These very actors manifest in another (time and place), for there is no difference in them at all (they are identically the same)—372.

COMMENTARY.

Those very persons—the Lord and his companions (or co-actors)—who were engaged in enacting the previous part—that very Lord Hari, and those very same colleagues, together with those very parts of the act, must be believed to exist in the subsequent time and act. Why? Because all are the same identically. Because there is no difference in the Lord, or His colleagues, or the parts of his acts or His manifestations. One Lord appears in many forms as we find from Srutis and Smritis like consulting again distants; conference "though one, who shines forth as many" conference "salutations to Him who has one and many forms." The same applies to the retinue of the Lord. In the Bhuma Vidya, the Freed Souls who alone form the colleagues and the retinue of the Lord, are said to be possessed of this power of appearing in many forms.

(See the Chhandogya Up. VII. 26. 2:-

"The Released soul does not see death nor illness, nor pain. The Released sees every thing and obtains every thing everywhere. He becomes one, he becomes three, he becomes five, he becomes nine, and it is said he becomes eleven as well, may he becomes one hundred and eleven, and one-thousand and twenty."

The Bhagavata Purana also shows the same in the marriage of Sri Krisna with the thousand princesses.

The same actions, though manifesting at different times, do not lose their identity, by the mere fact of their rising at different times on the horizon of different spectators. "He has cooked twice" means to the hearing of every intelligent person that the one act of cooking is done twice: and not that two different acts are done in different ways. "He has uttered the word cow twice."—means the same act or word is twice repeated, and always refers to one and the same cow, and not that two cows are meant. Thus the Biessed Lord Hari, His colleagues, His Places (the various stages where He acts), &c., owing to the multiplicity of mainfestations, appear to be different, in this sense that the acts are commenced at a particular time and end at a particular time—but though thus distinguishable, yet such distinction does not detract from the identity of those acts—for in their essential nature those acts are absolutely identical. And since there is an element of time—succession in the mode of mainfestation of these eternal acts, that gives rise to a variety of sentiments, and answers the objection that an unchanging eternal act must cause monotony.

Nor is this a dogma unbased on authority. In the Brih. Up., III. 8-3, it is said:—

वद् मूर्तं च भवज्य शविष्यवृथ ।

"Who is Past, Present and Future."
So also in the Atharvana Up.:—

पक्षे देवा नित्यकीकावरका।

"The One God, engaged in Eternal Play."
So also in the GitA (IV. 9):—

जन्म कर्म च'मे दिव्यमेषं ये। वेचि तस्वतः । स्वक्त्वा वेहं पुगर्जन्म नैति मामेति सीऽर्जन ॥

"He who thus knoweth My divine birth and action, in its essence, having abandoned the body, cometh not to birth again, but cometh unto Me, O Arjuna."

This also shows that the births and actions of the Lord are divine, that is to say, eternal: and non-Präkritic. For if these births and actions were temporal, historical events, their knowledge could not give release.

This realisation that the actions of the Lord are eternal, &c., cannot take place but through His grace; as we find from the following words of the Lord:—

थावानइं यथामावा यद्कपगुबकर्मकः । तथैव तस्वविद्यानमस्तु ते मदनुप्रदात् ॥

"Through My GRACE let there arise in thee True Knowledge regarding my size as it is (e.g., that even the middle size is all-pervading) regarding my real essence (e.g., every part of my body is a transcendental reality), regarding my forms (e.g., the different avaturas), attributes (like Omniscience, &c.) and actions (like birth, sport, &c.)."

Therefore, it is established that the actions of the Lord are eternal. Moreover it must be remembered that only those deeds which are performed by the Lord through His Power of Wisdom (Chit-Sakti) coupled with His Essential Form (Svarûpa) are eternal, and not every action of the Lord. (For if every action of the Lord were eternal, then creation, &c., being also His acts, must also be eternal). Hence it follows that actions performed by the Lord through Prakriti (Matter) and Time, are temporal and non-eternal. Such acts are creation, &c. If it were not so, then creation being eternal, there would be no dissolution and all texts about Pralaya would be nullified.

Adhitarana VI-Meditation on all attributes of the Lord.

Now the author discusses the following point. In the Vedânta texts the attributes of Brahman are described to be as perfect bliss, omniscience, etc.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, whether in meditation on Brahman these attributes should be combined, in every act of meditation or not.

(Ptreapakea.)—The opponent holds the view that these attributes are not to be combined in meditation. Only those attributes can be combined, which are taught under one topic or head of teaching: because, there is no authority for the combination of those attributes which are read under a different context altogether. Nor is there any such rule, that all attributes of Brahman must be combined together, in a single act of meditation, in however different a context they might have been read. Therefore, all attributes of Brahman are not to be combined.

BÛTRA III. 3. 12.

ञ्चानन्दादयः प्रधानस्य । ३ । ३ । १२ ॥

व्यवस्थाः Ånandådayah, bliss and others, अव्यवस्थ Pradhånasya, of the Principal, i.e., Supreme Self.

12. The attributes like bliss and the rest belonging to the Principal (Brahman), should be combined in meditation—373.

COMMENTARY.

"Of the Principal," namely, of the Supreme Self to whom belong these attributes. All of them must be combined together in every act of meditation.

All those attributes, like perfection, bliss, omniscience, fulness, compassion and motherly love for those who have taken refuge under Him. etc., which are taught in the sacred Srutis, as belonging to the Principal, namely to the Supreme Self, who is the substrate of those attributes, must be combined together in every act of meditation; because they serve the purpose of creating a love (thirst) for the Lord.

Note.—There are certain attributes of Brahman which, mentioned in one Upanişad, are not mentioned at all in others. Of course, those attributes in which all the Upanişads concur, should be combined, but should the particular attributes mentioned in some, but not in others, be so combined. According to the Concordance of the Upanişads, the attribute "Ananda" or bliss is, strangely enough, not mentioned at all in the Chhandogya Up. Should Brahman be meditated as blissful?

Adhikarana VII-God as Blissful.

In the Taittiriya Up., the blessed Vienu is described as Anandamaya having joy for His head, etc.

(Vijaya.)—In the Taittiriya Up., II. 5. 1., occurs the following description of the Anandamaya Purusa.

Different from this, which consists of understanding, is the other inner Self, which consists of blies. The former is filled by this. It also has the shape of man. Like the human shape of the former is the human shape of the latter. Joy is its head. Satisfaction its right arm. Great satisfaction is its left arm. Blies is its trunk. Brahman is the seat (the support).

(Doubt.)—Are these particular attributes of Brahman ("Joy," "Satisfaction," etc.) to be combined in every meditation on Brahman.

(Parvapaksa.)—In the last sûtra it has been taught that attributes like bliss, etc., are to be combined in every act of meditation on Brahman. The particular attributes of Joy, Satisfaction, etc., taught in the Tait. Up., are not different from bliss, therefore, they must be combined in every act of meditation.

(Siddhanta.)—This combination should not take place, because of the following sutra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 18.

वियशिरस्त्वाद्यवातिरूपचयाऽपचयौ हि भेदे । १ । १ । १३ ॥

विश्वसिक्तादि Priyasirastvadi, of such as — "joy being its head," &c. चपाहिः Apraptih, the not being meant, or the non-inclusion. वप्यवा Upachaya greater intensity, or increase. वप्यवे Apachayau, and less intensity, or decrease. वि Hi, for. जेवे Bhede, (that being possible) where there is a difference.

13. The qualities like "Joy being its head," etc., are not to be included (in the general meditation on Brahman), because there are increase and decrease (in the quality mentioned in the Tait. Up.) (which is possible) where there is difference—374.

COMMENTARY.

The qualities like "Joy being its head," etc., are not to be combined in every meditation on Brahman. (This meditation taught in the Tait. Up. is meant only for some as will be taught later). Lord Vianu, who is full of bliss (Ânandamaya) and has the shape of a man, has not the form of a bird, as described in the Tait. Up., II. 5. Moreover, we find in that text, words like "satisfaction," "great satisfaction," which show that there is increase and decrease, in the nature of the bliss, attributed to this Ânandamaya bird of the Tait. Up. Now increase and decrease are possible only where there is a difference in the quality. But the bliss of the Lord is not liable to increase or decrease (there can be no degrees in it, like satisfaction and great satisfaction). There cannot be any change in His bliss. All His attributes are perfect, full, free from Svagata Bheda, and consequently invariable, as has been shown in the sûtra, III. 2. 28.

Therefore, the particular attributes taught in Tait. Up. (II. 5) are not to be combined in the general meditation on Brahman.

SÛTRA III. 2. 14.

इतरे स्वर्धसामान्यात् । ३ । ३ । १४ ॥

इतरे Itare, the other (qualities mentioned in the Tait. Up.). श्रु Tu, but. चर्चे Artha, result, object, namely, Release. खानामा Samanyat, on account of the equality, or sameness.

14. The other attributes of Brahman (taught in the Tait. Up.) are to be combined, however; because meditation on them leads to the same result—375.

COMMENTARY.

The other attributes of Brahman, mentioned in the Tait Up., in that Ânandavalli, are however to be combined. For example, the attributes of all-pervadingness, intelligent joyfulness, world causation, Supreme Lord-liness, etc., (described as the attributes of the Ânandamaya Brahman) both before and after the passage describing this Ânandamaya bird (of Tait. Up., Il. V) are to be combined. For example, the all pervadingness of Brahman is mentioned in the following lines immediately preceding the description of the bird:—

Different from this, which consists of understanding, is the other inner Self, which consists of bliss. The former is filled by this. It also has the shape of man.

This shows the all-pervadingness of the Lord. This quality must be combined. Similarly, Tait. Up., II. 1, shows that the Lord is intelligent and causes the joy of others:—

He who knows the Brahman attains the highest (Brahman). On this the following verse is recorded: 'He who knows Brahman, which is (i.e., cause, not effect), which is conscious, which is without end, as hidden in the depth (of the heart), in the highest ether, he enjoys all blessings, at one with the omniscient Brahman!

The Creatorship of the Lord is mentioned in Tait. Up., II. 6. (a subsequent passage of the same.)

He wished, may I be many, may I grow forth. He brooded over himself (like a man performing penance). After he had thus brooded, he sent forth (created) all, whatever there is.

The Supreme Lordliness is shown in Tait. Up., II. 8.

From terror of it (Brahman) the wind blows, from terror the sun rises; from terror of it Agni and Indra, yea Death runs as the fifth.

These attributes of all-pervadingness, creatorship, etc., must be combined, in every meditation of Brahman. Why? Because Artha-sâmânyât. Because the Artha or the result is common or one. Meditation on Brahman leads to Mokşa or emancipation. When Brahman is meditated, with the qualities mentioned in the Vedânta texts, such as, possessing strength, creatorship, and friendliness towards all and being the refuge of all, the saviour of all, etc., then the man obtains the great arths or object of life, namely, release. Meditating on Brahman, with the above qualities of all-pervadingness, etc., also loads to the same result. Therefore, these qualities, mentioned in the Tait. Up., are to be combined.

What is the object of describing the Anansdamaya Brahman as a bird, in the allegory of the Tait. Up. In other allegories of the Upanisads, some distinct purpose is served by the parable. Thus in the Katha Up., the soul is figured as a charioteer, body as a chariot, etc. The object of this figurative description is to teach, that the person meditating, must control his body, senses and mind. What is the object of this bird-allegory of the Tait. Up.? In fact, says the objector, we see no such object: and without any purport in view, the Vedas never enter into allegorical descriptions. What is then the purport? The answer to this question is given in the next sûtra.

BÛTRA III. 2. 18.

ष्राध्यानाय प्रयोजनाभावात् । ३ । ३ । १४ ॥

शास्त्रानाय Adhyanaya, for the sake of meditation. श्रवोद्यन् Prayojana, of any (other) purpose, श्रनावात् Abhavat, on account of the absence.

15. There being the absence of any other purpose (in the allegory of the Anandamaya Bird), it serves the purpose of meditation (for people of dull intellect)—376.

COMMENTARY.

The allegory of the Bird in the Tait. Up. has no other object than to teach meditation on Brahman, in the form of a bird. The word Adhyâna means complete contemplation. The sense is this. The second Vallt of the Tait. Up. opens with the statement "Brahma-vid Apnoti param," "he who knows the Brahman attains the highest." Now Brahman is one, but He subsists in two forms:—one his essential form, (the Anandamaya Kriṣṇa), and the second His Power or Energy forms (such as, those of Narayaṇa, etc.). That Supreme Lord appears five-fold as Narayaṇa, Vasudeva, Sankarṣaṇa, Pradyumna, and Aniruddha. This five-fold manifestation is not capable of being easily meditated upon, by people of dull brains. Therefore for the sake of such persons, one blissful Brahman is figured as a Bird, with joy for its head, satisfaction and great satisfaction for its wings, etc. The allegory, therefore, serves a purpose; namely, it brings Brahman within the easy comprehension of these people of dull understanding, who cannot meditate on an all-pervading, blissful Lord.

When by such concrete meditation, their intellect becomes capable of soaring to the higher heights, then the meditation becomes complete, and the man becomes a Brahma-vid, and the word Vid here means "to meditate," and the Brahma-vid is that person who can fully meditate on Brahman. In the previous part of the Tait. Up. are described the various Purusas such as Annamaya, Pranamaya, Manomaya, Vijnanaya. These various Puruças are all described as birds, with various attributes as their head, wings, etc. The object of the allegory is to give a clear conception of these various principles of man. Thus this physical body is the Annamaya man-bird, his head is the head of the bird, his two arms are the wings of the bird, etc. Similarly, the Pranamaya man or the Astral or Breath-man is allegorised as having the various breaths for its various parts. So on, with the Mind-man and the Understanding-man Lastly, is described the Blissman or Brahman, with joy for its head, etc. Therefore it has been well said that these attributes of "joy for its head," etc., are not to be combined in the general meditation on Brahman. This allegory is only figurative of the pure Brahman, who also appears with five members (namely, as Narayans. Vasudeva, Sankarsana, Pradyumna, and Aniruddha). It may be objected that Brahman is one and has not five members, as mentioned above, for there is no authority for it. To this objection we reply that there are various texts showing that Brahman has different members. Such as पक्षेत्रप सन् बहुवा वेजनगति !—(Gopála Pûrva Tápan!).

Though one, he manifests as many.

पकं सन्तं बहुवा हृइयमानं-(Brahma Up. ?).

Being one, who appears as many.

So also in the Chaturveda Śikha we have the following :— स शिरः, स दक्षियः पक्षः, स उत्तरः पक्षः, स चात्मा, स पुष्णम् ॥ He is the head, He is right wing, He is the left wing, He is the body, He is the tail.

So also in the Brinat Samhita:-

विरो नारायकः पस्ते दक्षिकः सम्य एव च । प्रजुक्तस्य निष्यस्य सन्दोहे। वासुदेवकः ॥
जारायकेऽय सन्देहे। वासुदेवः शिरोऽपि वा । पुच्छं संकर्षकः प्रोक्त एक एव तु पंनचा ॥
धंगांगित्वेन भगवान् कीडते पुरुवोत्तमः । येभ्ययांच विरोधस्य विनयसांसान् जनार्दने ॥
धराक्ये हि कुतसार्कस्यममेथे कुतः प्रमा ॥

Nārāyaṇa is the head, Pradyumna is the right wing, Aniruddha is the left wing, Vāsudeva is the trunk, or Nārāyaṇa is the trunk and Vāsudeva is the head, and Sankarṣṇa is the tail. Thus the one Lord, the Puruṣottama (the Supreme Man) sports in five different forms, as a body and its members, as a part and the whole. But every member and every part is full, and perfect with all divine attributes, and none of these five members of the Lord is to be considered as higher or lower, as possessing greater or less lordliness, or as being opposed to each other. How can there be reasoning regarding that being who is above all reasoning, how can there be proof of Him who is proofices, (but the standard of every proof and the basis of all fogical reasoning).

80TRA III. 8. 16.

भारमशब्दाच । ३ । ३ । १६ ॥

The state of the state of the State of the word Atman, The Cha, and,

16. And because the word atman is applied to this anandamaya, (so it cannot be a bird)—377.

COMMENTARY.

In the Taittirlya Sruti, the Anandamaya is called Atman, so Brahman being specifically called an Atman, it is impossible that an Atman should have tail and the rest, like a bird. Therefore, it is merely an allegory, that the Brahman is described there as a bird.

Note.—A reference to the text of the Taittiriya Up., II. 5., will show that the words are 4tm5 anandamayah. So clearly an allegory is intended.

But (says an objector), the word atman is applied there to the Pranamays and the other bodies also. It is applied equally to the material physical body, to the subler pranic body, to the manasic body and to the Jiva itself, called there the Vijna amaya. The phrase "anyo autara atma," is repeated with regard to every one of these, in that chapter. Why should then the application of the term atman to the anandamaya be taken as a reason that the anandamaya must be the all-pervading Consciousness the Vibhu Chetana or) the Brahman, when we find that it, i.e., atman, is applied to the atomic consciousness (anuchetana) or the Jiva also. How are you so certain that the anandamaya is Brahman, merely because a vague term like the word "atman" is applied to it? The next sûtra answers this objection.

SÛTRA III. 8. 17.

भ्रात्मयहीतिरितरवदुत्तरात् । ३ । ३ । १७ ॥

ज्ञाल Âtma, Âtman, the Supreme Self. कृदीशि: Grihîtiḥ, is taken to mean or to comprehend. कृत्यन् Itaravat, just as is the case in the other texts. क्यांस्य Uttarât, as appears from the next sentence.

17. The word atman, however, here denotes the Universal Consciousness or Brahman, as it does in the other passages preceding this section, because of context as shown in the subsequent sentence—378.

COMMENTARY.

The word atman, when applied to the Anandamaya, must denote the Supreme Self, the Vibhu chetana, the Universal Consciousness, as it undoubtedly does in the passages like "atma va idam eka evagra asit" (the Supreme Self was this verily in the beginning). Here the word atma is taken by all to mean the Paramatma. But why do you say that here also, it must be taken to mean the Supreme Self? Uttarat. Because in the sentence immediately following, we have such qualities described, which leave no doubt that the anandamaya self is the Supreme Self. Thus in the aixth anuvaka we have:

साज्जामयत बहु स्यां प्रजायेयेति । स इदं सर्वमस्जत 🛊

"He wished, may I be many, may I grow forth,.....and he created all."

This passage, coming after the anandamaya sentence, shows that the anandamaya is the Creator of all, and therefore is Brahman. Had the anandamaya self not been the Supreme Self, then this description "the creator of all" would become incongruous. The Creatorship is the specific attribute of God and of no one else. The meditation, therefore, on the anandamaya symbolised as a Bird, with Joy for its head, &c., is meditation on Brahman, and so nothing is inharmonious in such meditation.

SÚTRA III. 8. 18.

म्रन्वयादितिचेत्स्यादवभारणात् । ३ । ३ । १८ ॥

सन्तवात् Anvayât, on account of connotation, or on account of syntactical connection. इति lti, so. बेह Chet, if (it be objected). स्वाह Syât, there can be (certainty). सत्तवात् Avadhāraṇât, on account of (the Supreme Self being) understood (throughout): is retained (mentally).

18. (If it be objected that we cannot so infer) because of the syntactical connection; (we reply) it may be (so inferred); because (the idea of the Supreme Self) is understood (throughout the whole of the second chapter of the Tait. Up.)—379.

COMMENTARY.

"But"—says an objector—"we cannot infer for certainty that the word 'atman' applied to the anandamaya, must mean the Param-atman—the universal consciousness; and not the Jiva-atman—the conditioned consciousness. Because the word atman has been applied in the previous anuvakas to Jadam (or Prakritic bodies) like the Pranamaya, and Manomaya; as well as to the anu-chetana or the Atomic consciousness, namely the Jiva, i.e., the Vijnanamaya." To this we reply—syat: namely, that it may be inferred with certainty that the Supreme Self, the Universal Consciousness is meant by the word atman in the anandamaya passages because in the very first Anuvaka, He is referred to in the sentence तकाव वा पतकावात्वन आकाशः संभूतः, etc.. "From that stman indeed sprang ether." Here the word Atman distinctly refers to the Param-Atman, and this fact is kept or retained (avadharita) in mind throughout. in studying the succeeding anuvakas. Otherwise the text teaching meditation on the anandamaya would be nullified. The idea of the Paramatman, taken from the first anuvaka (from the text etasmad Atmanah), remains latent in the mind, while passing over the succeeding anuvākas (sections) which treat of the Pranamaya atman, manomaya Atman, &c. ; but finds no halting place till it comes to the Anandamaya Atman: because there is taught no higher Atman than the Anandamaya. Therefore, on the maxim of showing the star Arundhatl, the previous âtmans are rejected, as not being the Paramatman, and the mind finds its full satisfaction in the atman of bliss, after which no other atman is enumerated. Thus the opening passage (etasmad atmanah) and the concluding passage (sa idam sarvam asrijat) show that the Anandamaya Atman is the Supreme Self.

Note.—In order to lead up to the Paramatman (mentioned in the first section) the Tait. Up. at first refers to the "man of food"—the annamaya; then to the "Man of Breath"—the Pranamaya; then to the "Man of Mind"—the manomaya, then to the Man of Understanding—the Vijffanamaya. Every one of these in succession is taken to be the Supreme Self; but this wrong notion is continually corrected by the the saying "Different from this, is the other, the inner self." But when the anandamaya self is reached, there is no such corrective applied: there is no such saying "different from this, the anandamaya self, is the other, the Inner Self, the Brahman." The Sruti thus gradually leads up to the anandamaya and halts there, indicating thereby that this is the Innermost Self, the Param atman. Hence the meditation on the anandamaya is meditation on Brahman.

The star Arundhati is barely visible to the naked eye: to point it out, therefore, some very big star near it is shown at first as Arundhati, then it is rejected and a smaller star is pointed out as Arundhati, and so on till the actual Arundhati is located. This method of leading from the gross to the more subtle is called the Arundhati Nyaya.

Adhikarana VIII-God as Father.

The author now wishes to show that the attributes of Brahman like those of being the father, mother, &c., should also be comprised in meditation on Him.

(Vieaya.)—Thus says a Sruti :-

माता पिता श्वाता निवासः शर्य सुद्धवु गतिर्गारायकः।

"Narayana is the Mother, the Father, the Brother, Abode, Shelter, Lover and the Path." (Of, Gita, IX. 17, 18).

In the Jitanta-stotra, first Chapter, also it is said :-

पिता माता सुद्धः क्युद्धांता पुणस्त्वमेव मे । विद्या क्षण्य कामक्ष नाम्बद्ध किंपिद त्ववा विना ॥ "Thou alone art my father, mother, lover, friend, brother, and son, Thou art my learning, riches, and desires—I have nothing else but Thee—(Thou art my all in all)."

In the middle and the last chapters of the same, we find:-

जनमञ्जूति दासोऽब्सि हिम्पोऽब्सि तनयाऽब्सि ते । त्वं च स्वामी गुरुमीता पिता च मम माधच ॥

"From my very birth I am thy slave, I am thy pupil, and thy son, am I. Thou art my Master, thou my Teacher, and my father and mother thou, O Midhava!"

(Doubt.)—Now arises the following doubt. Are these various qualities of fatherhood, sonhood, friendliness, masterhood, &c., to be meditated upon in the worship of Brahman or should they not?

(Pārvapakṣa.)—The Lord must be worshipped as Ātman alone, as says the Sruti: बात्मेत्येदापासीत। He should not be meditated upon as father, &c.

(Siddhanta.)—The refutation of this is given below.

SÛTRA III. 8, 19,

कार्याख्यानादपूर्वम् । ३ । ३ । १६ ॥

कार्च Kārya, of the effect, i.e., the fruit. चाक्यानात् Ákhyānāt, because of the statement. चार्यम् Apūrvam, something similar to the pūrva or the former attributes of Brahman. The force of च in apūrva is that of indicating similarity.

19, The (qualities of fatherhood, &c., being) similar to the preceding ones (of Perfection, &c., are to be comprised in the meditation on Brahman), because of the statement of the result (of such devotion, namely, release)—380.

COMMENTARY.

The "former" qualities (pûrva) are such as Perfection, Bliss, &c. The word "apûrva," means the qualities similar to the pûrva, i.e., the qualities of fatherhood, &c. These qualities must be meditated upon by those who worship Him in these aspects. Why? Kâryakhyanat: Because of the statement of the effect or fruit resulting from such meditation with such devotional sentiments. (That is to say, devotion to the Lord as father, mother, &c., also leads to Release.) As says the Sruti (Svet. V. 14::—

भावप्राद्यमनीडाक्यं भावाभावकरं शिवम् । कहासर्गकरं देवं ये विदुक्ते बहुक्ततम् ।

"Those who know Him who is to be grasped by devotion (bhava-grahyam), who is not the body (nest), who makes existence and non-existence, the ampleious One, who also creates the elements, they have left the body."

(Phis shows that the Lord is bhava-grahys or attained by devotion, whatever form that devotion may take.)

So also says the Lord in the Bhagavata Purana:— वेवामहं प्रिय चात्वा सुतक्ष सका गुकः स्टब्रो देवमिहस !

"Of those to whom I am dear, the self, the son, the friend, the teacher, the lover, the Destiny and the Desired."

Therefore the devotee (bhavuka, the sentimental), must think the Lord as father, mother, &c., just as he thinks Him to be all full, all bliss, &c.

As regards the Smili that "Atman alone is to be meditated upon," that does not prohibit meditation on the Lord as father, mother, etc. This objection has been previously dealt with under sûtra III. 3. 7.

Adhikarana IX—Meditation on a form necessary.

Now the author takes up the topic that the Lord may be meditated upon as having a form (vigraha) also.

(Vieaya.)—In some Srutis we find texts like the following describing the Lord as mere Self:—

" बालेखेवापासीत !—(Brihad. Up., 1. 4. 7).

"He must be worshipped as atman alone."

सालानमेच केन्द्रमुचसीत !—(Brihad. Up., I. 4. 15).

"Let a man worship the Atman only as his true state."

But in other Srutis, the Lord is described as having a form such as in the Gopâla Pûrva Tâpanî, quoted before: "Then Brahmā said: meditate on Brahman, dressed as a cowherd, cloud-coloured, young, standing under the Kalpa tree, and about whom are the following verses: His eyes are like full-blown white lotus, He has the colour of the blue cloud, His raiments are sparkling as lightning, He has two arms, &c."

Then the Upanisad, after so reciting His form, concludes thus:-

कितवर् चेतसा इच्चं मुको भवति संस्तेः।

"Thus moditating with concentrated mind on Krispa, a man becomes freed from the cycle of births and deaths."

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. Does the Release result from worshipping the Lord as mere Self (Âtman), only (without any form), or is it the result of worshipping Him as the Self having a Form?

(Ptireapakea.)—The Pürvapakein says, the mukti is obtained by worshipping Him as Atman alone, and not by adoring Him as having a form. For in such meditation as Atman, there is a uniform flow of sentiment, (uninterrupted by any distraction or jarring emotion). It is stated that the mukti or release comes from the meditation consisting of one uniform flow of devotional sentiment. (Ekarasa). But in meditating on the Lord as having a shape, there is no one-ness of sentiment; for the thought dwells sometimes on the eyes, sometimes on the ears, hands, &c., and thus there is no uniformity in such meditation, for a form has always different parts. Therefore, Release is not obtainable by Formworship.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

SÛTRÀ III. 8, 20.

समान एवं चाभेदात् । ३ । ३ । २०॥

सञ्जान Samanah, same, uniformity of sentiment श्वाह Evam, even. च Cha, though. स्रोहाइ Abhedat, owing to non-difference.

20. Even though (there arise different perceptions of eyes, &c., in meditation on the Form), yet they are the same, because there is no difference, (the eyes, &c., are all âtman)—381.

COMMENTARY.

The force of the word "cha" is that of "api." Even though in Form-meditation there arise different perceptions of eyes, &c., yet the sentiment is the "same" i.e., is one and uniform. As an image made of gold is gold throughout, and looking at its eyes, hands, etc., does not give rice to different ideas, but one uniform idea, i.e., of gold, so in meditating on the Form, there do not arise different ideas but one idea of the Lord. Why? Abhedat. Because there is no difference: because the eyes, &c. of the form of the Lord are all Atman (as those of the golden image are all gold). Therefore, Release is obtained only by worshipping the Atman as having a form or rather as having become a form. If this were not so (if Release were obtainable by mere abstract meditation), then the Sruti texts like "thus meditating on Krisna with concentrated mind" (Gopāla P. T. Up.) would be nullified. The texts like "Brahman is a uniform essence of the True, the knowledge, the infinity, the blise, &c.," do not mean that He is an abstraction, but that His Form sheds forth these various attributes (as the one sun sheds various colour). They do not detract from His uniformity and one-ness of essence. Though this point was considered before also in sûtra III. 2. 14, it is reconsidered here in a different light. The compassionate teacher repeats the same thing over and over again, out of kindness for his pupils, so that they may understand this abstruce and recondite subject.

THE THEORY OF AVESA AVATARAS.

The author has already taught in the previous aphorisms that in meditating on the Lord, all His attributes, as manifested by His direct Forms and Avatāras, are to be combined. Now he considers whether the attributes shown by the Lord when He temporarily shines forth through some exalted souls (Jivas)—that is to say, through the inspired Men (Aveta Avatāras are to be so combined or not.

Note.—There are two views regarding Aveia Avataras. These are exalted Jivas possessed by the Lord, inspired by Him. All qualities of the Lord are not manifested through such beings. One view is that the attributes shown by the Aveia Avataras should be combined, the other is that there should be no such combination.

In the Chhândogya Up., VII. 1. 1, Nârada approaches Sanat Kumâra and says "Teach me, O Lord! (Bhagavat)." • • • "Therefore, O Lord! (Bhagavat) take me over this ocean of grief."

The beings like the Kumaras are Jivas possessed or overshadowed (avişta) by some one of the attributes of the Lord, such as Wisdom, Power, &c. These Jivas are the aveas of the Lord; as is clear from the application of the word "Bhagavat" to them. The question arises: Should the devotees of these (Sanat Kumara, &c.) while meditating on these God-like souls, worship them investing with all the attributes of the Lord or not? In answer to this doubt, the author teaches two alternatives. First, he shows the permission to combine, i.e., the injunction side, by which all the attributes of the Lord may be meditated upon as existing in the Great Beings. This is shown in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 2i.

सम्बन्धोदेवमन्यत्रापि । ३ । ३ । २१ ॥

सम्बन्धात Sambandhāt, on account of their being intimately connected. एक्ट्र Evam, thus, the same सम्बन्ध Anyatra, in others (such as the Kumāras). सन्दि Api, even.

21. Because of their intimate connection with the Lord, in such others also (like the Kumâras, etc.) all the attributes of the Lord may be meditated upon—382.

COMMENTARY.

"In others," namely, in the Kumāras and the rest, who are always possessed by the Lord, and in whom the God always dwells. In such supremely high Jivas, all the attributes of the Lord may be comprised in meditation. Why? Sambandhāt, because of the intimate relation. Such Jivas are so intimately related with the Lord, that they are hardly distinguishable from Him. The Lord has entered into and possessed them so completely as the fire pervades the white-hot iron.

This is the positive view. The author next gives the negative or the prohibition of such meditation.

BÛTRA III. 8. 22.

न वाविशेषात् । ३ । ३ । २२ ॥

ण Na. not. ज Va, or. वाविक्षाच् Avisesat, because of want of difference (between the Kumaras and other Jivas in the matter of Jivahood).

22. Or not, because there is no distinguishable feature in them (they are after all Jivas and in no way distinguishable from other Jivas as such)—383.

COMMENTARY.

All the entire attributes of the Lord are not to be combined in meditating on such Jivas. Why? Avideant, because there is no distinction between these Jivas and the other Jivas, so far as the quality of Jiva-hood is concerned; in spite of the fact that the Lord is in them and possesses them. The force of the word "or" is to indicate that since these beings are the beloved of the Lord, they ought to be looked upon with extreme respect, but not worshipped as God.

SÛTRA HI. 3, 22.

दर्शयति च।३।३।२३॥

वर्शकति Dargayati, shows (the Bruti) च Cha, and.

23. And the Scripture illustrates this -384

COMMENTARY.

Such God-possessed Beings, though object of great veneration, are not to be worshipped as God, because the Scripture illustrates it in the passage under discussion. Narada is himself a God-possessed Soul, as we find it from various accounts given in the Bhagavata Purana and other books. In spite of his being so great, we find him going to Sanat Kumara and asking him to be taught about the Supreme Self. Thus this Chhandogya Sruti itself shows that all the attributes of God are not to be combined in meditating on these godly beings, for they are not as perfect as God is.

SÛTRA III. 8. 24.

संसृतियुव्यास्यपि चातः । ३ । ३ । २४ ॥

संभूत Sambhriti (the attribute of being the nourisher, the supporter), the collection. द्वा Dyu, the sky, all the space. ज्याप्ति Vyapti, the attribute of pervading, the spreading out. आपि Api, also. च Cha, and आतः Atah, for the same reason.

24. And for this reason, the attributes of being the collection of all potent energies and of spreading out the loftiest heavens (which are the specific attributes of God, are not to be combined in meditating on such Beings)—385.

The phrase Sambhriti-dyuvyapti is a Dvanava compound of these two words, meaning "collection" and "spreading out the heavens." These two attributes are not to be combined in meditating on such Avesa Avataras. The reason for this is the same as given in the previous sûtras, namely, that the Avesa Avataras are Jivas after all. The sense is this. In the rescension of the En iyaniyanas, we find the following text in their supplementary portion (Taittiriya Brahmana, II. 4. 7. 10.)

ह्या ज्येष्ठा वीर्या संभूताति । ह्याप्रे ज्येष्ठं दिवमाततान । इतस्य ह्या प्रथमात अहे । तेनाईति ह्याचा स्पर्धितुं कः ॥

[The reading in the text is from the Atharva Veda, XIX. 22. 21: where the second line runs as भूतानां आहा प्रयोगत जा । Baladeva's reading is आहा भूतानां प्रथमं तु जा ।]

Heroisms (were) gathered with the Brahman as chief; the Brahman as chief in the beginning stretched the sky; the Brahman was born as first of creatures; therefore (tens) who is fit to contend with the Brahman?—(Bloomfield).

This verse is found in the Atharva Veda (XIX, 22. 21.) and the translation of it, given by Mr. Griffith, is as follows:—

"Collected manly powers are topped by Brahma. Brahma at first spread out the loftiest heaven. Brahma was born first of all things existing. Who then is most to be that Brahma's rival?"

This shows the glory of Brahman, namely, he has all manly powers in him, and he it is who has spread out the loftiest heavens. These attributes are the specific qualities of the Lord, and consequently they are not to be meditated upon as existing in any Jiva, how high soever he may be.

The author now gives another reason in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 25.

पुरुषविद्यायांमिव चेतरेषामनाम्नानात् । ३ । ३ । २४ ॥

पुरुषिद्याबास् Purusa Vidyayam, in Purusa-vidya. इत् lva, like. Another reading is खावे "also." Cha, and इत्रेषास् Itaresam, of the others (of the qualities like omnipotence, &c.) सनासानात् Anamnanat, not being mentioned

25. These other (attributes of the Lord are not declared as existing in the Kumâras, etc.) (as they are declared to exist) in (the direct manifestations of Brahman such as) the Man (of the Puruşa) Sukta, and (in Kriṣṇa of the Gopâla Tâpani, etc.)—386.

COMMENTARY.

In the parratives of the Kumāras and of others, there is no mention of the attributes of being the material cause of the creation of all things, or of being the ruler and regulator of all, etc., (namely, of those qualities which are the specific attributes of the Lord). Hence in meditating on these God-like Beings, all the attributes of God are not to be thought of as existing in them. The author gives an illustration to show the contrary, Puruṣa-vidyāyām-iva. As in the Purṣa hymns of the Vedas. By force of the word "and" the Gopāla Tāpanī, etc., are also taken. All the above attributes of the Lord are given in these, while they are conspicuous by their absence in the narratives of the Kumāras, etc. The conclusion of all this discussion is as follows: In these God-possessed Beings, there are two aspects—the Jīva aspect and the God aspect just as in a white hot iron ball.

In a hot iron ball there exist the iron and the fire. Those devotees of the Kumaras, &c., who see in them the Divine aspect only, like those who think on the fire only of the white-hot iron ball, should meditate on such beings with all the attributes of God, because they are looking on the God-aspect only, to the exclusion of the Man-aspect. But those whose devotion is not so keen and who are conscious of their man-aspect, like those who see the iron also in the white-hot ball, such devotees of the Kumaras, etc., should not invest their Ista with all the attributes of God. On the other hand, they meditate upon these Beings as friends of God. dearly beloved to Him. The Supreme Lord being pleased with their devotion to His beloved ones, accepts such worship, as if it was directly offered to Him. It is not only in the Chhandogya Up. that Sanat Kumara is addressed as Bhagavat, but words like Bhagavat, etc., have been applied to these exaulted beings even in the Bhagavata Purana and other scriptures. These books also have declared their Jiva nature as well, by describing them as weak and poor creatures. Those passages must also be reconciled in the same way, namely, their weakness, etc., are all comparative, for compared with Brahman every one is a weak and poor creature.

Adhikarana X-The destructive attributes of God.

It has been said that Brahman must be meditated upon with the attributes specifically mentioned in the books of one's own Sakha (primarily, and if possible, the attributes mentioned in other Sakhas may be combined, according to the ability of the devotees). Yet to this, there is an exception, for some attributes mentioned in one's own Sakha may be such, that a person desirous of release, can never benefit by such meditation, and must eachew those attributes from his worship. Thus in the Atharva Veda, there are prayers to God to kill the sorcerer, etc. Those attributes of God should never be meditated upon. Hence the author starts this new Adhikarana.

(Visaya.)—In the Atharva Veda we find the following (A. V. Kanda, VIII, Sukta 3, Verses 4 and 17).

बब्रे त्वर्ष यातुषानस्य भिन्धि हिंबाशनिर्हरसा हमबेनम् । प्र पर्वाचि जातपेकः श्रुचीहि कचात् कविष्वविधिनेत्वेनम् ॥

"Pierce through the Yatudhana's skin, O Agui; let the destroying dart with fire conrume him."

"Rend his joints, Jitavedas! let the eater of raw flesh, seeking flesh, tear and destroy him."

संबत्सरीचं पय उक्षियायास्तस्य माशीष् यातुषाने। नृषशः। पीयुचमझे यतमस्ति तृष्सात् तं प्रसम्बमर्षिचा विषय ममीब ॥ १७ ॥

"The cow gives milk each year, O Man-Beholder; let not the Yatudhana ever taste it."

"Agui, if one should glut him with the blessings, Pierce with thy flame his vitals as he meets thee."

(Doubt.)—Here Agni or the Lord, is described as piercing through the skin and the vitals of the sorcerer. Is the Lord to be meditated upon as a piercer, etc.

(Pitrapaksa.)—The opponent's view is that the Lord should be meditated upon, even as a piercer, because it is expected from Him that He should destroy the evil-doers (for one of His attributes is to punish the wicked).

(Siddhanta.)—The right view, however, is that the Lord should not be meditated upon in these His fierce Attributes, but only as a compassionate, Merciful Lover of His devotees.

Note.-The above verses of the Atharva Veda are addressed to Agni. But according to the Tika of Baladeva, Agni means Sarvigram, the foremost of all, the leader of all. And hence it is a name of God. The word Pratyancham translated as "He meets Thee" is explained by the Tiki-Kira as Pratikilavaritinam, that is, one who is opposed to another, an enemy. The above verses are addressed to the Lord to destroy one's enemies. A person who wants liberation, the Mumukau, the Would-be-free, should not bear grudge against any body, and should be the last person to pray "O Lord, destroy our enemies." whether such enemies be personal or national.

वेधाव्यर्थभेवात् । ३ । ३ । २६ ॥

Fure Vedhat, "Kill, &c.," or pierce, &c. wi Artha, the result, or the fruit. Here Bhedat, being different. A Na, not (understood from the previous sotra).

26. The Would-be-free should not meditate on the Lord as a Piercer, etc., because the result of such meditation is different from Release—387.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Not" is understood in this sûtra from sûtra III. 3. 22. The Would-be-free should not meditate on the Lord with such attributes as those of a piercer, etc. Why? Arthabhedat. Artha means here "the result or fruit." Because, the fruit of such meditation is different; that is to say, the Would-be-free wants release and such meditation is not conducive to it. The sense is that the Would-be-free has risen higher than the ordinary worldly men, and consequently he has no right to indulge in prayers of hatred, like those given above. In other words, he has no Adhikara to this. Even the Lord has shown this in the Gita, XIII. 8:—

समानित्वमदिमात्वमहिंसा शान्तिराजेवम् । साचार्योपासने शीचं स्वैर्धमात्मविनेत्रहः ॥ ८॥

"Humility, unpretentionaness, hurmicssness, forgiveness, rectitude, service of the teacher, purity, steadfastness, self-control (abould be cultivated by the Would-be-free)."

So also in the Bhagavata Purana :-

निवृत्तं कर्म सेवेत प्रवृत्तं मत्यरस्त्यजेत्।

"The Would-be-free should follow the activities conducive to Nivriti (renunciation), (such as daily prayers, Sandhyā etc.). My devotees should abandon all Pravritti Karmas, (such as Kāmya, Jyotistoma, etc.)."

Adhilarana XI.

(Vişaya.)—In the Svetåsvatara Up., I. 11., we find the following:—

वात्वा देवं सर्व्यपादात्रिः शिकैः ह्वेदौर्जन्मसृत्युप्रदाविः । तस्याऽभिष्यानासतीयं वेद्यभेदे विद्यैश्वय्यं सेवलं साप्तकामः ॥

When that God is known, all fetters fall off, sufferings are destroyed, and birth and death cease. From being intensely absorbed in Him, one goes on the dissolution of the body to the third region, where exists universal lordship, and which is the Isolate (above Mays) and where all his desires are satisfied.

From this we learn that the fetters of My-ness, such as, "this is my body," "this is my house," etc., are destroyed when one gets the knowledge of the Lord. And then there ceases the pain due to birth and death (for though the Freed ones may be born and die at their option, they do not suffer the pains of birth and death and so practically births and deaths cease for them). This verse magnifies the glory of the knowledge of God as obtained from the study of scriptures. By such illumination, when the true essential nature of God is known, then by meditating on Him, namely, by constantly thinking on Him, on the dissolution of the body (when the Lingabody even is destroyed), such God-knowing man rises above the Moon-world and the Brahma-world, and reaches the third Loka, namely, the world of the Lord. What is the nature of that world? It is full of "Universal lordship," that is, all the super-cosmic manifestations of the Lord exist there. It is the world of "Kevalam," or free from Maya; and by reaching this, one becomes fully satisfied, namely, all his desires are obtained. This description shows that the Lord is obtainable through Scriptural knowledge also.

(Doubt.)—Is meditation on the Lord, enjoined by this verse, optional or obligatary, on the person who has already obtained the knowledge of God?

(Phrvapakya.)—Meditation is obligatory, because it is the cause of inducing mental concentration, by increasing higher devotion.

(Siddhanta.)—The right view, however, is that meditation is optional for the man who has known God, and whose fetters have all fallen off.

The force of we is two-fold, to denote strength or weakness. स्त्रात Stuti, as in the case of prayer. or praise (Yajus). इन्यानवर्ष Upaganavat, and as in the case of singing (Saman). तह Tat, that, उत्तर Uktam, is explained in the Scriptures.

27. But in the released state, (the free may perform meditation at their option), because they have already attained nearness to the Lord, because the Scriptural texts declare the same, and because all texts are meant to lead the soul to this stage. As the singing and reciting hymns of praise, (Yajuş and Sâman) with the sacred grass in his hand, is not obligatory on the student, who has finished his obligatory daily task. And this is declared by Scriptures—388.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" is employed in the above sûtra, in order to remove the Pûrvapakşa. When by the knowledge of God, there takes place the falling off of the fetters, then for such a wise person, who is devoted to the Lord, the act of meditating on the Divine attributes as taught in the Scriptures, is an optional self-imposed duty, just like the singing of praises and hymns, with more or less of desire, by taking the Kusa grass in one's hand.

Note.—When a student has finished the daily obligatory sacred study if he finds time, he can make a resolution to repeat the Samhiti; and then with the hands in the form of a Brahmāfjali, with the sacred grass in the middle, he repeats the Veda. This recitation is purely voluntary, and not obligator. Just like this is the meditation of the person whose delusion of "mind," etc., is destroyed. He may meditate on Truth through texts and reasoning; but it is not obligatory on him.

The released soul is under no obligation to perform philosphical meditation; it is optional to him to do so. In fact, the above verse of the Svet. Up., by using the word Abhidhyānāt (with prefix Abhi) shows that he has reached the stage of God-immersion (abhidhyāna) and does not need ordinary Dhyāna. The reason for this is, that the released soul has obtained upāyāna or the vicinity of the Lord and attachment for Him. The word Upāyāna means attaining such vicinity. The second reason is secatvāt—because supplementary. All texts are supplementary to this, or are meant to lead the soul to this stage of God-love. As says a text (Brihad. Up., IV. 4. 21): "Let a wise Brāhmaņa, after he has discovered Him, practice devotion, let him not seek after many words, for that is mere weariness of the tongue."

In the Bhagavata Purana it is written :-

By works of public utility, by austerity, sacrifices, by almo-giving, by Yoga practices, by concentration, the highest object which men seek is love for Me, and attachment for Me.

Therefore, when once such attachment is acquired, it becomes useless for the devotee to go on further with meditation. His meditation, therefore, is optional.

The sense is this. It is very difficult to find out the truth through philosophical reason and Scriptural texts of obscure and abstruse meaning. Moreover, even reasoning and texts are of various kinds and deal with various subjects and sub-divisious thereof, and consequently the path of knowledge to God, through philosphical reasoning and Scriptural studies, is very difficult. (Because philosophers differ, and so do the interpreters of texts). But to a person whose heart is solely attached to the Lord, and is softened by constant thinking on His blissful nature, all such studies and reasoning produce hardness of heart, for, instead of helping in increasing God-love, they jar upon one's feelings of devotion. But after the devotee has come out of his ecstasy, such studies may sometimes be helpful to him, in reminding him of his attachment and serving as a sort of secondary devotion.

The author next gives both reason and authority for this statement.

Note,—"Just as the twice-born, after the performance of the daily study enjoined upon them, namely, Brahma-Yajna, recite the Yajuş and Sāmans wearing merely at their pleasure the Kuáz pavitra on their finger, so also meditation, &c., in the highest heaven are performed by the Freed of their own accord. For all the other injunctions are only subservient to the statement referring to final beatitude. As says the Brahma-Tarka:—Indeed even those that have attained to heavenly bliss perform of their own accord the meditation on Haři, just as Bráhmins after their regular duty recite the Vedas, observing the rule of wearing Kuáz grass, &c., sitting with their face to the east."—Madhva.

SÛTRA III. 8. 28.

साम्पराये तर्त्तव्याभावात्तथा श्रन्ये । ३ । ३ । २८॥

साक्तावे, Samparaye, when the love for the Lord (has arisen in the soul). वर्षाव्य Tartavya, of the bondage, (which is to be got rid of) something to cross over. व्यापाद. Abhavat, owing to the absence. स्वा, Tatha, so. हि, Hi, because. वर्षे, Anye, the others: the other Sakhins, the Vajasaneyins.

28. When the love for the Lord (has arisen in the soul), the philosophic meditation is optional, because there is absence of the bondage; thus say some Sâkhins—389.

COMMENTARY.

The word सम्बद्ध means the Lord: because all tattvas meet in Him (सम्बद्धित तत्वान व्यक्तित). The Love for the Lord is called साम्बद्धा ! It is formed by adding the affix मन् under Panini, IV. 3. 53.

When a person has got this love for God, it is optional for him to meditate on tattvas or not. It is not obligatory. Why? Tartavyabhavat—because they have nothing further to cross over. For then there exist no fetters which he has to cut off. So also the others, namely, the Vajasaneyins read (Brihad. Up., IV. 4. 21):—

तमेव शिरो विश्वाय प्रश्नं कुर्वीत प्राप्तकः। नातुःस्यायात्वप्रमुख्यान्वाचा विच्छा-यनशं दि तदिति ॥ २१॥

"Let a wise Brahmana (student of the Vedas) after he has discovered Him (through the scriptures and his Guru), practise prajus or devotion to Him. Let him not seek after many words (Vedanta texts) for that is more weariness of the tongue."

So also the Lord has said in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa:—"Jāāna (the Path of scriptural knowledge and philosophy) and Vairāgya (the Path of indifference or asceticism) are, as a general rule, not very benedicial to those devotees (yogins) who are full of my love, and whose very self am I, who are deeply attached to Me."

Adhikarana XII-Fear or Love of God both cause salvation.

It has been mentioned above that the meditation on Brahman is on Him as possessed of attributes. Now the author commences a new topic in order to show that this meditation is of two sorts. Thus in the Gopala Pûrva Tâpanî Up., Brahman is described in the form of Sri Krispa, dressed as a cow-herd, having the colour of a cloud, etc., and accompanied by Prakriti, etc. This is one form of meditation. Another form is given in other Srutis as "verily this Brahman is the Seh, the ruler of all, the controller of all, the Lord of all, etc."-(Brih. Up., IV. 4. 22). This shows that, in the first case, devotion in the form of attachment, excited by the knowledge of His sweet attributes, is the cause of attaining Him. In the second case, it is devotion caused by the command of the law, and produced by the knowledge of His Majesty and Lordliness. Thus, there are two sorts of devotion or Bhakti-the devotion of love or Ruchi Bhakti. and the devotion of fear or Vidhi Bhakti. Therefore, the object of meditation being different (in one case, it is a being of all sweetness and love; in the other, a majestic ruler and king), the bhakti is also of two sorts.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, which of these two kinds of blighti is the cause of God-attainment?

(Parrapakya.)—As there is nothing to determine which of them leads to salvation, therefore, the seeker of God being in uncertainty, will not engage in any sort of meditation, and have no inclination for either.

(Siddhanta.)—There need not be any such uncertainty, as shown in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 3. 29.

बन्दत उभवाविरोधात् । ३ । ३ । २६ ॥

हम्बद्धः Chhandatah, through the Will of God, उन्ह्य Ubhaya, of either. वृद्धिकृत Avirodhat, there being no contradiction. [ज Na, not].

29. (There is no such uncertainty, because) through the wish of the Lord (souls follow one or the other of these two paths and reach the Lord thereby), since there is no conflict between these two—390.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Not" is understood in this sûtra from III. 3. 22, by the method called frog-leap. (That is, when a word of a previous sûtra does not affect the sûtra immediately following it, but some sûtra after that, it is called frog-leap).

Chhandatah means by the wish of the Lord, who has determined both paths of approaching Him, for the devotees of Sat-prasanga (the Good Company), whether it be through the devotion of love or the devotion of fear, for souls are so constituted by Him that some love to dwell on the Majesty of the Lord, while others are absorbed in His sweetness. How is this so? "There is no conflict between these two." Since there are texts to both effects, a devotee is at liberty to follow any set of these texts. The sense is this There are two eternally perfect paths of meditation on the attributes of the Lord. These paths begin with the highest companions of the Lord, such as the eternally free, and extend down to the lowest mortal, the youngest neophyte. These two paths flow like the stream of Divine origin, the Ganges, from the highest heaven to the world of the mortals. Therefore, all the souls in the universe are at liberty, according to their choice, to take up any one of these two paths, and join the particular discipline of persons treading these paths, and being taught by the teachers of that path the method of meditating on the peculiar attributes of the Lord, he meditates in that way, and the Lord Hari, the lover of all forms of devotion, wishes that these aspirants may get an inclination to follow the path. It is because of the wish of the Lord Hari, that these various Sat-presengins (aspirants) follow one or the other of these paths, and in this way they reach Him.

Note.—There are three sorts of devotees, the highest, the middling and the youngest. The first and the last are not helpers in the ordinary sense. The first is so absorbed in the contemplation of the Lord, that he is not conscious of anybody else, and the last has not yet acquired the necessary power of helping others. It is only the middle devotee who helps the aspirants.

The Masters of Compassion are thus defined :--

र्श्यरे तदघीनेतु वास्तिरोतु द्विचरह्य व । वेममैत्रीक्रपापेका यः करोति स मध्यमः ॥

"The second kind of devotee is he who loves the Lord, has friendship for the Bhaktas of the Lord, compassion on the ignorant and indifference towards the enemies of the Lord, and His devotees. (These are the Masters of compassion)."

This also shows that there is no partiality in the Lord Hari.

BÛTRA IIL 2, 30.

गतेरर्घवस्तमुभयषान्यषा द्वि विरोधः । ३ । ३ । ३०॥

- को: Gatch, of reaching God. प्रयेषपद् Arthavattvam, the quality of leading to the Purusartha. उपयो Ubhayatha, on the twofold paths. प्रयोग Anyatha, otherwise. ि Hi, for. शिरोप: Virodhah, contradiction.
- 30. In both ways the goal is reached, because otherwise there would arise conflict between the texts—391.

COMMENTARY.

By admitting this, the goal, that is to say, reaching the Lord, becomes pertinent in both ways:—that is to say, by the acts of devotion to the Lord, by meditating on His sweet attributes; and by the act of devotion to Him, by contemplating His Majestic attributes, one set reaches the Lord of love, the other reaches the Lord of Majesty. The word "Artha" in the sûtra means the highest end of man, namely, God, the Supreme Person. "Arthavattvam" means having the attribute of taking to the Lord. If this be not admitted, then there would arise contradiction between the two sets of texts, one enjoining meditation on the sweet aspect of the Lord (the Ruler of Gokula), the other enjoining meditation on the Lord of Majesty (the Ruler of Vaikuntha) The word "hi" in the sûtra indicates that both texts are of equal authority.

It cannot be said that both these methods should be combined on account of the sûtras III. 3. 6. and both methods of devotion must be practised by one and the same person. Though that sûtra teaches combination of attributes, yet it cannot be applied here, because the Ekântin devotees are not anxious to see in their object of devotion, other attributes than what they meditate upon, and opposite attributes do not come within the scope of their cognisance. This will be further explained in sûtra III. 3. 56.

Adhikarana XIII.

(Visaya.)—The author now establishes the superiority of the devotion of Love over that of Law.

(Doubt.)—The doubt arises whether Vidhi Bhakti (or the devotion by following the path of law) is higher or the Ruchi Bhakti (or the devotion by following the path of love.)

(Parva-pakea.)—The man following the path of law, performs fully all the portions required by the law formally and strictly, hence his devotion is superior to that of the other, who is always in a state of rapture and whose actions are unmethodical.

(Siddhânta.)—The next sûtra shows the superiority of love. sûtra III. 3. 31.

उपपन्नस्तस्रक्षणार्थोपनम्धेर्नोकवत् ॥ ३ । ३ । ३१ ॥

g: Upapannah, he has attained prominence. and Tat, that (one-ness of attachment). The Laksana, mark. He whose mark or characteristic is one-pointed attachment to His devotee who has such love. The love of the devotee evokes such love in the Lord. and Artha, object. The purusartha or summum bonum, i.e., the Lord. availe: Upalabdheh, on account of the obtaining, anang Lokavat, as is the ordinary experience.

31. (The devotee on the path of Ruchi or love) has obtained superiority, because he has obtained (control over) the object-of-human-life, (namely, the Lord, who Himself) possesses this characteristic (of being the Devotee of His devotee, because He appreciates sweetness in others, since He Himself is All-sweet). As we see in the kings of the world also—392.

COMMENTARY.

The person worshipping Hari by Ruchi Bhakti is Upapannah or one who has obtained superiority or in whom there exists superiority. Why? Tal-laksanarthopalabdheh, because of his having obtained the object possessing that characteristic. The Lord has the characteristic, similar to that of Ruchi Bhakta, namely, he is solely devoted to such a Bhakta. Therefore he is called Tal-laksana, or possessing such a characteristic. He is artha or the Object or the Goal of the human quest, for he is the Supreme Person possessing all sweetness. Tal-lakeanartha is a compound meaning "the object that has that characteristic." Upalabdheh means "because of obtaining." The Ruchi Bhakta is superior to the Vidhi Bhakta. because his devotion being of the nature of sweetness, is more pleasing to the Lord of Sweetness, and thus such a Bhakta, by the very fact of his self-forgetting devotion, brings the Lord under his control. The author illustrates it by an example, saying "as in the world." As in this world, a person is considered praiseworthy, who by his unwavering attachment and loyalty to a king (who appreciates the devotion and loyalty of his subjects) brings such a king under his control, so a Ruchi Bhakta, by his steady devotion to the Lord, brings the Lord under his control or influence. The Lord does not lose his independence by thus coming under the control of His Bhakts. On the contrary, coming under the control of His lovers is one of the most attractive attributes of the Lord. The sense is this. The Supreme Person is verily a Lover of sweetness, and he manifests his sweetness in these Ruchi Bhaktas, and when those Bhaktas, being attached to Him, offer themselves to Him, He accepts their self-surrender and is purchased by the greatness of their love; and He makes them great so that they may fully experience His sweetness. Without this condescension on the part of the Lord.

they could not have experienced the fulness of His love As has said blessed Suka:—

नायं सुकापा भगवान् देहिनां गापिकासुतः। शानिनाञ्चात्मभूतानां यथा भक्तिमतामिह ॥

This son of a cow-herd, Lord Krispa, is not easy of attainment to the embodied souls, whether they be Jūānis (those who have reached wisdom but yet have the consciousness of their bodies), or whether they are Atmabhūtas (who have realised their-self and are unconscious of their bodies), as He is obtainable here by those who are His Bhaktas of love.

Though His conquest is obtainable more or less, as a general rule, by all kinds of Bhaktas, yet His Bhaktas of love conquer Him thoroughly, and hence it is demonstrated that Ruchi Bhakti is the highest of all kinds of Bhakti.

Adhikarana XIV.

(Vieaya.)—The author now commence another topic, in order to show that this worship of the Lord is of two sorts, either having one member (Anga), or having many members (Anekanga). In the Gopala Pürva Tapani, the sages ask Brahma "Who is the highest God? Of whom even death is afraid? By knowing whom every thing else becomes manifested? Through whom does this universe revolve?" In answer to these four questions, Brahma answers, that Krisna is the Highest God and devotion to Him is the highest aim of man. He then teaches the sages the mantra consisting of eighteen syllables, namely, Klim Krisnaya Govindaya Gopijana-vallabhaya svaha.

Having taught this mantra the Upanisad goes on to say:—
पत्तव या प्यायति रस्ति भवति सेाइबता भवति ।

"He who meditates upon this Krispa, recites His name, and worships Rim with service, becomes an immortal."

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. Here three things are mentioned. Dhyana or meditation. Rasana or Japa, and Bhajana or service. Does release depend on the performance of all these conjointly, or on any one of them separately.

(Parva-pakea.)—The Pürvapakein maintains that all these three when performed conjointly, lead to Mokea, because after conjoint mention of them, the Upanisad says, "the man becomes immortal."

(Siddhanta.)—The next sutra refutes this view.

Note.—We give the full passage of this Upanised in order to better understand this Adhikarapa.

में। मुनवा द वे माछकन्तुः—"कः परमा देवः १ कृता ब्रुव्यिमेति १ कस्य विद्यानेनावित्रं माति १ केमेदं विदर्व संस्परति ॥ "Om. The sages asked Brahms, "Who is the highest God? Of whom is death afraid? By knowing whom every thing else is known? Through whom does this world emanate?"

तर् होवाच ब्राह्मकः।

On being so questioned, Brahma replied:-

श्रीकृष्के वे परमदेवतम्।

fir Krispa is verily the Highest God (This is Vásudeva.)

गाबिन्दान् मृत्युर्विमेति ।

The Death is afraid of Govinda. (This is Sankargana-vytha.)

स्वादेवं संसरतीति ।

The sages asked him "Who is Krisna, who is Govinda, who is Gopijanavallabha, who is Svábá?" Brahmá answered them.

He who destroys (Karaana) since is Kriana. He who knows or or who is known through of, i.e., cows, earth and Vedas (for "go" means all these three) is Govinda. He who destroys (Vallabha) the ignorance of the Gopijanas is called Gopijanavallabha. His Maya is Svaha. All (these four) constitute Brahman. He who meditates on this, recites it silently and serves it, becomes immortal, becomes immortal.

BÛTRA III. 3. 32.

श्रनियमः सर्वेषामविरोधात्, शब्दानुमानाभ्याम् ॥३।३।३२॥

विवास Aniyamah, there is no rule (as to the combination). सर्वेषास् Sarveṣām, of all. स्विरोधात् Avirodhāt, there being nothing against or no conflict, इस्स् श्रीकbda, the word (i.e., the Revealed Scripture or Sruti.) सनुवास्थास् Anumānābhyām, and inference or Smriti.

32. There is no rule (for the combination) of all these, as there is no conflict (between this text of the Gopâla Up. and) other Sruti and Smriti texts—393.

COMMENTARY.

There is no such restrictive rule, that the only means of obtaining Release is the conjoint performance of meditation, prayers (japa), and Divine services. Any of these singly has the potency to bring about that result. Why? Because there is no conflict between this text of the Gopala Tapani and the other Srutis and Smritis. Thus in a later passage of the same Upaniead it is declared:—

बिन्तबंदबेतसा इच्चं मुक्तो भवति संस्तेः। इति।

तस्य पुना रसनमजनम्मीग्युसंपातः । कामादि इच्यावेत्येकं पदं गाविन्यायेति वितीयम् । गापीकमेति प्रतीयम् । बद्धमायेति तुरीयम् । स्वादेति पञ्चममिति । पञ्चपदीं प्रजपन् पञ्चाकं पाचाम्मी सूर्याचन्द्रमसी साग्नी । तद्वपतया व्या संपद्यते वदा संपद्यते ॥

Meditating with concentrated heart on Kriena, a man is freed from the Cycle of births and deaths. Reciting His mantra and doing phis to Him, is like the conjunction of the moon with the earth (the Lord is brought down to the heart of His devotees, as the moon is reflected in water.) His mantra consists of five words, namely, (1) Klim-Krienaya, (2) Govindaya, (3) Gopfjana, (4) Vallabhaya, and (5) Svaha. Reciting this five-worded mantra, on the five parts of one's body, namely, (1) Heart, (2) Head, (2) Sikha or tuft look, (4) Breast, and (5) Handa with five elements heaven, earth, the sun, moon and fire, one assuming these forms, attains Brahman, verily he attains Brahman.

Note.-The five Mantras thus deduced are :-

- (1) क्री कृष्णाय दिवालाने हृद्याय नसः । Klim-Kriensya divatmano hridaysya namah, (Heart).
- (2) गाविन्दाय सुम्याताने शिरसे स्वादा । Govindaya bhûmyatmane Sirase svaha, (Hoad).
- (3) गापीजनस्यांत्रमे शिकाये वष्ट् ।
  Gopijana saryātmane Sikhāyai vaļaķ, (Tutt-lock).
- (4) बहुआय चन्।सासने कवचाय दुस्। Vallabhiya chandramasátmane Kavachiya hup, (Breast.)
- (5) स्वाहा साम्यातमे उज्ञाय फट् Bytht signyttmane' striya phat.

This text of Gopâla Tâpani shows that the meditation on or the recitation of the mantra can singly confer release. Therefore, the previous text of this Upaniead (namely, "Etadyo dhyâyati rasati bhajati so amrito bhavati") must be interpreted in conformity with the subsequent text of the same. Similarly, there are other Smriti texts to the same effect. Thus:—

कीर्तनादेव कृष्यस्य मुक्तक्यः परं अजेत्।

By merely singing the name of Kriena, one gets release and reaches the Highest.

पक्षेत्रप इप्याय इतः प्रवामा दशाम्बमेवावभृषेनं तुस्यः। दशाम्बमेषी पुनरेति अन्म इप्यत्रवामी न पुनर्भवाय॥

He who bows down to Krisna, even once in salutation, gets the merit equal to the performance of ten Asvamedha baths; with, however, this difference, that the performer of Asvamedha comes back again on earth (on the exhaustion of merit), but the adorer of Krisna is never born again (for the result is inexhaustible.)

These Puranic texts also show that singing the name of the Lord or service of the Lord by prostration, &c., singly is capable of effecting release. The Gopala Tapani Sruti (Dhyayati, Rasati, Bhajati) is not opposed to these. Had it meant that these three must be practised jointly for the sake of Mukti, then it would have contradicted both these Srutis and Smritis, which teach how release can be obtained by Bhakti (whether it be of meditation or recitation or service.)

The conclusion, therefore, is that the sentence "he becomes immortal," should be joined with everyone of the three verbs. (He who meditates on Him becomes immortal, he who sings Him becomes immortal, he who serves Him becomes immortal.) If these three be taken collectively, then Gopala Tapani should be interpreted as employing here an a fortiori argument. (When the other Srutis and Smritis teach that meditation, singing or service can singly lead to Mukti, how much more easily and surely must the Mukti be got when these three are combined.)

These three are illustrative of other methods of Bhakti; they do not exhaust them. Thus the Bhagavata Purana, VII. 5. 23, describes nins kinds of Bhakti:—

अवनं कीर्तनं विच्नाः स्मरनं पावसेवनम् । सर्वनं बन्दनं दास्यं सम्यं सात्मनिवेदनम् ॥

"Listening to the recitation of the name of Visnu, singing it himself and remembering it always, serving, worshipping and saluting Him; treating Him as one's Master or as a Friend, and self-surrender (are nine kinds of bhakti)." All these nine kinds are implied by the above three, and every one of them has full efficacy.

"But"—says on objector—"Release is the result of meditation alone, as taught in the Srutis. WHAT AT WE REED: &c., (Brih. IV. 5. 6 and II. 4. 5.) How do you say that it can be effected by japa, &c., also?" To this we reply; japa (silent recitation of prayers), &c., are interlinked with meditation—one is pervaded by the other. Meditation is interwoven with japa, &c., and japa, &c., is so interwoven with medition. Both are mutually interdependent. Therefore there can be no valid objection to what has been established above.

Says an objector—It is not proper to say that on getting the knowledge of Brahman there takes place release. Brahma, Rudra, Indra and others, who have acquired perfection in the knowledge of Brahman, are seen immersed in cosmic activities—nay, sometimes are found to be acting contrary to the Lord Himself.

This objection is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 3. 33.

यावदिधकारमवस्थितिराधिकारिकाणाम् ॥३।३।३३॥

बाबद् प्रधिकारम् Yavad-adhikaram, according to the (length of the period of their) office. प्रयोद्धितः Avasthitih, the remaining in the world. आधिकारिकायाम् Âdhikarikanam, of the office-bearers.

33. The office-holders remain in this world upto the end of the period of their tenure of office.— 394.

COMMENTARY.

We do not maintain that all knowers of Brahman, though perfect Masters of such knowledge, must necessarily become Mukta (or get out of the cosmos.) But what we say is this. The Resease is for him whose Prarabdha Karmas (the so much of the deeds for the total expiation of which a new incarnation is taken) are exhausted, by suffering the fruits thereof, whose Kriyamana Karmas (the deeds done in the present incarnation to be atoned for hereafter) do not cling to him (because of Brahma-vidya, since he performs them as service to the Lord, because he has attained the knowledge of Brahman), and whose Sanchita Karmas (past deeds other than Prarabdha, which are kept in store for expiation in some future incarnation) are destroyed by the fire of Brahma vidya. other words, he whose past deeds are all destroyed and exhausted by knowledge and suffering, and whose present deeds sit loose upon him, because of theosophic knowledge-such a person gets Mukti and goes away from the world. But office-holders, like Brahma and the rest (having a definite place in the Divine hierarchy) are still not Muktas, though their Sanchita Karmas no longer exist, but are destroyed by Vidya, and their present Karmas are unclinging for the same reason, but their Prarabdha Karma (in the shape of the strong Will generated in the Past to be co-workers with the Lord) not being exhausted, keep them to their post; and they remain in this world so long as the duration of their office lasts, and does not come to an end. (They are appointed by the Lord in accordance with their Karmas for a certain period, and it is on the expiration of that period that their Karmas are fully exhausted.) On the exhaustion of these meritorious Karmas that gave them this office, they get release and enter into the Highest State. It should be understood thus. Devas like Indra and the rest, with a shorter period of tenure of office, go at the end of their respective periods, to Brahma's world; for the duration of Brahma's office is longer. But when the term of Brahma's office comes to an end, and he gets release, then all these lower divinities get release also along with him. (In the interval they remain merged in Brahma,) The author of the sutras will mention this in IV. 3, 10.

As to their standing against the Lord (such as Brahma did in stealing the cows of Krisna, or Indra in sending torrential rains on Vraja), that is a mock fight only, and is done under the command of the Lord, to further the action of the drama which the Lord plays in each Avatara. The so-called opposition to the Lord is no real opposition, for Brahma and others are all actors, playing this world-drama, in harmony with the Will of the Lord.

As to their being obsessed by passions, &c., that is also an appearance only. Being firm in their knowledge of Brahman, passions, &c., cannot overcome them (they make a show as if they were so overpowered.)

Therefore, it follows that other knowers of Truth than these office-holders, do get Mukti as soon as they get the Vidys. (In the case of these Hierarchies, it is delayed till the end of the period of the office of Brahms.) Thus there is no real injustice done to anybody.

Quare.—Do these office-holders really want Mukti? Or do they not find greater satisfaction in being conscious co-workers with the Lord in His World-drams?

Adhikarana XV

(Visaya.)—The author now commences a fresh topic, teaching that the attributes like "neither coarse nor fine," etc., should also be combined in the meditation on the Brahman. (In the previous aphorisms, Brahman was taught to be meditated upon with the attributes appertaining to a Form. Now such attributes are going to be mentioned which cannot belong to any form. In the Brihadaranyaka Upanişad we read (III. 8.8.):—

स द्वाबाबैतहे तदसरं गार्गि ब्राह्मका समिवदन्यस्थलमनम्बद्धस्वमदीर्घमकेतिन

माचनप्रकानाननन्त्रः(बाद्यां न तद्याति किम्बन न तद्याति कष्ट्यन ॥ ८ ॥

"He said: 'O Gârgi, the Brâhmanas call this the Akṣara (the imperishable.) It is neither coarse nor fine, neither short nor long, neither red (like fire) nor fluid (like water); it is without shadow, without darkness, without air, without ether, without attachment, without taste, without speel, without eyes, without ears, without speech, without mind, without light (vigour), without breath, without a meuth, without measure, having no within and no without, it devours nothing, and no one devours it."

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, should the attributes negating the qualities of coarseness, fineness, shortness, etc., be combined in all meditations on Brahman called here Aksara or Imperishable? These attributes give rise to conceptions incongruous with the idea of Brahman having a form.

(Parva-pakea.)—In the sûtra III. 3. 20., Brahman has been described as having a form (Vigraha), and meditation is taught on this form of Brahman. But the qualities described in the above passage of the Brih, Upanisad are impossible to exist in a Brahman having a form. Therefore, these attributes should not be comprised in the general meditation on Brahman.

(Siddhanta.)—The next aphorism controverts this view.

SÛTRA III. S. M.

प्रचरियां खबरोधः सामान्यतन्त्रावाभ्यामी असदवत्त-

दुक्तम् ॥ ३ । ३ । ३४ ॥

जन्म-विवास Akşara-dhiyam, of those (qualities) which inform about the Imperishable Brahman. ह Tu, while, but. स्वरोपः Avarodhah, acceptance: comprising, combination. सामान Samanya, because of the uniformity, the sameness, the equality. स्वापाचाय Tad-bhavabhyam, and his qualities. जीवन्यस्य Aupasadavat, as in the case of Aupasad mantras. स्वर् Tad, that.

34. But these qualities which give information about the Aksara Brahman, are to be comprised in meditating on Him as a Form, because of the uniformity of His nature as in the case of what belongs to the Upasad. This has been mentioned before.—395.

Note. - Dr. Thibaut translates this stira thus: But the conceptions of the Imperiahable are to be comprised in all meditations. There being equality of the Brahman to be meditated on, and those conceptions existing in Brahman; as in the case of what belongs to the Upssad. This has been explained.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Tu" refutes the above Pûrva-pakşa. All these conceptions of "not being coarse, etc.," described in relation to the Akşara Brahman ought to be comprised in all meditations on Brahman. Why? Because all the Vedic texts refer to Brahman alone: such as the following Sruti (Katha Up., I. 2. 15).

"Yama said: That word which all the Vedas record, which all penances proclaim, which men desire when they live as religious students, that Word I tell thee briefly, "it is Om."

The essential nature of Brahman, who is the object of meditation taught by all Vedic texts, is uniform and the same throughout. Therefore, all these attributes of non-coarseness, etc., applied to Akeara Brahman, must be thought of in meditating on him as a form.

The sense is this. In the Svetasvatara Up., I. 11., it is said that release is obtained through knowledge:

"When that God is known, all fetters fall off, sufferings are destroyed, and birth and death cease. From meditating on Him there arises, on the dissolution of the body, the third state, that of universal lordship; but he only who is alone, is satisfied."

This knowledge means conception of God not as an ordinary object, but an extraordinary Being, possessing paradoxical attributes. Otherwise, if Brahman is thought of as an ordinary being, then it will lead to many inconsistencies, and the knowledge of Brahman so gained will not be a right conception. Therefore, the form of Brahman possesses not only bliss, knowledge, all-pervading-ness, etc., but it is qualified by the negative attributes of "not being coarse nor fine," etc., also when the Form is meditated with all these qualities, such meditation leads to true knowledge, and is not like ordinary knowledge, because the latter cannot lead to Mukti. Such paradoxical knowledge differentiates Brahman from all other beings and objects. Thus it has been demonstrated, that this Vigraha or form possesses all supernatural attributes, far removed from anything material and debasing.

स वै न देवासुरमत्वितिर्यक् न स्त्री न वन्द्रो न पुमान् न जन्तुः । नायं गुकः कर्म न सन् न चासन् निवेधरोवा जयतावृत्रोवः ॥

He is verily neither an angel (Deva) nor a demon (Asura), neither a mortal man nor an animal. He is neither a female nor a cunuch, nor a male nor a living being. This Brahman is neither attribute, nor action, neither being nor non-being. He is that which remains after all negations. May this endless Being be ever victorious.

Thus the elephant attacked by the alligator, praised with the above verse the Supreme Brahman, showing him as devoid of coarseness, etc. Though thus prayed to, the story mentions that the Lord Hari appeared in His usual form before the elephant, and gave him release. If the Lord were formless, and if the above attributes of non-grossness, etc., did not belong to His form, then He would not have thus appeared before the elephant, because he (the elephant) had not addressed his prayers to any being with form, but to one formless Entity, who was neither Deva nor Asura, etc. Therefore, the form in which the Lord appeared before the elephant, must be the form that possessed all the attributes mentioned in the above prayer. Otherwise, there would have arisen only mere knowledge in the mind of the elephant, a mere consciousness of some vague and vast existence, who had come in response to his prayers, and it would not have been a visible perception, but a mere conception. the above verse, the Prakritic devahood, etc., is negated of the Lord. is not a Deva, etc., having a Prakritic body. But He has Devahood and Purusahood of His own, which are His essential nature and which are non-Prakritic, because the Lord appears as a Shining One or a Deva and has the form of a Man (Purusa.)

The sutra gives an illustration of the principle that qualities (Secondary Matters) follow the principal matter to which they belong, by using the phrase "As in the case of what belongs to the Upasad," namely, like the Mantra which belongs to the rite called Upasad.

The meaning is that it is treated like the mantra, which is a subordinate member in the ceremony called Upasad. The mantras (Agnir vai hotram, &c.), for the offering of the Purodasa cakes are taught in the Sama-veda: and are sung with the Sama-vedic intonation, in a loud voice.
But in the Yajur-vedic four days' rite called the Jamadagnya, in those Upasads where the Purodasa cakes are to be offered, these Sama-vedic mantras are used by the Yajur-vedic priest, the Adhvaryu, whose duty it is there to offer the Purodasa cake. Therefore these mantras, when used in a Yajur-vedic rite, are recited in a subdued voice as other mantras of the Yajur-veda, and not loudly as the mantras of the Sama-veda. (The mantras lose their Sama-vedic character when used in a Yajur-vedic rite.)

"As the mantra 'Agnir vai hotram vetu,' although given in the Sâma-veda, yet has to be recited in the Yajur-Veda style, with a subdued voice, because it stands in a subordinate relation to the upasad-offerings prescribed for the four-days' sacrifice called Jâmadagnya; those offerings "are the principal matter to which the subordinate matter, the mantra, has to conform." "This point is explained in the first section, i. e., in the Pûrva Mîmânsâ Sûtras, III. 3. 9."—(Doctor Thibaut's Râmânuja).

Therefore, the ideas of absence of grossness and so on, though found in a few passages like those of the Brihadaranyaka Up., must be combined with all the other attributes of the principal, namely, the Aksara Brahman, in all meditations on Brahman; because all these ideas invariably follow the idea of Aksara Brahman.

Note. - The attra III. 2. 9 of the Parva Mimanaa is to the following effect :-

"The subject of the hymns of the Sama-veda being sung low at the time of establishing a sacred fire."

"The principal and subordinate statements being opposed (to one another), (the latter submits to the former) because the subordinate statement subserves the principal one. Hence the principal statement (alone has) a connection with the Veda."

The two kinds of statements, principal and subordinate, have already been explained. Their exceptical functions differ. When they conflict, the principal statement prevails, because a subordinate statement has not independent function to perform: it has to contribute to the power and use of the principal statement. Hence the principal statement invariably predominates. The translation of a Vedic text will illustrate and explain these remarks. "He who knows thus establishes fire." This is the principal text prescribing the establishment of the sacred fire. In this connection, other mantras, prescribing the way in which Samas are to be chanted, occur. They are:—(He) knows this, sings the Varvantiyasama." "(He) who knows this, sings the Yajnayjniyasama." He who knows this, sings the Vamadevya-ama." It is already shown that the mantras of the Yajur-veda are to be sung low, and those of the Sama to be chanted aloud. But the establishment of the sacred fire is to be regulated by the dicta of the Yajur-veda, and these dicta are, therefore, principal. The mantras of the Sama-veda are to be sung as subserving the principal, the establishment of the sacred fire. Though the general rule, that the hymns of the Sama-veda are to be chanted dloud is recognised, yet the hymns or Samas prescribed in the Yajur-veda, and to be chanted in connection with the establishment of the sacred fire (Agnyadhana) are to be sung low. The gist of the satra is that the principal overrules its subordinate.—(Kunte's Saddaráanachintanikā).

Says an objector "in the Srutis (Chhand. Up. III. 14. 2.) Brahman is described as doing all acts (Sarvakarmā) having all scents (Sarvagandhā), etc. just as he is described as possessing the qualities of having a form, etc., consequently these attributes of All-agency, All-scenting, etc., should be meditated upon everywhere, in every meditation on Brahman." This, however, is not the case, as is shown in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 85.

इयवामननात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ३४ ॥

इक्ट्र Iyad, so much only. जाननवास Amananat, on account of being mentioned in the scriptures (as principal.)

35. (The attributes of All-agency and the rest are not to be meditated upon in all meditations of Brahman, but only) so much (of the attributes as have been mentioned before) because their meditation is the principal (the other attributes are secondary and are to be meditated upon in especial cases only)—396.

COMMENTARY.

"So much only," namely, so much of the qualities, such as possessing a form and the rest, mentioned in the previous sûtras, must necessarily be conjoined in all meditations on Brahman. Why? Amananât. "Because the Scriptures declare," that these should be primarily meditated upon. They say, by so much of the collection of attributes, is the meditation completed, therefore, those attributes are necessary to be meditated upon. On the other hand, the attributes like All-agents and the rest, naturally follow as existing in the object of meditation, and so it is not necessary to meditate upon them separately, as existing in Brahman.

Note.—"Only so much," i.e., only those qualities which have to be included in all meditations on Brahman without which the essential special nature of Brahman cannot be conceived, i.e., bliss, knowledge, and so on, characterised by absence of grossness and the like. Other qualities, such as doing all works and the like, although indeed following their substrate, are explicitly to be meditated on in special meditations only.—(Dr. Thibaut's Râmânuja.)

Adhikarana XVI.

The author now teaches that the attributes of having divine palaces, etc. in which the Lord dwells, should also be combined in the meditation on Branman.

(Visaya.)—In the Mundaka Up. (II. 2. 7.), it is said:—

यः सर्व्यक्षः सर्व्यविद्यस्यैन महिमा भुवि । दिन्ये महापुरे हा व द्योग्यास्मा प्रतिष्ठितः । मनामयः प्राक्शरीरनेता प्रतिष्ठिते। उने हृद्यं सिष्ठाय । तहिशानेन परिप-श्यन्ति घीरा ज्ञानन्त्रस्पमसृतं यहिमाति ॥ ७ ॥ मिद्यते हृद्यमन्धिद्विद्यन्ते सर्व्य-संश्याः । श्रीयनो वास्य कर्मावि तिक्षानृष्ट्ये परावरे ॥ ८ ॥

7. He who is All-wise, and All-knowing, whose greatness is thus manifested in the world, is to be meditated upon as the Âtman, residing in the ether, in the shining CITY OF BRAHMAN.

He is the Controller of the mind, and the Guide of the senses and the body. He abides in the deuse body, controlling the heart. He, the Âtman, when manifesting Himself, as Blissful and Immortal, is seen by the wise through the purity of heart.

- The fetters of the Jivs are cut asunder, the ties of Linga-deha and Prakriti are removed, (the effects of all) his works perish, when He is seen who is Supremely High.
- The Brahman, free from all passions and parts, resides in the highest golden sheath. That is the pure, that is the highest of lights, it is that which knowers of âtman know.
- 10. Him the sun does not illumine nor the moon and the stars. Nor do these lightnings, much less this fire illumine Him. When He illumines all, then they shine after (Him with His light.) This whole universe reveals His Light.
- 11. The Eternally Free is verily this Brahman only. He is in the east and in the west, in the north and the south, in the zenith and the nadir. The Brahman alone it it who pervades all directions. This Brahman alone is the Full (that exists in all time—the Eternity.) This Brahman is the best.
- (Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt about this City of Brahman called the Highest Ether. Is it another name for the glory of the Lord, His Omnipotence and Almightiness, or is it really a city, consisting of wonderful palaces, gateways, courtyards, ramparts and the rest.

(Parva-pakea.)—The City of Brahman is an allegory, and describes the power and the glory of the Lord (there is no actual city in which the Lord dwells.) In other Upanisads we find it said that the Lord dwells in His own glory. In the Chhand. Up. VII 24. 1., in answer to the question of Narada, "Lord in what does this Infinite reside?" Sanatkumara answers, "In His own glory." This text shows that the Lord rests in

His own glory. Therefore, the City of Brahman means this glory of Brahman, and that is also the meaning of the word Samvyoma used in the above text. In fact, the word Vyoma means the infinite ether which has no end. Moreover, the Lord being all-pervading, cannot have any particular dwelling place and so the above text says:—He is in the east, He is in the west, etc. Brahmapura is, therefore, an allegory.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside by the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 3. 36.

भन्तराभृतप्रामवत् स्वात्मनः ॥ ३ । ३ । ३ ( ॥

भूता Antară, inside, within (that Brahmapura.) श्रृष्ट Bhûta, elemental, physical. आवश्य Gramavat, like the city or town, श्युष्टाव: Svatmanah, to His own, i.e., to His devotees.

36. Within (that city of Brahman, things appear) like (physical objects in) a physical city, to the vision of the elects of the Lord—397.

COMMENTARY.

"In the interior," that is, in the City called the Great Ether, every thing looks like a city made of elemental matter, in the sight of His own (devotees.) "Of His own," means the devotees who have been elected by the Lord as His own. (These devotees see this Samvyoma as a physical city.) As says the Sruti (Mundaka III. 2. 3.):—

नायमात्मा प्रवचनेन स्रम्यो न मेघया न बहुना भुतेन । यमेषैच बृक्ते तेन रूम्पसस्येच भात्मा विवृक्ते ततुं स्वाम् ॥

This Self cannot be gained by dissertations devoid of devotion, nor by more keen intellect, nor by much hearing. It is gained only by him whom the Atman chooses. To him this Atman reveals His form.

(Thus this divine city is reachable only by the elects of the Lord.) Though all the objects in that city are pure and simple essence of Brahman, for every thing there is Brahman, being a manifestation of His power, yet they look to His devotees, as if made of material objects, like earth, etc. The word "vat" or "like," in the word Bhûtagrāma-vat, shows that it looks like a physical city, but is not actually so. Every thing there is Brahman, as has already been mentioned before in the Mundaka Up. II. 2. 11.

"This verily is Brahman the immortal (who appears there) in the east and in the west, in the north and the south, in the zenith and the nadir. The Brahman alone is it who pervades all directions. This Brahman alone is the Full (that exists in all time, the Eternity). This Brahman is the best."

To His devotees, the Lord, the Supreme Self, who essentially consists of knowledge and bliss, appears variously, as having hands, feet, nails, hair, etc. Similarly, this Brahmapura, though consisting of pure Brahman Itself, appears to His devotees like earth, water, etc., and though it is all of one essence, yet it scintillates with many colours, like the feather of the peacock.

8ÛTRA III. 8. 87.

भ्रन्यथा भेदानुपपत्तिरिति चेन्नोपदेशान्तरवत् ॥ ३ । ३ । ३७ ॥

श्रम्या Anyatha, otherwise. If there be no difference, जेन Bheda, of the difference. श्रम्याचि: Anupapattih, not obtaining. इति Iti, so. चेन् Chet, if. न Na, no. उपदेश-सम्बद्धत् Upadesa-antara-vat, as will be seen from other teachings.

37. If it be objected that without admitting difference (between Brahman and the city of Brahman), there would otherwise be no possibility of predicating difference at all, we say it is not so, because it is like other teachings regarding Brahman—398.

COMMENTARY.

"Otherwise," that is to say, if there was want of difference between Brahman and the objects in the Brahmapura, then there would not arise any difference between the supported and the support, the location and the thing located. This is the objection raised by the opposite party. He says, "if Brahman and the city of Brahman be identical, then there would be no difference between the location and the thing located, and it would be absurd to say the Brahman LIVES IN Brahmapura. For it would then mean that Brahman lives in Brahman." This objection is raised in the first half of the sûtra, which says, if we do not admit difference between Brahman and his residence, then the very possibility of difference would vanish. The objection is answered by saying, "it is not so, because it is reasonable (or unreasonable) like other teachings." As in other texts, it has been declared that there is no difference between the quality and the qualified, in the case of Brahman, yet such difference does appear on account of specific texts, similarly is the case here. Thus the Tait. Up. declares Brahman to be bliss, and it also declares Brahman as possessing bliss, by knowing the bliss of Brahman one does not fear. Thus Brahman is both bliss and blissful—the quality and the substrate of quality. Similarly, Brahman is both the tenant and the tenement—the dweller and the residence, for everything is possible in the case of Brahman.

As there is no difference between the Loka (world) and the Lord of the Loka, between the dweller and the residence, it follows that both are the objects of worship equally. This is shown in the next sûtra.

Note.—This is true only of Goloka and Vaikuntha and not of lower lokas. The Lord constitutes His Heaven. Every object there is the Lord, though appearing to the Elects as separate from the Lord. Logically, therefore, every such object may be worshipped, for it is the Lord.

SUTRA III. 8. 88.

व्यतिद्वारोविशिषन्ति हीतरवत् ॥ ३ । ३ । ३८ ॥

व्यतिहार: Vyatiliaraḥ, mutually changeable. विशिवन्ति Visimsanti, they distinguish. द्वि Hi, because. इत्तरकृ Itaravat, as the other (utterances.)

38. The Srutis describe the Lord and His World as identical and mutually interchangeable, like other texts, (where the Lord and His body are shown as identical)—399.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihad. Up. 14. 15., it is said:

तदेतद् ब्रह्म सर्व विट्श्रह्मस्त्वितिष देवेषु ब्रह्मासवद् ब्राह्मके मनुष्येषु सित्रयेष स्वियो वैश्येन वैश्यः शृद्धेच शृह्मस्त्रसादम्यवेष देवेषु लेकिमिक्क्से ब्राह्मके मनुष्येष्वे-ताभ्याश हि स्त्रपभ्यां ब्रह्मासवद्य ये ह वा सस्माल्लोकात्स्य लेकिसहृष्ट्या प्रेति स एनम-विविता न भुनक्ति यथा वेदा वाऽनन्कोऽत्यहा कर्माकृतं यदिह वा सप्यनेवंविद् महत्युष्यं कर्मा करोति तद्यास्यां ततः सीयत प्रवात्मानमेव लेकिमुपासीत स य सात्मानमेव लेकिमुपासीत स व सात्मानमेव लेकिमुपासीत न हास्य कर्मा सीयते सस्माद्याये वात्मनेत यदात्कामयते तत्तत्स्वजते ॥ १५ ॥

There are then this Brahman, Kehatra, Vis, and Südra. Among the Devas that Brahman existed as Agni (fire) only, among men as Brahman, as Keatriya through the (divine) Keatriya, as Valsya through the (divine) Valsya, as Südra through the (divine) Südra. Therefore, people wish for their future state among the Devas, through Agni (the sacrificial fire) only; and among men through the Brahmana, for in these two forms did Brahman exist.

Now if a man departs this life without having seen his true future life (in the Self), then that Self, not being known, does not receive and bless him, as if the Veda had not been read, or as if a good work had not been done. Nay, even if one who does not know that (Self) should perform here on earth some great and holy work, it will perish for him in the end. Let a man worship the âtman only, as the World (Lokam) or (Brahmapura.) If a man worships the âtman as the Lokam (the city of Brahman) his work does not perish, for whatever he desires that he gets from that âtman.

This text clearly shows that the Lord is the Lokam. Texts like these describe the Supreme Self as the Loka, and the Loka as the Supreme Self. Thus it proves that the Loka and the Âtman are interchangeable. The Supreme Self is the heavenly region called Cokula, Vaikuntha, Samvyoma, Mahima, etc., and the heavenly region is the Supreme Self. This is like other descriptions of Brahman. As in the Gopala Tap. Up., the Lord is described as having eyes like full-grown lotus, etc., as being above Prakriti, showing that the body is the Lord and the Lord is the body, so here also the Lord is the Heavenly World and the Heavenly World is the Lord; both are equally adorable. So it follows that Hari, whose form is bliss and knowledge, through His inconceivable power, Himself appears as the Heavenly World, with all its various objects, as He Himself is various in His nature, and this He does to His devotees and not to others. Therefore, the Heaven World should be worshipped equally with the Lord.

Note.—The Heaven of the Lord is visible only to the Elects. Others cannot see it—they can go up to Svarga only.

Adhikarana XVII.

The author now commences the present section in order to strengthen the teaching above given.

(Visaya.)—All the texts that describe peculiar attributes of the Lord are Vişaya texts in this Adhikarana. In the preceding stitras it has been taught that the Lord has the qualities of omniscience and the rest, that the great ether is His dwelling place, and that He must be meditated upon as such, possessed of these attributes.

(Doubt.)—Admitted that the Lord Hari has all these attributes, yet it does not follow that these are the real attributes of Brahman, but that they are phenomenal and do not constitute His essential nature; because the texts say that Brahman is nirguna or without any qualities. The doubt, therefore, arises, are these qualities of Brahman phenomenal (Mâyic) or the essential attributes of Brahman?

(Parra-pakea.)—The texts like those of the Brih. Up. IV. 4. 19. (By the Mind alone it is to be perceived there is in it no diversity. He who perceives therein any diveisity, goes from death to death.) and II. 3. 6. [Next follows the teaching (of Brahman by it is not so, it is not so! for there is nothing else higher than this, if one says): 'It is not so.' Then comes the name 'the True of the True,' the senses being the true, and He, the Brahman, the True of them], show that Brahman has no attributes, and that the so-called qualities of Brahman are phenomenal only.

(Siddhânta.)—This view is set aside in the next sûtra, which shows that the attributes of Brahman are not unreal.

BÛTRA III. 8. 89.

सैव हि सत्यादयः॥ ३ । ३ । ३६ ॥

सान्त्व, Saeva, she verily. दि, Hi, because. सार्व-साव्यः, Satya-âdayaḥ, Satya (truth) and others.

39. Because she Herself (the Parâ Sakti of the Lord) is the Truth and the rest (these attributes are real)—400.

COMMENTARY.

In the Svet. Up. VI. 8., it is declared that the power of the Lord is inherent in Him and is known as Paradakti, and is different from the Mayadakti of the Lord.

न तस्य कार्यं करवं च विचते न तत्स्मधान्यधिकश्च दृश्यते । परास्य शक्तिविधिय अयते स्वामाविकी वानवस्रक्रिया च ॥ ८॥

There is no effect and no cause known of Him, no one is seen like unto Him or better; His High Power (Part Sakti) is revealed as manifold, as inherent, acting as force and knowledge.

This and texts like Viṣṇu śaktiḥ parâ, etc., show that the Lord has this High Power, different from Mâyâ and that this is an attribute which constitutes the essential nature of Brahman, as heat is the essential quality of Fire. This is called the Parâśakti or the Svarupaśakti of the Lord. Because this very power becomes modified as truth, omniscience etc., hence they are not mâyic or phenomenal attributes, but on the other hand, they belong to the essential Self of the Lord. These attributes of truth, omniscience, etc., are modifications of the Parâśakti, and the two reasons for it will be mentioned in the next sûtra. Therefore, the Sruti says, "there is no diversity here;" meaning thereby that all these attributes are modifications of the Parâśakti and Parâśakti Herself. The text "Neti neti," quoted by the Pûrvapakşin, has already been explained in sûtra III. 2. 22, and those arguments need not be repeated here.

The word "âdi," "and the rest," in the Sûtra implies that attributes like purity, compassion, forgiveness, etc., as well as omniscience, omnipotence, all-blissfulness, all-beauty, etc., are also to be included.

Therefore Sri Parasara has explained the word Bhagavat as the Supreme Self having the attributes of Isolation, as well as of great glory (Mahavibhuti.) Having mentioned this, he goes on to say that the Lord possesses also the attributes of complete Lordliness, supporting every one and the rest, both collectively and separately.

Note.—In the Bhagavata Purana, I. 16. 27, the Goddess of earth, in addressing Dharma, the king of justice, enumerates certain attributer, such as truthfulness, purity, compassion, forgiveness, generosity, contentment, rectitude, control of mind, control of senses, ansterity, impartiality, forbearance, indifference, learning, knowledge, dispassion, government, prowess, energy, strength, memory, independence, dexterity, beauty, patience, softness, magnanimity, humility, good-naturedness, mental clarity, intuition, perfection of senses, physical, ethical and mental enjoyment, depth, steadiness, faith, adorableness, glory, non-selfishness. She says that these and other great attributes must be prayed for by the strivers after greatness, from the Lord, for they all exist in Him.

Since these qualities are inherent in the Lord, therefore, the Rişi Parâsara has defined the word Bhagavat as meaning the Supreme Self, who though pure (isolated from all attributes) yet is possessed of all glorious attributes and powers (see Viṣṇu Purâṇa, VI. 5. 72.)

शुद्धे महाविभृत्याच्ये परे ब्रह्माचि शब्दते । मैत्रेय भगवच्छव्यः सर्वकारककारचे ॥

"O Maitreya, the word Bhagavat is applied to the Cause of all causes, to the pure Supreme Brahman, possessing Mighty power and Glory."

संभर्तेति तथा भक्तां भकारार्थस्यान्वितः । नेता गमयिता स्रष्टा गकारार्थस्तथा मुनेः ॥ ऐश्वर्थस्य समप्रस्य वीर्यस्य यदासः भियः । ज्ञानवैराग्ययोदचापि वण्यां भग इतीज्ञना ॥ वसन्ति यत्र भूतानि भूतात्मन्यक्षिलात्मनि । स च भूतेष्यरोपेषु वकारार्थस्ततोऽव्ययः ॥

-(Vișnu Purâna, vi. 5. 73-75.)

He is the supporter of all, and the protector of the universe. This is the two-fold meaning of the syllable "bha" \( \text{(Bhartt\( \text{\hat}\)}\) and Sambhartt\( \text{\hat}\). The syllable "ga" \( \text{(In the syllable "hat devotees to attain purity of Self) and creator (he who unfolds manifold bliss to his devotees.) Therefore, the word "bhaga" means the collection of the six attributes, Aisvarya (lordliness), Vîrya (energy), Yasas (fame). Sr\( \text{(Intune)}\), J\( \text{(In the syllable "Va" \( \text{(In the syllable "Va" \( \text{(In the syllable "Ya" \) \) and the rest.} \)

Therefore, these specific attributes like truthfulness, etc., exist in the Supreme Lord, and are not different from Him and must be meditated upon by the devotees.

Adhikarana XVIII.

Now the author commences a new subject, in order to indicate that the Lord must be meditated upon as having Srt or Fortune as His constant companion.

(Vişaya.)—In the White Yajur-veda, Chap. XXXI, verse 22, we find the following:—

श्रीइच ते लक्ष्मीइच पत्न्यावहारात्रे पाइवें नक्षत्राचि कपमध्विनी व्यासम् ॥

Beauty (Ari) and Fortune (Laksmi), are thy wives: each side of thee are Day and Night. The constellations are thy form: the Asvins are thine open jaws.

Some say that Sri means here Ramâ Devi, and Lakşmî means Divine Fortune (Bhâgavati Sampat.) Others say Sri means the Goddess of speech and Laksmi means Rama Devi. In the Atharva Siras (Gopâla Tâpani) also we find the Lord addressed as the husband of Kamala, in the following verse:—

नमः कमलनेत्राय नमः कमलमालिने । नमः कमलनाभाय कमलापतये नमः ॥ वर्हापीडाभिरामाय रामायाकुण्ठमेघले । रमामानसहंसाय गाविन्दाय नमा नमः ॥

"Salutation to thee whose eyes are like lotus, who has garland of lotus, from whose navel grows the lotus, and who is the husband of Lakamî. Salutation to Govinda, the beloved of Rama, he who is adorned with the crown of peacock feathers, and who possesses unobstructed intelligence."

Similarly in the Râma Pûrva Tâpani Up., the Lord is called Ramâdhâra, the supporter of Ramâ.

नमा वेदादिकपाय चौंकाराय नमा नमः। रमाधाराय रामाय श्रीरामायाऽज्ञममूर्तये ॥

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt. Is Śrî a phenomenal Being, made of Prâkritic matter and therefore non-eternal, or is she eternal, representing the Parâsakti of the Lord? In other words, does Śrī represent here the Prakriti—the non-eternal energy of the Lord, or does she represent here the Higher Energy, called the Parâsakti?

(Prirva-pakṣa.)—The Pûrvapakṣin says, Śri is a non-eternal attribute of the Lord, and she consists of pure Sattvic Prakṛiti, and is the Maya energy of the Lord. The Supreme Self has not Śri and Lakṣmi for his wives in the literal sense of the term, for the Upaniṣad texts repeatedly prohibit all such attributes with regard to Him, by the words Neti neti, "He is not so, He is not so." Moreover to think of the Lord as having a wife constantly near Him, is a degrading idea of Godbood, for it makes Him subject to passions, etc.

(Siddhânta.)—The above objection is answered in the next sûtra, where it is shown that Śri is the Parasakti of the Lord.

SUTRA III. 3, 40.

कामादीतरत्र तत्र चायतनादिभ्यः ॥ ३ । ३ । ४० ॥

कामादि-इतरम Kamadi, desires and the rest. Itaratra, in places other than Samvyoman: elsewhere. तम Tatra, there. In the Samvyoman. म Cha, and. मावतनादिन्यः Âyatanadibhyah, the word माव means all-pervading. तन means spreading out of bliss and release for the Bhaktas. The word मादि means the statement of the unity of the Paradakti with the Lord applies to Śrī also. The whole word means "because of being All-pervading, All-spreading and the rest."

40. (Srf is verily the Parâśakti and) there (in the highest Heaven), and elsewhere (in the Prâkritic world she creates all) objects of desire and the rest (for the Lord), (and this is so) because she is all-pervading, the giver of Mukti and the rest—401.

The words "Sa eva," "she even," are understood in this sûtra from the last. "She even," namely, the Parasakti even is she. "In that," namely, in the Supreme Ether, called the Samvyoman, which is untouched by Prakriti, and "in the other," that is, in the world of Prakriti whenever the light of the Lord manifests, she is ever ready to create all objects of desire, for her Lord, the Supreme Self (in the shape of various modifications of her own self.) Therefore, Sri is ever attendant upon the Lord. and hence He is called the eternal consort of Sri. The word "desire" he.e means a wish for all objects of beauty and erotic sentiment. The words "and the rest" mean all the sentiments subordinate to the sentiment of kama: such as the service of the Lord. Therefore, Sri is verily the parasakti. Why? Because she is all-pervading, and she gives release and bliss to the worshippers of the Lord. The word "aya" means all-pervading: and "tana" means spreading out of bliss and release for the Bhaktas. Because of these two-fold reasons (all-pervading and bliss-spreading), Sri is just like the Parasakti and has the attributes of truth, etc. And as the Lord is not different from His attributes, though His attributes in conventional usage are described to be separate from Him, so Sri is not separate from the Lord, though we talk of Her as if she was separate. By the word "adi," "and the rest." is meant unity with the Parasakti, namely, the statement of the unity of the Parasakti with the Lord applies to Sri also. Thus the text of the Sevt. Up., "His Paradakti is inherent in Him," shows that she is non-different from the Lord. Therefore Sri is the Parasakti and all-pervading. And as the Parasakti is described as the giver of knowledge and release and whose essential nature is all-compassion, Srf. also possesses all these attributes, and is not different from her. And so it is mentioned in the Visnu Purana:-

Śri, the eternal, is the mother of the universe and as Viṣṇu is all-pervading, she is also like Him imperishable and undecaying, O Brahmanas!

In another place it is said: -

O Goddess, thou art the science of the Self which gives release.

If Sri and Vienu were not identical, and if there existed any difference between them, then these two attributes, namely, all-pervadingness and giver of salvation, could not have been attributed to Her, because those are the essential attributes of the Lord. And if it be admitted that there are two all-pervading substances and two givers of salvation, then we are landed at Apasiddhanta or a conclusion unwelcome to all parties.

Srf is identical with the Parasakti and this is mentioned in the same Vişnu Purana:—

He who is called Paramesa, who is pure (without difference), is so called (Paramesa means husband of the Parassakti) figuratively; may that Viṣṇu be gracious to us who is the Self (the motive power) of all embodied being.

The word Paramesa is a compound of three words, namely, para (Supreme), mâ (Lakşmî or Sakti) and îsa (Lord or husband.) The whole word means the Lord or husband of the Parasakti.

The qualities of all-pervadingness and the rest do not belong to Prakriti and are not possible in the case of the latter, therefore it is clear that Sri is different from Prakriti. The conclusion, therefore, is that Sri is the Parasakti indeed, and consequently she is eternal.

If Sri be the Parasakti, then Her devotion to the Lord would be impossible, because Parasakti is identical with the Lord and none can be devoted to His own Self (not even an egotist.) This objection is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8, 41.

भ्रादरादलोपः ॥ ३ । ३ । ४१ ॥

सारतात् Âdarât, because (of her) intense love. The word Âdarâ of the text must be translated here as love. सकोप: Alopaḥ, non-omission, non-cessation.

41. The devotion of Sri to the Lord does not cease to exist because of her intense love for Him—402.

COMMENTARY.

Though there is no difference between Srt and the Parasakti, which in her turn is identical with the Lord, yet the devotion of Srt to the Lord does not vanish, because of Her great love for the Supreme Lord, Who is Her root of existence, and Who is an ocean of wonderful attributes. The branch cannot but love the tree, nor the rays of the moon their lord, the moon. So Srt cannot but love the Lord Visau, who is her very existence. Her devotion to the Lord is established by the Srutis (of the Yajur-veda) quoted above. That Sruti shows that she is the most devoted of all wives, and possesses all the attributes of a loving spouse. In the Bhagavata Puraça also the Gopinis, addressing the Lord Krisna, say:—

He whose service is constantly craved by Srt, who is ever anxious to obtain the dust of His lotus feet, he whom Tulast though ever resting on his breast, is ever anxious to serve, etc.

The erotic sentiment is possible only where there is difference between the two, the lover and the object of love. But Sri being identical with the Lord, such a sentiment is out of question in the case of the Lord, for no one is self-enamoured. Therefore, Kâma cannot exist in the Lord and Sri cannot give rise to that sentiment in Him. This objection is met in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 42.

उपस्थितेऽतस्तद्वचनात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ४२ ॥

उपस्थित Upasthite, being present, being near. स्तर: Atah, hence it is proved. तसुपतात Tad-vachanāt, from the statements about Him.

42. (The erotic sentiment arises in the Lord), when they are near to each other. Hence this sentiment exists, because there is the statement (to that effect in the Sruti)—403.

COMMENTARY.

The word Upasthita is a past participle, with the force of condition. It means that though the Sakti and her support (the Lord) are identical, there being no difference between them, yet the Support of Sakti being the best of the males (Purusottama) and Sakti being the best among all females, when these two are present (Upasthita) near to each other, the erotic sentiment and the rest arise between them; and thus is fulfilled the saying that the Lord is Self-enjoying, Self-enamoured. Therefore, the existence of that sentiment is possible in the Lord. But have you any authority for this statement? Yes, the text of the Gopála Uttara Tāpani:—

थे। हि वै कामेन कामान् कामयते स कामी भवति । ये। ह वै त्वकामेन कामान् (न) कामयते सोऽकामी भवति हति ।

"He who, through Kâma (lust) desires the objects of desire, he is called kâmi. He who, without Kâma (but through love), desires the objects of desire, he is called akâmi."

"He who, through Kama (lust) desires the objects of desire, he is called kami. He who, without Kama (but through love), desires not the objects of desire, he is called akami."

Note:—The reading in the printed text of the ânandâsrama series, is ল কাল্ডল in the second sentence: which, however does not appear to be appropriate,

This text shows that the Lord has enjoyments of the objects of desire, though not moved thereto by kama or sensual desire. The word akama means something like kama, but not kama. The force of the negative particle was is to indicate similarity, and not absolute negation. Akama, therefore, is emotion like kama, but on a higher level. When lust is transmuted into love, kams becomes akama. The Lord, therefore, enjoys the objects of desire through akama or love, not through kama or lust. Such desiring of the object of desire, namely of Sri, who is His ownself, and in whom He realises the completion of Himself, is not in conflict with the Lord's being Self-enjoying and full. The intense bliss resulting from contact with Sri, who is His own Self, must be understood like unto the joy which one feels at looking on his own beauty in a mirror. Therefore the sense of the above is this.

The Lord is qualified as possessing two Saktis called Para and Syarûpa. The highest substance is thus described in the Srutis. When He manifests Himself in His Svarûpa Śakti or essential nature He is called Purusottama or the highest male. But when His aspect of Parasakti predominates then such manifestation gets the name of Dharma and the rest. This Parasakti verily manifests in the shape of sweetness, lordliness, compassion, joy and knowledge and is called Dharma or virute. Srt in the shape of sound is called the word. Sri in the shape of earth and other planets is called the abode and when manifesting as giver of gladness, joy, expansion of consciousness, she is called Sri, Radha and the rest, the highest of all women. All these are various manifestations of the Parasakti of the Lord. Therefore, though there is no difference between the Lord and His Parasakti or Svarûpa Sakti, yet for purposes of conventional usage they are spoken of as different. And Parasakti is said to satisfy the emotional desires of the Lord. These manifestations of the Parasakti, like Dharma and the rest, must not be thought of as temporal and transient, but they exist from beginningless time, though they come into play with the coming of man on the earth. Thus there is no objection from any consideration. Therefore, the followers of the Lord Srt Krisna must meditate upon the highest truth, namely, the Lord as always accompanied by Śri.

Adhikarana XIX.

In the Gopala Tapani it is further stated at the end :-

तस्मात् इच्य पद परे। देवस्तं च्यायेत् तं रसेत् तं मजेत् तं मजेदिति चौं तत् सदिति ॥

Therefore Krisps alone is the highest God; one should meditate on Him, recite His name, adore Him and worship Rim.

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt. Is it necessary that the worship of the Lord Hari must be done in the form of the worship of Sri Krispa or may He be worshipped in any other form?

(Pârva-pakea.)—As the above verse ends the whole Upanisad, it is more harmonious to interpret it as laying down a restrictive rule that the worship of Sri Hari must be always in the form of Sri Krisna.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside in the next sutra, where it will be shown that there is no such restrictive rule

SÛTRA III. 8. 48.

तिमर्कारणानियमस्तद्दृष्टेः पृथगृद्यप्रतिबन्धः फलम् ॥३।३।४३॥

तपु Tad, of Him. निवारिक Nirddharana, of decision, determining धानिकाः
Aniyamah, there is no rule, or restriction तपु Tad, that हो: Dristain, through the statements seen. पूपम् Prithag, separate हि Hi, because धानिकचः Apratibandhah, non-obstruction. प्रतम् Phalam, fruit.

43. There is no restrictive rule, determining the worship of the form of Sri Krisna alone. Because this is seen; for there is a separate fruit, namely, non-obstruction—404.

COMMENTARY.

There is no such restriction that the Lord God should be worshipped with the attributes of Srt Krisna only, and with no other attributes like those of Srt Rama and the rest. The form of Srt Krisna is generally understood to be that of the infant suckling at the breast of Jasoda. That is no doubt a form of the Lord, who is all-pervading, omniscient and all-bliss. But there are other forms also. Why do we say so? Because we see so in the Scripture (Gopala Uttara Tapani):—

यत्रासै। संस्थितः कृष्णिक्षिभिः,शक्तया समाहितः। रामानिक्यप्रयुक्तैः विभाव्यासहिते। विभुः। वतःशब्दो अवेदैको झोंकारस्योशकैः कृतः॥ (झोंकारः समुदाहुतः)

The Lord Krisna resides there surrounded by the three, namely, by Balarama, Aniruddha, and Pradyumna. And He has His Energy also Rukmini. The one syllable Ommanifests in these above-mentioned four forms. (Vasudeva = half matra, = aniruddha, = Pradyumna, = Sankarsapa).

This text shows that Sri Krisna has these forms also, and therefore. Baladeva and the rest are to be worshipped equally as Sri Krisna, for they are not different from Him. But then the word eva or "alone" occurring in the above text (Krisna alone is the highest God) would become useless! The word eve is not a redundancy, and the sûtra auswers this objection by saying "the result is separate." What is that separate result? The removal of the obstruction which is caused by worshipping any other deity as the Highest. The worship of Krisna is the unobstructed means of salvation. The worship of other deities is the indirect means. The word eva. therefore, serves a useful purpose, by removing this obstruction or mediateness, which is the natural consequence of worshipping other deities. without the idea of their being Sri Krisna. Therefore, this being so, a person who has a love for the worship of Baladeva and others, may do so, provided he combines in his meditation all the attributes of Srt Krisna, if he is capable of doing so. Such worship is the direct cause of Mukti, but if he is not so capable, then he must worhip Srl Krisus alone, and not any other manifestation of Him, like Balarama, etc.

Adhikarana XX.

Now the author commences a new topic, in order to teach that the sepirant must possess also the attribute of devotion to his guru, for one of the attributes of the Lord is that He is reached through the Guru. In the description of various Vidyas or methods of Bhakti, it is said that Guru Bhakti is one of the conditions of success. In the Svet. Up. VI. 23, it is said:—

यस्य देवे परामक्तिर्यथा देवे तथा गुरै। तस्येते कथिता द्वार्थाः प्रकाशन्ते महात्मनः । प्रकाशन्ते महात्मन इति ॥

"If these truths have been told to a high-minded man, who feels the highest devotion for God, AND FOR HIS GURU AS FOR GOD, then they will shine forth, then they will shine forth indeed."

Bimilarly, in the Chhând. Up. (VI. 14. 2.) it is said :— आचार्यवाद पुरवी वेद " a man who finds the teachers, obtains knowledge."

So also in Mundaka Up (I., 2. 12.) it is said:-

परीस्य के।कान्कर्मवितान्त्राहाका निर्वेदमायाचास्यहतः इतेन । तहिकानार्थं स गुरमेवामिगच्छेत्समित्पाकिः भोत्रियं ब्रह्मनिष्टम् ॥

Let a seeker of Brahman, after he has examined (and thoroughly mastered the forces of the worlds, that are reached by the occult) works, acquire freedom from desires for them. For the uncreate world of Brahman, cannot be gained through the created worlds. Therefore to know this, let him approach with folded hands, the Guru, who is inspired and dwells constantly in the eternal.

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt. Does the fruit accrue by merely studying the Scriptures with the Guru, or does it result from such knowledge accompanied with the grace of the Guru.

(Parva-pakea.)—The fruit results from the mere knowledge from the study of Scriptures. What is the use of the grace of the Guru?

(Siddhanta.)—The grace of the Guru is necessary, as is shown in the next satra.

BÛTRA III. 2. 44.

प्रवानववेव तदुक्तम् ॥ ३ । ३ । ४४ ॥

अधानक्ष् Pradanavad, just as the gift of learning given by a teacher, through favour to his disciple. क्ष Eva, exactly. क्षु Tad, that. क्ष्म Uktam, it is said.

44. It is said that the attainment of Brahman is exactly as much the gift of the Guru, as the attainment of learning Scriptures from him—405.

COMMENTARY.

According to the extent of the favour of the Guru in imparting the means of obtaining Brahman, namely in imparting teaching which is the cause of attaining Brahman, to that extent depends the fruit of such attainment. It is not by mere study that Brahman is reached, but the kindly glance of the Guru is absolutely necessary for that purpose. The word Pra in the sûtra indicates this grace of the Guru. The Lord Sri Krisna himself has said so in the Gita (XIII. 7).

Humility unpretentiousness, harmlessness, forgiveness, rectitude, SERVICE OF THE TRACHER, purity, steadfastness, self-control.

Therefore the attainment of the Brahman is the result of that study which is accompained by the grace of the Guru.

Adhikarana XXI.

(Doubt.)—Is one's own exertion stronger or the grace of the Guru? (Pdrva-pakea.)—Without exertion the grace of the Guru will not be able to accomplish anything, hence one's own exertion is stronger.

(Siddhânta.)—The above view is controverted in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 45.

निङ्गभुयस्त्वात्ति बनीयस्तवपि ॥ २ । २ । ४५ ॥

शिक्ष Linga, of indicatory marks. यूक्तवात् Bhûyastvât, on account of the plurality. सुर् Tad, that (proof). दि Hi, because व्यक्तिः Baltyah, stronger. सुर Tad, that or this. वाचि Api, also.

45. Owing to plurality of indicatory marks, the Grace of Guru is the strongest, but the others also (study, meditation, etc.) should be continued to be performed—406.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhândogya Upanisad there is the story of a disciple of Gautama, called Satyakâma. Satyakâma was taught Brahma-vidyâ by certain Devas, who had assumed the forms of a bull, the fire, a flamingo, and a water-bird. Though he was taught by these Devas, he still prays to his Guru to teach him Brahma-vidyâ (Chhâr. Up. IV. 9. 1-3.)

- "Thus he reached the house of his teacher. The teacher said to him : 'Satyakama!' He replied 'Lord.'
- "The teacher said: 'Friend, thou :hinest verily like one who knows Brahman. Now who has taught thee, a man or a Deva?' He replied 'Beings other than men, (have taught me.) But, Lord, for my good, you should teach me.'
- "Because even I have heard from exalted ones like you, that only such knowledge as is learnt from a regularly accepted Teacher leads to the highest good.' Then he taught him the very same thing, and Satyakama suffered no harm, (though he had learnt from poings other than a teacher), yea, he suffered no harm."

Similarly in the story of Upakosala, who was a disciple of this Satyakama, we find the same fact reiterated. Upakosala was taught by the sacred fires, the mysteries of Brahman, but still he prays to his teacher to explain to him the doctrine of Brahman. (Chhandogya IV. 10. 1., the end.)

- "Upakosala, the son of Kāmalāyana, dweltas a religious student in the house of Satyakāma Jābāla. He tended his fires for twelve years. But though the teacher allowed the other pupils to depart, he did not allow Upakosala to depart."
- "Then his wife said to him, 'This student is quite exhausted with austerities,' because he has diligently tended your fires. (But you have not taught him), and your fires even though so well tended have not taught him. Now (at least) teach him.' But Satyakama, however, went away on a journey without having taught Upakosala.
- "Then Upakosala, from sorrow took into his head to leave off eating. Then the wife of the teacher said to him, 'student, eat. Why do you not eat?' He said, 'There are many desires in this man here, which go in different directions. I am full of sorrows, (and so have no room for food), so I do not take food."
- "Thereupon the fires said among themselves, 'This student has become exhausted through austerities in serving us properly. Now let us teach him,' Then they said to him.
- " 'Prāpa (power) is (lower) Brahman. KA (Infinite Power and Joy) is (higher) Brahman; кна (Infinite Power and wisdom) is (also higher) Brahman."
- "He said, 'I understand that Prana is Brahman; but I do not understand KA or
- "They said, 'That which is KA is indeed KHA: that which is KHA is indeed KA.

  They, therefore, taught him that the (lower) Brahman was Prana, and that (the higher)

  Brahman was the All-luminous (Vis au)."

ELEVENTH ERANDA.

After that the Garhapatya Fire taught him, "Brahman is Vast, the World-Guide, the Destroyer and the Eternal. As subjective Antaryamin (He is) the SPIRIT who is seen in the Solar Logoq (by the filumined sage.) He is the 'SUPREME I AM,' He indeed is the 'SUPREME I AM.'"

He, who knowing this, thus meditates on Him, has his sins destroyed, becomes a dweller of the world of God, obtains life eternal, lives resplendent, and his dependants do not perish, because we guard him in this world and in the other, whosever knowing this thus, meditates on Him.

TWELFTH KHAŅDA.

Then the Anvähärya Fire taught him, "Brahman is the Protector of all, the Guide, the Supreme Ruier, the Joy Eternal. (As Self He is) the Spirit who is seen (by the illumined sage) in the Lunar Logos. He is verily the 'SUPREME I AM." He indeed is the 'Supreme I am.'"

He who knowing Him thus, meditates on Him, has his sins destroyed, becomes a dweller of the world of God, obtains life eternal, lives resplendent, and his dependants do not perish, because we guard him in this world and in the other, whoever knowing Him thus meditates on Him.

THIRTEENTH KHANDA

Then the Ahavaniya Fire taught him, "Brahman is All-powerful, All-pervading, the Luminous, the Sentiency." (As Seif, He is) the Spirit who is seen (by the illumined sage) in the Deva of lightning. He is the 'I am.' He indeed is the 'I am.'

He who knowing him thus, meditates on Him, has his sins destroyed, becomes a dweller of the world of God, obtains life eternal, lives resplendent. His dependants do not perish, because we guard him in this world, and in the other, whoseever knowing Him thus, meditates on Him.

FOURTEENTH KHANDA.

Then they said, "Friend Upakosaia, (thus have we taught thee theoretically) the two doctrines about God, namely, that God is the 'I' (the inner ruler of all souls) and that God is the 'Âtman '(the All-pervading cosmic agent.) But thy teacher alone will tell thee the (practical) mode (of realising this teaching.)" In time his teacher came back, and said to him "Upakosala!"

He answered "Lord." The teacher said, "Friend, thy countenance looks bright as that of a person inspired. Now who has taught thee (a Deva or any lower entity)?" Upakosala said: "What (lower entity) can dare teach me, Sir? Men and asuras hide themselves before thee. The (presiding Devas of) these (fires) verily taught me. They were (refulgent) like these, but unlike these (as they had hands, feet, &c.)" Upakosala spoke about the Fires before his teacher. The teacher said. "What, my friend, have these Fires told you?

Upakosala answered, "This (repeating all that the Fires had told him.)" The teacher said, "My friend, they have taught thee the knowledge about the World-supporters, but I shall tell thee (the goal, the path and the method of meditation). As water does not cling to a lotus leaf, so no sinful act clings to one who knows Him thus." "He said: "Lord, tell me." He said then to him.

FIFTEENTH KHANDA.

(He said). This person who is seen in the eye is the Self (called Vamana.) This is the Immortal, the Fearless. This is Brahman. Nothing clings to this. Because (such a Person resides in the eye) therefore, if any one drops melted butter or water on it, it runs away on both sides (and does not cling to the eye.)

The wise call Him the Samyadvama (the Most Beautiful) because all objects of beauty enter into Him. All beautiful objects enter into Him who knows Him thus.

He verily is called Vamani (the Giver of beauty), because He alone gives beauty to all. He who knows Him thus gives beauty to all (beings inferior to himself.)

He is also Bhāmani (the Resplendent), for He shines in all worlds. Re who fnows this thus, shines in all worlds.

Now when such persons die, whether (their relations) perform their death ceremonies or not, they go to the plane of the Ray, from the Ray-plane to the Day-plane, from the Day-plane to the Bright-fortnightly plane, from the Bright-fortnightly plane to the Morthern six-monthly plane, from the Six-monthly plane to the Annual plane, from the Annual plane to the Solar plane, from the Solar plane to the Lunar plane, from the Lunar plane to the plane of Sarasvati, (from that they reach to the plane of the chief Vâyu) who is her Lord and beloved of God.

He leads them to Brahman. This is the path guarded by the Devas, the path that leads to Brahman. Those who proceed on that path, do not return to this round of humanity, yes, they do not return.

These texts show that there are many authorities to prove that the Grace of the Guru is the strongest element, in bringing about Mukti. "But if this be so why should a man exert at all? The grace of the Guru is all-sufficient." One should, however, not fall into this mistake. For the texts also say that a man should have supreme devotion to God, (Yasya deve parabhaktih) and that he should study and meditate (Śrotavyah, mantavyah) and the rest. All these are necessary for attaining perfection. Hence says a Smriti text:—

गुक्मसादे। वसवान् न तकाद् वसवस्तरम्। तथापि भवकादिश कर्यव्यो मोक्सिस्ये ॥

The grace of the Guru is the strongest. There is nothing stronger than that, Still study, mediation and the rest must also be performed in order to accomplish that ('telease.)

Adhikarana XXII.

It has been established that the fruit is obtained by worshipping the Lord as qualified with attributes accompanied with the Grace of the teacher. Now the author reconciles those texts which are an apparent conflict with the statement above made. In the Gopála Tápani the sages asked Brahmâ, the lotus-born, about that being who is the object of adoration to all, from whom death is even afraid, etc. In reply to their question Brahmâ teaches that Śrí Krisna possesses those all attributes and that the method of reaching Him is devotion to Him, which Brahmâ teaches to the sages. In the Uttar Gopála Tápani he further says:—

तस्मादेव परो रजस इति सोऽहमित्ववचार्य गापाकोऽहमिति भावयेत्। स मोक्षमञ्जते स म्हात्वमधिगच्छति स म्हात्वज्ञवति स मोक्षमिति ॥ Since this is so, let him meditate on Him who is beyond Rajas with the idea "I am he," "I am Gopāla." He obtains Mokṣa, he gets the state of Brahman, he becomes a knower of Brahma.

(Doubt.)—Here meditation with non-difference is apparently taught by the phrase "I am he." Therefore arises the doubt. It this meditation "I am he" based upon the teaching that the supreme Self and the individual Self are identical in essence, or is it only a particular kind of meditation, a particular manifestation of devotion taught above and in which state the Bhakta identifies himself with the object of his devotion?

(Parva-pakea.)—The opponent holds the view that the first alternative is the right one, for the words of the Upanisad naturally lend themselves to that view, and that Moksa is caused by meditating on the Great truth, that the individual Self is identical with the supreme Self.

(Siddhânta.)—The view is set aside by the next sûtra, where it will be shown that Soham is a form of Bhakti only, and is not to be taken literally.

BÛTRA III. 8. 46.

पूर्वविकल्पः प्रकरणात्स्यात्कियामानसवत् ॥ ३ । ३ ४६ ॥

पूर्व Pûrva, of the former (i.e., devotion.) विकल्प: Vikalpab, an optional form. श्रवस्थात् Prakaranat, on account of the subject matter. स्थात् Syat, there may be. किया Kriya, the acts of offering in pûja. नानस्थन् Manasavat, like the act of meditation.

46. This "Soham" meditation is a form of the former (i.e., it is a kind of Bhakti), because of the context, just like the mental forms of meditation and the physical acts (offerings in Pûjâ and the rest, are but modes of Bhakti)—407.

COMMENTARY.

This mental idea "I am He" is an optional form, and nothing more than that, of the "former," namely, of Bhakti. Why do we say so? Because of the context. The opening sentences of the Gopâla Tâpanî, after describing meditation and japa of Sri Krisna, thus defines Bhakti or Bhajana:

Bhajana or worship means Bhakti or devotion to the Lord. It consists in having no desire, or rather in renouncing all desires of enjoying the fruits of good work, either in this world or in the next: and in fixing the mind in That (Sri Krisna.) This is indeed true Naiskarmays or Sannyiss.

This Bhakti being mentioned in the previous portion of the Upanisad, and being also mentioned in the concluding portion of it also (Sachchidanand-aikarase bhaktiyoge tisthati) the middle portion "Soham" cannot but refer to this Bhakti. Hence this text must be interpreted in consonance with the opening and the concluding portions of the whole

Upanicad; and when so interpreted, it is found to be a peculiar mode of Bhakti, and not a different statement altogether, teaching the identity of the human soul with God. The Sûtrakâra illustrates this by an example, "Kriya-manasa-vat." It is like acts of services and pujas, and mental meditation. As these acts of Pûjs and meditation are but modes of Bhakti, so also the cry of the devotee "I am He," is also a particular mode of that very Bhakti previously taught. This mental condition "I am He" arises from the intensity of love, as well as from the extremity of fear. (As the Goptnis from the intensity of love cried out "I am Kriena.") Or as a man attacked by a lion, from the extremity of his fear says " I am the lion." The sense, therefore, is this. In the Pûrva Tapani the question asked is "Kab paramodevab, etc.," Who is the highest God, etc.? The sages asked Brahma about the nature of that transcendental substance. who possessed the attribute of being the object of adoration to all, who destroys the cycle of birth and death for His devotee, who is the refuge of all and the cause of all. Brahmâ being thus asked, replies by saying Srt Krisna is the highest God, who possesses all these attributes, which the sages have enquired after; and then he further teaches that he who meditates on Sri Krisna, recites His mantra and worships him, becomes immortal, and by such Bhakti the man loses the fear of the world. On being so taught, the sages again asked Brahma what is the form in which Sri Krisna should be meditated, what is the particular mantra which should be recited, 'and what was the mode of worshipping Him? Here the question evidently relates to an object of devotion and the method of that devotion. Being thus questioned Brahma teaches the form of Sri Krisna which the devotee must meditate upon in the verses beginning with "The cow-herd of the colour of cloud standing under the kalpa tree. etc." Having thus described His form and essential nature together with His companions (the cow-herd, the cow-mates and the cow) Brahma next describes the mantra that one must constantly recite in his japa. and then he says that the worship of Krisna consists in devotion to Him. by which a man discards the fruit of all works to be enjoyed here or in the next world, and which consists in renunciation of all such fruits; and such fixing of the mind on the Lord is true Sannyass. In other words. Brahma teaches three things to the sages in answer to their three questions. (1) The form which must be meditated upon, (2) the Mantra which must be recited in the japa and (3) the most important of all, he gives the definition of Bhajana, as Bhakti in these memorable words:-

> मक्तिरस्य भजनं तदिहामुत्रोपाधिनैरास्ये । नैवामुच्यानानः कस्पनमेतदेव च नैकाम्यम् ॥

Bhajana or worship means Bhakti or devotion to the Lord. It consists in having no desire or rather in renouncing all desire of enjoying the fruits of good work, either in this world or in the next. And in fixing the mind in That (Sri Krisna.) This is indeed true Naiskatwya or Sannyasa.

This defines Bhakti and describes its nature. After thus defining the nature of Bhakti, the Upanişad teaches the silent recitation of the Mantra with the syllable Om prefixed to it, and states that the result of such Japa is Mukti, in the shape of attaining Krispa.

भोंकारेबान्तरितं ये। जपति गेविन्दस्य पञ्चपदंगमुं तम् । तस्येवासा दर्शयदान्मकपं तसान्यमुश्चरभ्यसेबित्य शानये ॥

He who recites this Mantra, consisting of five words, prefixed with the syllable Om, is shown by the Lord His own form; therefore let the person desiring Mukti recite it always.

Note.—With the syllable Om, the mantra would become Om Klim Krisnaya, Om Govindaya, Om Gopijanavallabhaya, Om svaha Om.

Having thus shown the result of this japa, the Upanisad goes on to say:—

तमेकं गाविन्तं समिदानन्दविप्रद्यं पञ्च-पदं वृन्दावने सुरमूब्दतछासीनं सततं समस्त्रेकेऽदं परमयास्तरमा तावयामि ।

"I worship with the highest praise that one Govinda, whose form is existence, knowledge and bliss; whose mantra consists of five words; who is seated under the heavenly tree in Brindaban, along with the Maruta."

Having thus shown that a man by meditating on Krisna gets knowledge and happiness, the first part of Gopála Tapani ends with the statement "Therefore Krisna is the highest God, let one meditate upon Him, let one recite His mantra, let one love Him, yea love Him. Om tat sat."

Thus an analysis of the whole of Gopala Pürva Tapani Upanişad shows that it begins with declaring that Krispa is the highest God, and ends with that declaration. The whole thesis of this Upanişad is to teach the greatness of Krispa, and His worship, as the only means of getting Mukti.

It does not show that the Jivas who have to worship Krisna are identical with Him. An analysis of the second part (i. e., of) Gopāla Uttara Tāpani (in which occurs the phrase "I am He"), would lead any reasonable man to the same conclusion as above, in spite of this stumbling block of Soham Asmi, I am He. We now proceed to analyse this Upanişad.

Once the cow-maids of Brindaban asked Sri Kriena, Who was the fittest person whom they should feed with alms? Kriena replied that Durvasas was such a person, who lived on the other side of the Yamuna. They saked Him "How are we to cross it?" Kriena said "you will walk over it by saying to it, "Kriena is a celibate." The cow-maids did so, and crossing the river, went to the hermitage of Durvassa, and presented all the delicious dainties that they had brought for Him. And the sage did full justice to the viands. Being highly pleased, he blessed them, and then they asked him "How are we to return?" He said, "walk over the waters of the river saying that Durrasa is a fasting sage." The cow-maids perplexed, making Radha their spokesman, enquired from him the meaning of these dark sayings-how Kriena was a celibate, and how Durvasas was a fasting sage. Then Durvasa explained to them the mystery of the Great Self of Sri Krisna, beginning with the following words:-"This verily is Sri Krisns, about whom you have asked, who is the cause of the subtle and the gross body, etc." He taught them, that Srl Krispa was the cause of all, that His nature was to willingly submit to those who loved Him with sincere and disinterested affection: and that He is the eternal beloved of such souls. Then the cow-maids asked him about the birth, deeds, the Mantra and the various places of manifestation of Sri Krispa. And the sage tells them these, commencing with the following words:-

"In the beginning was God Náráyana alone, in Whom these worlds are interwoven. From the lotus of his heart arose Brahmá, the Creator of the world. Brahmá asked Him who is the highest and best of all avatáras with whom all the worlds and the Devas are satisfied, by remembering whom they cross the cycle of births and deaths, and how is this avatára, the Brahmán?

To him replied the God Nārāyana, "As there are seven cities on the summit of the Meru hill where dwell those who have performed good deeds, with the desire of getting reward; so there are seven other cities above these where dwell those who perform works without any desire of reward. Among them the best is the city of Gopāla, the manifested Brahman. This city is Madhura.

Then Narayana describes this sacred Madhura, surrounded by various groves and gardens, forests and bowers and protected by the Chakra of the Lord. And then he says, "Sri Krisna dwells in this city, accompanied by His three powers, and four glories (Balarama, Aniruddha, Pradyumna, and Rukmint) who represent the four letters of the syllable Aum. Then He adds:—

तसादेव परारजस इति साऽहमि-स्वच्यार्थे गापाकाञ्चमिति भावयेत ।

Since He is so, salutation to Him, who is above Rajas. Let a man thinking that "I am He," meditate "I am Gopâla."

This teaches a form of meditation—the meditation of unity between the worshipper and the worshipped, and shows that such prayer of union is also a cause of Mukti. Thus this teaching "Soham, Gopaloham" does not declare the absolute identity of the individual soul with the Supreme Self, but that a more reasonable interpretation of this text is that it teaches a particular kind of devotion, similar to those taught in the preceding portions of this Upanisad. As in the state of ecstasy, a man weeps, rolls about, becomes catalyptic, etc., so also there comes a stage in devotion, when the saint cries out "I am He," "I am Brahman." All these expressions are occurrences of God-intoxicated souls, and are not to be taken in their literal sense. Expressions like these, found in other Upanisads, like the Taittiriya and the rest, declaring non-difference, must be understood in this sense, namely, as expressions of persons saturated with Brahman and possessed by Him. This is possible only where there is difference, and not where there is absolute identity. This has been explained before also.

The author now gives another reason for holding that statements like "I am He," are merely expressions of particular mental modes of the devotees, and they should be so understood; and that they do not teach the absolute identity of the human soul with the supreme Lord.

SUTRA III. 3. 47.

म्रातिवेशास्त्र ॥ ३ । ३ । ४७ ॥

चतिरेवात् Atidesat. on account of comparison. प Cha, and.

47. And on account of comparison (made in the Gopâla Uttara Tâpani between the Lord and His Bhaktas, as that of a father and his sons, the human soul is not identical with the Supreme Self)—408.

COMMENTARY.

In the same Upanisad (Gopála Uttara Tapani) the Lord addressing Brahma, says:—

यथा त्वं सह पुत्रेस्तु यथा रहो गकैः सह । यथा भियाऽभेयुकोऽइं तथा भक्तो मम प्रियः ॥

As thou art surrounded by Thy sons (Nårada and the rest, and art happy in their company), as Radra is surrounded by his hosts, as I am constantly accompanied by Sri, so verily My Bhaktas are dear to me.

This verse may also be translated thus:-

As Thou with Thy sons art dear to Me, as Rudra with His hosts is a constant object of My solicitude, as Sri is ever impartible from Me, so is My devotee dear to Me.

This shows that as the lotus-born Brahmâ and the rest are accompanied by their sons, etc., so the Lord is always accompanied by His Bhaktas and He loves them very dearly. The word "and" implies that the next verse also should be considered in this connection.

कृटसस्य स्वरूपं च किरीटं प्रवदन्ति माम् । चसरोत्तं प्रस्कुरत्तत्कुण्डलं युगलं स्युतम् ॥ च्यायेन्सम् प्रिया नित्यं स मासमंचिगच्छति । स मुको भवति तस्मै च चात्मानं वृदामीति ॥ "Let My beloved meditate constantly on the esoteric meaning of My form as described above, such as My crown is kutastha, etc. Thus he attains release, becomes free and I give myself to Him." Thus this Upanisad shows that the devotee is the eternally beloved of the Lord and that as he has entirely given himself to Him, the Lord has also given Himself to him. Now this eternal loving and reciprocal gift is impossible if the devotee were identical with the Lord. Therefore expressions like "I am He," "I am Gopâla" (Analhaq), "I am the true" indicate that they are different modes of Bhakti. Thus should be explained the "Soham" expressions found in other Upanisads like Rama Tâpani, etc.

Thus it has been established that release is to be obtained from the worship of the Lord accompanied by the Grace of the Guru. There can be no objection to this proposition.

Adhikarana XXIII.

Vidya of meditation preceded by the study of Scriptures.

The author now tries to show more clearly that the release is to be obtained by such Vidyâ. Expressions like "Knowing Him verily one goes beyond death," "There is no other path to walk upon"—(Svet. Up. III. 8). Similarly, in Purûşa sukta, "knowing Him verily one becomes immortal here." Such expressions show that it is by knowledge that one gets immortality.

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt, What is the direct cause of Mukti? Is it the performance of the ritualistic acts which lead to Mukti? Or is it the performance of such acts accompanied by Vidyå as defined above? Or does it depend on Vidyå alone, independently of Karma or ritualistic acts?

(Parra-pakea.)—The Pürvapakein maintains that Mukti depends upon the due performance of the ritualistic Karmas, and he refers to the six aphorisms commencing with III. 4. 2-7. On the strength of these aphorisms, he maintains that Vidyå is secondary or rather it stands to Karma in a supplementary relation. The Pürvapakein further says, if Karmas alone are not the cause of Mukti, then Karmas plus Vidyå lead to Mukti, and that none of them singly has the power of giving release. Thus he takes his stand on the first two alternatives. In support of his proposition that the combination of Vidyå and Karma is the cause of Mukti, he refers to the following sloka:—

डमाञ्यामेन प्साम्यां यथा ने पहिन्त गतिः। तथैन कर्महानाभ्यां मुक्तो भवति मानवः ॥ As the birds move in the sky with the help of both their wings, so a man becomes Mukta by the conjoint help of Karma and Jfiana.

The Pürvapakşin further says that Mukti may depend upon Vidyâ alone, because of the text above quoted. For all these reasons he affirms that the true cause of Mukti is indeterminate. It may be Vidyâ, it may be Karma or it may be a combination of both.

(Siddhanta.)—The following sûtra refutes this view.

SÛTRA III. 8. 48.

विचेव तु तक्रिर्धारणात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ४८ ॥

विश्व Vidya, the devotion accompanied by knowledge, एव Eva, indeed. हु Tu, verily, undoubtedly. तम् Tat, about. निर्धारवाम् Nirdharaṇat, being asserted.

48. Vidyâ alone is verily the cause of Mukti, because Scripture mentions it exclusively—409.

COMMENTARY.

The word tu is used in the sutra in order to remove the doubt above raised. The Vidya alone is the cause of salvation and neither Karma nor the combination of Karma and Vidya. Why do we say so? Because of the assertion in the Scriptures:—(Svet. Up. III. 8.) तमेच विद्यादिन स्थापित, By knowing Him alone one gets Mukti.

In the above, the particle eva "alone" indicates that the Vidyå and Vidyå only leads to Mukti. By the word Vidyå is meant here devotion preceded by knowledge. The word Viditvå of the above text, therefore, means "by being devoted to Him, having fully known His essence." That this is the true meaning of the root Vid, to know, when used in the Scriptures, we find from other passages also. Thus the well-known passage of Brih. Up., Vijñåya prajñam kurvita "after knowing, let him practise wisdom," where the word wisdom means the same thing as Vidyå, and the sentence means after knowing Him "let one practise devotion." The Smriti also uses the word Vidyå in both these senses of knowledge and devotion. Thus in the sentence, Vidyå kuthårena sitena dhîrah "the wise one with the sharpened axe of Vidyå." Here the word Vidyå evidently means knowledge. Similarly in the Gîtâ IX. 2, the word Vidyå is used in the sense of devotion. (Råja vidyå, råja guhyam, etc.)

In fact the word Vidya, when used as a general term, denotes both knowledge and devotion, but when used in a restricted sense, it means devotion only. It is like the words Kaurava and Mimamsaka. When used in a generic sense, Kaurava includes the sons of Dhritarastra and of Pandu, but when used in a restricted sense, it means only the first class and not the Påndavas. Similarly, a Mimāmsaka in a general way means one who knows the Mimāmsā, whether it be the Pūrvamimāmsā of Jaimini, or the Uttara Mimāmsā of Bādarāyana. In this generic sense a Vedāntin knowing the Vedānta sūtra is also a Mimāmsaka; but in the restricted sense, the followers of Jaimini, who study the Karma Mimāmsā are only called Mimāmsaka and not the Vedāntins who study the Brahma Mimāmsā.

This Moksa, moreover, is brought about by the direct perception of the Lord as an external object, namely, by the perception of the Lord in the same way as one sees an object which is exterior to himself. So long as this external visual perception does not take place, there is no salvation. Therefore, the author says in the next sûtra:—

SÛTRA III. 8. 49.

दर्शनाचा॥३।३।४६॥

वर्णनात् Darganat, it being seen in the scriptures. प Cha, and.

49. And this Makti takes place by seeing the Lord -410.

COMMENTARY.

In the Mundaka Up. II. 2. 8, we read as follow:-

भिचते इदयप्रन्थिष्टिक्यन्ते सर्वसंदायाः । शीयन्ते चास्य कर्माचि तक्षिन्द्रच्टे परावरे ॥ ८ ॥

The fetters of the Jiva are cut asunder, the ties of Lingadeha and Prakriti are removed, (the effects of all) his works perish, when He is seen who is Supremely High: (or when the Supremely High looks at the Jiva.)

This clearly shows that Mukti is the result of the direct vision of the Lord. The word "seeing" is not used here in a figurative sense, but means seeing the Lord like any other object of perception.

If this be so, then it contradicts those Scriptural teachings which declare that release is from Karma; or those teachings which assert that Mukti is obtained from the conjunction of knowledge and action, Jñana and Karma. This objection is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 50.

श्रुत्यादिवलीयस्त्वाच न वाधः ॥ ३ । ३ । ५० ॥

श्रुति-सादि Éruti-âdi, of the Vedas and others. बनीवस्तान् Ballyastvât, on account of the stronger force. ज, Cha, and. ज, Na, there is no. बाध:, Bâdhaḥ, refutation.

50. The texts quoted by the Pûrvapaksin are not competent to set aside the texts which declare that Mukti is by Vidyâ alone, because the direct texts of the Sruti together with those passages which are indicatory or which give some reason, are more powerful than the texts of the Pûrvapaksin—411.

COMMENTARY.

By the two texts quoted by the Pûrvapak; in, it is not possible to set aside the operation of the texts which declare that it is by Vidyâ alone that Mukti is obtained. (The two texts of the Pûrvapak; in are given in sûtra III. 3. 48.) Why do we say so? Because the texts of the Vedas are stronger in force than the Smiti texts quoted by the Pûrvapak; in. Such weaker texts cannot set aside the stronger texts of the Śruti. The Śruti uses the exclusive particle eva, (tam eva viditvâ) to indicate that it is by Viditvâ or Vidyâ alone that Mukti is obtained. This strong text of the Śruti overpowers the weaker texts. This text is the strongest by reason of the word 'eva' in it. The word 'adi' in the sûtra indicates that reason and characteristic marks are also in favour of Vidyâ being the cause of Mukti. The scriptures give characteristic marks or suggestions indicating that Vidyâ alone is efficacious. Thus the following text:—

र्न्दोञ्चमेघाच्छतमिष्ट्रापि राजा ज्ञद्याखमीडां समुवाचापसकः। न कर्मभिनं धनै-नापि वान्येः॥

"The king Indra though He had offered one hundred Asvamedha sacrifices, yet he was not satisfied with himself and approaching the adorable Brahma, said to Him--" Neither by sacrificial works nor by riches, nor by any other means like these can one see the highest joy, therefore tell Thou unto me the great truth."

(This shows by suggestion that Vidya alone is efficacious and not Karma.) Another text says, Nasty akritah kritena, the eternal is never to be obtained by the transient means. This gives the reason why Vidya alone is efficacious. Mukti is an akritah or non-manufactured or eternal thing. And, therefore, Karmas which are kritas or products cannot give Mukti.

As regards the six sûtras III. 4. 2-7, quoted by the Pûrvapaksin, they do not represent the view of Bâdarâyana but of Jaimini; and the Sûtrakâra himself refutes the opinion of Jamini in his subsequent sûtras beginning with III. 4. 8-14. The word 'cha' in the aûtra indicates that all those passages which express that Vidya destroys all Karmas must also be included here. The text quoted by the Pûrvapakşin, namely, Tam vidya karmani "by Vidya and Karma conjointly Mukti is obtained" is explained by the Sûtrakara in III. 4.11.

Therefore, it is proved that Vidya alone is the cause of Mukti.

Adhikarana XXIV.

Now the author shows that Mukti is to be obtained with the auxiliary help of holy men. In the Tait. Up. I. 11. 2., it is said—

चतिथिदेवा भव

Let the guest be a God to Thee.

(Doubt.)—Is the worship of the holy men a cause of getting Mukti or not?.

(Ptrva-pakea.)—The opponent's view is, What is the use of worshipping the holy men when Mukti is to be obtained by the Grace of the Guru added to the worship of God? The good men or Sat are not means of Mukti.

(Siddhanta.)-This view is set aside in the next sutra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 51.

म्रनुबन्धाविभ्यः ॥ ३ । ३ । ५१ ॥

श्रव्यक्ष श्राहिष्य: Anubandha-Âdibhyaḥ, from the corresponding injunction (to worship the great souls) and from others.

51. From the express injunctions (for worshipping the great souls it follows that that also is an auxiliary to Mukti)—412.

COMMENTARY.

The word "anubandha" means the injunction about the worship of the Great Ones. That is to say, worshipping them as if they were Devas. By such worship also they become gracious and Mukti is obtained. If the worship of the Holy Ones was not an auxiliary to Mukti, then the Sruti would not have said "Worship the guest as a God," Atithi devo bhava. The word "guest" here means the Holy and the Great One. In the Bhagavata Purana also we find the same teaching given by Jadabharata to Rahûgana V. 12.12.

रहुगबैतत् तपसा न याति न बेज्यया निर्वपबाद् गृहाद् वा । न सम्बसा नैव जलाग्निस्यॉर्विना महत् पादरजाऽभिषेकम् ॥ This attainment of Mukti cannot be had without the service of the Great Ones (lit., vrithout ancinting one's self with the dust of the feet of the holy ones) for this knowledge is not to be obtained by austerity, O Rahūgaņa! Nor by sacrificial offerings, nor by gift of food or houses, nor by the study of the Vedas, nor by the worship of water, fire or the Sun.

The Lord has Himself said so to Uddhava in the same (XI. 12. 1-2):

न राययति मां योगा न सांक्यं धर्म एव ध । न स्वाच्यायस्तपस्त्यांगा नेष्टापूर्णं न दक्षिका ॥ मतानि यक्षप्रक्रम्(सि तीर्थानि नियमा यमाः । यथावकम्ये सतुसकुः सर्वसकुगरहा हि मामू ॥

I am not constrained so much by the practices of Yoga or the study of Sankhya, or by the recitation of the Vedas, or by the performance of penances or by renunciation, or by acts of sacrifices, charity and public utility, or by alms, or by fasts or worship of devas, or recitation of secret mantras, or by visiting sacred pilgrimages, or by the rules of restraint and religious observances; so much as I am constrained by the company of the Good which destroys all other evil companionship.

Here the Lord, even after revealing His own mystery to Uddhava, ends by saying that the company of the Good (Satsanga) is the highest means of constraining God, namely, of reaching Him easily. Therefore, Satsanga is one of the secrets of sadhana or practice by which a man may reach God.

The word "adi," "and the rest," means that going to sacred pilgrimages and not abusing worshippers of Gods other than Hari, are also to be included, in the meaning of the word Satsanga, as we find from the following Smritis:—

शुभुषाः मह्मानस्य वासुदेवकयाविषः । स्यात् महत्तसेवया विमाः पुण्यतीर्थनिषेवजात् ॥ (Bhāgavata Purāṇa.) हरिरेक्सदाराच्यः सर्वदेवेभ्यरेश्वरः । इतरे क्रायताशा नावज्ञेया कवाचत ॥ (Padma.)

A person who serves (the Masters) and has faith gets a taste for the narrations of the life-history of Vasudeva. This taste is acquired, O Brahmanas! by serving the Great, by visiting sacred places of pilgrimages. Hari should be worshipped alone as the Highest God, Supreme over all Devas and Rulers of Devas. Nor must such a one look with contempt upon gods like Brahma and Rudra, etc.

Note.—See Nårada Bhakti Sûtra S. B. H., Vol. VII, p. 18 and 19.

The Pürvapakşin says, it is through the grace of God that one gets a Guru and the companionship of the Good; therefore, why not say that the grace of God alone is the cause of Mukti. Even the good luck (Adrista) is also caused by the Lord, and cannot be said to be the cause of getting the Lord. In fact, all human motives and inclinations are caused by the Lord, as has been proved in the previous Sütra II. 3. 39. Therefore, to imagine that the grace of the Guru and of the good men is also a cause of Mukti is a redundancy, for when the grace of God is obtained, there is no necessity of any other person.

To this objection we reply, it is perfectly right that God Himself is the cause of the grace shown by the Guru and the Great Ones still these persons must also be considered as causes, though mediate ones. This has been explained in Sûtra II. 3. 40 and the rest. The fact is that the Lord Hari, who is a slave to His devotees, confers His power of granting grace to such persons; therefore, such persons (the Guru and the Great Ones) may be considered as independent agents in showing grace to others. When a man has the good fortune of obtaining the grace of these Holy Ones, then the Lord also shows grace on such a person. Thus all texts are harmonised and conflict removed.

Note.-The following sttras of Narada show the same :-

But love of God is possible on the abandonment of all sensible objects and of every attachment to them—35.

(That arises also) from its cultivation without remiss, or from unflinching adoration of God-36.

(That springs also) from listening to and singing of the virtues and attributes of the Great God in society—37.

But that is obtained, principally and surely, by the grace of the Great Ones, or, in other words, from the touch of divine compassion—38.

Companionship of the Great is, again, difficult of attainment. It is hardly possible to assign how and when men may be taken into the society of the Great. But once obtained, association with the Great Ones is infallible in its operation—39.

And companionship of the Great is gained by the grace of God alone-40.

Recause there is no distinction between Him and His man-41.

Adhikarana XXV.

चय चलु कतुमयः पुरुषः, यथा कतुरस्मिंहोके पुरुषा भवति, तथेतः प्रेत्य भवति सकतुं कुर्वति ।

Because a man is a creature of faith, as is his faith in this life, so will be his condition in the next after death. So let him generate full faith (in the Lord.)

This worship of Brahman is of different modes, according as it is pure worship of Brahman, or is accompanied with meditation on the Guru and the Great Ones. The question is, do these different modes of meditation lead to the same fruit or are their results different? Is it the cause of the different perception of Brahman in Mukti, by the devotees who had come through different paths?

(Pûrvapakşa.)—The Pûrvapakşin says, there is no difference in the perception of Brahman, by the devotees, in Mukti. Though they had come by different paths, their perception of Brahman is uniform, just like the perception of travellers coming to the same city, through different directions. Though they come by different roads, they see the same city. They do not see different cities, merely because they had come through different roads. That their conception is uniform, is proved by the Sruti also. We have in the Mundaka Up. (III. 1. 3.) that on attaining Mukti all the Jivas get similarity.

When the Jiva sees the golden coloured Creator and Lord, as the Person from whom Brahmā comes out, then the wise, shaking off virtue and vice and becoming free from Avidyā, attains the highest similarity.

Therefore, you cannot say that Mukti is different for different people, according to the paths on which they have come up.

(Siddhânta.)—This view is set aside in the next sûtra, which shows that the vision of the Lord, obtained by the devotees in Mukti, differs according to the paths on which they have come up.

BÛTRA III. 8. 52.

प्रज्ञान्तरपृथक्त्ववदृदृष्टिश्च तदुक्तम् ॥ ३ । ३ । ५२ ॥

पहा Prajna, cognition, perception. स्वयंत्र Antara, the other, the different. पृथक्तवत् Prithaktvavat, according to the variety of, or the difference in. हाई: Dristib, the direct seeing of Him, by the devotees. स Cha and. तर Tad, that. स्वयंत्र Uktam, is stated.

52. Like the difference between the two sorts of knowledge mentioned in Brihad. Up. IV. 4. 21, there is difference in the perception of the Lord, by the different devotees, in the state of Mukti. And this has been expressly mentioned in the Chhândogya texts—413.

COMMENTARY.

In the sentence Vijñâya prajñâm kûrvita (after knowing Him let him practise wisdom, Brihad Up. IV. 4. 21), we find two sorts of knowledge, one called Vijñâna or knowledge and the other is called Prajñâ or wisdom. The first is intellectual knowledge obtained from the study of the words of the Scriptures But the other called Prajñâ or wisdom means devotion. This differs from the first, for the one is a mere intellectual conception, the other is an intuitional realisation. As there is this difference between the intellect and the intuition, so there are different kinds of intuitions also,—beatific vision obtained by the worshippers of the Lord is not same for all. Visions differ, according to the attitude of the worshipping souls. This has been asserted in the text of the Chhând. Up. mentined above; namely, there is a difference in the state of Mukti, according to the Kratu or faith of the devotee. Thus it follows that the vision of the Lord differs according to the nature of meditation on Him. And that, after such vision, there comes final Mukti. The similarity spoken of in the Mundaka Up. consists in this, that all have the vision of the same Lord, though He appears in different aspects to different devotees. In other words, all see the Lord called Niranjana, free from all veils of Maya, but that does not mean that Lord does not appear in different aspects, to the different devotees.

(Objection.)—Admitted that this is so, your argument is still faulty. You say that without Vidya or devotion, there is no vision of the Lord; and without such vision, there is no final emancipation. Both these propositions are untenable, because during the time of the manifestation of the Lord on earth, as an Avatara, He is seen by persons who have no devotion; and even after such seeing, all who see Him do not get Mukti. All who saw Krisna or Rama did not get Mukti. This objection is next answered.

SÛTRA III. 3. 58.

न सामान्यादप्युपलब्धेर्मृत्युवन्नहि लोकापत्तिः ॥ ३ । ३ । ५३ ॥

न Na, there is not (the power of liberating.) सानान्यास् Samanyat, due to similarity. चार्च Api, even. उपसन्धः Upalabdheḥ, of the seeing, or perception. इत्युवस् Mrityuvat, just as in the case of every kind of death. न Na, not. दि Hi, because. सोक-चार्यासः Loka-apattiḥ, the reaching to the other worlds.

53. As death, common to all, (does not mean Mukti) but only attainment of any particular region of enjoyment, so Mukti is not attained by an ordinary or common vision of the Lord, obtained by every being (when the Lord incarnates on earth as an Avatâra)—414.

COMMENTARY.

The word "also" has the force of exclusion. That vision which is obtained in a general way, namely, which is common to all, at the time when the Lord descends on the earth and assumes a physical form, is not the cause of Mukti. As death, which is common to all, is not the cause of Mukti, though to the Jivanmukta, death means Mukti. But is then there no good result even in this ordinary seeing of the Lord, when He comes as an Avatâra? Do those persons who see the Avatâra get no fruit at all? Yes, they do. It is not Mukti, but attainment of higher spheres of heavenly joy. Thus as the Vidyâdhara Sudarsana saw the Lord in a general way and got heaven, or just as the king Nirga also got heaven by such seeing. If you say that getting heaven is Mukti, then the sûtra replies "Na hi," not so. Getting of higher spheres is not Mukti. The Smriti is also to the same effect. In the Narayana Tantra, we also find the following:—

सामान्यदर्शनात् छोकामुक्तियीन्यात्मदर्शनात् ।

"From the ordinary perception of some one form, different celestial regions are reached, but final release comes from the perception to which he is specially entitled; and there is no doubt as to this, that the soul attains Mukti (release) on obtaining the perception of Brahman, for which he is eligible."

The sense is this, the vision is of two sorts—the vision of the Lord as enveloped in Mâyâ, and vision free from such Mâyâ. The first sort of vision arises when there is great merit of Punyam. Through such vision a man reaches heavenly regions: but the second sort of vision, which is obtained only through theosophic knowledge or Brahma-Vidyâ, the subtle body called the Linga deha is destroyed, the man becomes the beloved of the Lord, has His vision and sees Him as consisting of intelligence and bliss, free from all Mâyâ. It is this vision, so produced, which causes the final Mukti. Thus every thing is reconciled.

It is said, that even the enemies of the Lord, killed by the Lord, get Mukti at the very moment of their death, when they are just killed by Him. How is this? Such persons get final Mukti, because their Linga deha even is destroyed, by the mysterious touch of the sacred weapons of the Lord, as they strike at Him. When the Linga deha is once destroyed thus, at the very moment of death, his attitude of mind instantly changes from hostility to Him to love for Him, and be at his last moment sees the Lord, as the object of greatest endearment and love, and because he sees Him so, he gets Mukti. (The Mukti is not obtained, because he is killed by the Lord, but because his Linga deha even is destroyed, and he sees the Lord in His true glory, with unclouded vision, full of love.) If this were not so, it would contradict many texts (declaring that love of God and not hatred of Him leads to Mukti.)

Adhikarana—XXVI.

This section is commenced, in order to strengthen the view, that Mukti is obtained by the vision of the Lord, through devotion. In the Mundaka and Katha Up. we find (Mund. III. 2. 3.):—

नायमात्मा प्रवचनेन लभ्यो न मेधया न बहुना भुतेन । यमेवैच बृक्तुते तेन लभ्यस्तस्यैच मात्मा विवृक्ते ततुः स्वाम् ॥

This Self cannot be gained by dissertations (devoid of devotion), nor by (mere keen) intellect, nor by much hearing. It is gained only by him whom the Self chooses. To him this Self reveals His form.

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt, does the beatific vision depend upon the choosing of the Lord, or is it the effect of devotion joined with dispassion and knowledge?

(Pârva-pakṣa.)—The opponent maintains that it depends merely upon the choosing of the Lord, as the above text shows. This is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 54.

परेण च शब्दस्य ताद्विध्यं भृयस्त्वात्त्वनुबन्धः ॥३।३।५४॥

प्रेस Parena, by the statements immediately following. च Cha, and. ग्रह्स्स Sabdasya, of the word. ताहिष्यम् Tâdvidhyam, being in reference to it, having the same import, namely, denoting the attainableness of the Lord through Bhakti. श्रृहस्त्राम् Bhūyastvāt, due to pre-eminence. सु Tu, also. श्रह्मस्त्राः Anubandhah, the corresponding injunctions: the exclusive mention.

54. When read with the verse immediately following, the words here also denote the same. The exclusive mention of choice is because of its pre-eminence—415.

(The words expressing that the Lord can be seen only by him whom He chooses, when read with the verse) immediately following it, (mean one and the same thing, namely, He is obtained by Bhakti preceded by knowledge.) The choice is given pre-eminence, because it is the last in the chain of causation, and is the predominating factor.

COMMENTARY.

The words of the above texts, though apparently meaning that Lord is to be obtained only by him whom the Lord chooses, yet they really mean to teach that He is obtained through devotion, and this is shown by the next verse immediately following it, and by other texts also. The above verse, therefore, does not mean that the vision of the Lord depends upon the arbitrary choice of the Lord. In the immediately following verse it is said:—

नायमात्मा बलहीनेन लभ्यो न च प्रमादासपसा वाप्यलिङ्गात्। एतैरुपायैर्यतते यस्त विद्वास्तस्यैष चात्मा विराते ज्ञाधाम ।

This Self is not to be gained by one who is destitute of power, nor by the heedless, nor by one who performs penances not countenanced by scriptures. But the wise, who strives after Him by those means (by śravana, manana, etc., coupled with Bhakti, while praying always for grace) obtains Him and then for him (these become helpful.) To Him this Supreme Self manifests in the home of Brahman (reveals Himself through Váyu.)

This shows that the methods or upays or seeing Brahman are power, heedlessness, etc., mentioned here. Bala or power here means Bhakti or devotion. As is said in another sverse:—"They control me by devotion as faithful wives control their husbands." Similarly, in the Gita, (VIII. 22.):—

पुरुषः स परः पार्थं भक्त्या स्रम्यस्वनम्यया । यस्यान्तःसानि भूतानि येन सर्वप्रिदं ततम् ॥

He, the highest Spirit, O Partha, may be reached by unswerving devotion to Him alone, in whom all beings abide, by whom all This is pervaded.

Similarly, in Katha Up. II. 23 and 24:-

नायमास्मा प्रवचनेन स्रम्यो न मेघया न बहुना धुतेन । यमेवैष वृद्धते तेन स्रभ्यस्तस्यैष चास्मा विवद्धते तन्छः स्वाम् ॥

The Âtmā is not to be obtained by many explanations, nor by the intellect, nor by much learning. He whom alone this Âtmā elects, by him is He obtained : for him this Âtmā reveals His own nature.

नाविरता बुद्धरिताचाशान्तो न समाहितः। नाशान्तमानसा वापि प्रज्ञानेनैनमाप्त्रयात्॥ २४ ॥

He who has ceased from evil deeds and is controlled (in senses), concentrated (in intellect) and controlled (in mind) obtains this Atma through the knowledge (of Brahman.)

Note.—This shows that same, dama samedhens, &c., are also means of knowing the Lord: for His grace would naturally fall on such a person,

This second verse of the Katha, immediately following the first. qualifies it, and shows that practices of devotion are not useless. It lays down a graduated series of practices for obtaining Brahman, or rather for obtaining His choice. They are (1) cessation from evil deeds, (2) control of the senses, (3) concentration of thought, (4) control of mind. Thus the verse about choice, which occurs both in the Mundaka and the Katha Upanisads, must be read with the immediately succeeding verses in each of these Upanisads; and when so read, it will appear, that the choice of the Lord is not an arbitrary and capricious thing, but a well regulated selection of Jivas, having regard to their devotion, etc. Therefore, the choice here means selection made by the Lord, owing to the devotion of the elected, for thus can the two verses of this Upanişad be harmonised. Moreover, the first verse means that the Lord is to be obtained by election alone, no one can get Him whom He does not elect. And He does not elect any one who does not love Him, but only those who are His beloved. and who love Him in return. Those are the beloved of the Lord, who have devotion to the Lord, and not those who have no such devotion. Thus ultimately devotion is the cause of Lord's election. The Lord Himself has said so in the Gita, VII. 17:-

तेषां द्वानी निस्ययुक्त एकमक्तिविधिप्यते ॥ त्रियो हि द्वानिनेऽस्ययमहं स च मम प्रियः ॥

Of these, the wise constantly harmonised, worshipping the One, is the best; I am upremely dear to the wise, and he dear to Me.

So also in the Kaivalya Up., verse 2, Brahma says to Asvalayana:—Sraddha-bhakti-dhyana yogad avehi, "try to know Him by the combined practice of meditation, devotion and faith."

The texts like these show that the knowledge of Brahman is obtainable by Bhakti. If this were not so, and if only those could know Him whom Brahman chose to reveal Himself, then the Lord would be open to the charge of partiality and favouritism.

If this is so, why does the text say "the Lord reveals Himself to those only whom He chooses so to reveal"? The answer to this is given in the last words of the Sûtra, bhûyastvât tvanubandhab. The exclusive mention of choice is to indicate its greatness. The choice is the immediate cause of Divine vision. It is the last in the link of causes that lead to Divine vision, and it is the greatest of such causes, and therefore, it is mentioned as the exclusive cause of the Divine vision. The gradation of causes is as follow: first comes keeping the company of the righteous and good men, and serving them. By such company and service, there dawns the knowledge of the essential nature of one's own Self and of the Divine or Supreme Self. Then comes Vairagyam or a total disgust for every thing of this world, and of the next; with a yearning to reach the Lord. This is Bhakti. When the Bhakti becomes strong, the man becomes the beloved of the Lord, and because of such dearness to Him, he is chosen by Him. Then comes the direct vision of the Lord. Thus choice comes as the last in this chain of causations. and hence the Sruti says "He only sees the Lord, whom the Lord chooses to see."

Adhikarana XXVII.

It has been determined before that the devotees, who worship the Lord with the attitude of a servant or a friend, from the very beginning of their worship, meditate on Him in the highest ether and see Him there. But there are some who do not see the Lord in this aspect, but whose attitude is one of quietness, and who worship the Lord not in the supreme ether, but in the various parts of their body, such as stomach, etc. Thus in the Aitareya Up. it is said that the Sarkaraksas worship Brahman in the stomach, that the Arunayas worship Brahman in the heart, etc. Here these words, stomach, heart, etc., give rise to doubt.

(Doubt.)—Is Hari to be worshipped in the stomach, heart, etc., or not?

(Pârva-pakea.)—The Pârvapakein says, Brahman is not material, and so should not be worshipped as stomach, heart, etc. He does not manifest His glory in these transitory objects, but He exists in the non-material highest ether, which is itself eternal, and in which the Lord is eternally manifested.

(Siddhanta.) - This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

8ÛTRA III. 8. 55.

एक भ्रात्मनः शरीरे भावात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ५५ ॥

एके Eke, some. जालनः Atmanah, (the worship of and the meditation on) the Lord. श्रीरे Sartre, in the body, or in the heart, or in the Brahmanic hole. आवान Bhavat, because He is (there.)

55. Some Sakhins hold that the Âtman (Visnu) should be meditated upon as various members of the body, because He exists there also—416.

COMMENTARY.

Some Sakhas hold the view that the worship of Visnu, the Supreme Self, should be done in the body, namely, in the stomach, heart and top of the head, etc. Why? Because the Lord exists in these places also. They say, that if a thing is to be obtained near at hand, why one should search for it in a distant place, if honey is to be found in house-tree, why should one go to the hills in search of it. They mean to say, when the Lord is so worshipped in stomach, etc., He being pleased with His devotees, must necessarily give them the highest region or Mukti. In the Bhagavata Purana (X. 87.18) also it is said:—

The Sarkarakeas worship the Lord as stomach, following the paths of the Risis. The Arunayas worship Him as the ether of the heart, as the easiest road of reaching Him. But higher than these two, O endless One! is Thy abode in the head. Those who worship Thee in the head, rising thereto by Susumna from the heart, they never fall into the jaws of death again: (for head is the Valkuntha.)

Thus in the Aitareya Âranyaka, II. 4. 1:-

डवरं इहोति शार्करास्या उपासते, इदयं इहोत्यादखया इहाहैव ता ३ इ, इति । कर्षं त्वेवादसर्पत् तष्टिराज्ययत यष्टिराज्ययत तष्टिरामवत् तष्टिरसः शारस्वयः।

"The Sarkarakeas worship the stomach as Brahman, the Arunayas meditate on the heart as Brahman, &c."

Adhikarana XXVIII.

In the text of the Chhand. Up., III. 14. 1, it has been said "as is the faith of a man in this life, so will be his condition in the next." And in the succeeding verses of the same Khanda, it has been taught that Brahman should be meditated upon as possessing the attributes of Lordliness and as well as those of Beauty and Sweetness. It has also been shown above, that there is no conflict in these two forms of meditation, the Lord as Majestic and the Lord as All-beautiful. The Jivas follow one or other of these modes of meditation, according to the will of the Lord, and the training obtained by them in the company of the Good and Holy men belonging to that particular order of devotion. By any one of these two methods the Lord is reached, as has been shown in the Sûtra III. 3. 29.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, does the man reach that particular aspect of the Lord, possessing those particular qualities, which he has been meditating upon, or does he reach the Lord as possessing every quality, over and above that so meditated upon? In other words, will the devotee of the Lord, the Beautiful, see the Lord in Mukti as Beautiful alone, or as Majestic also and vice-versa?

(Pûrva-pakṣa.)—The object of meditation being one, the devotee, when he reaches that object, will see It in the fulness of all Its qualities, and not only possessing those qualities which he had meditated upon. It is something analogous to meditating on the Lord with a few qualities or with a combination of all qualities.

(Siddhânta.)—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 56.

व्यतिरेकस्तद्भावभावित्वाम्न तूपलब्धिवत् ॥ ३ । ३ । ४६ ॥

ध्वतिरेक: Vyatirekaḥ, difference. तद् Tad, of the meditation. आप Bhava, of the qualities. आवित्यान् Bhavitvat, because of the existence. ज Na, not. तु Tu, surely. उपलब्धितत् Upalabdhivat, as in the case of knowledge.

56. There is not the perception of the Lord having other attributes than those with which Hε was meditated upon in life. It is like the realisation of the Lord, according to the nature of one's conception or knowledge—417.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' is employed in order to remove the doubt. The sûtra declares that in release there is not perception of qualities other than those meditated upon, because the devotee having meditated with certain qualities as belonging to the Lord, the Lord appears to him as possessing those qualities only. For in Heaven, one sees the Lord as baving those qualities only, with which he had invested Him in His It is like knowledge. When a person meditates with a particular kind of knowledge, in obtaining that object he obtains it with that particular knowledge. Namely, in the state of Mukti, his conception of the Lord is realised in the particular form of knowledge with which he had conceived Him on earth. Though the knowers of the Lord are fully conscious, that the object of their devotion has attributes other than those with which they meditate, but as they do not wish to see their Lord with those attributes, so when they reach the Lord in Mukti, they see Him only as they had meditated upon Him, and not otherwise, because they had not so meditated upon. And thus the above Sruti of the Chhand. Up. is justified, for as is the faith of the man in this life, so will be his realisation in the next, otherwise this text would become invalid.

In the next sûtra, the author shows by an illustration that people have different kinds of faith, and reach the Lord in his different aspects, because the Lord so wills it. The illustration is taken from that of the Yajamana and his officiating Ritviks or priests.

SÛTRA III. 8. 57.

ब्रङ्गावबद्धास्तु न शास्त्रासु हि प्रतिवेदम् ॥ ३ । ३ । ५७ ॥

चन्न Anga, parts. चरवात: Avabaddhāḥ, appointed to, connected with. तु Tu, but. न Na, not. जालासु Śakhāsu, in all the Śakhās or branches. दि Hi, because. विशेषक Prativedam, according to the Veda.

57. But they are appointed (or restricted to) particular parts, and not to all branches of a sacrifice, because of the Veda—418.

Note.—Like the priests to whom separate functions have been allotted by naming them to certain posts, so Jivas follow one or the other path of devotion, because it has been so determined by the Lord. And as the priests when holding a particular office cannot perform any other function but what is appropriate to them, and cannot perform the other parts, because the Vedas are definitely prescribed for each priest, so the Bhaktas do not follow the paths other than their own, in their devotion to the Lord.

COMMENTARY.

The Yajamana, when performing a sacrifice, chooses several priests to perform it. Every one of these priests knows all the parts which constitute the full sacrifice. But the Yajamana allots to each priest, the particular part which he must perform in sacrifice. Thus he binds them down, as it were, by giving them particular names, such as :- "I select you to do the part of the Adhvaryu priest, I choose you to take the seat of the Hotar priest. I ask you to do the duty of the Udgatar priest in this sacrifice. And so on." According to the particular office assigned by the Master to each of these priests, they are restricted to that particular office. Thus, one elected to the office of the Hotar, though equally dexterous in performing the duties of other offices also, is yet confined to the work of the Hotar alone, and has no right to do the work of any other priest-That being so, he cannot perform all the other acts, taught in the various sakhas, because the parts are regulated according to each Veda. the Hotar performs his part with the verses of the Rig Veda, the Adhvaryu with the sentences of the Yajur Veda, the Udgata with Sama Veda, and the Brahma with the Atharva Veda. Here the particular office which any priest has to fill, is determined by the will of the Master alone. No priest has a right to say that he will do all the work, or any other work than that to which the Master appoints him. According to the nature of the office filled by the priest, is the nature of the fee also (Daksina) received by him. Similarly, it is the will of the Lord which determines the particular mode, in which particular Jivas must worship Him, whether they worship Him as Lord the Beautiful, or Lord the Majestic.

The author gives another illustration showing how Uddhava and the rest worshipped the Lord with mixed sentiments of love and fear, worshipped Him both as Majestic and Beautiful. And though this mixed sentiment is not so pleasing to the author, yet he tries to explain it.

SÛTRA III. 3. 58.

मन्त्रादिवद्वाऽविरोधः ॥ ३ । ३ । ५८ ॥

नम्ब-माहिष्स् Mantra-adivat, as in the case of Vedic verses and others. श Va, or. धारिए।: Avirodhaḥ, there is no contradiction.

58. Or there is no conflict, as in the case of certain mantras and the rest—419.

COMMENTARY.

The Lord willed that men like Uddhava and the rest should have this mixed form of devotion, in order to evolve their Bhakti on both these lines. It is like the mantras of the Vedas. As sometimes one and the same mantra is employed in many ceremonial acts, and as other mantras are employed in two acts, while there are others which are confined to one act only, according to the directions given in the ritual, so some men are employed to worship the Lord in one way only, others in several ways. The word "adi," "and the rest," is employed in the sûtra in order to include time and action. Just as one and the same time is the cause of producing in one tree, leaves and flowers; in another it is the cause of the tree shedding all its leaves; in one person it produces youth, in another infancy and so on: so there is no contradiction, if the Lord inspires different sentiments, in different people, at one and the same time. Therefore, with whatever attributes, and with whatever essential form, the Lord is meditated upon, with that attribute and form, He appears to the sight of His devotee in release. Thus it is demonstrated, that the Lord does not appear in Mukti, with attributes more than those meditated upon by the devotees.

Adhikarana XXIX.

Now we shall discuss the following texts of the Gopala Tapani:-

Eko'pi san bahudha yo'vabhati. Though one he who appears as many.

Ekam santam bahudha drisyamanam. Being one who is seen as many. Atha kasmad uchyate brahma. Why is he called Brahma?

Like the Vaidurya gem (lapis lazuli) there exist many forms in the Lord. Though possessing all these, He is still one, though called by many names. Similarly, though the Lord has many qualities and has manifold modes of manifestation yet His essential attribute and form is one.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. Should this manifoldness, taught in the Sruti, and depending upon the manifoldness of His attribute and of His essential forms, be an object of meditation or not? The question arises, should a person meditate on the manifoldness (bahutva) of the Lord or not?

(Pitra-paksa.)—This Bahutva or manifoldness should not be meditated upon in every devotional exercise, that is to say, that the attribute of the Lord as appearing manifold (His Bahutva attribute) should not be meditated upon in every upasana, because there is conflict in such meditation, as has been explained in Sûtra III. 3. 12. Attributes like bliss, etc., may be well combined in all meditations on the Lord, but the attribute of multiety is incongruous with the idea of unity. When meditating on the Lord as one, it is impossible to think of Him as many. Unity and plurality cannot co-exist in the same substance. The Lord should not, therefore, be meditated upon with the attribute of plurality.

(Siddhânta.)—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 59.

भूमः कतुवज्यायस्त्वम् तथा हि वर्शयति ॥ ३ । ३ । ५ ।॥

भूताः Bhûmnah, of the plentiful: the multiety, manifoldness; infinity. ऋतुवर् Kratuvat, as in the case of sacrifice. उद्यायस्य Jyâyastvam, pre-eminence, तथा Tathâ, thus. द्वि Hi, because. व्यंबति Daráayati, the scriptures show.

59. The universality (bhûmâ) of the Lord must be meditated upon in every upâsanâ, because of its pre-eminence, like the Kratu sacrifice. The text also shows this—420.

COMMENTARY.

Plurality or manifoldness of conditions, being the highest among all the attributes of the Lord, and like the sacrifice, it being always and everywhere co-existent with God, it must be thought upon in all meditations upon Him. As the Kratu like the Jyotistoma sacrifice, is a sacrifice even in the beginning when the sacrificer undertakes it and is initiated into it, and remains a sacrifice when the sacrificer has finished it by taking his final bath, and as this conception of Kratu is the most important ingredient in every sacrifice and is present in every one of them, similarly in all the attributes of the Lord appertaining to His essential nature, this quality of bahutva or much-ness is inherent and every attribute of the Lord has it. It must be meditated upon in every worship of the Lord. In other words, every attribute of the Lord is infinitely great and manifold, thus bahutva or manifoldness runs through every attribute of the Lord; thus as Kratu-ness runs through every sacrifice, beginning from its very inception called Dikea and ending with the final bath called Avabhritha. This is illustrated by the text of the scriptures also. The Sruti shows in the well-known Bhûmâ passage of the Chhând. Up. that every attribute of the Lord has this quality of Bluma in it; for Bhuma or much-ness is an invariable concomitant of every attribute belonging to the Lord. See Chhând. Up. VII. 23. 1.:-

या वै भूमा तत् सुकं नास्ये सुकमित भूमैव सुकम् ॥

"That which is Bhûmâ that is happiness. There is no happiness in the finite, etc." The text further teaches that Bhûmâ must be meditated upon everywhere, for without such meditation, the eternity of Karma could not be established.

Adhikarana XXX.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. Is meditation on these many forms of one nature or of different nature?

(Pûrva-pakea.)—The object of meditation being the same in its essential nature, all meditations must be of one kind.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 60.

नानाशब्दाविभेदात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ६० ॥

नाना Nana, of different sorts. शब्द Sabda-adi, of the terms and others.

60. The meditation is separate and diverse for each form of the Lord, because of the difference of the words and the rest—421.

COMMENTARY.

In these forms the meditation is indeed of various kinds. In other words, it is different for every form. Why do we say so? Because there is a difference of words, etc. Thus the meditation on Nrisimha is different from meditation on Sri Krisna, because the words Nrisimha and Krisna are different, because the mantras of Krisna and Nrisimha are different, because these forms are also different, and their ritual of worship is also different. So also we find in the Smriti:—

कृतं त्रेता द्वापरम्य किलिरित्येषु केशवः। माना वर्णाभिधाकारी नानैवविधिनेज्यते॥

Keśava is worshipped in different modes, with different rituals, in the Krita, Tretâ Dvåpara and Kali ages. He assumes different colours, according to the Yuga, and has different forms and names.

Therefore, the ritual is not the same in meditating on the different forms of the Lord. The pûjis are different.

Adhikarana. XXXI.

It has been said above that meditations are of different sorts, according to the nature of forms meditated upon, such as whether it is the form of Nrisimha, etc.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, whether the worshipper of a particular form, should combine with his worship the meditation on other forms also, or is such combination optional to him.

(Parva-pakşa.)—There is no reason why meditation on all these forms should be optional. They must be combined.

(Siddhanta.)—The next sûtra sets aside this view.

SÛTRA III. 3. 61.

विकल्पोऽविशिष्टफलत्वात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ६१ ॥

विकास: Vikalpah, there is an option, i.e., restriction to one particular form, which once chosen must be stuck to. आविश्व Avisista, not special, similar, the same. प्रकार Phalatvat, because the fruit is.....

61. There is option (to choose one form and stick to it), because there is no greater excellence of fruit obtained by meditating on all—422.

COMMENTARY.

There is option in their meditation and pûjâ. There is no such latitude allowed that one should worship Nrisimha for some time, Râmchandra for a few days after that, and Kriena then. One must make his option and stick to that particular form of upâsanâ and pûjâ, which has been taught to him by his Guru, and which belongs to the order of Good Men with whom he is brought up. For Guru and the Good Company are the environments in which the soul is placed by the Lord, and he cannot change the particular mode taught to him. Why? Because the fruit of all meditations is the same, namely, all worships lead to the realisation of Mokṣa. If perfection is obtained through one form of pûjâ, what is the necessity of constantly changing the forms of pûjâ? Though in a previous sûtra it has already been mentioned that one must follow one mode of worship, yet the same statement is made here again, in order to show that the Ekântin Bhakta is the highest, and thus there is no tautology here.

Adhikarana XXXII.

It has been mentioned just now, that necessary pûjâs, as those of Nrisimha and the rest, the fruit of which is Mokea or release, must be performed by the man, during the whole period of his life, for such is the duty of Ekântins. These Nitya pûjâs must not be changed, but should remain uniform throughout one's whole life. But there are Kâmya pûjâs or worships made with the object of gaining some particular fruit, such as fame, victory, fortune, etc., and such modes of upâsana of Brahman are taught in the Upanisads like the Brihad Âranyaka, etc. In the case of such Kâmya pûjâs there arises the following doubt.

(Doubt.)—Should the meditation on Brahman vary with the particular desire to be gained, or must one pray to his tutelary Deity (Işta) alone for the acquisition of any particular object.

(Parva-paksa.)—The meditation must be of one particular form in order to obtain all desires: and the form must not change. Because as there is no distinction in the various Nitya meditations on Brahman, all lead to Mukti, there being no necessity of changing from one to another, so the worship of one form can confer all desires also. There is no option to change.

(Siddhanta.)—With regard to Kamya pûjas, there is no such strict rule and more latitude is allowed.

SÛTRA III. 8. 62.

काम्यास्तु यथाकामं समुचीयेरम् वा पूर्वहेत्वभावात् ॥३।३।६२॥

काम्बा: Kamyah, aiming at objects of desire. तु Tu, but. वयाकानव् Yatha-kamam, according to one's liking. श्रद्धविदेश Samuchchtyeran, may cumulate. न Na, not. वा Va, or. पूर्व Pûrva, the former. देतु Hetu, reason. वानावाद Abhavat, on account of the absence of.

62. But in the case of Kâmya devotion, one may, according to his wish, worship any other deity for the fulfilment of that particular desire, or he may worship even his Ista deity for getting it. Because there is absence here of the reason which existed in the case of the first—423.

COMMENTARY.

In Kannya meditations, where the object to be gained is not the realisation of Brahman but the attainment of fruits, like fame, etc., one is at liberty to worship any form, or one form, from which he can gain his object. That is to say, a worshipper of Nrisimha may worship other forms of the Lord in order to obtain some particular fruit, like fame, etc., or may worship the Nrisimha form itself, even for the purposes of getting Kâmya fruits. Why? Because the reason of the last aphorism does not hold good here. As the fruits to be obtained are different here, different forms may be worshipped in order to gain those fruits. So long as there exists a desire to get the particular fruit, all those meditations and pûjks must be performed which are calculated to give that fruit more expeditiously. But if a man has no such desire, he need not perform any other worship, but that of his particular pûjA. The sense of the whole is this. A person striving after release, a Mumuksu, must always stick to the worship and meditation of one particular form, but if he is ever in need of getting some lower object, even then also he must ask his God for that object. He must never worship any lower deities in order to get any lower object, for Hari can give every object to His. worshipper. As says the Smriti:—

जकामः सर्वकामेः या मेथकाम स्वारवीः । रीजेव मक्तिवागेन वजेत पुत्रवं परम् ॥

The wise, broad-minded aspirant after release, must always worship the Highest Person alone, with the intense yoga of Bhakti, whother he desires nothing or desires every thing.

Thus has been explained the meditation on the various forms of the Lord, with various mantras consisting of ten syllables, etc. All Kamya pûjas may be performed either optionally or collectively.

(See Gopála Párva Tápani for the various mantras deduced from the 18-syllabled mantra, Klim Krisnaya Gopíjanavallabháya Sváhá. The 10-syllabled mantra is Gopíjanavallabháya Sváhá. This is the favourite mantra which Indra recites. The 16-syllabled mantra is Om namah Krisnaya Devakiputráya hum phat sváhá, &c.

Adhikarana XXXIII.

In the previous part there has been explained meditation on the spiritual attributes of the Lord. Now is commenced the topic teaching meditation on the various members of the body of the Lord. In the Gopâla Pûrva Tapani Up. towards the end, Brahma says:—

"I propitiate with highest praise that one Govinda whose form is existence, intelligence and bliss, whose mantra consists of five words, who is seated always under the Kalpa tree in Brindabana and is surrounded by forty-nine Maruts." (Then follow twelve verses of praise) reciting the various attributes, mostly bodily, of the Lord.

In the above verses, the various members of the body of the Lord are described as having certain attributes; such as His eyes are like lotus with a compassionate gaze in them, the mouth is smiling and sounding a flute, His head is adorned with a crown of peacock feathers, His movements are slow and dignified, His intelligence is uninterrupted, and He is an expert in singing and dancing.

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt, are these attributes of smiling face, ompassionate gaze, etc., to be separately meditated upon or not?

(Pârva-pakṣa.)—They should not be meditated upon separately, because there is no higher reward in such meditation, and because the highest end of man (namely, Mukti) is obtained by meditating on the universal attributes of the Lord, such as His omniscience, omnipotence and the rest; and so the charms of His personal appearance, costume, gestures, movements, etc., need not be meditated upon.

(Siddhânta.)-This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 68.

श्रक्तेषु यथाश्रयभावः ॥ ३ । ३ । ६३ ॥

মানু Angesu, in the limbs of the Lord. ব্যাহ্ব Yathasrays, according to the fitness of the place, or the himb. সাৰ: Bhavah, the assuming of the mood, the meditation on the aspects.

63. Meditation appropriate to each member of the body should also be performed—424.

COMMENTARY.

In the various members, such as the mouth, the eyes, etc., the qualities and gestures appropriate to them, must be thought of or meditated upon. The particular member, described as having a particular quality, must always be meditated upon with that quality. In forming the mental image of the Lord, the face must be thought of as smiling and speaking sweet words; the eyes as having a compassionate and benevolent gaze, and so on.

BUTRA III. 3. 64.

शिष्टिश्च ॥ ३ । ३ । ६४ ॥

शिष्टे: Sistaih, by those who are taught. च Cha, and.

64. And because Brahmâ taught such meditation to His disciples in the Gopâla Tâpani Upanişad—425.

COMMENTARY.

At the end of His verses of praise in the Gopala Pûrva Tâpani, Brahmā says "with these verses I praise and worship the Lord":—

ग्रथ हैवं स्तुतिभिराराधयामि । ते यूर्यं तथा पञ्चपदं जपन्तः ध्यायन्तः संस्तिः तरिष्यथं इति स होवाच हैरच्यः ।

"I propitiate even now Krisna, with these verses. You also follow my advice, and as I always recite the five-worded mantra, so you also reciting that five-worded mantra and meditating on Sri Krispa, will verily cross over this ocean of worldly existence, the cycle of births and deaths."

Thus said Brahms to the sages.

Thus Brahma Himself teaches the sages to meditate on the attributes of the various members of the Lord's body. Therefore, the personal charms of the Lord must also be meditated upon.

(Objection.)—In the Chhand. Up., 1. 6. 7., only the compassionate gaze of the Lord is described, no other members are specified therein:—

तस्य यथा कष्यासं पुंडरीकमेवमसिबी तस्योदिति नाम स पर सम्बेन्यः पाप्सम्य उदित उदेति ह वै सर्वेभ्यः पाप्सम्यो य पर्व वेद ॥ ७ ॥

His two eyes are like fresh lotus. His (mystic) name is Ut zet for he has risen (adita) above all sins. He also, who knows this, rises verily above all sins:

This description of the Chhand. Up. is defective, because it mentions only the eyes of the Lord, and is silent upon other parts. The objection so raised is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 8. 65.

समाहारात् ॥ ३ । ३ । ६४ ॥

समाद्वाराज् Samaharat, on account of expressing collectively ; all-comprehensive.

65. (There is no discrepancy in the statement of the Chhând. Up.) because the description there (is collective and) all-comprehensive, (meant to include other members also)—426

COMMENTARY.

The word Na, "Not" is to be drawn into this sûtra from III. 3. 67. namely, from the third sûtra from this. It is to be read not only in this sûtra, but in the next also. Since the description of other members of the body of the Lord must be supposed to have been described in a single description of the eyes in the Chhând. Up., there is no defectiveness in that Upanicad. The compassionate gaze mentioned in this Chhând. Up. is illustrative of all the other attributes, such as, sweet speaking, etc. A kindly look is an all-comprehensive attribute, including the rest.

In the next sûtra, the Pûrvapakşin raises an objection to the effect, why should a particular member be thought of with a particular attribute, and why not every member be imagined as having every attribute. The next sûtra, therefore, is a Pûrvapakşa sûtra, and will be refuted later on.

SÛTRA III. S. 06.

ग्रयसाभारएयश्चतेश्व ॥ ३ । ३ । ६६ ॥

श्रम Guns, of the qualities. सामाय Sadharanaya, about the common-ness. हिरासको, from the statement of the Vedas. प Cha, and. It includes the combination of all gunas.

66. (Every member of the Lord's body must be meditated upon as possessing the attribute of the other member), because of the text which says that there is a common-ness of attributes, (with regard to the members of the Lord's body)—427.

COMMENTARY.

The texts like "everywhere That hath hands and feet, etc."—(Gitâ, XIII. 14.) show that every member of the body of the Lord can discharge the function of every other member. So every member may be meditated upon with the attribute of any other member. (Such as His eyes may be meditated upon as grasping the whole world, and His hands as seeing the whole universe.) The Smriti texts, like the following, also declare that every member of the body of the Lord has the power of discharging all the functions of all the senses:—

सङ्गानि यस्य सक्तकेन्द्रियबृचिमन्ति । पृथ्यन्ति धान्ति कलयन्ति तथा जगन्ति ॥

Whose every member of the body possesses the function of all the senses such as seeing, drinking, hearing, moving, holding, etc.

Therefore, there is no restrictive rule that any particular member of the Lord's body should be meditated upon with any particular attribute. The word "cha" indicates that all guns may also be so included.

(Siddhanta.)—The objection raised in this soura is answered in the next.

SÛTRA III. 8, 67.

न वा तत्त्तह्भावाश्चतेः ॥ ३ । ३ । ६७ ॥

क Na, not. का Vâ, rather, surely, only. तह Tat, their. सहवार Sahabhava, about being together. समुत: Agruteh, there being no declaration of this Sruti.

67. It is not so. (A particular member should be meditated upon with its own peculiar attribute), because there is no text declaring that it may be meditated upon with (the attributes belonging to the other members)—428.

COMMENTARY.

The force of va in the sutra is to indicate exclusion. The univer sality of attributes must not be meditated upon in any particular member. Why? Because there is not any text describing attributes other than those appropriate to those particular members. Therefore, qualities belonging to other members not being described with regard to any particular member, must not be meditated upon when meditating on the particular member. The text like "every part of His body is a hand, every part a foot and eye and ear, etc." only declare the omnipotence of the Lord, and that all the powers of the Lord exist in every portion of His body. It is not meant to teach incongruous meditation.

STTRA III, 8, 68.

दर्शनाचा।। ३।३।६८॥

वर्षनाज् Darganat, because it is so seen in the world. च Cha, and.

68. And because it is so seen (and it is more natural meditating in this way)—429.

COMMENTARY.

It is more natural to think that the eyes see, ears hear, hands grasp, and so on. (It is not natural to conceive that the eyes are hearing, the ears are seeing and the feet are talking. Though in the case of the Lord all these things are possible, set there need not be any unnatural meditation even in the case of the Lord.)

FOURTH PADA.

Adhikarana I.

श्रद्धावेशमन्यास्तृते सच्छमाचैर वैराम्योचहित्तिसंहासमाक्ये । धर्मप्राकारम्बिते सर्वदात्री प्रदेश विष्कार्माति विद्येश्वरीयम् ॥

In the temple of faith, carpeted with good conduct and good thoughts, adorned with the throne of knowledge, produced by Vairagya, surrounded by the rampart of religion, behold there shines this Divine Goddess called Vidya, the best beloved of Visau and the giver of all desires.

In the previous pada, Vidya and her concomitants appertaining to Brahman and denoted by the words like meditation and worship, have been described. In the present chapter it will be shown, that Vidya is independent of Karman; and that the latter is subordinate to her, and that the followers of Vidya are of three kinds and so on. According to the difference of determination (Kratu), the seekers of Vidya are of three sorts. The first kind is called Sanistha, namely, those who discharge with faith, the duties of their stage of life (asrama) and class (varna) with the desire of seeing the varieties of different worlds (such as those belonging to Indra and other higher Devas). The second class is called Parinisthitas. They also perform, with equal devotion and faith, the duties of their varna and aérama; not with the object of going to the different worlds in order to see the wonderful working of the Lord therein, but merely for the sake of the society in which they live, and to uphold its traditions, and to maintain its continuity. Both these classes of devotees belong to the order of householders. The third class are called Nirapeksahs or Sannva-Their minds have been purified by truth, austerity, prayers, etc.. performed in their past life; and hence in the present life, they do not belong to any order (asrama). Such are those who are totally indifferent to worldly life. Thus devotees of Vidya are classified into these three divisions.

The author first establishes the independence of Vidyâ from Karman or formal religion.

(Vijaya.)—We find in the Upanisads texts like the following:—

तरित शोकमारुवित् (Chh. Up. VII. 1. 3). आविदामोति परम् (Taitt. Up. II. 1. 1).

&quot;The knower of Atman crosses over all griefs." "The knower of Brahman obtains the highest."

So also in the Katha Up., II. 16:-

पतन् भ्येषाक्तं भारता वे। यदिष्कति तस्य तत्।

"Knowing this Akşara verily one obtains whatever he desires."

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt. Is Vidya the cause of release alone? Or of heavenly worlds also?

(Parva-pakea.)—The wise, free from all desires, do not wish for heaven-worlds, and consequently Vidva is the cause of release alone.

(Siddhanta.)—In the next sûtra it will be shown that through Vidya one can get Swarga also, if he so desires.

8ÛTRA III. 4. 1.

पुरुषार्थोऽतः शब्दादिति च बादरायणः ॥ ३ । ४ । १ ॥

पुरत-वार्च: Purusa-arthah, the object of man's attainment, a man's benefit, i.e., knowledge of God. बार: Atah, from this, from this Vidya. बाबाद Babdat, because the scriptures state so. ब्रास्ति Iti, so. बाबादाबाः Badarayanah, Badarayana holds.

1. Bâdarâyaṇa holds the view that from this Vidyâ, a man obtains all the objects of his desire, because there are words to that effect in the Scriptures—430.

COMMENTARY.

All the objects of man's desire, namely, Dharma (religious merit), Artha (worldly prosperity), Kama (enjoyment), Moksa (release), are obtained from this Vidya alone. This is the view of Badarayana. Why? Sabdat. Because of the word. Because of the texts like those quoted above, which show that through Vidya (Yo yad ichchhati tasya tat) whatever one desires that he gets. The Lord Hari, being pleased with the devotion (Vidya) of His Bhaktas, gives even his ownself to his devotees. Like Kardama or others, though havirg desire for other fruits, the Lord gives them that fruit, on account of Vidya alone, which serves the same purpose as if it was a formal religious karma.

Here Jaimini comes forward with his following objections.

Adhikarana II.

BÛTRA III. 4. 2.

रोषत्वारपुरुषार्थवादो यथान्येष्वितिजैमिनिः॥ १। ४। १॥

श्चेष्याच् Beşatvât, because of the remaining of the Karma, i.e., the performance of the duties. पुरुष Puruṣa, about a man. प्राचित्र: Arthavâdah, an arthavâda. चया Yathâ, as. प्राचेषु Anyeşu, in the case of others. की Iti, so. केलिक: Jaiminih, Jaimini holds.

2. On account of Vidya standing in the supplementary relation to Karma, the statements as to the fruits of Vidya are glorificatory only, regarding the person performing Karma. They are like other glorificatory passages. This is the opinion of Jaimini—431.

COMMENTARY.

The Jiva himself enters on the performance of Karmas in the shape of worshipping the Lord, as taught by the Lord, after he has understood the essential nature of Vispu, the object of worship; and of His individual self, the worshipper. Through these works he becomes purified of all sins, and obtains the fruits in the shape of Swarga or Moksa, the enjoyment of heavenly pleasures or the attainment of release, through the unseen principle called Adrieta. Vidya being, therefore, subordinate to Karma, standing to it in the relation of a complement, the fruits mentioned regarding the results of Vidya in the Scriptures are to be considered as mere descriptive passages, glorifying Karma, and showing its relation to Purusa. Such texts, therefore, which teach special results of Vidya, are mere arthavadas, like other arthavadas relating to the substance, (dravya), or to the purification of the substance (samskara) or to subordinate acts themselves (Karma.) These arthavadas or glorificatory passages are not to he taken in their literal sense. Jaimini in his sûtras (IV. 3. 1) thus propounds this doctrine.

Dravya-samskāra-karmaşu parārthatvāt phaladrutir arthavādah syāt, IV. 3. 1.

Because materials, the operations performed upon them, and subordinate acts, subserve other acts, the description of a fruit in connection with any of them is a more arthavida or giorification.

Note.—In performing a sacrifice materials are used, their purpose being described. The sacrificial materials are operated u, n, and the purpose or the fruit of this is described. Subordinate acts are performed in the course of a sacrifice—a main act; and their fruit is also described. The descriptions of such fruits are more re-statements; because the materials, the way in which they are operated upon, and subordinate acts subserve the main act.

Thus, the following are arthavidas relating to sacrificial materials. "He whose sacrificial ladie is made of the wood of Acacia catechu takes for his offerings the juice of metres. His offerings are juicy. He, whose sacrificial ladie (Juhu) is made of the wood of Butea Frondosa, never hears bad tidings. He, whose sacrificial ladie (Upabhrit) is made of the wood of Ficus Religiosa, secures fruit by means of knowledge. He, whose sacrificial vessel for clarified butter is made of the wood of Valkankata—his offerings are stable then he obtains children. These are the forms of a sacrificial ladie (Srucha.) He, who has a ladie of this form, obtains cattle of this kind, and his children are not born ngly."—Taittirfys Samhitá, III. 5. 7, 3.)

The following extracts show the glorifications or Samskara.

He covers the eye of his enemies by means of that collyrium which he puts in his eyes (Ibid. VI. 1. 1. 5.) "He cleans his teeth. He gets his "beard and head shaved. He gets his nails pared. The hair on the head "and the beard, being dead skin, are unfit for sacrifice. Then removing "this dead skin unfit for sacrifice and being qualified to perfom it, he begins it. He bathes." (Ibid, VI. 1. 1. 2.) The following extract shows glorification of Karma:—"When he makes the offerings called Prayaja and Anuyaja, he makes a coat of mail for sacrifice. He makes this coat for the sacrificer to overcome his enemies."—(Ibid, II. 6. 1. 5).

Thus a person performing throughout his whole life the duties of a householder, such as sacrifices and the rest, and who is endowed with the moral virtues of the control or conduct or thought, etc., is mentioned in the scriptures as attaining Brahman, in the texts like the following:—

सार्वायकुलाहेदमधीस यथाविधानं गुरोः कर्मातिशेषेसाभिसमावृत्य कुटुम्ने गुचौ देशे स्वाध्यायमधीयाना धार्मिकान्विद्यद्यामने सर्व्वेतियाचि सम्प्रतिष्ठाप्यादिछ सन्त्सर्व्वभूतान्यन्यत्र तीर्थेभ्यः स सत्वेवं वर्तयन्यावदायुषं आधिकामभिसम्पर्यते न च पुनरावर्तते न च पुनरावर्तते ॥ १॥

"One should learn the Veda in the family of his teachers and making presents to his Guru, according to law, and doing his works fully, one should return home and enter into household life. In a sacred spot he should recite the holy scriptures, and perform good deeds concentrating all his senses on the Supreme Self, he should not injure any living creature except in sacrifices. He verily thus passing his life attains on death the world of Brahman and never returns therefrom, never rourns therefrom."—(Chhând. Up., VIII. 15. 1.)

So also in. the Visnu Purana, III. 8. 9, we find:—(See III. 4. 35. below):—

वर्षाभ्रमाचारवता पुरुषेष परः पुमान् । विष्कुराराध्यते पन्या नान्यत् तत् तापकारसम् ॥

"Visnu, the highest Person, should be wershipped by a man who is devoted to the duties of his castes and stage of life. There is no other way which can cause his satisfaction."

These passages show that Karma or pûja of the Lord is a lifelong duty, and should never be renounced. Karma being thus the main duty of humanity, all passages describing the fruits of Vidya must be understood as glorificatory only in the sense that Vidya only fits a man to perform these works better and hence it is subordinate to Karma. There are other passages like those quoted above, showing the pre-eminence of Karma. No doubt, there are texts teaching the renunciation of Karma, but they must be explained as applying to blind and cripple, and such like persons, who are not entitled by law to perform pûjas and sacrifices. For such persons renunciation is the best means of reaching heaven.

The next sûtra gives another reason for holding that the knowledge of the Self is a subordinate member of Karma or Pûjâ.

SUTRA III. 4. 8.

श्राचारदर्शनात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ३ ॥

चाचारदर्शनात् Achara-darganat, such conduct being seen.

3. Because the practice of the best of the wise men shows that Vidyâ is subordinate to Karma—432.

COMMENTARY.

The following texts show that great men like Janaka and the rest, used to perform sacrifices, though they had acquired Atma Vidya. For example, Janaka is described in Brih. Up., III. 1.1 as performing a sacrifice:—

॥ जनका वैदेशे बहुद्धिकेन यह नेजे तत्र ह कुरुप्ण्वालानां ब्राह्मका प्रिम्सिता बभूवुत्तस्य ह जनकस्य वैदेहस्य विजिह्नास्य बभूव कः स्थितेषां ब्राह्मकानामनूकानतम इति स ह गवाछ सहस्रमवरुरोध दश दश पादा पकैकस्याः श्रुक्तयोराकदा बभूवुः ॥

"Janaka Vaideha (the king of the Videhas) sacrificed with a sacrifice at which many presents were offered to the priests of (the Asyamedha.) Brahmanas of the Kurus and the Panchalas had come thither, and Janaka Vaideha wished to know, which of those Brahmanas was the best read. So he enclosed a thousand cows and ten padas (of gold) were fastened to each pair of horns."

Similarly in the Chhând. Up., we find Asvapati, the king of the Kekaya, performing sacrifices, though he was a master of Brahma Vidyå and taught Brâhmaṇas, who had gone to him to learn the Brahma Vidyå (Chhând. Up., V. 11. 5.)

तेम्या ह प्राप्तेभ्यः पृथगहांचि कारयांचकार स ह प्राप्तः संजिहान दवाच न में स्तेना जनपदे न कदयों न मद्योग नानाहिताग्निर्नाचिद्वाच स्वैरी स्वैरिची कृता यस्यमाचा वै भगवन्ताऽहमस्मि यावदेकैकस्मा ऋत्विजे धनं दास्यामि तावद्भगवद्भ्यो दास्यामि वसन्तु मे भगवन्त इति ॥ ५ ॥

"When they arrived, the King caused proper honors to be paid to each of them separately. In the morning, after leaving his bed, he said to them: (What makes you come here? Are you troubled by bad men? But there are no such people in this land.) In my Kingdom there is no thief, no miser, no drunkard, no irreligious, no illiterate person, no adulterer, much less an adulteress. (But if you have come to get wealth, then stay for) I am going to perform a sacrifice, Sirs; and I shall give you, Sirs, as much wealth as I give to each Ritvij priest. So stay here please."

This shows that the best among the learned and wise men of old used to perform Karma, in spite of their possessing the knowledge of the Self. Had mere knowledge been sufficient for acquiring the final end of man, namely Release, they would not have exerted themselves uselessly in the performance of Karma. They would have acted on the maxim "when honey is to be found in the tree of one's own court-yard, why should one go in search of it to difficult places like mountains?"

SÛTRA IIL 4. 4.

तच्छूतेः ॥ ३ । ४ । ४ ॥

क्ष्य Tat, about that. कृते: Sruteh, there being a direct scriptural statement.

4. Because of the scriptural statement that Vidyâ is a subordinate member of Karma—433.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhand. Up., there is a direct statement to the effect that Vidya is subordinate to Karma (I. 1. 8.)

तेनामी कुरता यश्चैतवेषं चेद यम न चेद नाना तु विद्या जाविद्या ज यदेव विद्यया करोति अञ्चयोपनिवदा तदेव कीर्यवत्तरं भवतीति कल्वेतस्यैवासरस्योपन्याक्यानं भवति ॥

"By the command of that Full and Supremely High Lord called Om, perform ye both His worship, whether ye understand Him thus or ye do not."

"But the knowledge and ignorance are different (and opposed to each other).'
The man who worships the Lord, with knowledge, faith and propriety (to the utmost of his capacity) verily, his worship alone is conducive to endless reward, (not so the worship of the ignorant, whose reward is limited.) This is the full explanation of this Ever-present Imperishable Om."

In the above the word Vidyayâ (with Vidyâ) shows that Vidyâ is only a subordinate member of Karma, because it is used in the instrumental case, and an instrumental case always denotes something secondary, just as the words fraddhayâ and Upanişadâ.

SÛTRA III. 4. 5.

समन्वारम्भणात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ४ ॥

सन्-वातु-वातु-वात्रवात् Sam-anu-arambhaṇat, on account of their taking hold together or being together.

5. Because the Upanisad also declares that both Vidyâ and Karma take hold of the man after death, and carry him to heavenly regions; therefore, Vidyâ is not independent of Karma—434.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihad. Up., IV. 4. 2. we find that when a man dies, his Vidya and his Karma take hold of him and carry him forward:—

प्राचमनुत्कामन्तरं। सर्वे प्राचा चनुत्कामन्ति स विद्याने। स्वति स विद्यानमेदा-न्यकामति तं विद्यादमंत्री समन्यारमेते पूर्वप्रदा च ।

- "And when he thus departs, life (the chief prana) departs after him, and when life thus departs, all the other vital spirits (pranas) depart after it. He is conscious, and being conscious he follows and departs.
- "Then both his knowledge and his work take hold of him, and his acquaintance with former things"

This shows that Vidya and Karma both co-operate in producing the results, and, therefore, Vidya is subordinate to Karma.

SÛTRA III. 4. 6.

तद्रतो विधानात्॥ ३। १। ६॥

तद्वार: Tad-vatah, of such a one. विचानात् Vidhanat, there being an injunction.

6. Because there is the command that a person having Vidyâ must be appointed to perform Karma, therefore Vidyâ is subordinate to Karma—435.

COMMENTARY.

In the Tait. Samhita we find:--

ब्रह्मित्री ब्रह्मा वृद्येपीर्वमासयोस्तं वृत्तुते ।

He chooses as His Brahma priest, to perform the full moon and new moon ceremonies, one who knows Brahman.

This shows that performance of the sacrifices requires Brahma Jñāna. Otherwise the Sruti would not have insisted upon the condition that the Brahmā priest must be a Brahmajña. Therefore, the knowledge of Brahman is subordinate to Karma, for such knowledge only entitles a man to become a priest.

SÛTRA III. 4. 7.

नियमाच ॥ ३ । ४ । ७ ॥

Manier Niyamat, there being a rule. Tha, and.

7. Because there is the restrictive rule, that Karma should be performed throughout one's whole life, therefore, Vidyâ is subordinate to Karma—436.

COMMENTARY.

In the Isavaşya Up., verse 2, we find :-

कुर्वच वेह कर्मावि जिजीविषेष्णतः समाः । एवं त्वयि नाम्ययेताऽस्ति न कर्म किंप्यते नरे ॥ २ ॥

Performing works even here, let a man live his allotted hundred years; thus is it right for thee, not otherwise than this; karma will not bind that man.

This rule lays down an injunction of lifelong performance of karma with regard even to that man, who has obtained the knowledge of Atman.

Some hold that conflicting texts,—(some insisting upon the performance of karmas, others enjoining their abandonment)—can be reconciled by the view that the performance of karma is optional for one who has got knowledge of the Self. But this view also is set aside by the above Sruti. The texts, therefore, which teach the abandonment of karma, have for their scope those persons, who from some bodily defect or other cause, such as blindness, lameness, etc., are not entitled to perform karma. In fact, abandonment of karma is strongly denounced in the scriptures. Thus in the Taitt. Brâhmana we have:—

He who stops sacrifices to the gods by not maintaining the sacred fires, verily becomes a killer of his children. Therefore, karma must always be performed even by the wise.

Thus Vidya being complementary to karma, is not independent in its action in producing the fruit. In other words, Vidya alone cannot produce Release.

In the preceding six sûtras, Jaimini has advanced his reason for maintaining that Vidya is subordinate to karma. All these sûtras form the pûrva-pakea. The author now advances his reasons for differing from Jaimini.

Adhikarana III.

SÛTRA III. 4. 8.

म्रिधिकोपदेशात्तु बादरायणस्यैवं तद्दर्शनात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ⊏ ॥

श्वाचिक Adhika, more, different. उपवेशात Upadesat, owing to the teaching about. तु Tu, but. बादरावश्वस्य Badarayanasya, of Badarayana. एवस् Evam, thus. तुद् Tad, about that. दर्शनातु Darsanat, because of the Sastric text.

8. Vidyâ is greater than karma, for such is the teaching of Bâdarâyaṇa, and because such is to be seen in the scriptures—437.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" (but) sets aside the pûrvapakṣa. It must be understood that vidyā is greater than karma, because all karmas are performed in order to acquire vidyā; and vidyā is the principal, and karma is subordinate to it. Why? Because such is the seching of Bādarāyana.

Nor is his teaching without authority, because we see scriptural texts as authority for the same. For example, in Brihad. Up., IV. 4. 22., we read:—

तमेतं वेदानुवचनेन ब्राह्मका विविद्यिनित यहेन दानेन तपकाऽनाराकेनैतमेव विदित्वा मुनिमेवति एतमेव प्रवाजिनो छोकमिष्कसः प्रवजनित एतन् सा ॥

Brahmanas seek to know him by the study of the Veda, by sacrifice by gifts, by penance, by fasting, and he who knows him, becomes a Muni. Wishing for that world (of Brahman) only, mendicants leave their homes.

The above texts show that vidyå is the result of karma; and they enjoin karma not for its own sake, but because karmas lead to vidyå. When once the vidyå arises by the strenuous performance of karmas, then these karmas themselves are abandoned, because no longer necessary, after the vidyå has been obtained; and because it is a well-known fact that the end is greater than the means. When once the end is accomplished, the means become no longer necessary.

It has been said that excellent men possessing Brahma-vidyå have been seen performing karmas, men like King Janaka and Aévapati—and that, therefore, vidyå is complementary to karma. This argument is next being refuted in the following sûtra.

8ÛTRA III. 4. 9.

तुल्यं तु दर्शनम् ॥ ३ । ४ । ६ ॥

तुम्बन् Tulyam, the same, similar, equal. तु Tu, but, or entirely. वर्षनम्, Darganam, the Sastric texts.

9. But there is equal authority against the view that Vidyâ is subordinate to karma in the lives of other eminent men—438.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" is used in order to remove the idea that vidya is subordinate to karma. There is equal authority in the scriptures for the proposition that vidya is not subordinate to karma. Thus there are scriptural passages, such as "knowing this the rishis descended from Kavaşa said: "For what purpose should we study the Vedas, for what purpose should we sacrifice? Knowing this indeed the Ancient ones did not offer the Agnihotra," and "when Brahmanas know that Self and have risen above the desire for sons, wealth, and worlds, they wander about as mendicants."—(Bri. Up. III. 5.)

Thus the sages called Kâvaşeyâs did not care for karmas, nor did Yajñavalkya, who abandoning all karmas, went to forest. Thus we find examples of eminent men devoted to vidy4, renouncing all ceremonial karmas. Therefore, scriptural texts are not all one-sided in favour of karmas, but there are texts to the contrary also. The examples of persons like Janaka and others show, that these men followed karma, either for the sake of purifying their self or as an example to mankind, and that the social order may be preserved.

--439.

The author next answers the objection raised in the stitra 4.

SÛTRA III. 4. 10.

म्रसार्वत्रिकी ॥ ३ । ४ । १० ॥

10. The scriptural declaration, Chhând. Up., I. 1. 8., is not of universal application, as supposed by the opponent

COMMENTARY.

The above text of the Chhand. Up. (I. 1. 8), is non-comprehensive. It does not refer to all knowledge, but to the vidya connected with the subject-matter of the text. The subject-matter there is the Udgithavidya and the text says that if this Udgithavidya is recited by a person with knowledge, then it is more fruitful than if it was recited without such vidya, Therefore, vidya is not an auxiliary to work in every instance.

The author next answers the objection raised in III. 4. 5.

BÛTRA III. 4. 11.

विभागः शतवत् ॥ ३ । ४ । ११ ॥

विज्ञान: Vibhagab, there is a division (of the fruits of Vidya and Karma; sates Satavat, just as in the case of a hundred (coins.)

11. The distribution of Vidyâ and Karma is to be made in the above passage of the Bri. Up. (IV. 4. 2.) like the distribution of a hundred coins—440.

COMMENTARY.

The fruits of Vidya and of Karma are different and the above passage of the Bri. Up. must be taken in a distributive sense. Vidya produces one fruit, while Karma produces another fruit. This is like the distribution of a hundred coins. A man by selling a cow and a goat obtains hundred coins. It does not mean that both sold for equal amounts of 50 coins each, but we must distribute the hundred coins according to the natural value of these animals; namely, that the cow fetched 90 coins, and the goat 10 coins. Therefore, when the scripture says that both Vidyà and Karma take hold of the man; it means that both produce their results according to their innate qualities: but the fruits of both are not equal.

The author next answers the objection raised in aftra III. 4. 6.

त्रध्ययनमात्रवतः ॥ ३ । ४ । १२ ॥

12. The word Brahmistha "devoted to Brahman," as used in the passage quoted by the Pûrvapaksin, does not mean one who has realised Brahman, but one who has merely read the Brahman (the Veda)—441.

COMMENTARY.

When the Taittiriya Sruti says that a Brahmistha is to be chosen as a priest to fill the office of Brahma, it does not mean that the one who knows Brahman must be chosen for that office, but it means that one who has read the Vedas and studied them well, must be selected for the office of Brahma. In other words, it says that Brahma's office must be held by a learned Brahman, and not merely by one who is dexterous in doing the ritual or chanting the hymns. That text, therefore, is not in favour of the proposition that Vidya is subordinate to Karma. In fact, the word "Brahmistha" in the above passage, is to be translated as "one who is well-versed in Brahman," where the word Brahman means the "Vedas." and not the highest Self. Because a person who has realised Brahman. the Supreme Self, is described repeatedly in the scriptures as being above all karmas (Naiskarmya.) Therefore, one who has mastered the Vedas: namely, knows the words of the Vedas exactly as they are and who constantly recites them without any selfish object, not wishing to gain money or wealth by such learning, is called a Brahmistha. The force of the affix "istha" in Brahmistha, has this significance here.

Others explain the above passage as merely glorifying karma. Karmas are so important, they say, that for its due performance one must be a knower of Brahman. According to this explanation, it is merely a glorificatory passage, and must not be taken in its literal sense.

It has been said above that a person who has merely read the Vedas is entitled to perform karmas, and not one who has got the knowledge of the Supreme. A man who has no knowledge of the Vedas cannot possibly perform karmas; and studying the Vedas does not mean to commit them to memory by rote, but to understand its purport also. The Upanisads are part of the Vedas; a man who has read the Vedas, must be supposed to have read the Upanisads also. And by reading we mean the intelligent understanding of the text. The man who has read the Upanisads in this way, must necessarily have realised the Atman, for the study of the Upanisads produces the knowledge of the Self. Thus Vidyâ becomes subordinate to Karma.

This objection may be answered thus. Merely mastering the meaning of the words, merely becoming a Sabda-jñánin, does not make a person a knower of Brahman. A man may know the meaning of all the Upanisad texts, but he would not become thereby a Brahmavit, a knower of Brahman. He alone is called a Brahmavit who has experienced the Brahman, felt the Eternal. The mere utterance of the words, "the honey is sweet," "the honey is sweet," will not give a man a taste of the sweetness of honey, but a man must actually taste it in order to know how aweet is honey. If the mere recitation of the words "the honey is sweet" were enough, then no man would taste honey, and every one would get the exhibitation of spirits by merely such utterance. But we do not see any such results. Therefore, the mere intellectual knowledge produced by the words of the Upanisads, is not Brahma knowledge. and such a person is not a Brahmvit. Therefore, when Narada goes to Sanatkumara and asks him to be taught Brahma Vidya, he is asked to recite all that he already knows, in these words. "Tell me first what thou knowest already, then come to Me and I shall tell thee what is beyond that." Then Narada answers "I know, Sir, the Rigveda, the Yajurveda, the Samaveda, and the Atharvaveda, the fourth, the Itihasapurana, which is a fifth book among the Vedas; the science of ancestors. the science of numbers, the science of Devatas, the science of treasurefinding, the undivided original Veda and its twenty-four branches, the superhuman Deva-sciences, the science of Brahman, the science of ghosts, the science of politics, the science of stars, the science of serpents and Deva-officials (Gandharvas); all this I know, () venerable Sir."

Therefore, upasana is different from verbal knowledge. Mukti, the highest end of man, is obtained by Vidya, which means knowledge, direct and intuitive, resulting from devotion. And this we find in the Taitt. Ar. (Mahanarayana Up., X. 6., Mundaka Up., III. 2. 6.)

वेदान्तविकानसुनिधितार्थाः संम्यासयोगाचतयः शुद्धसत्त्वाः । ते अद्यक्षेत्रेषु परान्तकाले परासृतात् परिमुख्यन्ति सर्वे ॥ ६ ॥ Having well ascertained the true object, through the knowledge obtained from the study of the Veda, and having purified their nature by renunciation of fruits of action and due performance of duties, the pious dwell in the worlds of Brahmā. And when the period of Brahmā's life approaches to its close, they abandon those lokas (like Mahar, &c., and crossing the tattva-sphere, at the end of Brahmā's life) throw away the bondage of Prakriti and attain all the Highest Mukti

The verbal knowledge, on the contrary, is, like Vairagya or indifference, a handmaid of Vidya or enlightened devotion. As we find in the Bhagavata Purana:—

तम् प्रत्यामा सुनया शानवैरान्ययुक्तया । पर्यन्यात्मनि चालाने भणता भृतयृहीतया ॥

The sages having firm faith in the Lord and being endowed with wisdom and dispassion, see the Self in the Self, through the devotion arising from studies of the sacred scriptures.

Says an objector: devotion or Bhakti has the form of activity produced by body, speech or mind. With regard to mental activity, namely, meditation, it is possible to have experiences; or intuitive perception. In other words, dhyana may be said to be an immediate cognition or anubhava. But how can the activity of the body and speech, such as pûja or the silent repetition of the sacred mantras be called an anubhava, or experiencing of truth. To this objection, we reply, that Bhakti or devotion has the form of consciousness of a collection of the essence of the light-giving energy of the Lord (Hladini sakti or gladdening power.) In other words, Bhakti means consciousness of intense joy. As it has been said in the Gopala Tapani:—

Sach-chid-anand-aika-rase bhaktiyoge tişthati.

"Bhakti consists in the union through love, with the Lord, who is one mass of existence, intelligence and bliss." If it were not so, it could not be the cause of bringing the Lord under the control of His devotees. This being so, the activities of the bodily functions of the devotee, who is united in identity with the Lord, is a cause of intense joy, just like the hair and figure of the Lord causes joy. Every bodily activity of the devotee—His pûjå and Archanå, etc., becomes a source of intense joy, and hence these also become anubhava or immediate experience or perception of the Lord. Thus it follows that it is not only in meditation alone, that spiritual anubhava takes place, but bhakti being anubhava, pure and simple, arises from pûjå and silent repetition of mantras also, for they also give rise to intense joy.

Note.—As the body of the Lord, whose essence consists of pure bliss and intelligence, is all joy, throughout; His nails, His feet, His hair, etc., are made up all of joy, so every activity of the Bhakta, his dancing, his singing, his pûjâ, hia japa, is all an anubhava or immediate perception of the Lord; because the Sruti declares it so. There is no scope for ng here, we cannot say how physical activity can become anubhava? But the fact is, that it is so, in the case of the bhakta, and the maxim to be applied is that contained in IL 1. 27. of the Vedinta Sătras. In matters of Sruti or direct statements of the scriptures, there is no room for reason. Because these are matters which are transcendental and inconceivable. The author next refutes the satra III. 4. 7.

BÛTRA III. 4. 18.

नाविरोषात्॥ ३।४।१३॥

W Na, not so. Where Aviseat, on account of non-specification.

13. There is no specification that a man should perform karma throughout his whole life, even though he has got enlightenment through anubhava—442.

COMMENTARY.

The Sruti of the Isavasya does not lay down any such restrictive rule that even the illumined sage must perform karma throughout his life. Why so? Avisesat. Because there is no specification. The verse 2 of the Isavasya is very general. It does not particularly specify that even an illumined sage must perform karma. All that it says is "Let one perform karmas throughout his life." There is nothing to show to what class of people that particular rule is addressed. On the contrary, there are express texts of the Srutis, which show that immortality is not to be obtained by Karma, but by knowledge alone. Such as the following:— (Mahanarayana Up. of the Taitt. Ar. X. 5.)

न कर्मका न प्रजया धनेन त्यागेनैके जन्तत्वमानशुः।

Not by karmas (sacrifices) nor by children, nor by wealth can one obtain immortality. It is by renunciation alone that some great-souled beings have obtained immortality.

Thus we have two srutis, Isavaşya says "Perform karmas throughout your life"; the Taittiriyaka says "Karma does not lead to immortality." Their apparent conflict is to be reconciled by giving them different scopes. One is addressed to the Saniştha devotees, the other to the Nirapekşa devotees. Now the author gives the real meaning of the Isavaşya verse.

SUTRA III. 4. 14.

स्तुतयेऽनुमतिर्वा ॥ ३ । ४ । १४ ॥

स्तुत्वे Stutaye, for the purpose of glorification or praise अनुवृत्ति:, Anumatih permission. व Vå, or, indeed.

14. Or the permission to do work throughout one's life, is for the sake of glorifying Vidyâ—443.

COMMENTARY.

The force of "va" is to denote exclusion, namely, it means "only."

The permission given by Isavasya to perform karmas throughout one's life has the object of glorifying Vidyå. The context of the Upanisad shows this. Vidyå has such a great power, that if a man were to perform karmas always throughout his life, he would not be tainted by them, because his Vidyå counteracts the evil effects of Karma. Thus instead of enjoining karma throughout one's life, it merely praises vidyå. Even the second line of that verse also shows the same. It says "thus working, karma will not bind"; which shows that karma always has a binding effect. But vidyå nullifies that effect. Thus it follows that the theory of Jaimini that vidyå is subordinate to karma, has no legs to stand upon, and has been refuted.

Adhikarana IV.

Having established in the previous aphorisms the independence of Vidyå from Karma, the author now describes further the supreme greatness of vidyå itself. In the Vajasaneyaka Sruti it is thus declared (Brih. Up. 1V. 4. 23.)

तवेतहचाम्युक्तम् । एव निस्यो महिमानाहाबस्य न वर्षते कर्मकः ने। करीयान् । सन्धेव स्थारपद्याचे विदित्वा न क्रियते कर्मका पापकेनेति ॥

This has been told by a verse (Rik), "This eternal greatness of the illumined devotes of Brahman does not grow larger by work, nor does it grow smaller. Let a man try to find (know) its trace, for having found (known) it he is not sullied by any evil deed."

(Doubt.)—Such being the glory of Vidya that one having it neither grows great by the performance of Karmas, nor is lessened by its non-performance, there arises the doubt, must such a person act as he likes, or must be conform still to the conventionalities of ordinary life?

(Pûrva-pakea)—If he acts as he likes, and abandons the performance of the duties enjoined on all men, it is possible that there may be some sin arising from such abandonment; and so it is not desirable that a Brahmavit should be a Yatheştâchârin, or one acting as he likes.

(Siddhanta.)—The next satra refutes this view, and shows that a Brahmavit may become a Yatheştachariu, for he has risen above all social and religious bondage.

SÛTRA III. 4. 15.

कामकारेखवेके ॥ ३ । ४ । १४ ॥

कानकारेज Kamakarena with the action according to one's desire. श Va or. एके Eke, some declare or hold.

15. Some hold that a Brahmavit may act as he desires—444.

COMMENTARY.

According to one text of the Brihad. Up. rescension, a Brahmavit is not touched by the good fruits of the good acts, or the evil consequences of a bad act. He may perform karma, if he likes, only with the object of giving the rewards of such karmas to the world in which he lives, for he does not require any karma for himself. This is how they explain the text "So great is the glory of this Brahma-devoted sage," etc. Therefore. a Brahmavit may act as he likes, for no sin can taint him. The word Brahmana used in the above text means "one who has realised Brahman." It follows, therefore, that if a Brahmavit performs a karma, ordained by Sastra, he does not get the reward of that karma, and if he omits to do any such karma, he does not get the sin of omission of such karmas. In fact, he has cut off all relation between him and Karma. So that, the effects of karına do not touch him. Like the lotus leaf in water, he is not wetted by karma. And in the burning fire of his Vidya, all evil effects of the non-performance of karma are reduced to ashes instantaneously, as a handful of grass thrown into fire. Therefore, this power of acting as he likes, is the great glory of Vidya. This sense is further enlarged in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 4. 16.

उपमर्वञ्च ॥ ३ । ४ । १६ ॥

द्युवरिष् Upamardam, destruction. च Cha, and.

16. And there is destruction (of all karmas through Vidyâ), (therefore Vidyâ is pre-eminent)—445.

COMMENTARY.

The following texts of the Mundaka Up., and of the Gita show that Vidya is only not subordinate to karma, but the destroyer of it.

भिवते हृद्यप्रन्यिदिक्वन्ते सर्व्यसंशयाः । शीयन्ते चास्य कर्माचि तकिन्द्रन्दे परावरे ॥ ८ ॥

The fetter of the heart is broken, all doubts are solved, all his works (and their effects) perish, when He has been beheld who is high and low (cause and effect). (II. 8).

यथैथांसि समिज्ञोऽप्रिमेस्मसास्कृततेऽतुं न । जानांत्रः सर्वकर्माच अस्मसास्कृतते तथा ॥ ३७ ॥

As the burning fire reduces fuel to ashes, O Arjuns so doth the fire of wisdom reduce all actions to ashes (Git& IV. 37.)

These texts show that Vidya destroys all karmas; therefore the majesty of Vidya is pre-eminent. When she can destroy the effects of the half-enjoyed prarabdha karmas even, then where is the wonder that after acquisition of vidya, a man may renounce all karmas ordained by the scriptures, and yet incur no guilt.

How do you say, (objects the Pûrvapakşin), that vidyå destroys Prārabdha karmas even, for all authors of Sāstras are agreed in the view, that Prārabdha karmas are destroyed only by suffering, and there is no other method of their destruction admitted by the Theologians.

To this we reply, that though the Vidyå has the power of burning to ashes all karmas, yet the illumined sage, who has harmonised his will with that of the Supreme Lord, allows the Prarabdha karmas to continue to produce their effects, in order to carry on the will of the Lord, and to spread His glory in this world. The sage allows the Vidyå to singe the Prarabdha karmas, but not to reduce them to ashes. The Prarabdha karmas of such a sage are like a half-burnt cloth, which retains its texture, and looks like a cloth; but which at the slightest touch, falls into pieces. The wise sage is dressed in such a Prarabdha karma, and carries on the activities generated by such karma. This is what is meant by the phrase that the Prarabdha karma is destroyed only by enjoyment. The author of the sûtra will himself explain this further in IV. 1. 15.

SÛTRA III. 4. 17.

उद्ध्वरेतःसु च शब्दे हि ॥ ३ । ४ । १७ ॥

कर्णरेत: Urddhva-retahsu, of those who observe perpetual celibacy. प

17. In the case of the celibates, the scripture itself describes their freedom from all karmas, when they get Vidyâ. Therefore, vidyâ is superior to karma—446.

COMMENTARY.

In the case of those particular kind of parinisthita devotees, who observe the vow of perpetual celebacy, and who are possessed of mighty Vidyå, the scriptures mention that they are sbove the bondage of karma, and may perform actions or renounce them at their will. That also shows that we must admit that Vidyå is independent of karma. The scriptural text referred to in this sûtra is the Brihad. Ar. Up., III. 5. 1.

सथ हैनं कहोतः कैषितकेयः प्रमुख्य याज्ञपदन्येति होषाच यदेव साक्षाद्परी-क्षाद्गप्त य प्रात्मा सर्व्यान्तरस्तं मे व्यावस्थेत्येच त प्रात्मा सर्वान्तरः कतमा याज्ञवरूक सर्वान्तरो योऽधानायापिपासे होकं मोहं जरां सृत्युमत्येत्येतं वै तमात्मानं विदित्वा बाद्यकः पुनैवकायास्य वित्तं वकायास्य केषिवकायास्य स्युत्यायाज्य मिक्षाचर्यं वरन्ति या होव पुत्री-वका सा वित्तेवका या वित्तं वका सा कोषीवकामे होते प्रचे प्रच भवतस्तकाद् बाह्यकः

Then Kahola Kangitakeya asked, "Yājūavalkya," he said, "tell me the Brahman which is visible, yet invisible, the Self (atman) who is within all!"

Yajūavalkya replied: "This, thy Solf who is within all." "Which Solf, O Yajūavalkya is within all."

Yajaavalkya replied, "Re who overcomes hunger and thirst, sorrow, passion, old age, and death. When Brahmanas know that Self, and have risen above the desire for sons, wealth, and (new) worlds, they wander about as mendicants. For a desire for sons is desire for wealth, a desire for wealth is desire for worlds. Both these are indeed desires.

"Let a Brâhmana renounce learning, and become as a child, and after renouncing learning and a childlike mind, let him become a quietist; and when he has made an end of quietism and non-quietism, he shall become a Brâhmana, a Brâhmana indeed.

"By whatever means he has become a Brahmana he is such indeed. Everything else is of evil." After that Kahola Kauaitakeya held his peace.

This shows that crossing the stage of learning and childlike simplicity, a knower of Brahman goes above all karmas, and remains as he likes. Similarly, in the Gita III. 25:—

सकाः कर्मन्यविद्वांसा यथा कुर्वन्ति भारत । कुर्याद्विद्वांसरायाऽसक्तिश्वकीषु स्रोकसङ्ग्रहम् ॥ २५ ॥

As the ignorant act from attachment to action, O Bharata, so should the wise act without attachment, desiring the welfare of the world.

This Gita text applies to the householder who occupies a position of authority and responsibility in his community, and to whom men lock forward as their ideal. Such a parinisthita devotee, even after acquiring vidya, ought not to renounce karma, for his example would mislead society. It is only Yatis, or Urdharetas, or the perpetual celibates, who on getting vidya may safely renounce all karmas; for they, not being in the society, their example is not likely to mislead the ignorant members of the society. Thus such is the glory of vidya that even when one acts as he likes, no sin touches him. The author next shows a different explanation of the above text, given by Jaimini.

80TRA III. 4. 18.

परामर्शं जैमिनिरचोदनाचापवदति हि ॥ ३ । १ । १८ ॥

प्राणकेषु Paramarsam, (the Sruti has) a favourable reference to (karma.) केलिन: Jaiminih, Jaimini holds. स्वाचित्र Achodana, absence of injunction. प्र Cha, and. स्वयस्ति Apavadati, forbids. श्रि Hi, because.

18. Jaimini holds that the scripture not only enjoins karma to the wise, but reproaches those who renounce karmas, and does not expressly prohibit karmas (therefore the text about Kâmâchâra refers to injunctive karmas only)—447.

COMMENTARY.

The meaning of the text quoted in III. 4. 15, is that the wise sage has full liberty of doing as he likes those karmas only which have been ordained as a rule. (The sage is not at liberty to do karmas which have been prohibited.) He has option to do in any way he likes the enjoined karmas. It does not mean that enjoined karmas may be omitted altogether. Thus one of the enjoined karmas is morning prayer or Sandhyâ. The ordinary men must perform Sandhyâ strictly, at the proper time, but an illumined sage may perform it at any time he likes. This is the meaning of Kamachara.

Because the scripture itself shows that even the wise sage must perform karmas, and it denounces those who have abandoned karmas. therefore, there is no express text enjoining the renunciation of karmas. The reason is this. Because the scriptures have reference to the wise with regard to karma, and because it reproaches those who renounce karmas. therefore, it follows that the true spirit of the scripture is not to teach the renunciation of karmas nor we cannot infer the existence of any such rule "let the wise renounce karmas." The sense is this. The second verse of the Isavasva. Up. which declares that a man must perform karmas is an authority which enjoins karmas even to the wise. Similarly, the Sruti of the Taittiriyas which declares that "a man who renounces karmas loses his progeny," is an authority reproaching those who have abandoned karmas. Reading these texts together, it is not possible to infer that there should be any text enjoining the abandonment of karmas. Because. enjoining and prohibiting the same act simultaneously, is the contradiction not contemplated by the scriptures. Nor can you say that there will be no scope for texts which declare the renunciation of karmas. In our view. those texts will find their scope in the case of cripples, blind men, etc., who through physical or mental infirmity are incapable, of performing karmas. Therefore, the wise sage must undertake the performance of the Srauta and Smarta karmas, the various ceremonial worships taught in the Vedas and Smritis, and in this case latitude is given to him to perform them anyhow. This is the meaning of the text kenasyat, yenasyat of the Brihad. Ar. Up. quoted above. That text does not mean that a wise sage can renounce karmas or perform them at his option. This is the opinion of Jaimini.

Thus according to the opinion of Jaimini, the above text of the Brihad. Ar. Up. is an authority enjoining the performance of karmas and observing the rule of good conduct for all men. The author now shows that in his opinion the above text gives permission to do as one likes. H. gives this meaning in the next sûtra.

BÛTRA III. 4. 19.

अनुष्ठेयं वादराययाः साम्यश्रुतेः ॥ ३ । ४ । १६ ॥

समुद्रेश Anustheyam, (Karma) should be practised. श्रास्त्राच्याः Badarayanah, Badarayana holds. शास्त्र Samya, of equality. भुत्रेः Bruteh, account of scriptural atatement.

19. (According to) Bâdarâyana (the obligatory duties only) may be performed somehow or other, because there is equality according to authority (between the God-intoxicated devotees, who partially perform karmas, and ordinary men who fully perform karmas)—448.

COMMENTARY.

According to Badarayana, it is only those karmas which are obligatory that a wise man may perform according to his option; that is, he should perform some part of it and omit other parts. Why do we say so? Because there is statement of equality. The text "kenasyat yenasyat tenedrisah" shows that the illumined sage performing works in any way. somehow, is equal to him who performs them fully. The above Brihad. Up, text clearly shows that there is an equality between a sage performing actions partially and between any other person performing them fully. How can a partial performer of obligatory karmas be equal to the full performer of them? According to the opinion of Jaimini, this statement of equality is merely glorificatory, for unless a man perform karmas fully, he cannot be said to be equal to one who scrupulously performs them all. If he leaves any one of those karmas unperformed, he cannot be said equal to him who performs them fully. Jaimini explains this equality by saying that both are equal inasmuch as both perform the obligatory karmas, though one performs it partially and the other fully. The full performance of karmas is ordained for svanistha devotee, such a wise man must perform all karmas. The text reproaching the renouncement of karmas applies to those men who have not reached illumination, but have renounced karmas too early. Thus both texts are reconciled. And so far a truly illumined sage, belonging to the order of parinisthita the performance of karmas need not be entire. The law is fulfilled by him by the partial performance even of the obligatory karmas.

Nor can it be said that the texts teaching the renunciation of karmas are confined to physically incapable persons, because there are no such restrictive statements in those texts. Those verses declare that release is not to be obtained by karmas or by offsprings, etc., but by the abandonment of all karmas alone. This general statement cannot be restricted in the way that Jaimini would have it.

SÛTRA III. 4. 20.

विधिर्वा धारणवत् ॥ ३ । ४ । २० ॥

विधि: Vidhiḥ, an injunction, बा Va, or, भारत्वक Dharanavat, as is the case of taking (the Vedas) with, or as in the case of carrying, &c.

20. Or the above text may be an injunction like the text about the study of the Vedas—449.

COMMENTARY.

The above text "kena syat yena syat" may be construed as an injunction regarding the illumined sage, just like those injunctions which declare that a Brahmana child must be initiated at the age of eight so that he may be able to study the Vedas. In this view the above text is an injunction teaching that a sage belonging to the order of parinisthita should perform all karmas according to his will, but persons other than parinisthitas should not do so, as says the Bhagavata Purana:—

शीषमाषमनं सानं न तु बादनयाषरेत्। चन्यांस्य नियमान् द्वानी ययादं खीस्रयेश्वरः ॥

"The wise do not perform the purificatory acts, the sipping of water, the bathing and other acts required by the law according to injunctions of the Scriptures. They perform it according to their will; as I, the Lord of the universe, perform all acts according to my will, as a more sport."

This view is objected to in the next sûtra in the first part, and then that objection is answered.

स्तुतिमात्रमुपावानावितिचेन्नापूर्वरवात् ॥ ३ । ४ । २१ ॥

रसुतिनाचन Stuti-matram, praise merely. चनानान Upadanat, on account of reference. इति lti, so. चेष् Chet, if. न Na, not so. चन्द्रीत्वाक् Apûrvatvat, on account of the newness.

21. If it be said that (texts such as the one about the performance of karmas according to one's will are) mere glorifications on account of their reference to the performance of karmas, we deny that because the texts lay down a new injunction (for the performance of karmas according to one's will)—450.

COMMENTARY.

An objector says, the above text is not an injunction but a mere glorification of the illumined sage. As a person may tell to one whom he loves "Do as thou likest," and by so saying shows merely his regard and love for that person, so when the Lord says "a wise man may do as he likes," it is not an injunction to the wise man to go and break all the laws of God and social conventions, but it only shows that the Lord has so much confidence in those persons that He tells them to do as they like, knowing full well that they will never do anything against His will. The statement, therefore, that a wise man may do as he likes, is a mere glorification. More so, because there are express texts to the effect that a wise man must also perform karmas.

To this objection, we reply that the above text is not an arthavada but a vidhi or injunction with regard to the God-intoxicated sage to do as he likes. It teaches something new not already taught before, and is therefore, an apurva vidhi and not a stuti.

Note.—The argument of the objector may be thus put. The sentence "Let a Jfifnin do as he likes" is a glorification only, and not an injunction. Because the Jfifnin also is required to perform karmas by the injunction contained in the verse 'Kurvan eva' etc., of the İffvifiya. To this objection the reply given is that there is no other text declaring the performance of karmas according to one's will for the Jfifnin. Therefore, when the Brihad. Ar. Up. says "a Jfifnin may perform karmas as he likes," it must be construed as an aptiva vidhi. All the vidhis are of three kinds, namely aptiva vidhi, niyama vidhi and parisamkhyā vidhi as defined in the following verse:—

विधिरत्वस्तममाती, नियमः पाहित्वे सति । तत्र चान्यत्र च माती परिसंक्येति गीयते ॥

"An aparva vidhi is one which makes an original statement not to be known by any other means. A niyama vidhi or a restrictive rule enjoins the performance of one of the two alternatives. "A parisamkhyå enumerates cases to which certain rule applies." For example, "let him worship daily with the Sandhya worship" or "let a person desirous of acquiring heaven, perform the sacrifice called Jyotistoma." These are aparva vidhis, because a man would not have found the necessity of performing Sandhya or Jyotistoma. merely by his reasoning or his natural inclination, but for the teaching of the scriptures. By no other means he would have known that the Jyotistoma is a means of procuring heaven. Therefore, these are Aptiva vidhis. That which ordains or restricts a man to one of the two alternatives is a Niyama vidhi. Such as, "a person must approach his wife in the season." This restricts a man to a particular time. A man by natural inclination. would approach his wife; but if through want of it, he neglects his wife, this rule enjoins him not to do so. Similarly, "let him cleanse the rice of its husk by pounding it," is a Niyama vidhi. For the husks may be removed by processes other than pounding; but the rule confines one to pounding. Similarly, "Five-toed animals may be eaten" is a Parisamkhya vidhi. It does not lay down any injunction as to the eating of five-toed animals, but if one wants to eat such animals, he is confined to such of them as are mentioned in Manu, V. 17 and 18.

न अस्पेदेक्करानदानांश्च स्वादिकात्। अस्पेक्वपि समुद्दिशान्सर्वात्यस्य नकास्तया ॥ १७ ॥ श्वादित्र शस्त्रकं गार्था कष्ट्र कृत्रशास्त्रया । अस्यान्येक्वकेष्यादुरजुद्दोक्षेकतात्तः ॥ १८ ॥

"Let him not eat solitary or unknown beasts and birds, though they may fall under (the categories of) eatable (creatures', nor any five-tood (animals)."

"The porcupine, the hadgehog, the iguans, the rhinoceros, the tortoise, and the hare, they declare to be estable; likewise those (domestic animals) that have teeth in one jaw only, excepting camels."

Thus all five-toed animals, like monkey, &c., are prohibited foods; but an exception is made in favour of six. The Parisamkhya is a permissive rule, than an injunction.

80TRA III. 4. 12.

भावराज्याच ॥ ३ । ४ । २२ ॥

आब Bhava, devotion, love, absorption. वास्ता Sabdat, on account of words.

22. And because of the text (of Mund. III. 1. 4) declaring that there is absorption in the Lord—451.

COMMENTARY.

In the Mundaka Up. III. 1. 4., we have the following :—
प्राचा द्वार यः सर्वभूतैर्विमाति विज्ञानन् विद्वान् अवते नातिवादी ।
स्रात्मरतिः क्रियावानेन महाविदां वरिष्ठः ॥ ४ ॥

For the Lord shines forth in all beings and senses, knowing this the wise from useless controversy. He contemplates on the Lord, enjoys the bliss of His company, (and when out of trance) is active in performing works of the Lord—such a Jivan-mukta is also the teacher of those who are seekers of the knowledge of Brahman.

In the above text we find words denoting bhava, such as atma-krida, atma-rati, etc. The word bhava means intense love, and words rati and prema are its synonyms. The sense is this, the parinisthita God-absorbed devotee, has not the time to perform karmas, because of his contemplation of the Lord. Therefore, such a person may perform karmas only partially, and somehow or other, for the sake of society, and not because it is necessary for him to perform it. This also shows that Brahma-vidya is independent of karma.

In the next sûtra the author himself raises the doubt whether the stories related in the Upanisads about God-absorbed persons and other seekers of Brahman are not mere pariplavas or episodes to be recited at stated intervals during the year occupied by the Asvamedha sacrifice. Having raised the doubt in the first part of the sûtra, he answers it in the latter half.

SÛTRA IIL 4, 28.

पारिष्ठवार्था इतिचेन्न विशेषितत्वात् ॥ ३ । ४ । २३ ॥

पारिप्रपार्था: Pariplava-arthab, for the purpose of filling up the time; pastimes. इति Iti, so. चेर Chet, if. व Na, not so. विशेषितस्याव Visesitatvat, on account of their being specified.

23. If it be said that the stories told in the Upanisads are for the purpose of pariplava, we reply this is not so, because the pariplava stories are certain specified ones—452.

COMMENTARY.

In the Upanisads like the Brihad Ar. and the rest we find stories like the following: - "Yajñavalkya had two wives, Maitreyi and Katyayani" (Bri. Up. IV. 5. 1.) "Bhrigu, the son of the Varuna, approached his father Varuna and said, teach me, sir, Brahma-vidyå."--(Taitt. Up. III. 1.) "Pratardana, forsooth, the son of Divodasa came to the beloved abode of Indra."-(Kau. Up. III. 1.) "There lived once upon a time Januaruti Pautrayana who was a pious giver, giving much and keeping open house" -(Ch. Up. IV. I. 1). These and similar stories are related in the Upanisads with regard to Brahma-vidya. The doubt arises, are these stories told in the Upanisads for the purpose of pariplava, to fill up the time occupied in the performance of Asvamedha ceremony or are they meant to establish the glory of Brahma-vidya? The Pûrvapakşin says, they are pariplava stories, because all stories are enjoined for the sake of pariplava, and in storytelling, the literary skill is the chief point kept in view; the story-tellers attach more importance to the words of the stories and a minor importance to the teaching contained in those stories (in other words, the stories are meant to amuse and not to instruct.) Therefore, the Brahma-vidy& taught in these stories, are merely arthavadas, like other mantras which stand in a complementary relation to sacrificial performances. These stories are, therefore, of no importance in themselves, except as complementary Therefore, when their intrinsic importance is thus totally set aside, consequently the Brahma-vidya taught in such stories becomes much less important.

To the above objection, raised by the purvapakain, the author of the sutra says, "it is not so, because (Viseaitatvat) certain stories only are specified in the Scriptures as pariplava and the Upaniand stories are not among them." The Scriptures specify certain definite stories as pariplavas: the Brahma-vidya stories are not included in them. Thus under the heading "He is to recite the pariplava," the Scripture mentions "the stories like those of Manu, the son of Vaivasvat, the king." The Scripture says, "on the first day the story of Manu Vivasvat's son should be recited; and on the second day, the story of Indra, the son of Vivasvat the king, should be recited; and on the third day the story of Yama Vivasvat's son the king, should be recited," and so on (See Satapatha Brahmana, XIII. 4. 3. 3). Thus the particular stories which are to be recited in the pariplava are specified in the Scriptures. Every story found in the Brahmanas is not pariplava. Had every story been a pariplava story, the Scripture would not have specified that on the first day the story of Manu should be recited; on the second day the story of Indra; and on the third day, that of Yama. Since all tales were alike, the injunction about these particular tales would be useless. Therefore, when the Scripture says ("Sarvany akhyanani pariplave samsanti") "all stories are recited in the pariplavas," the word "all" does not mean every story in general, but only all those stories which are mentioned in the Chapter of Pariplava. Therefore, the stories mentioned in the Vedanta portion of the Brahmanas are not pariplava stories.

BÚTRA III. 4. 24.

तथाचेकवाक्यतोपबन्धात् ॥ ३ । ४ । २४ ॥

सवा Tathâ, similarly. च Cha, and. एक्स्प्रक्ता Ekavâkyatâ, unity of construction or of statements, or that of sense. इप्यञ्जान Upabandhât, because of the connection.

24. Therefore this being so (the Vedânta stories teach Brahma-vidyâ); because of their coherent connection (with the statements about the Self, and the vidyâs)—453.

COMMENTARY.

Since the stories of Vedanta are not for the purposes of the pariplava, it is therefore, proper to construe them as corroborating the Brahma-vidya, in the immediate connection with which they are recited. Their object is to make it clear to our understanding in a concrete form, the vidyas taught in other portions of the Upanisads, in the abstract. Why do we say so? Ekavakyatopabandhat. Because of their syntactical connection with the vidyas taught in the succeeding passages. Thus in the story beginning with "Yajāavalkya had two wives, etc.," we find immediately following, in that very section, the vidya taught about the atman in these words (Brihad. Ar. IV. 4. 22.) "The atman is verily to be seen, to be heard of, to be meditated upon." Since these stories are immediately preceded or succeeded by instructions about Brahman, we infer that they are meant to glorify the vidya and are not pariplava stories. Just as the story about "He wept" standing in proximity to karma is rightly interpreted as glorifying the injunctions about sacrificial performance in relation to which such stories are related. As those stories, glorifying karmas, are not pariplava stories, so also the Upanisad stories are not pariplava stories but, on the other hand, standing in proximity to injunctions about vidys, they must be interpreted as glorification of the vidya; because the rule of construction is the same here. The sense is this. The vidya is verily an independent means of producing (or causing the fulfilment or attainment of) the highest end of man, namely, of producing or bringing about the final release. And because it is so great, therefore, great souls like Yajñavalkya and the rest have devoted themselves, with great effort and might, to its cultivation. The stories are told in order to facilitate the understanding of these abstruse subjects, and they are eminently fitted to subserve that purpose. In fact the Scripture itself says, "He who serves his master understands the vidya." The stories, therefore, serve the purpose of teaching reverence for the master. Thus also the vidya is independent of all karmas.

SÛTRA III. 4. 25.

25. And, therefore, there is no need for the lighting of the sacred fire and so on, for the sage who knows Brahman-454.

COMMENTARY.

For this reason, namely, because it has been established that vidyate is independent, therefore, she does not stand in need of the lighting of sacrificial fire and other ceremonial works, in order to manifest her fruits. The theory, therefore, that knowledge and work must be combined in order to produce mukti, is hereby set aside. Vidyatalone is sufficient for that purpose.

Addhikarana V.

Having thus described the power and glory of vidya, the author now begins to specify the marks which are the characteristics of the person who is entitled to get this vidya. Unless a person possesses these qualifications, he cannot benefit by the study of the vidyas. Thus the Bri. Up. IV. 4. 22. declares:—"Him Brahmanas seek to know by the study of the Vedas, by sacrifice, by gifts, by penance, by fasting." This passage lays down some of the necessary qualifications. In IV. 4. 23 of the same, the following additional qualifications are laid down:—

"He, therefore, that knows it, after having become quite subdued, satisfied, patient, and collected, sees Self in the Self, sees all as Self. Evil does not overcome him, he overcomes all evil. Evil does not burn him, he burns all evil. Free from evil, free from spots, free from doubt, he becomes a (true) Bråhmana; this is the Brahma-world, O King "—thus spoke Yājňavalkya.

We give the original of these two Bri. Ar.'s texts below:-

तमेतं वेदातुषयनेन ब्राह्मका विविदिषन्ति यद्ये न दानेन तपसाऽनारासेनैतमेव विदित्वा मुनिर्भवति ॥ तसादेवंविक्यान्तो दान्त उपरतिस्तितश्चः समादिता भूत्वाऽसम्बेवा-सानं पद्यति सर्वमात्मानं पद्यति नैने पाप्मा तरित सर्वम् ।

Now the first text shows that sacrifice (yajña), gifts (dâna), penance (tapas), and fasting are necessary qualifications together with the study of the Vedas. The second passage shows that Sama (control of thought), dama (control of conquet), uparati (tolerance), titikas (endurance) and samadhana are the necessary qualifications, and are the subordinate members of the Vidys.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt. Are both these sets of qualifications necessary for the origination of vidya, or only one of them or none?

(Purva-pakṣa.)—The Pūrvapakṣin says that none of these qualifications is absolutely essential for the attainment of vidyā. Getting the right Guru is the only necessary thing. As says the Chhānd. Up. (VI. 14. 2.) (Achāryavān puruṣho veda) "He knows Brahman who has found a teacher." This and similar texts prove that the finding of the teacher is the chief essential in acquiring vidyā.

(Siddhanta.) - This view is refuted in the next sutra.

SÛTRA III. 4. 26.

सर्वापेचा च यज्ञादिश्रुतिरश्ववत् ॥ ३ । ४ । २६ ॥

सर्व Sarva, of all. स्रवेशा Apeksa, there is need. च Cha, and बतादि Yajñadi, for sacrifices and others. मुतिः Śrutib, there is the Vedic statement. सम्बद्ध Aśvavat, as in the case of the horse.

26. All these qualifications are necessary, because the Sruti mentions sacrifices, etc., as necessary qualifications. They are like the horse (which is necessary to accomplish a journey; though on finishing it, he is no longer necessary)—455.

COMMENTARY.

Though vidyà is independent of all works in the manifestation of her fruits, yet for her origination she is dependent on all these works, such as sacrifices, gifts, etc. Why? Because the two texts of the Bri. Ar. Up. given above show expressly that for the origination of vidyâ these qualifications are absolutely necessary. The author gives an illustration of this. As in order to accomplish a journey, a horse is necessary, but on its accomplishment it is no longer required, so for the origination of vidyâ these works are necessary, but after she has once originated, they are no longer necessary.

If vidy& can be originated by sacrifices, gifts, penance and fasting, what is the necessity of other qualifications like sama (control of thought), dama (control of conduct), etc.? To this the author replies in the next sûtra.

BÛTRA III. 4. 27.

शमवमाथुपेतस्तु स्यात्तथापि तु तद्विधेस्तवङ्गतया तेषामव-श्यानुष्टेयस्वात्॥ ३ । ४ । २७ ॥

27. But the control of thought and of conduct and the rest, must be acquired (though vidyâ may originate by sacrifice, etc., also), because there are express injunctions for these, stating that they are auxiliaries of vidyâ, and must on that account necessarily be accomplished—456.

COMMENTARY.

The two "tu's" mean "verily" and "but," respectively; and are employed to remove the doubt above raised. Though it is true that sacrifice, gift, penance, and fasting purify the heart of man, and fit him to acquire vidyå, still the seeker of vidyå must acquire also the moral qualifications of sama (the control of thought), dama (the control of conduct), etc. Why? Because these also are enjoined as auxiliaries of vidyå. The above text of the Bri. Ar. Up. expressly enjoins the acquirement of these moral qualifications also. And since they are so enjoined, they must necessarily be accomplished. The result is that both sets of qualifications, the physical, like the sacrifice, gift, penance and fasting, and moral, like the sama (the control of thought), dama (the control of conduct), etc., must be acquired and performed. The first set is Bahiranga or external, the second set is Antaranga or internal qualification. The word add (and the rest) mentioned in the sutra indicates that qualifications like those of truthfulness, silent repetition of the mantras, etc., mentioned in the Jijnasa Adhikarana (I. 1.1) as quoted from Mundaka and Manu Smriti at page 7, must also be included among the necessary qualifications. Thus the aspirant after the Brahma-vidya, must possess all these qualifications of truthfulness, generosity, asceticism, celibacy, indifference to worldly objects, fasting, control of thought, control of conduct, tolerance, endurance, faith, equilibrium, compassion, etc.

Adhikarana VI.

The author now teaches that though an illumined sage has full liberty of action, yet he must not commit sins or do prohibited acts. Thus there is a following Sruti:—

यदि ह वा चप्येवंबिन् निकालं मक्षयीत , प्रमेव स भवति ।

"If a knower of Brahman eats any food cooked by anybody he remains as pure as he was before, his lustre is not diminished."

Note.—In the Chhând. Up. V. 2. 1, it is also said "To him who knows this, there is nothing which is not food"; and in the Bri. Up. IV. 1. 14, it is said by him nothing is eaten that is not food, nothing is received that is not food."

(Doubt.—Here arises the doubt. Are these texts an injunction, ordering the illumined sage to eat all food, or are they merely permissive; allowing him to eat such food, if he likes?

(Pirva-paksa.)—This is an original statement regarding the eating of all kinds of food, a statement not to be inferred by any other proof; hence it is an injunction, ordering the sage to eat all kinds of food. It is an apûrva vidbi and is auxiliary to vidyâ like sama, dama, etc.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

SÚTRA III. 4. 28.

सर्वान्नानुमतिश्च प्राणात्यये तदर्शनात् ॥ ३ । ४ । २८ ॥

सर्व Sarva, of all. सन Anna, food. सनुनति: Anumatih, permission for. च Cha, and, indeed. शास Prana, of life, सन्ति Atyaye, at the time (where there is risk) of departure or loss. तर Tad, that. दर्शनास Darsanat, being stated in the Sastras.

28. The permission to eat all kinds of food, is given only under the circumstances of danger to life, because the Scripture gives only such examples—457.

COMMENTARY.

The word "and" has the force of "only" here. The texts like those given above are permissive only. They allow the wise man to eat food, cooked by anybody, when there is danger to his life, from not getting the lawful food. Why do we say so? Because the examples given in the Scriptures show that it is in cases of extreme necessity only that the rule of lawful and unlawful food is set aside. Thus in the Chhând. Up. (I. 10. 1-3) we find the following (see page 49 also).

When (the crops in the land of) the Kurus were destroyed by hallstones, Usasti Chākrāyaņa lived a-begging with his young wife at Ibhya-grama. Seeing the Lord of Ibhya cating beans, he begged some from him.

(The master of elephants) said to Usasti. "I have no more except these, which are placed before me for eating." Usasti said "give me then some of these." He gave him some of those, and said "Here is some water to drink, in this bag." Usasti said "I shall drink impure water, if I drank what has already been drunk by another." The master of elephants said "Are not these beans also impure, as I am eating of them?"

Usasti replied "No. (these beans should not be considered unclean) because without eating them I cannot live; while the drinking of (your) water (is not an absolute necessity and) depends on my pleasure (for it can be obtained everywhere.)" Usasti having eaten himself, brought the remainder to his wife. But she had already eaten before, therefore, she took them and put them away.

From seeing how Châkrâyana conducted himself in those hard times, we infer that it is permissive to every one to take the food, which is otherwise unlawful, in times of distress, when life cannot be otherwise maintained. Châkrâyana took the leavings of the food of the elephant-driver, because he could not have maintained himself without such food; but he refused to take the water already drunk by the elephant-driver, because there was no water-famine, and water could have been obtained easily. The story further shows that the next morning he ate the same food which was now doubly unlawful, for it was not only the uchchhista food of the elephant-driver, but it was the uchchhista of Châkrâyana himself. The sage Châkrâyana eating thus the leavings of the food, was still so sacred and holy that he was the head officiating priest in the great sacrifice which the king of that country was performing.

The other passages of the Upanisad relating to food should be explained in the same way.

COMMENTARY.

Unlawful food, as a general rule, clogs the understanding and obstructs the clear working of the intellect. But in the case of the sage, whose heart is always pure; and intellect, keen, the taking of such food does not obstruct the working of his brain, and his knowledge remains as pure as ever.

He who, when in danger of losing his life, accepts food from any person whatsoever, is no more tainted by sin than the sky by mud.

Ajigarta, who suffered hunger, approached in order to slay (his own) son, and was not tainted by sin, since he (only) sought a remedy against famishing.

VAmadeva, who well knew right and wrong, did not sully himself when turmented (by hunger), he desired to eat the flesh of a dog in order to save his life.

Bhāradvāja, a performer of great austorities, accepted many cows from the carpenter Bridhu, when he was starving together with his sons in a lonely forest. Visvamitra, who well knew what is right or wrong, approached, when he was tormented by hunger, (to eat) the haunch of a dog, receiving it from the hauds of a Chandála.

Thus the Manu Smriti permits all men, whether learned or ignorant, spiritual or worldly, to take the food cooked by all men, without regard to their lawfulness or unlawfulness, in times of distress only, and not always. Therefore, when the Upanisad says that the sage may eat all kinds of food, it must be interpreted as meaning that he may eat all kinds of food in times of distress only. The text of the Upanisad should not be construed as an injunction in favour of eating unlawful food. It is no part of the sadhana or spiritual practice, that the sage should go out of his way and eat all sorts of food.

Note.—This is in answer to those who say that a Brahmavit being a lover of humanity should take food cooked by all men, and should not observe the Sistric injunctions against taking such food. A Brahmavit can no doubt counteract evil effects of such food, but why should he waste his energy on it? He may no doubt drink wine, eat meat, take all sorts of drugs, and not be the worse for it, but he does so at his own risk. He breaks the law unnecessarily.

SÛTRA III. 4. 81.

शब्दश्चातोऽकामचारे ॥ ३ । ४ । ३१ ॥

शब्द: Sabdaḥ, there is a scriptural statement. च Cha, and. चत्र: Atah, hence. चकानचारे Akamachare, as to non-proceeding according to liking.

31. Therefore, the scripture teaches that a sage should not act according to his will in matters of food, disregarding the Sâstric injunctions. There is a text to that effect—460.

COMMENTARY.

Since permission to take all kinds of food is given only in times of distress, it follows that in ordinary times, the wise man should not act in opposition to the scriptural injunctions. There is a scriptural text or passage to that effect also. In the Chhand. Up. VII. 26. 2, we have the following:—

स पक्रवा भवति त्रिषा भवति पञ्चषा सप्तवानवद्या वैव पुनरवैकादश स्मृतः शतभा दश वैकम सहकावि च विश् शतिराहारशुदौ सरवशुदिः सरवशुदौ भ्रवा स्मृतिः स्वृतिसम्मे सब प्रन्थीनां विभ्रमासस्तस्मै सृदितकपायाय तमसस्पारं दशैयति भगवान् समस्कृमारस्तश् स्कन्द् इस्वाचसते तश् स्कन्द इस्वाचसते ॥ २ ॥

Clean food leads to clarity of intellect. The clearness of brain conduces to firm meditation. When meditation is firm there is vision of the Divine and all ties are unlossened completely.

This text of the Chhand. Up. is a clear prohibition of libertinism in matters of food. Therefore, the permission to take all kinds of food being confined to times of distress only, it follows that in ordinary times one must observe the Sastric injunctions.

Adhikarana VII.

In the opening section of this pads, it has been shown that the seekers of vidya (Divine wisdom) are of three sorts, Svanistha, Parinisthita and Nirapeksa. Now the author tries to answer the question, how far these devotees must observe the rules of caste and orders and whether they can observe them or not, after they have attained the Divine knowledge. He first examines a case of the Svanistha devotee. In the Kausarava Sruti we have the following:—

पद्मयत्रपीममात्मानम् कुर्यात् कर्मविचारयन् । यदात्मनः सनियतमानन्दोत्करमान्द्वयात् ॥

Even after the sage has obtained the vision of this Atman, he must perform karmas (ceremonial works), without raising any doubt, because he will get thereby increase of bliss of the Self, in a well regulated order.

(Doubt.)—There arises the following doubt with regard to this Sruti: Should the Svanistha devotee, who has obtained Divine knowledge, perform ceremonial works or not?

(Pitron-paken).—The object of all ritualistic karmas is to obtain vidya or Divine knowledge; and when that is obtained, where is then the necessity of performing karmas again. It is a general rule that when the result is obtained, the previous acts are discontinued (when the food is cooked, the fire is no longer kept burning.) Therefore, when vidya is gained, the karmas should not be performed any longer.

(Siddhanta.)—The works of the Asramas must be performed even after the attainment of Vidya, as is shown in the next sutra.

SÛTRA III. 4. 52.

विहितत्वावाश्रमकर्मापि ॥ ३ । ४ । ३२ ॥

বিছিনবোৰ Vihitatvat, they being enjoined. স্মান্তৰ Asrama, of the Asramas or the stages. হান, Karma, the duties. স্থাপ Api, also.

32. The works peculiar to one's stage in life must be performed also, because they have been so enjoined—461.

COMMENTARY.

The force of the word "also" is to indicate that not only the Asrama karmas should be performed, but also the Varna karmas, or duties peculiar to one's caste, must also be performed by the perfected sage. It, therefore, follows that both kinds of duties must be performed. Why? In order to increase the Divine knowledge. Because the scripture enjoins that even after the acquisition of Vidya, the karmas must be performed to increase that Vidya.

Now this injunction for performing karmas even after the origination of Vidya, shows that Jāana and karma, knowledge and work, must be always combined, and that Vidya is the combined result of both; and that release is obtained, not by Vidya alone, but by the combination of Vidya and Karma. This doubt is removed in the next satra.

SÛTRA III. 4. 88.

सहकारित्वेन च ॥ ३ । ४ । ३३ ॥

सहस्रातिन Sahakaritvena, on account of co-operativeness. च Cha, and.

33. The karmas are to be performed, not as leading to release, but as co-operative towards Vidyâ—462.

COMMENTARY.

The Svanisha devotee performs karma after the origination of Vidyà, not because karmas are causes of Mukti, but because they are handmaids of Vidva, and are co-operative towards Vidya. Because we find in the Upanisads that it is after the origination of Vidya that the Karmas are re-ordained. For example, the Upanisad says (tam eva viditvå) "having known that" (they get Mukti.) So it is after knowledge that Mukti comes. Thus, what the scripture teaches is this. The Svaniştha adhikar first performs the special duties of his caste and order. with the sole object of gaining the higher Self. He does not perform these religious duties with any lower motive. After performing works in this spirit, with the Supreme Self as His goal, he gets Vidya or Divine knewledge. When the Vidya is thus originated by the due performance of these karmas, he still goes on performing them in order to increase that Vidya. The Karmas performed after the origination of Vidya are not opposed to Vidya, and the Vidya has no tendency to destroy such karmas, because there is no such conflict between Vidya and Karma. The karmas generally lead to Svarga. When the devotee performs karmas, even after the origination of Vidya, he does so in order to experience the varieties of Svargic delights. Though the result of Vidya is release, and that of Karma is Svarga, there is however no such conflict between these two, so that the performance of karma after vidya should efface the effect. In the Brihad. Up., I. 4. 15, we have the following text declaring that the karma (or religious worship) done by a man who knows Brahman, produces imperishable result.

चथ यो इ वा चकाक्षोकात्स्वं छोकमहद्दा प्रैति स वनमविदिता न भुनिक वथा वेदा वाननूकोञ्चक्का कर्माकृतं यदिह वा चच्चनेवंदिव महत्युच्यं कर्म करोति

तदास्यां ततः शीयतं प्वात्मानमेव केकिमुपासीतं सः य भात्मानमेव केकिमुपास्ते न हास्य कर्म शीयते भक्तास्त्रचे वात्मने। यचत्कामयते तत्त्रत्युक्षते ॥ १५ ॥

Now if a man departs this life without having seen his true future life (in the Self) then that Self, not being known, does not receive and bloss him, as if the Veda had not been read, or as if a good work had not been done. Nay, even if one who does not know that (Self) would perform here on earth some great holy work, it will periah for him in the end. Let a man worship the Self only as his true state. If a man worships the Self only as his true state, his work does not perish, for whatever he desires that he gets from that Self.

Thus this text of the Brihad Up. expressly states that the karma of that man who has obtained Divine knowledge is never exhausted. Nor can it be said that these karmas are like Kamya karmas, performed by the ordinary worldly men in order to gain heaven. They differ from the Kamya karmas in this, that the wise svanistha does not perform them with the motive of going to Svarga, but they are all performed as an offering to the Lord, and his going to Svarga and experiencing its varieties is also to serve the Lord and study the works of the Lord, as found in heaven. The Svanistha sage reaches Brahman, and it is only as an incident that he sees Svarga and other things. As a man going to a village may touch the grass on the roadside casually and incidentally, so the Syanistha devotee, while lightly touching the joys of heaven, continually progresses towards Brahman his goal; and Vidya with her handonaid the karma, causes the experiences of heaven and the rest, and by her own power she carries the devotee to the highest abode of Brahman. This is the sense of the Scripture where it says Tamvidua, etc. The determination of the Svanistha also to experience the varieties of Svarga must be understood in this light.

Moreover, the seeker of Brahman may not have any desire of going to svarga at all; but Vidyå carries even such a person to Svarga, in order to test whether he is really fit for divine knowledge, whether he has got the true Vairågya or not. In such a case, Vidyå herself carries a man to Svarga. The Nirapekea devotee performs no karmas, and naturally he ought not to go to Svarga; but even he is carried there by Vidyå alone, in order to see whether he is a true Nirapekea or not: and whether he is fascinated by the delights of the heaven-world or not. Therefore, the scripture says, "the sage verily sees everything." This power of Vidyå does not contradict the statement that Vidya leads to Mokea.

Note.—The Svanistha has no real Kamana or worldly desire. He is mumuksu or yearning after liberation. He prays to his Lord in this way:—"Let the Supreme Self, propitiated with my niskama karmas (works performed without any selfish desire) give to me through His grace, the (Vidyå) knowledge of His Self. And may that Vidyå lead me to the Supreme Self, showing me in the way, the heaven and its delights." Thus Vidyå is really the giver of heaven to Svaniştha devotees. The heaven not being the goal of the Svaniştha, but merely an incident of his journey towards God, the karmas done by the Svanişthas cannot be said to be kamya karmas.

The Devas examine the neophyte. Vidyå tells them "O Devas! examine whether this devotee is a true nirapeksa or not." Thus it is at the command of Vidyå, that the Devas place all sorts of temptations in the path of the devotees in order to test the strength of their devotion and Vairagya.

Vidya certainly, by herself, neither gives heaven nor examines the devotees; because these are things below her, and unworthy of her greatness. Vidya, the supreme lady, whose essence consists of pure existence, intelligence, and bliss, does not demean herself by giving to her devotees heaven, etc. She brings about that effect through the medium of her servant, the karma; and thus the Svanistha devotees enjoy the pleasure of the Svargic regions. But there is a great difference between the Svarga of the svanistha devotees, and that of the ordinary good man. The Svarga of the Svanistha is unperishing. He never falls from it into reincarnation. Hence it is said Na tasya karma katyate—his work never perishes or gets exhausted. The Svarga is merely a halting stage towards the home of the Lord. But in the case of ordinary good men, the merit gets exhausted by enjoying the pleasures of Svarga and they come back on earth after a certain period.

In the case of the Nirapeksas, Vidya herself sometimes gives them Svarga in order to proclaim to all the denizens of heaven, the unselfish love of that devotee, and thus is fulfilled the saying—Sarvam ha pasyah pasyati—the wise sees everything (including heaven also.)

The karmas performed by the devotees of the Svanistha class, after the origination of Vidyå, together with the Prårabdha karmas of such persons, performed before such origination, carries them to Svarga. It is these karmas, which in their case produce svarga. Thus two things co-operate in the case of the Svanistha in producing Svarga:— namely, the Punyam of the karmas performed after the origination of Vidyå, and the Prårabdham or the stored karmas of the time before such origination. Leaving these two sorts of karmas untouched, Vidyå burns up every other karma of the Svanistha devotee. In the case of the Parinisthita devotee, however, Vidyå burns up the Sañchita karmas only, but does not destroy their Prårabdha karmas. In their case, she loosens the effect of the Kriyamåna karmas. In the case of the Nirapeksa devotees, Vidyå burns up totally all Sañchita karmas, except the Prårabdha.

Thus Vidya is independent in producing her results, karma is merely her handmaid and co-operator.

Adhikarana VIII.

Now we shall examine the parinisthita devotee, just as we did in the case of the svanistha devotee. In the Upanisads (Mundaka III. 1. 4.) we have the following:—

चात्मकीड चात्मरितः कियाचान् ।

The devotee is one who revels in the Self, he delights in the Self, and having PERFORMED HIS WORKS (truthfulness, penance, meditation, &c.) he rests, firmly established in Brahman, the best of those who know Brahman.

This shows that the Parinisthita must perform the duty of his caste and order (Varna and Aśrama) for the sake of the society; because the text says he is Kriyavan, and he must also perform the duties of devotion to the Lord (Bhagavad Dharma), because the same text says that he must revel in the Self, and delight in the Self; and this he must do out of love for God. Thus he has two functions. One the observance of the rules of caste and order for the sake of the society in which he is born, and secondly, to perform the duties of upasana, out of the love which he bears towards the Lord.

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt. Must the Parinisthita devotee perform these twofold duties, simultaneously? or successively? or must he renounce the first, and confine himself to the second set only.

(Pārva-pak;a.)—The simultaneous performance being impossible, and the abandonment of the prescribed duties being also sinful, it follows that there is no certain and definite rule as to the performance of these duties.

(Siddhanta.)—The sound conclusion, however, is that the Parinisthita must always discharge the duties of love, the Bhagavata Dharmas—and do somehow or other, the Varna and Asrama Dharmas, during his spare moments. He may even omit them altogether if he finds no time. This is shown in the next statra.

SÛTRA III. 4, 84

सर्वधाऽपि तत्र वोभयनिङ्गात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ३४ ॥

सर्वेश Sarvatha, under any circumstances. सपि Api, indeed. त्य Tatra, in their case. स Va, or. उनस्तिक्षात् Ubhaya-lingat, on account of twofold inferential signs.

34. The Parinitshita devotee must always perform the duties of the Bhagavata Dharma, (even to the exclusion of his caste and order Dharma), because there are twofold indications, (namely, that of Revelation and of Tradition to that effect)—463.

COMMENTARY.

The word "api" in the sûtra has the force of "indeed," "even." The words "Sarvathâ api" are equal to "sarvathâ eva," meaning:— "Even not regarding the general duties of one's Adrama and Varna." The parinisthita has the primary duty of performing the Bhâgavata Dharma. That he can never omit. The Dharma of his Adrama may be performed in the interval of leisure moments. Because that is secondary with him. Why do we say so? The Sûtra answers it by saying, because there are twofold indications. The Sruti or Revelation says (Mundaka II. 2. 5.)—

यक्षित् योः पृथिषी चान्तरिक्षमातं मनः सद् प्रावैदव सर्वैः। तमेवैकं जानथ चात्मानमस्या वाचा विमुं चयामृतस्यैव सेतुः ॥

In Him the heaven, the earth, and the sky are woven, the mind also with all the senses. Know Him alone as the Self, and leave off other words! He is the bridge of the Immortal.

This shows that according to the Sruti, the highest duty of man is to know God and leave off all other book-learning and ritualistic religion. The Smriti also says the same. Thus Gitâ, IX. 13.—

महात्मानस्तु मी पार्थ दैवीं प्रकृतिमाभिताः। भजंत्यनम्यमनसा द्वात्वा भृतादिमन्ययम् ॥ १२ ॥

Verily the Mahatmas, O Partha, partaking of My divine nature, worship with unwavering mind, having known Me, the imperishable source of beings.

सततं कीर्वयन्ता मा यतन्तक्व हडमताः।

नमस्यम्तद्रव मां भक्त्या नित्ययुक्ता उपासते ।। १४ ॥

Always magnifying Me, stronuous, firm in vows, prostrating themselves before Me, they worship Me with devotion, ever harmonised.

These two verses of the Gttå describe the nature of the Bhâgavata Dharma, which consists in always singing the praises of the Lord, striving after doing His will, etc. If after discharging these duties, the devotee finds time, he may perform his regular sandhyå, etc.

The author in the next sûtra gives additional reason in support of this view.

BÛTRA III. 4. 35.

म्रनभिभवञ्च दर्शयति ॥ ३ । ४ । ३४ ॥

सनिवनम् Anabhibhavam, not to be overpowered. च Cha, and. वर्धवादी Dargayati, the Sastras declare.

35. And the scripture shows (that a Parinisthita devotee) is not overpowered (by the faults of not performing the acts of his Aśrama, when immersed in the meditation of the Lord—464.

COMMENTARY.

In the Brihad Up., IV. 4. 23, it is thus said :-

नैनं पांच्या तरति, सर्वे पांच्यानं तरित नैनं पांच्या तपित सर्वे पांच्यानं तपित विपापा विरक्षा विचिकित्सा अद्योक अवत्येष अद्योक्षकः सम्रादेनं आपिताञ्चीति देशवाच यावयस्यः सीर्क्षं ॥

Evil does not overcome him, he overcome, all evil. Evil does not burn him, he burns all evil. Free from evil, free from spots, free from doubt, he becomes a (true) Brahmana; this is the Brahma-world, O King, thus spoke Yajfavalkya.

This text of the Brihad Up. declares that a Parinisthita devotee is not overpowered by the evils caused by the non-performance of the duties appropriate to one's own Asrama, if such omission is due to being absorbed in the hearing the praises of the Lord, etc. Therefore, it follows, that the worship of the Lord, hearing His praises, singing Hymns to His honour, etc., have preference over ritualistic pûjas.

In the previous portion under sûtra III. 4.2., the Pûrvapakşin, Jaimini raised an objection to the effect that one should never abandon karmas, and he quoted the Viṣṇu Puraṇa to the effect that Viṣṇu was the highest person and that the best method of propitiating Him was by the due discharge of the duties of one's own Aśrama. That verse is repeated here.

वर्षाभ्रमाचारवता पुरुवेच परः पुमान् । विष्कुराराज्यते पन्या नान्यत् तत् तावकारचम् ॥

"Vispu, the Highest Person, should be worshipped by a man who is devoted to the duties of his caste and order. There is no other way which can cause His satisfaction."

That verse does not mean that the Lord Visuu requires a man to perform the duties of one's own Asrama to the exclusion of worshipping Him. On the contrary, it means, that a person leading a household life and following the rules of good conduct laid down for his caste and Asrama, must worship also the Lord, because such worship is the cause of satisfaction of the Lord. It does not mean that Karma is the cause of satisfaction,' but worship. The emphasis in that verse is not on the words "the man devoted to the duties of his caste and Asrama," but on the word "Aradhyate" ("should be worshipped.")

That this is the proper meaning of that verse, we find from a preceding passage of the same Purana. In II. 13, verses 9-11, we find the following description of the God-immersed King Bharata:—

शास्त्रप्रामे महामागा भगवन्-स्यस्त-मानसः। स उवास चिरं कालं मैत्रेय पृथिवीपतिः॥७॥ महिंसादिष्यरोषेषु गुगेलु गुग्विनां वरः। स्रवाप परमां काष्टां मनसभागि संयमे॥८॥ यह शाब्युत गाविन्द माधवानन्त केशव ।
कृष्य विष्या हपीकेशेत्याह राजा स केवलम् ॥ ९ ॥
नान्यज्ञ जगीद मैत्रेय किथ्यत् स्वप्रान्तरेऽपि च ।
तत् परं तदर्यस्य विना नान्यद्यित्तयत् ॥ १० ॥
समित्-पुष्प-कृशादानं चके देवकियाकृते ।
नान्यानि चके कर्माविं निःसक्तो वेगनतापसः ॥ ११ ॥

- 7. O Maitreya! that mighty King, with mind fixed on the Lord, dwelt for a long time in Salagrama.
- 8. That best of all the virtuous men obtained great excellence in virtues like those of harmlessness and the rest, and in controlling his mind.
- 9. He always used to recite the names of the Lord, such as O Yajūeśa! (Lord of sacriāce) O Achyuta! (immutable) O Govinda! O Mādhava! O Ananta (endless)! O Keśava! O Krisna! O Visnu! O Hrisikeśa!
- 10. Maitreys! He did not utter even in his sleep, any name but that of the Lord. He did not think on anything but on the Lord, and the attributes of the Lord, and the meaning of His names.
- 11. That Yogi and ascetic King, free from attachment, did not perform any ritualistic karmas except bringing fuel (for sacrifice), plucking flowers and Kusa, for offering to the Lord.

These verses of the Viṣṇu Purāṇa show that the King Bharata was so absorbed in the worship of the Lord that he did not perform any ritualistic karmas. Consequently, when in the same Purāṇa we find a statement in III. 8.9, that Viṣṇu is worshipped best by that man who discharges the duties of his caste and order, we must construe that verse in consonance with the preceding verses of the same Purāṇa. Thus it is established that a Pariniṣṭhita need not perform the duties of his Aśrama and Varṇa, if he cannot find time for them owing to his being employed in the worship of the Lord. For the Lord Himself says that if His Bhaktas omit to perform ritualistic karmas they incur no guilt. In the Padma and the Adi Purāṇas it is thus said:—

मत्कर्मकुर्वतां पुंसां क्रियाछोपा भवेव यदि । तेषां कर्माणि कुर्वन्ति तिस्रः केट्यो महर्षयः ॥ स्नर्रान्त मम नामानि ये त्यक्त्वा कर्म खासिस्तम् । तेषां कर्माणि कुर्वन्ति ऋषया भगवत्-पराः ॥

If men devoted to me and doing my work, omit to do the ritualistic work, that omission is rectified by the three hundred millions of great Risis.

Those who renouncing all other karmas, constantly recite My name, their ritualistic work is done by great Risis devoted to the Lord.

Adhikarana IX-The Nirapekşa devotee.

Having thus shown the effect of Vidya with regard to the devotees who lead a household life, and having also shown that they may, after the rise of Vidya, perform karmas at their option, the author now shows the same two facts with regard to those devotees who are not householders, who are not in any agrama, and who are called the Nirapeksa. In the Brihadaranyaka Upanisad we find the account of a great female sage called Gargi Vachaknavi who was a knower of Brahman, but who was not a householder, for she was an unmarried lady. In the Bri. Up. we find (III. 8. 1.) Gargi asking the following question from Yajñaval-kya:—

स्थ इ वाकसम्युवाय ब्राह्मका भगवन्तो इन्ताइमिमं ही प्रसी प्रस्थामि तै। केमो वस्यति न वै जात युष्माकमिमं कश्चिद्रह्मोद्यं जैतेति पृष्ट गार्गीति ॥ १ ॥

Then Vachaknavi said: 'Venerable Brahmana, I shall ask him two questions. If he will answer them, none of you I think will defeat him in any argument concerning Brahman.' Yajfavalkya said: 'Ask, O Gargi.'

(Doubt.)—Now Gargi was a person who was in no Asrama, and still we find her examining Yajñavalkya. The question then arises, can Vidya be acquired without following any particular Asrama?

(Purva-pakea.)—Vidy& cannot be acquired without following any particular & frama, because the due discharge of the duties prescribed for a particular & frama, is the cause of the origination of Vidy&; and if a person has no & frama, he cannot discharge any duties, and how can Vidy& arise in such a person?

(Siddhanta.)—The next sutra answers this doubt.

80TRA III. 4. 86.

ब्रन्तरा चापि तु तहुष्टैः ॥ ३ । ४ । ३६ ॥

भ्रात्ता Antara, without (doing the duties of the Asramas), standing outside. च Cha, indeed, verily. चारि Api, also. तु Tu, but. तर Tad, that. हो: Dristaih, from seeing (the Sastric statements about it.) Because it is so seen.

36. (The Vidyâ originates) verily even in those who stand outside (of all âsramas) because it is so seen—465.

COMMENTARY.

The word 'tu' is employed in order to refute the Pûrvapakea that karma is necessary for the origination of Vidyâ. The force of the word 'cha' is to indicate certainty. Antarâs (who stand outside) are those persons who do not belong to any order or âsrama, and consequently do not perform the duties of any asrama; but who, owing to the performance of such duties in their previous incarnation, are born in this life with discrimination and dispassion, and whose mind has been purified by truth, austerity, prayers, etc., (performed in their past lives.) In such persons Vidys has its origination, even when they do not perform any karmas in their present life. Why? Because we see so in the scriptures. Gargt Vachaknavi is a standing example of one not belonging to any order, and yet a Brahmavid. The sense is this. If a person has duly discharged the duties of his Adrama in his previous incarnation, but owing to some reason or other, the origination of Vidya did not arise in him in that life and he dies before such origination, then in his next incarnation, his mind being already purified by the due discharge of the astrama duties in the past life, he is born ripe for Vidya, and in the present life, by the mere coming in contact with holy men, he bursts forth into a full Jnanin possessed with all the attributes of discrimination and dispassion, and Vidya manifests in him with all her glory. The spark of the holy sage is enough to lighten up such a soul into a conflagration of wisdom and love. Therefore, such a person does not perform, or rather stands in no need of performing, any asrama dharmas. All that he requires is Satsanga (the company of the Good) in order to recall to his mind all that he had acquired in the past lives.

In the next sutra, the author shows that the Vidya originates in those whose faults have been washed away by the mighty force of Satsanga. Satsanga has independent power of destroying all faults and originating Vidya.

SÙTRA III. 4, 87.

म्रपि स्मर्यते ॥ ३ । ४ । ३७ ॥

37. The Smriti also declares the same—466.

In the Bhâgavata Purâns (II. 2. 37.) we find the following:— पिवन्ति ये भगवत चात्मनः सर्ता, कथासूर्तं भववपुदेषु सम्भृतम् । पुनन्ति ते विषयद्षिताशयं मजन्ति तवस्यसरोक्हान्तिकम् ॥

Those who hear the life-giving words from the moutus of good men, who are as if the Self of the Lord, and who fill the cups of their ears with the nectar of those words, they purify the hearts tainted with evil, and ultimately they reach the lotus feet of the Lord.

This shows that the words of the good men have the power of purifying the soul and carrying it to the feet of the Master.

Similarly in the Bhagavata Purana (V. 12. 12), we have the following:—

रह्मगर्वेतत् तपसा न याति, न केत्रयया निर्वपनाद् युदाद् वा । न छन्दसा नैव जलाग्निस्याः, विना महत् पादरकाजनिकस्य ॥

O Rahugana! this state is not to be obtained through austerity, nor through phijas, nor through feeding the poor or housing the homeless, nor through the study of the Vedas, nor by the worship of the Devas of water, fire or the sun, but through the anointing of the body with the dust of the feet of the Holy Ones, the Mahatmas.

This also shows that the dust of the feet of the Mahatmas, the service of the Holy Ones is the unfailing means of acquiring Vidya, and that the company of the good has greater effect than one's own exertion. The word 'api 'also indicates that moral qualifications like truthfulness and the rest are also necessary. Stronger than all ritualistic works, are the moral qualities of truthfulness, prayer, service of the Masters, celibacy, etc., as mentioned under (I. 1.1., page 7.)

The Nirapeksas, who have the good fortune of getting the company of the Holy Ones, easily acquire Vidya, because on them there is the special grace of the supreme Lord. The next sutra mentions this fact.

SÛTRA III. 4. 88.

विशेषानुग्रहश्च ॥ ३ । ४ । ३८ ॥

विशेष Viscsa, special. सनुषदः Anugrahah, favour. प Cha, and.

38. And on such Nirapeksas there is the special grace of the Lord, and they easily acquire Vidyâ—467.

COMMENTARY.

In the Gita, X. 9, we have the following:-

मिषा महतमाबा बेाधयन्तः परस्परम् । कथयन्तव्य मो नित्यं तुष्यन्ति च रमन्ति च ॥ ९ ॥

Mindful of Me, their life hidden in Me, illumining each other, ever conversing about Me, they are content and joyful.

तेषां सततयुक्तानां भजतां प्रीतिपूर्वकम् । ददामि बुद्धियोगं तं येन मामुपयानित ते ॥ १० ॥

To these, ever in union with Me, worshipping Me in love, I give the yoga of discrimination by which they come unto Me.

This shows that Nirapeksas are the special objects of His grace.

But how do you say that these verses of the Gftå apply to the Nirapeksas, and not to devotees of every description? The words "Satatayuktånåm" in the above, which literally mean "those who are in constant union with the Lord," "those who are in constant meditation on the Lord," indicate that these verses apply to these God-absorbed souls, and not to ordinary men.

Adhikarana X.

In the preceding aphorisms it has been shown that householders like Yajñavalkya and the rest, and non-householders like Gargi and others, had acquired Vidya.

(Doubt.)—Now arises the doubt, who is higher among these two classes:—Whether the householders or the non-householders?

(Pârva-pakea.)—The opponent's view is that the householders are the better of the two; because not only do they discharge all the duties laid down in the Scriptures for the householders, but over and above that, they find time for the worship of the Lord, and are devoted to Brahman. The scripture also shows that their condition is higher than that of the non-householders, for in the Brih. Up., IV. 4. 9, it is said:—

तसम्बद्धसमृत नीक्रमादुः पिङ्गस्तरः इरितं लेहितं च । पर पन्या महाका हातु-विचस्तेनैति महावित्युच्यक्रचेजसम्ब ।

On that path they say that there is white, or blue, or yellow, green, or red; that path was found by Brahman, and on it goes whoever knows Brahman, and who has done good, and obtained splendour.

The word punya-krit (who has done good) means who has duly discharged the duties of his order and is a good householder. Such men, the Sruti says, reach Brahman very quickly.

(Siddhanta.)—This view of the Pürvapakşin is set aside in the next sûtra, which declares that the Nirapekşa devotee is higher than the householder.

SÛTRA III. 4. 39.

म्रतस्त्रितरत्, ज्यायो लिङ्गाच ॥ ३ । ४ । ३६ ।

चनः Atah, from this (from the Asramadharma condition). तु Tu, undoubtedly. इत्तरम् Itarat, the other (the non-asrama condition). ज्यानः Jyayah, superior, better, greater (means to acquire knowledge.) जिल्लाम्, Lingat from indications, signs, inferences. प Cha, indeed.

39. The other (namely, the Nirapeksa) is undoubtedly superior to this (namely, the householder), as there is a mark for the same—468.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" is employed in order to remove the doubt. The word "cha" is used in the sense of exclusion. "From this," namely, from the condition of the householder; "the other," namely, "the condition of the non-householder" is a "superior" or a better means of acquiring the Vidya; (because the facilities are greater in the latter condition). Why? Lingat—"because of the mark," because of the scriptural indication. In the above passage of the Brihad. Up., we find that Gargt, who is a non-householder, is greater than Yajñavalkya, a householder, and she settles the disputes of the Brahmanas by examining Yajñavalkya. This is the indication of the Scripture.

The sense is this. The scriptures enjoin various Aéramas or orders of life, in order to contract the current of the outward-going natural propensities (propensities inherited by every man, from his human and animal ancestors). In other words, these are beginningless propensities with which every man is born, and the scriptural injunctions, the legal obligations and duties are meant to contract, slowly and gradually, these animal propensities. The Scriptures, when they lay down these rules, do not mean thereby that the Adramas are good in themselves, but that they are good only inasmuch as they help to contract this current. But they in thier turn become positive obstacles at a certain stage. Those whose out-going current has become checked, by having passed through the discipline of the Adramas in their previous lives, and who are born in their present lives with no out-going current, but with their hearts turned to God alone, do not stand in need of the discipline of the Asramas : and for such souls, the law is useless. Thus it follows, that the condition of a Nirasrami or a non-householder is superior. Therefore, in the Javala Up., it has been said-

यथ हैनं जनको वैदेहो याद्यवल्यमुपसमेत्येवाच मगवन् संन्यासं ब्रहीति ॥ स होचाच याद्यवल्यः ॥ ब्रह्मचर्यं परिसमाप्य गृही भवेत् ॥ गृही मृत्वा वनी भवेत् ॥ वनी भृत्वा प्रवजेत् ॥ यदि वेतरथा ब्रह्मचर्यादेव प्रवजेद् गृहाह्यनाह्य ॥ यथ पुनरवती वा व्रती वा स्नातको वास्नातको वा उत्सवाग्निको वा यदहरेव विरजेचदहरेव प्रवजेत् ॥

Then Janaka, the king of the Videhas, approaching Yājāavalkya, said "Lord, teach me Sannyāsa." To him replied Yājāavalkya:—"Having completed his studentship, he is to become a householder; having been a householder, he is to become a dweller in the forest; having been a dweller in the forest, he is to wander forth; or else he may wander forth from the student's state; or from the house; or from the forest." "May he have taken vows upon himself or not, may he be a Snātaka or not, may he be one whose fire has gone out or one who has no fire, etc., the moment that he gets dispassion, let him at that very moment wander forth as a Sannyāsi."

This text lays down, in its due order, first the three Asramas, namely, that of the student (Brahmacharya), that of the householder (Grihastha), and that of the hermit (Vanaprastha). It enjoins Sannyasa for any one of these stages, but as an exception to this general rule, and for persons who are born as Sannyasis, like Samvartaka and the rest, who are solely devoted to Brahman, it enjoins Sannyasa at once without passing through the various grades. In other words, the taking of Sannyasa depends upon the evolution of the soul; and for a fully evolved soul, the Asramas are not at all necessary.

As regards the text "Let not a twice-born remain for a single day without being in the household order or in some Agrama," and texts similar to this, they are meant for ordinary men, and not for the revolved souls.

Note--The other passages are like these:—"A murderer of the gods is he who removes the fire. After having brought to the teacher his proper reward do not cut off the line of children; (Taitt. Up., I. 11. 1). Tohim who is without a son the world does not belong; all beasts even know that."

(Objection).—Let it be admitted for argument's sake that the Nirapekea, belonging to no Asrama, is superior to the other two who belong to an Agrama. But there is this danger in these non-Agramas (Nirapekses, that in course of time they may fall down from their high position, and enter into family life: and thus lose their condition of Nirapeksatva. That being so, when such Nirapeksas, once having renounced the household life, according to the rules laid down in the Sastras, when they again take it up, they become blameworthy, according to that very Sastra; and their condition becomes lower than that of the other. If such Nirapeksas, who before were not in the household order, and who properly renounced that order, come to get faith in the household order, because the life of the householders is praised in Scriptures as being Vaidic life, if out of these considerations they accept the conditions of a household life, then in their case it would not be possible to keep up that one-pointed immersion in the Lord, because the household duties would be a hindrance thereto and thus the superiority of the Nirapeksas would be lost. The Nirapeksas, therefore, cannot be said to be absolutely superior to the other, because in the case of the Svanisthas and the rest there is no such danger of fall, but, on the contrary) they by the due discharge of the obligatory duties of their Asrama, get their hearts purified and rise higher and higher in the path of righteousness and have an unbroken line of love stretching from their heart to the feet of their Lord, a line which constantly grows smaller and smaller till they are drawn to the very feet of their master. For this reason also Nirapeksas cannot be said to be superior to the others for their condition is that of most dangerous, unstable equilibrium.

The objection above raised is answered in the next Sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 4. 40.

तद्भृतस्य तु नातद्भावो जैमिनेरपि नियमातद्रृपाभावेभ्यः ॥ अ । ४ । ४० ॥

सद-प्रतस्य Tad-bhûtasya, of one who has become That, who has realised Brahman through desirelessness or nirapeksa. ह Tu, but. व Na, not; of it is not. অনুষ্যা Atad-bhavah, the absence of that condition: the falling away from concentrated devotion to Him. ইনিন: Jaimineh, of Jaimini. অধি Api, even, নিৰম Niyama (niyamat) because of the rule (that their senses do not go to other objects), by restraining (the senses by the intense desire for Brahman). অব্যুক্ত Atad-rūpa (atadrūpat) because of the destruction of the desire for other than Brahman by not desiring anything else than Brahman (Rūpa, desire). অব্যুক্ত Abhavebhyah, and because of the absence of that, and from the absence of any other (Agrama dharma).

40. But of him who has become that (that is, who has become a Nirapekṣa devotee) there is no becoming not that (there is no falling from that state) according to Jaimini also. For three reasons: (1) Because of the rule that their senses are restrained to thirst of God only; (2) Because of the destruction of desires for any objects other than God; (3) Because of the absence of household life in the case of persons like Gârgî and the rest—469.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" is used in the above sûtra to remove the doubt. Of that person who has become that, namely, who has realized Brahman through the meditation of a Nirapekṣa, there is not falling away from that state, namely, such a Nirapekṣa never is in danger and actually never does lose his concentrated devotion to the Lord. There is no fear of such a person being attracted to household life again. For Jaimini also holds the same opinion on this point as I, Bâdarâyana, do. On this point there is no difference of opinion between us two. Because of the rule that the senses of such persons are devoted towards Brahman and do not go to anything else than Brahman. And because all desires other than that of Brahman are destroyed in them such as we find in the case of Gârgi and the rest who always were God-devoted and never accepted the household life.

In the Bhagavata Purana (VII. 15. 35.) we also find the same:-

कामादिभिरनाविद्धं प्रशान्ताविछवृत्ति यत्। चित्तं ब्रह्मसुबस्पृष्टं नैवेशितष्टेत कहिंचित् ॥

"That heart which is once touched by the love of Brahman (and has once enjoyed that bliss) never can leave that Brahman and be pierced by lusts and desires, for it is always calm and all such desires have become flually quiet in them."

Though Jaimini lays stress on Karma kanda, yet he also is forced, by the strength of those texts which describe the Nirapeksa devotee, to admit that such a devotee never falls into the world again. He admits that such a person need not perform Karma, because he has already performed it in his past life and is born a perfect being.

The next sûtra shows that the Nirapekşa devotee is superior to the Svaniştha devotees. The Svaniştha devotee is in danger of falling, not so a Nirapekşa. The texts like "the Seer sees everything," etc., show that Vidyå can lead the Nirapekşa to Svarga and other higher regions, and there such Nirapekşas may enjoy the delights of Indra's Heaven, etc. Is there no danger of their losing their love for Brahman in the midst of such delights? The next sûtra answers that.

SÛTRA III. 4. 41.

न चाधिकारिकमपि पतनानुमानासदयोगात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ४१ ॥

न Na, not. च Cha, and: only. चाचिकरिकच् Adhikarikam, the rulership, the position of the status of Indra, &c., the authority such as that of Indra, &c. चाचे, Api, also: It includes the worldly pleasures also. चाच Patana, of fall. चाजुनावान् Anumanat, from the inference. तव्-चांगान् Tad-ayogat, by not thinking of that: by not desiring that.

41. The Nirapeksa devotee does not desire even the cosmic offices; because there is fear of fall in it; and because they have no wish for those posts—470.

COMMENTARY.

The word "and" in the sûtra has the force of "only." The word "also" means the inclusion of the worldly happiness also. The word Adhikarikam means the office of world-rulers like Indra and the rest. The Nirapeksa devotees do not desire even such high offices. Why? Because there is danger of fall from such offices; as we find stated in the Gita (VIII. 16).

चात्रसमुबनाङ्कोकाः पुनरावर्तिनाऽर्जुन । मामुपेत्य तु कौन्तेय पुनर्जन्म न विचते ॥ १६ ॥

All the worlds, below the world of Brahms, come and go, O Arjuna; but he who cometh unto Me, O Kaunteya, he knoweth, birth no more.

The reason of their not falling from the heaven-world is that they had even in the beginning of their entering in the heaven-world no strong desire for enjoying that world.

The Puranic authority the reader can find out for himself.

Note.—Such, for example, as we find in the Bhagavata Purana. XI. 14. 14.:—

न पारमेष्ठ्यं न महेन्द्रभिण्याम् न सार्वमामं न रसाधिपस्वम् । न वागसिबीरपुनमंवं वा । महिनाञ्चसः॥ He who has resigned himself to Me does not wish to get anything other than Myself, not even the Supreme rule of a Brahma or the pomp and glory of an Indra or the status of the zole monarch of the whole world, or the rulership of the coesan or the spiritual powers of an Occultist, nay, not even the Mukti consisting in non-re-birth. The only Mukti that he wants is the eternal freedom to serve the Lord of Sternity.

Thus though through the glory of Vidya a Bhakta may get these heavenly enjoyments, yet since these enjoyments come to him unsolicited, they do not cause any cessation in the one-pointed current of His love towards the Lord. Therefore, there is no danger of fall in the case of such a devotee. The next sûtra shows that he is superior to the Parinisthita also.

SÛTRA IIL 4. 42.

उपपूर्वकमपि त्वेके भावमशनवत्तदुक्तम् ॥ ३ । ४ । ४२ ॥

उपपूर्वेसम् Upa-pūrvakam, that which begins with "Upa," i.s., "Upāsanam," worship. खिए Api, also, only. Has the force of exclusion. ह Tu, but, undoubtedly. Sets aside, the opposite view. इस Eke, some: namely, the Atharvanikas. आवस् Bhavam, devotion, faith. स्वयन्तन् Asanavat, just as food. तर् Tad, that, सस्त्रम् Uktam, is explained.

42. Some Sakhins declare that Upasana alone is the object of desire for the Nirapeksas, and this faith of theirs is like food to them, as has been declared in the Srutis—471.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Api" has the force of exclusion here, the word "Tu" removes the contrary thought of the opposite view, the word "Eke" refers to the Âtharvânikas. The Nirapekṣa devotees wish only to worship alone and nothing else, and their faith is the only enjoyment which they crave, as the starving man craves for food. This is mentioned in the Gopâla Uttara Tâpini in the verse. "Bhaktirasya bhajanam, etc., sachchidândaikarase bhakti yoge tisthati, etc." These verses show that love of the Lord or Bhakti is the only enjoyment which these devotees seek; this is the only rasa which they crave.

Some Bhâgavatas say that it means that a devotee of the Lord may be in any place (in heaven or in hell, on earth or in the nether world). He, by worshipping the Lord Hari there, gets all the enjoyments that he desires, according to his capacities, to the brimful; because the Śruti says so—aśnute sarvân kâmân, etc.,—he enjoys all objects of desire, etc. As the Lord enjoys all the objects, encompassed within the three worlds, by His three feet, so do His Bhaktas also,

The appropriate Puranic texts must be found out by the reader.

Note.—The following text of a Purana is to the above effect.

पकान्तिना यस्य न कंचनार्थं बाम्बन्ति ये वै अगवत्प्रपत्ताः । ब्रत्यसुतं तचरितं सुमंगसं गायन्त धानन्वसमुद्रमग्नाः ॥

"His Ekantin devotees do not desire anything other than Him, for they are solely resigned to the Lord. They are immersed in the ocean of bliss singing constantly the auspicious and the extremely wonderful deeds and glory of the Lord."

The next sûtra shows by giving another reason that the Mukti called Sâlokya and Sâmipya is achieved by the Nirapekṣas, without any effort on their part.

8ÛTRA 111. 4. 43.

बिहुस्तूभयथास्मृतेराचाराश्च ॥ ३ । ४ । ४३ ॥

वृद्धिः Bahiḥ, outside तु Tu, but, indeed. द्वनव्या Ubhayatha, both ways, in either case. स्तुतः Smriteḥ, on account of the statement of the Smriti. साचारात् Âcharat, because of custom or conduct. च Cha, and.

43. The Nirapekṣas are indeed outside the world, for two-fold reasons given by the Smṛitis and the conduct of the Lord—472.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Tu" has the force of exclusion. The Nirapeksas though living in the midst of the five-fold distractions of the world of sense, yet are, as a matter of fact, outside its entanglements. Why do we say so? Because of the two-fold reasons, namely, the Lord being attached to His devotees and the devotees being attached to the Lord. As says the Bhâgavata Purâṇa:—

विस्त्रति हृद्यं न यस्य सासात्। हृदिरवशाभिहिताऽत्यवैष्यनाशः। प्रक्य रसनया घृताङ्क्रि पद्भ्यः स भवति भागवतः प्रधानः॥

"Hari, the Supreme Lord, never leaves the heart of His devotees because He is attracted to it as if by an unconquerable force as the bee to the flower; and though He is destroyer of all sins, He is bound with the chains of love to His devotees. Similarly, He is the best of the Bhigavatas who is bound to the lotus feet of the Lord, by a similar chain of love."

This verse shows that he is the best of the devotees who has bound the lotus feet of the Lord with the rope of His love, and whose heart is like a flower in full bloom attracting constantly the Lord to live in it. This verse further shows, that as a precious stone gets its glory enhanced by being inlaid in a golden setting, or as a master gets his glory enhanced by being surrounded by faithful servants; so is the mutual relation of the Lord and His devotees. Such is the teaching of the Smritis and the practice of the good men.

So also the Lord has said in the Bhagavata Purana, XI, 14. 16:-

निरपेशं मुनिं शान्तं निर्वैरं समदर्शनम् । चनुवजाम्यदं नित्यं पृथेयेत्यकृतिरेज्ञुतिः ॥

I constantly follow My devotes who is a Nirapeksa, a meditative saint, peaceful, hating none and hated by none, who treats all equally, sanctifying with the dust of My feet the places that he treads upon.

These two-fold reasons show that the union of the Lord with His devotees is both internal and external, that the Lord is in the heart of the devotees, as well as constantly follows the footsteps of His lovers.

These verses also show that the cause of worldly bondage consists in turning one's face away from the Lord and Mukti is the constant state of having the Lord before one's eyes both in his heart and outside of it.

Adhikarana XI.

God is the purveyor of the Nirapeksa Bhaktas.

In the preceding Sûtras it has been mentioned that the Nirapekṣas are superior to other devotees, because they are constantly devoted to Hari and have no desire for the joys of heaven, even though that heaven may be the highest heaven of Brahmà. Now the author describes that these Nirapekṣas have not only no desire for heavenly joys, but that they have no anxieties for their wordly wants, etc.

In the Tait. Aranyaka (III. 14. 1), we find the Lord described as the purveyor of His devotees.

भर्ता सन् भ्रियमाका विभर्ति । एका देवा बहुवा निविद्यः ॥

Being the supporter (of all) He specially supports His devotees who worship Him with love. He, the one God, exists in manifold forms.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, are the worldly wants of the Nirapekça devotees supplied by the self-exertion of the devotees themselves or by the Lord Himself.

(Parrapaksa).—The opponent maintains the view that the devotees must supply their worldly wants by self-exertion, because they love their Lord so much that they do not wish to put Him to the trouble of exerting to supply their wants.

(Siddhanta).—The next sutra shows that the Lord Himself supplies the wants of His Nirapeksa devotees.

SÛTRA III. 4. 44.

स्वामिनः फलश्रुतेरित्यात्रेयः ॥ ३ । ४ । ४४ ॥

स्थानियः Svaminah, from the Lord, प्रश्न Phala, about the fruit. मुते: Sruteh, because of hearing. युश्चि Iti, so. आहेव: Atreyah, Atreya holds.

44. From the Lord come all supplies of the wants of the Nirapekṣa devotees, because of the Sruti texts about fruit quoted above. This is the opinion of Dattâtreya—473.

COMMENTARY.

The bodily and worldly wants of the Nirapeksas are fulfilled by the Supreme Lord Himself. Why do we say so? Because of the Sruti texts—Bhartasan bhriyamano bibharti—being the supporter of all, He supports His devotees who worship Him with love. Because the text calls him Bharta or supplier, Dattatreya is of opinion that the Lord supplies all wants. We find this in the Gita also (1X. 22.)—

चनत्याहिचन्तयन्ते। मा ये जनाः पर्युपासते । तेषां नित्याभियुक्तानां येगसेमं वहाम्यहम् ॥ २२ ॥

I purvey all objects of worldly livelihood and their preservation for those Bhaktas of Mine who are always thinking of Me and who worship Me alone, thinking of no other.

So also in the Padma Purana, it is said:-

द्शीनच्यानसंस्पर्धे र्मसक्तंविहङ्गमाः । स्वान्यपत्यानि पुज्बन्ति तथाहमपि पद्मजः ॥

O lotus-born Brahma I maintain my children (devotees) as the birds, tortoises and fish nourish their young ones, by looking after them, by thinking of them and by touching them, respectively.

Note.—The fishes nourish their young by looking after them. The tortoises do so by thinking on their young ones and the birds actually feed their young ones by physical contact. The Lord nourishes His devotees by all these threefold processes.

To say that the devotees do not wish to put their Lord to the trouble of supplying their trivial worldly wants is a wrong conception of the relation between the Lord and His devotees. The devotees never entertain any such notion as "May the Lord Hari nourish us by supplying our worldly wants." So they cannot be said to put the Lord to trouble. Moreover the Lord being Satyasankalpa, true-willed one, His very thought supplies all the wants of His devotees; and so it is no exertion to Him to supply the wants of His devotees. The fruit described in the Srutis consists in getting all one's wants supplied by merely worshipping the Lord, without praying Him to supply such wants (without asking Him "Give us this day our daily bread"). In fact, the Sruties "bhriyamana," by being worshipped, He supplies. It does not say

"by being prayed to He supplies," for the maxim is "Worship the Lord and ask for nothing, and you will have everything."

The author in the next sûtra shows by an illustration the invariable nature of the Lord's providence and purveyership in regard to these Nirapeksa devotees.

BÛTRA III. 4. 45.

श्रार्त्विज्यमित्यौदुलोमिस्तस्मैद्विपरिक्रीयते ॥ ३ । ४ । ४ ॥

चालित्रवन् Ârtvijyam, the priest's work. शृति lti, just like. चौडुलोनिः Audulomiț, Audulomi thinks. तस्मै Tasmai, for that. हि Hi, because. परिक्रीक्ते Parikrtyate, he is employed. He is purchased.

45. According to Audulomi, the Lord sells himself to His devotees like the sacrificial priest to his Yajamanas.

—474.

COMMENTARY.

The word "iti" in the sûtra has the meaning of "like." The supporting of His Nirapekṣa devotees by the Lord, is like the supporting of his Yajamānas by the sacrificial priest called Ritvij. Because the Lord is purchased by those Bhaktas, in order that He may supply all their worldly wants. As says the Viṣṇu Dharma:—

तुलसीव्लमात्रेव अवस्य चुलुकेन च । विक्रीबीते स्वमात्मानं भक्तेस्यो भक्तवत्सलः ॥

The Lover of His devotees sells His very self to those Bhaktas of His in exchange of a mere Tulasi leaf or a handful of water.

The sacrificial priests are as if purchased or engaged by the Yajamina to perform all his sacrifices in their detail in lieu of the fee which he gives them. Audulomi being a believer in impersonal God, his Bhakti is a sort of barter, and is wanting in that higher element of Bhakti which consists in doing all acts in order to please the Lord and not from a spirit of exchange. But the Nirapeksas are higher than Audulomi Bhaktas because they do not cherish even the desire that the Lord should supply their worldly wants.

SÛTRA III. 4. 46.

श्रुतेश्च ॥ ३ । ४ । ४६ ॥

Ti: Srutch, because of the Vedic statement Tha, and.

46. And from the Vedic text also the same is learnt.

—475.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chhandogya Upanisad it is taught that the prayers of the sacrificial priests are potent enough to procure all the desires of the Yajamana who engages the priest. Thus in Chhand., 1.7.9., it is said:—

स्थानेनैव ये चैतसाद्वीच्या क्षेकास्ताध्यवामोति मतुष्यकामाध्यस तसादु दैवेषिदुद्वाता स्थात् ॥ ८ ॥ कं ते काममागायानीत्येष स्रोव कामगानस्येष्टे य पर्व विद्वान् साम गायति साम गायति ॥ ९ ॥

Now through this alone (i.e., through the grace of the Lord dwelling in the eye) he obtains all the lower worlds and the desi es of human beings. Therefore, the Udgåtri who knows this should say (to his Yajamāna) "To accomplish what particular desire of yours, shall I sing out." For he, who knowing this, sings out the Sāman, is able to accomplish the desires (of his Yajamāna) through his song, yea, through his song.

This text of the Upanisad clearly shows that the fruit of the work performed by the priest accrues to the client and not to him.

Thus it has been demonstrated that the Lord supplies the wants of His Nirapeksa devotees, because he is purchased by them, in the same way as the priest supplies all the wants of his Yajamanas by his prayers.

Adhikarana XII.

The author now shows the duties of these Bhaktas after their having acquired the Vidya. In the Brihad Ar. Upanisad (I. 4. 23.) it is said:—

तकादेवंविष्णान्तोवान्त उपरतिस्तितक्षः समाहिता भृत्वाउसम्येवासानं पदयित सर्वमासानं पदयित नैनं पाप्मा तरित सर्वं पाप्मानं तरित नैनं पाप्मा तपित सर्वं पाप्मानं तरित नैनं पाप्मा तपित सर्वं पाप्मानं तपित विपापा विरज्ञा विचिकित्सो ब्राह्मको भवत्येष ब्रह्मछोकः सम्राहेनं प्रापितो- असीति होवाच याद्यवल्यः सोउदं भगवते विदेहान् वृदामि मां चापि सह वृद्यायेति ॥ २३ ॥ चास्मनस्तु कामाय सर्वं प्रियं भवत्यासा वा चरे वृद्याः भोतव्यो मन्तव्यो निदिन्या- सितव्यो मैत्रेव्यात्मनो वा चरे वृद्योनेन भववेन मत्या विद्यानेनेव्यः सर्वं विवितम् ॥ ५ ॥

"He, therefore, that knows it, after having become quite subdued, satisfied, patient and collected, sees Self in the Self, sees all as Self. Evil does not overcome him, he overcomes all evil. Evil does not burn him, he burns all evil. Free from evil, free from spots, free from doubt, he becomes a (true) Brahmana; this is the Brahma-world, O King—thus spoke Yajnavalkya." In the same Upanisad (II. 4. 5.) it is said "Verily, the Self is to be seen, to be heard, to be perceived, to be marked, O Maitreyi." When we see, hear, perceive, and know the Self, then all this is known.

(Doubt).—Here the attributes beginning with Sama and ending with Dhyâna have been mentioned as the qualifications which the seeker of Brahman must build into his life (namely, the qualifications of Sama, Dama, Uparati, Titikṣâ, Samādhāna, Sravaṇa, Darsana, Manana and Dhyâna). Must all these qualifications and the actions denoted by them be performed by the Nirapekṣa devotees or must they simply meditate on the essential nature, qualities and actions of the Lord?

(Ptrvapakea). -In answer to this doubt the opponent maintains that though Vidya might have originated, yet it does not become stable without the above attributes of Sama, Dama, etc. Therefore, these must be performed.

(Siddhanta).—The next sûtra answers this.

सङ्घकार्य्यन्तरविधिः पत्तेण तृतीयं तद्वतोविध्यादिवत् ॥३।४।४७॥

सङ्कारी Sahakāri, auxiliary. स्वन्त् Antara, the other. विश्वि: Vidhiḥ, the injunction about. प्रदेख Pakṣena, in one sense. वृतीवत् Trittyam, the third, i.e. the mental. सद्तः Tadvataḥ, of him who has that. विश्व-साविवत् Vidhi-adivat, just as in the case of injunction, &c.

47. For the Nirapekṣa devotee who desires only the grace of the Lord, the mental meditation or Dhyâna is the third injunction as an alternative to Sravaṇa, Manana which are enjoined as helps to the acquisition of Vidyâ with regard to the other kind of devotees. It is an injunction similar to the injunction of Sandhyâ, etc.—476.

COMMENTARY.

The attributes of Sama, Dama, etc., were shown in the sûtra III. 4. 26 (page 639) as being necessary in the origination of Vidva along with the attributes of sacrifice, alms, etc. In the present Adhikarana these qualifications are looked upon from another aspect, namely, not as a Sahakari cause in originating Vidya but as necessary even after the origination of Vidva. The Upanisad text is in the form of a Vidhi or command, and therefore these acts of Sama, Dama must be performed. They are Vidhis or injunctions, with regard to those devotees, who are leading a household life, namely, the Savanistha and the Parinisthita, because the text above quoted makes an original statement (Apûrva) with regard to these Sâdrama devotees. But with regard to Nirapeksa devotees the above texts are no Vidhis, because with regard to these Nirasrama devotees, these qualifications are naturally found in them, and so there is no use of their being ordained with regard to them. Therefore the Nirapeksa devotees need not waste their time after Sama, Dama, etc., which are their natural qualities but they must constantly remember the form of the Lord. His essential attributes and deeds. Therefore the Sûtra says: Tritfyam This is a third alternative to the two alternatives already mentioned before. To the Nirapeksa devotee, who has the desire simply to get the grace of the Lord (and has no other desires), these Sama, Dama, etc., form a third method. He must perform these mentally, because the Sruti says he is to be reached by mind alone. Or the word third method may mean the mental meditation as contrasted with Sravana or hearing, which is a bodily act; and Manana or the recitation of mantras, which is a vocal act. Compared with these bodily and vocal acts, this mental Dhyâna is the third. In order to show, that this mental Dhyâna is also necessary, the author gives an illustration by saying Vidhi âdivat "just as in the case of the injunctions and the rest." As a Sâsrama devotee must necessarily perform his Sandhyâ prayers, etc., for the performance of Sandhyâ, etc., is a compulsory duty (Vidhi) on him, so with regard to the non-house-holder, the Nirapekṣa devotee, the performance of Sama, Dama, etc., is not a necessary duty. On the other hand, the Nirapekṣa devotee, in whom Vidyâ has originated, has the duty of constantly meditating on the form and qualities of the Lord.

Note.—As the Sandhya Upasana is the duty of the householder devotes, so the Dhyana on the Lord is a duty, or rather may be considered as a duty, enjoined on the non-householder devotes.

This does not mean that the non-bouseholder devotee is prohibited from performing Japa (silent prayers) and Archanâ (or worship of the Lord) with flowers, incense, etc. Because the word Dhyâna includes Japa, Archana, etc. Or Dhyâna is specifically enjoined on the Nirapekṣa devotee because Dhyâna must be the predominant note of His worship, while Japa, etc., should occupy a secondary position. Thus has been described the three kinds of seekers of knowledge (Vidyâ); and the particular form of Pûjâ, meditation, etc., fitted for them.

Adhikarana XIII.

It has been taught before, how the acquisition of Vidya takes place in the case of the three kinds of devotees called the Svanietha, etc. Now are described the methods of making this Vidya a stable quality of the mind.

(Vieaya).—In the Chhand. Upanisad at the end (VIII. 15-1.) we find the following:—

तसैतद्रक्षा प्रजापतय उषाच प्रजापतिर्मनवे मतुः प्रजाभ्य साचार्यकुळाह्रेद्मधीत्य वधाविधानं गुरोः कर्मातिरोवेजाभिसमानृत्य कुदुम्ने गुजै। देरो स्वाध्यायमधीयाना धार्मिकान्विद्धदात्मने सम्बन्धियाचे सम्मतिहाऱ्यादिश सन् त्सर्म्वभूतान्यन्यत्र तीयम्यः स सक्तेवं वर्तयभावदायुवं ऋष्कोकभिसम्ययते न च पुनरावर्तते न च पुनरावर्तते ॥१॥

"Verily this doctrine Visnu taught to the four-faced Brahmā. Brahmā taught to Syayambhuva Manu, Manu to his people. One should learn the Veda in the family of his teachers, and making presents to his Gurû according to law and doing his works fully, one should return home and enter into household life. In a sacred spot, he should recite the holy scriptures, and perform good deeds, concentrating all his senses on the Supreme Self. He should not injure any living creature except in sacrifices. He, verily, thus passing his life, attains on death the world of Brahman and never returns therefrom, never returns therefrom."

Here the Upanisad concludes by describing the householder condition as the highest.

(Doubt).—Since the Upanisad winds up with the householder, it appears that persons other than householders connot get Vidyâ. The doubt is: Does Vidyâ originate in Âsramas other than that of a householder.

(Pstrupaksa).—Since the Upanisad ends with the householder, it follows that Vidyå does not originate in any other stage of life. No doubt there are certain passages in the Upanisad which praise renunciation. They are merely Arthavådas or glorificatory passages and must not be interpreted as ordaining Saunyàsa. They mean that the Brahman is such a great object that one must renounce everything for His sake. The Upanisads teach however that Brahman is acquired only by the householder who follows strictly the rules of the Upanisads. This is the proper interpretation of the concluding passage of the Chhand. Up. If the Upanisad did not mean to teach this, then why should it conclude in glorifying the householder?

(Siddhanta).—This objection raised by the Pûrvapakşin is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA III. 4. 48.

कृत्सभावातुरिह्णोपसंहारः ॥ ३ । ४ । ४८ ॥

इत्या Kritsna, of all (duties). भाषान् Bhavat, owing to the existence, हु Tu, but, indeed. कृदिया Grihina, by a householder. उपसंदार: Upasamharab, the conclusion, the goal, salvation.

48. The Chhandogya Upanisad concludes with the householder's stage, because of the fact that this stage includes all the others.—477.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" is used in order to remove the doubt. The object of the Chhand. Upanisad in concluding by describing the Grihastha Adrama is not to teach, that the Grihasthas alone attain Mukti, by the due discharge of the duties of their Adrama; but it means to inculcate that the Grihastha Adrama includes all other Adramas, and the duties prescribed for the Grihasthas include the duties prescribed for other Adramas also. The Scriptures teach several duties as incumbent on the householders, and which are to be performed with great effort and exertion. They have to perform the duties (Dharmas) of other Asramas also, according to their power, such for example, non-injury, (harmlessness, control of senses, etc). Though these latter are the specific Dharmas of a Sannyasi, yet a householder is also required to perform them, according to his power. Since the Grihastha Asrama includes the Dharmas of all the other Asramas; therefore the Upanisad properly winds up with the household order. So also we find in the Visnu Purana:—All who eat the food of begging, whether they be Sannyasins or Brahmacharins, all of these are established in the Grihastha Asrama, therefore, the stage of the householder is the best of all.

Note.-Manu also praises the Grihastha order (VI. 89 & 90):-

"And in accordance with the precepts of the Veda and of the Smriti, the house-keeper is declared to be superior to all of them; for he supports the other three."

"As all rivers, both great and small, find a resting-place in the ocean, even so, men of all orders find protection with householders."

Because the Upanisads mention other Asramas also (and because they teach that those who perform properly the duties of their Asramas get Mukti), it follows that when a particular Upanisad winds up with the household order, it must be understood to mean that the household order contains Dharmas of all other orders and hence it has been mentioned in the epilogue. This fact is mentioned in the next Sûtra.

8ÛTRA III. 4. 49.

मौनवदितरेषामप्युपदेशात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ४६ ॥

नेतनवत् Maunavat, just as silence, इतरेवाच् Itaresam, of others. वापि Api, also, उपदेशात् Upadesat, because they are taught, or enjoined.

49. In the <sup>IJ</sup>panisad other Åsramas have also been taught as leading to Mukti, just like the condition of a (Maunt) who keeps the vow of silence—478.

COMMENTARY.

The last passage of the Chhand. Upanisad follows the passage in which the Mauna has been taught. In Chhand. Up. (VIII. 5.1-2) we find all the three orders described as leading to Mukti.

"Now, that which the wise call Yajña (sacrifice, the characterstic mark of household order) is verily the Divine Wisdom; through Divine Wisdom the knower obtains the Lord. Similarly, that which the wise call Istam is also the Divine Wisdom. For having desired the Self, he obtains the Self.

"Now what the wise call Sattrayana is also Divine Wisdom, for through Divine Wisdom alone, he obtains from the True, the salvation of his self. Similarly, what the wise call (Mauna) the vow of silence is really Divine Wisdom, for through Divine Wisdom alone, one after knowing the Lord, becomes absorbed in meditation and becomes silent."

Note.—These two verses show that Yajūa, Sattrāyana and Mauna are all equally means of salvation.

This fact is referred to in a preceding passage also of the same Upanisad (Ch. Up., II. 23. 1).

"There are three branches of (the tree called) Dharma. Sacrifice, study and charity constitute one branch. Austerity is another, and to dwell as a Brahmacharin in the house of one's preceptor, always mortifying the body while so dwelling, is the third. All these are blessed and obtain the worlds of the blessed. But the God-absorbed alone obtains immortality (Release)."

Similarly in the Bri. Up. (IV. 4. 22. See page 621 of the Vedanta Sûtra.) we find:—

"Brahmanas seek to know him by the study of the Veda, by sacrifice, by gifts, by penance, by fasting, and he who knows him, becomes a Muni. Wishing for that world (of Brahman) only, mendicants leave their homes."

The above texts show that the Upanisads teach that the highest end of man (namely, Release) can be realised in any of the four Asramas, if the man discharges rightly the duties of his Asama. The Chl. Up., therefore, when it winds up with the Grihastha Asrama, refers to this particular Asrama because it includes all the others.

(Objection).—The sûtra uses the word Itareşâm in the plural number, while it ought to have used the word Itarayoh in the dual number: because two other Asramas are only lest and not more than two.

This objection is answered by the fact that as these two Asramas contain many sub-divisions, so they are spoken of in the plural.

Note.—Thus the Brahmachárí Ásrama has four sub-divisions, called Sávitra, Bráhma, Prájápatya and Brihad. The Vánaprasthas have also four sub-divisions, vis., Phenapa, Udambara, Vaikhanasa, and Válakhilya. The Sannyása has also four sub-divisions, vis., Kutichaka, Bahudaka, Hamsa and Nigkriya.

The Chhandogya and other Upanisads mention the Brahmacharya and the Vanaprastha Aframas also, in the same way as they mention the Sannyasa (Mauna) and the Grihastha Aframas. A man can attain Mukti in any one of these four Aframas. He may be a Naisthika Brahmachari who never marries. Or he may be a Svanistha Grihastha or he may be a Vanaprastha or a Sannyasin, and get Mukti. Mukti is not the special privilege of any particular Aframa.

Thus in the Jabala Upanisad the four Asramas are ordained (and it is expressly taught therein that Mukti is attainable in any one of those stages).

स देशवाच याज्ञवरकाः ॥ ज्ञाज्ञवं परिसमाप्य ग्रदी भवेत् ॥ ग्रदीभूत्वा वनी भवेत् ॥ वनी भूत्वा प्रजञेत् ॥ यदि वेतरया ज्ञाज्ञवर्णदेव प्रजञेत् हाज्ञनाज्ञा ॥ ज्ञथ पुनरजती वा जतीवा ज्ञातको वाज्ञातको वा उत्सवाग्निको वा यदहरेव विरजेसदहरेव

"Let a person after finishing studentship (Brahmacharya) become a householder; after finishing the householder stage let him become a hermit or forest-dweller, and after finishing the hermit's stage, let him wander forth (become a Sannyasin). Or he may become a wanderer after finishing studentship (Brahmacharya) or after the householder's life or after the forest-life (if he has excess of Vairigys). Or again whether he has taken a degree or not taken a degree, whether he is an unuarried graduate, or a solitary widower graduate, whether his household sacred fire has beer extinguished, or he has never lit any sacred fire, the day he gets the world-weariness, let him on that very day wander forth renouncing the world."

This shows that all men of all Adramas are entitled to enter the Sannyass Adrama. In a later passage of the same Jabala Upanisad, the Nirapeksas are also described in the sentence beginning with "Tatra paramahamsanam," &c., as given below:—

तवैके तत्र परमहंसानामसंवर्षकाकिस्वेतकेतुवांसक्रभुदुनिवाधक्रमरतव्यावेयरैवतकमभूतयोऽव्यक्तसिङ्गा स्वयक्ताचारा सञ्जनस्य स्मस्तवदाचरनिक्दर्ध कमण्डलु

परायक्षाऽन्यात्मनिष्ठोऽग्रमकमैनिष्ट् सनपरः सम्बासेन देहत्वागं करोति स परमहंसो नामेति ॥ ६ ॥

Among the Paramhameas are Samvartaka, (Prajápati), Aruni, Svetaketu, Durvásá. Ribhu. Nidagha, Jadabharata, Dattatreya, Reivataka and others who had no external marks of caste or Asrama, who had no particular mode of conduct or discipline, whose conduct was opposed to caste rules, and who though not insane, acted as if they were insane. Let a man, therefore, uttering the words Bhu Svaha, throw into the water his staf, the Kamandalu, his vessels, his water-strainer, his sling for carrying the load, his sacred tuft of hair and his sacred thread. Having thrown all these caste-marks, let him go out in search of His-Self. Wearing the form in which he was born (namely, perfectly nude), above all pairs of opposite (such as heat and cold, etc.), renouncing all books, studies, renouncing acceptance of alms, having obtained full knowledge of the true Brahman, pure in heart, begging alms only to maintain his life, only on fixed hours of the day in the vessel of his stomach (that is, keeping the food into no vessel but putting it into his stomach), constantly thinking: "I am God," free from gain and loss, dwelling in empty temples or huts or an anthill or under a tree or where the cooking earthen vessels are thrown, or where the sacred fire is kept, on the hank of a river or in a mountain, forest or cave or in the hollow of a tree, or near a waterfall or on an open plateau. Without any house, or fixed residence, without any effort to collect anything, without the idea of proprietorship about anything, always meditating on the pure Brahman with his game turned inward, constantly trying to destroy past evil Karmas, he ends his life in Sannyasa, such a man is called Paramuhamea.

Therefore the Chh. Upanişad very rightly concludes with the household order, because in that Aérama the duties to be performed are many; and it has been well said:—" the day he gets the world-weariness, on that very day let him wander forth."

The above passage clearly shows that the moment one gets the world-weariness, he should renounce the world. The condition precedent for entering into the order of the Sannyasins is such world-weariness. The argument based upon the last mantra of the Chh. Upanisad where it winds up with the household order, namely, that the condition precedent to entering the Sannyasa Asrama is the passing through the household Asrama, therefore, falls to the ground.

The reason why a man enters into the household life is because he has unexhausted worldly propensities: the reason why he renounces the world is because such proclivities no longer exist in him and the world-weariness takes their place. This is the only criterion to judge whether a person is ready to take Sannyasa or not. Thus this also is established that, when a man is endowed with the qualifications of Sama (mind-control), Dama (sense-control), Uparati (tolerance), &c., whether he be in any Aérama or in no Aérama, Knowledge (Vidyá) is sure to originate in him.

Adhikarana XIV.

The author now teaches that Vidyà or Divine Wisdom is a mystery, and should be kept secret. In the Śwetâsvatara it is written—

वेदान्ते परमं गुद्धां पुराकस्ये प्रचादितम् । नामशान्ताय दातमं नापुत्रायाशिष्याय वा पुनः ॥ २२ ॥

This highest mystery in the Vedinta, delivered in a former age, should not be given to one whose passions have not been subdued, nor to one who is not a son, or who is not a pupil.

(Doubt).—Now arises the doubt, should this Vidya be imparted to every one or to a select few only?

(Parraphya).—The Masters of Wisdom are also Masters of Compassion. To impart knowledge to the fit and withold it from the unfit, to discriminate who is fit and who is unfit goes against their compassionate nature which loves all; and consequently, the Vidyå must be revealed to all indiscriminately.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

80TRA III. 4. 50.

प्रनाविष्कुर्वन्नन्वयात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ५० ॥

चन्निच्चेन् Anaviskurvan, not making it manifest. चन्नान् Anvayat, because of the connection.

50. Let the Master teach the disciple not to reveal the doctrine, for such is the ancient usage—479.

COMMENTARY.

Let him instruct the pupil not to reveal the teaching. Why? Anvayat Because in the above text of the Svetasvatara, the instruction is expressly to that effect. So also says the Lotus-eyed Lord Krisns in the Gita (XVIII. 67).

हदं ते नातपस्काय नामकाय कदासन । न बाह्यसम्बे बाच्यं न स मां वेश्व्यस्वति ॥ ६७ ॥

Never is this to be spoken by thee to anyone who is without asceticism, nor without devotion, nor to one who desireth not to listen, nor yet to him who speaketh evil of Me.

The teaching becomes fruitful when given to the worthy, and bears no fruit, when it falls on unworthy soil. For the Sruti says (Svet. VI. 23):—

यस्य देवे परा भक्तियया देवे तथा गुरी।

तस्येते कथिता द्वार्थाः प्रकाशन्ते महात्मनः। प्रकाशन्ते महात्मन इति ॥ २३ ॥

If these truths have been told to a high-minded man, who feels the highest devotion for God, and for his Guru as for God, then they will shine forth,—then they will shine forth indeed.

So also in the story of the two pupils of Prajapati, given in the Chhandegya Up. we find the same thing. The Asura king. Virochana and the Deva king, Indra, both heard a voice proclaiming. (Chh. Up. VIII. 7-1.)

य बात्माश्यहतपाच्मा विजयो विमृत्युविद्योकोऽविजिवत्सोऽपिपासः सत्यकामः सत्यस्यकृत्यः सोश्येष्टयः सविजिब्बुसितयः स सर्वाध्यः क्षेत्रकामामोति सर्वाध्यः कामा-व्यक्तमात्मानमञ्जविद्य विज्ञानातीति ह प्रजापतिकवाच ॥ १ ॥

Prajapati proclaimed:—"The Âtman, who is free from sins, free from old age, free from death, free from grief, free from hunger, free from thirst, he whose desires are true, whose will is true, he ought to be searched out, he ought to be understood. Re who has known that Âtman indirectly and has also realised Him, attains all worlds and all desires."

Both went to Prajapati to learn the meaning of this parable. Both were taught equally in the same words. But Virochana, deduced from those words, through his perverse intellect the doctrine of materialism, and Indra the doctrine of life eternal. Virochana failed to get the realisation of the truth. Therefore, Vidya must be taught to the fit only and not to the unworthy. The fit are those who are devoted to the Lord as revealed and established in the world-scriptures, and who are endowed with faith.

Adhikarana XV.

[The time of the origination of Vidya.]

Now the author discusses the question what is the proper time when Vidyà becomes ripe and originates in man.

(Vieaya).—The stories of Nachiketas, Javala, etc., as well as of Vamadeva are the topics which constitute the subject of discussion here.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt: Does the Vidyâ, as the result of the above-mentioned practices, arise in this very life or in the next life?

(Párvapakea).—When those practices are rightly performed, Vidya originates in this very life, because a man under takes anygreat object with the desire "let me accomplish this in this very life." The enthusiasm is liable to flag, if one were told that his efforts will bear fruit in the next life.

(Siddhânta).—It is not an invariable sule, that Vidyâ originates in one life, as is shown in the next sûtra.

SUTRA IIL 4, 51.

पेड्डिकमप्रस्तुतप्रतिबन्धे तदर्शनात् ॥ ३ । ४ । ५ १ ॥

देशिका Aihikam, the present life or birth (in which we obtain knowledge.) वावस्तुत Aprastuts, not being present वार्तिका Pratibandhe, obstruction. वर्ष Tad, that. वर्षाना Darsanat, being declared by the scriptures.

51. Vidyâ originates in this very life, provided there are no obstructions at hand; as this is seen (in the case of some)—480.

COMMENTARY.

When there is no obstruction to the rise of Vidyâ then she originates in this very life; but when there is any such obstruction then she manifests in the next life.

Why do we say so? Because we find it so described in the case of Nachiketas, who got Vidya in one life, while there are others who did not get it but in the next life. As in the Kath. Up. VI. 18.

सृत्युमोक्तां निकतेताऽय कम्बा विद्यामेतां येगविधिं च कृत्सम् । अद्यामोतां विरजाऽमृद्विसृत्युरम्योज्येवं या विवश्यासेव ॥ १८ ॥

Nachiketas having then obtained all this knowledge and practice imparted by Yama attained Brahman, became free from Rajas and beyond death; another who thus knows the Spirit certainly becomes so.

The above and the texts like these indicate that Vidya can originate in one life also.

But there are texts which show that she originates sometimes in the next life. As thus Vâmadeva got Vidyâ while he was in the womb of his mother. (See Bri. Up., I. 4. 10). The fruition is not always in the same life in which the effort is commenced. If the obstruction is small and the energy put into the practice for the acquisition of Vidyå is great, then Vidyå is acquired in that very life. The effort is sufficiently strong to overcome the weak resistance, as we see in the case of Nachiketas and the King of the Sauvtras called Rahugana. But if the obstruction is strong, then though Vidyå originates owing to the performance of sacrifice, charity, austerity, thought-control, etc., she remains latent, covered up by the obstructions (as the chicken inside the shell), and she awakes the next birth, for the breaking of the shell and for her coming out in all her glory. It is thus said in the Gitå (VI. 37 and forward up to 45):—

स्रयतिः अस्योपेता योगावकितमानसः । समाप्य योगसंसिद्धिः का गति इच्च गच्छति ॥ ३० ॥ कव्यकोभयविद्धास्त्रस्थास्त्रमित्र महत्वति । स्रमतिष्ठो महावादो विमृद्देग् महत्वः पवि ॥ ३८ ॥ पतन्मे संश्वां इच्च केसुमहस्यशेषतः । स्ववृत्यः संश्वास्यास्य केसा महापपद्यते ॥ ३९ ॥

He who is unsubdued but who possesseth faith, with the mind wandering away from Yoga, failing to attain perfection in Yoga, what path doth he tread, O Eriqua?

Fallen from both, is he destroyed like a rent cloud unsteadfast, O mighty-armed, deluded in the path of the Eternal?

Deign, O Krispa to completely dispel this doubt of mine; for there is none to be found save Thyself able to destroy this doubt.

Sri Kriepa mid :--

O son of Priths, neither in this world nor in the life to come is there destruction for him; never doth any who worketh righteousness, O beloved, tread the path of woe.

Having attained to the worlds of the pure-doing, and having dwelt there for im memorial years, he who fell from Yoga is re-born in a pure and blessed house.

Or he may even be born into a family of wise Yogis, but such a birth as that is most difficult to obtain in this world.

There he recoverth the characteristics belonging to this former body, and with these he again laboureth for perfection, O joy of the Kurus.

By that former practice he is irresistibly swept away. Only wishing to know Yoga, even the seeker after Yoga goeth boyond the Brahmic world.

But the Yogi, labouring with assiduity, purified from sin, fully perfected through manifold births, he reacheth the supreme goal.

The above texts of the Gita clearly show that Vidya sometimes does originate in the next life.

Nor is it an invariable rule, as is asserted by the Pürvapaksin that no man will undertake a thing the fruition of which will not take place in one and the same life. There are men (wiser and more modest) who say "let me do the effort and leave the success to come, either in this life or in the next." Thus it is proved that success in the acquisition of Vidya and her manifestation depends primarily on the removal of the obstructions, whether this takes place in this life or in the next.

Adhikarana XVI.

The acquisition of Vidyå invariably leads to release. Now the author shows that when Vidyå is acquired, Mokea invariably and necessarily follows such acquisition. In the Upanisad (Bri. Up., IV. 4. 17 and Svet. III. 8) we find it clearly mentioned that the knowledge of God is immortality.

यकिम्पञ्च पञ्चलना साकारात्रा प्रतिक्वितः ॥ तमेष मन्य सालानं विद्यानकासृतोऽसृतम् ॥ १०॥

वेदाहमेतं पुवर्षं महान्तमादित्वचर्षे तमसः परत्ततत् । तमेच विदित्वातिसृत्युमेति मान्यः पन्या विद्यतेश्यनाय ॥ ८ ॥

"He in whom the five beings and the other rest, him alone I believe to be the fielf,
—I who know, believe him to be Brahman; I who am immortal, believe him to be immortal.
(Bpi., IV 4. 17.).

"I know that great person (purusa) of sunlike lustre beyond the darkness. A man who knows him truly, passes over death; there is no other path to go."—(6vet. III. 8.)

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt. Does the Mokaa take place on the falling off of the body in which the Vidya was acquired, or does it take place in the next life?

(Parvapakea).—Vidya being the cause of Mukti, there is no reason, why the man, who has got Vidya, should take another birth to get Mukti. For a cause is invariably followed by the effect.

(Siddhanta). - This view is set aside in the next sutra,

8ÛTRA III. 4. 52.

प्वं मुक्तिफलानियमस्तववस्थावधृतेस्तववस्थावधृतेः ॥३।४।४२॥

रुष Evam, thus, बुक्त Mukti, of salvation. प्रस Phala, about the time of obtaining the fruit. प्राणिकन: Aniyamah, there is no rule. त्रव Tad, of that (i. e., salvation.) प्रवस्था Avastha, the condition. प्रवस्था Avadhriteh, being determined. क्यू Tad, of that (i.e., of salvation.) प्रवस्था Avastha, condition. प्रवस्था: Avadhriteh, being determined.

52. Similar is the case with the Mukti. There is no invariable rule of the time of its fruition, because it depends upon well ascertained conditions, because it depends upon well ascertained conditions—481.

COMMENTARY.

As in the case of the time for the origination of Vidya, there was no invariable rule, whether it should originate in one life or in the next, though the man had acquired all the necessary qualifications for its origination, and as its manifestation is delayed owing to obstructions which require to be removed and which are removed in the next life; so also is the case that a man may have acquired Vidya, yet Moksa which is the characteristic fruit of Vidya is delayed till the next life because the Prarabdha Karmas require to be worked out. Of course, if there are no Prarabdha Karmas which require to be worked out, then the Mukti takes place in that very life. But if there are Prarabdha Karmas which are not exhausted in one life, then the man must take another birth in order to get Mukti; for Mukti can never be partial. Why do we say so? Tad avastha avadhriteh, because the condition of Mukti is a definite condition, fully ascertained in the Sastras. Thus in the Chh. Up. (VI. 14. 2) it is laid down that a man who finds the teacher obtains the knowledge; but there is delay in his getting Mukti so long as his Prârabdha Karmas are not exhausted.

यव मेवेहाचार्य्यवान् पुरुषे। वेद तस्य तावदेव विरं यावच विमास्वेऽथ सम्प्रस्य इति ॥ २ ॥

In the same way does a man who finds the Teacher, obtains the knowledge. For him there is delay only so long as his Prarabha Karmas are not exhausted. Then he reaches the perfect.

This text of the Chhandogya shows as a well determined rule of Mukti that the man who has got Vidya, obtains Mukti, not immediately, but on the exhaustion of his Prarabdha Karmas. A similar rule is laid down in the Spriti called the Narayana Adhyatma:—

The man who has acquired Vidya gets immortality, there is no doubt in it he goes to Mukti at once, when his Prarabdha Karmas are exhausted, but if his Karmas are not exhausted then he has to take many births, and on the exhaustion of such Karmas he goes to that world of Hari.

No doubt it is a rule that Vidyå exhausts all Karmas, yet the force of the Prarabdha Karmas is not exhausted but remains active because the Lord has so willed it. This has been mentioned before also. This will be further treated of in the latter part of this book. The repetition is to indicate the end of the Adhyâya.

जनयित्वा वैराम्यं गुवैनिवज्ञाति माव्यन् मक्तान् । यस्तैवंद्योऽपि गुवैरत्वरज्यते साऽस्त मे इरिः प्रेयान् ॥

May that Hari who produces dispassion (in the hearts of His worshippers towards all transitory objects of the world) but who binds them with the ropes of His auspicious qualities of comparison, friendliness, beauty, love, etc., his devotees to his feet), and makes them take pleasure in such bondage; and who in his turn, though bound by the ropes of love by His devotees, still takes pleasure in such bondage, may that Hari be my beloved.

Here ends the Fourth Pada of the Third Adhyaya of the Vedanta Sutras with the commentary of Baladeva called the Govinda Bhaya.

FOURTH ADHYAYA.

FIRST PADA.

क्रवा विद्योषयं भकान् निरवद्यान् करोति यः । हृक्ष्ययंभजतु श्रीमान् प्रीत्यात्मा स हरिः स्वयम् ॥

He who giving the medicine of Vidya to His devotees, makes them free from disease, may that Self of Joy, Hari Himself, come within the scope of my vision.

This Adhyaya deals with a discussion as to the fruits of Vidya or Divine Wisdom. Though in some of the satras in the beginning, the subject dealt with is Sadhana or means of knowledge or practice, yet as the main topic is that of the Results of Vidya, it is called the Phala Adhyaya.

(Visaya).—In the Brih. Up. (IV. 5. 6.) it is said:—

चात्मा वा धरे द्रष्टवाः श्रोतको मन्तको निविध्यासितको मैत्रेक्यात्मनि करवरे इन्द्रे शुते मते विद्यात दव्धः सर्वे विदितम् ॥ ६ ॥

"Verily, the Self is to be seen, to be heard, to be constantly thought over, to be meditated upon, O Maitreyi! When the Self has been seen, heard, thought over, and meditated upon, then all this is known."

(Doubt).—Now arises the doubt, should the practices called here Sravana (hearing), Manaua (thinking), etc., be performed once only, or must they be repeated.

(Parvapakes).—The opponent says they must be performed once only. For as the sacrifices, called Agnistoma, etc., performed once only, lead to heaven (svarga), &c., so the performance of Sravana, Manana, &c., once only gives the vision of the Self. Therefore, these spiritual exercises need not be repeated.

(Siddhanta).—The right view, however, is given in the next sûtra.

SÚTRA IV. 1. L

ब्रावृश्चिरसकृदुपदेशात् ॥ ४ । १ । १ ॥

बावृत्तिः Ávrittih, repetition. चंदक्त् Asakrit, not once, many times, repeatedly. उपरात् Upadesat, the instructions being given.

1. (The Sådhanas called Sravana, Manana and the rest require) repetition, because the Scripture itself repeats the instruction more than once.—482.

COMMENTARY.

The practices known as "hearing, meditating," &c., require repetition in order to produce any fruit. Why? Because the Scripture by constant repetition of the same teaching, suggests that these practices should be repeated also. Thus in the Chh.Up., VI. 8. 7., and the following, the teacher repeats nine times the saying, "that is the essence and ruler of all, the desired of all, and known only through the subtlest intellect."

स य प्रेशिक्षमैतवालयमिव्छं सर्वे तत्सत्वछ स प्रात्मा तत्त्वमिस प्रवेतकेता इति भूय पद मा भगवान् विद्यापयत्विति तथा साम्येति देवाच ॥ ३ ॥

Here Svetaketu is taught the mystery about Brahman nine times before he understands it.

The maxim of the Ritualistic Philosophy is that the dignity of the Scripture is sufficiently vindicated if its commands are carried out once only. (Scriptures say "Perform pilgrimage." The man fulfils the law if he makes pilgrimage once only). Why should then Sravana, Manana &c., be repeated? Does not this contradict the above maxim? No, the maxim applies to those acts only whose fruits are invisible and manifest in the next world; and not to acts whose fruits are to be seen in this very life. Direct intuition of the Self is a visible result to be gained in this very The fruit is visible or at least may become visible. Such acts must be repeated, because they subserve a seen purpose. It is like the act of beating the rice, which must be repeated till the rice grains become free from their husks. When the Scripture speaking about the rice for the sacrifice says, "the rice should be beaten;" the sacrificer understands that the injunction means "the rice should be beaten, over and over again, till it is free from husk;" for no sacrifice can be performed with the rice with its husk on. So when the Scripture says: "The Self must be seen through hearing, thinking and reflecting," it means the repetition of these mental processes, so long as the Self is not seen.

SÛTRA IV. 1. 2.

सिङ्गात्॥ ४।१।२॥

fagra Lingat, because of the indicatory signs.

2. And there is an indicatory mark (which shows the necessity) of such repetition.—483.

COMMENTARY.

In the Taitt. Up. III. 2 we find that Bhrigu goes several times to his father Varuna and asks him again, and again, to be taught the nature of Brahman.

"Bhrigu Varuni went to his father Varuna, saying Sir, teach me Brahman! He told him this, vis., Food, breath, the eye, the ear, mind, speech. Then he said again to him: That from whence these beings are born, that by which when born, they live, that into which they enter at their death, try to know that. That is Brahman.

This injunction about repetition, is meant for those only who have done some such ain, that a single performance of the act is not sufficient to give them the Divine Vision.

Note.—This sin is called Nama-aparadha. Those who are such sinners, and the majority of mankind falls in that category, require to repeat the sadhanas before they can see God.

Adhikarana II.

Now the author raises another discussion regarding the same subject. (Doubt).—Must this worship of God be done by thinking upon Him as the Lord of all Majesty or as the Inner Self of the Worshipper? Meditation on the Lord as Isvara is to think Him as Almighty, the All-ordainer, the Terrible, the Unconquerable, &c., while meditation on Him as the Self means to think of Him as all love, as the Highest Man, &c.

(Pārvapakṣa).—The Lord must be meditated upon as the Isvara. For the Svet. Up. (IV. 7) says:—

समाने बुझे पुरुषो निमन्नोऽनीदाया द्याचित मुखमानः । ज्ञह्यं यदा पद्यस्यन्यमीदामस्य महिमानमिति चीतदोक्तः ॥

"On the same tree man sits grieving, immersed, bewildered, by his own impotence (an-isa). But when he sees the other Lord (l/a) contented, and knows his glory, then his grief passes away."

(Siddhanta).—The Lord must be worshipped as the Self, as shown in the following stitra:—

SUTRA IV. 1, 8.

भारमेति तूपगच्छन्ति घाष्ट्रयन्ति च ॥ ४ । १ । ३ ॥

बाजा Atma, Atma, the supreme Soul, the Lord, शृति lti, as हु Tu, but, indeed. उपमञ्जाति Upagachchhanti, acknolwedge. बाहबन्ति Grahayanti, make, apprehend. च Cha, and.

3. But the Masters contemplate on Brahman as the self and teach it so to their pupils.—484.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" has the force of "only." That God is to be worshipped as the Self. The knowers of Truth realise the Cause as the Self: as says the Sruti (Br. Ar. Up., IV. 4. 22.) "Knowing this, the people of old did not wish for offspring they said we, who have this Self and this world of Brahman."

Not only this, they teach this form of worship to their pupils also. As in the Br. Up. (I. 44. 7);—" Let men worship Him as Self, for in the Self all these are one."

The word "Self" (Atman) here means the Entity who is all-pervading, whose essential nature is knowledge and blies and who has the shape of Man. (The God Hari always appears in a human shape before His devotees).

Others say that the God is called Self or Atman, because all beings get their existence or I-ness, because He has made them to participate in His substance. He must be contemplated as one's own "Self" or "1" in the sense that all the functions of one's ego get their life and energy from God; and thus God is the very Self of one's "I."

Those are mistaken who say that the Jiva must meditate upon himself as identical with Brahman: for when the Jiva is free irom Avidya, it is Brahman pure and simple. The Scriptures do not mean to teach any such identity, as we have already demonstrated in commenting upon Sûtra II. 1. 22, page 251. The contemplation on the Lord as Self has, therefore, a different sense altogether from proving the identity of the creature with the creator.

Adhikarana III.

In the Chh. and the other Upanisads (Chh. III. 18. 1.) it is said: Let one meditate on the Brahman as mind.

मना महोत्युपासीतैत्यच्यात्ममयाचिदैवसमाकाहोः महोत्युभयमादिष्टं भवत्यच्यात्मं वाचिदैवतं च ॥ १ ॥

"Let one meditate on the Brahman as (dwelling in the Mind and called) Mind; this is microcosmic meditation. Next the macrocosmic (let one meditate on) Brahman as (dwelling in Âkâia and called) Âkâia, the All-illumining. By this latter both meditations have been taught, the microcosmic and the macrocosmic (because the Âkâia includes the manas).

(Doubt).—Heré arises the doubt "Should one contemplate on manas and the rest as Âtman as one contemplates on Isvara as Âtman."

(Parvapakya).—The sentence "Mind is Brahman" shows the identity of Mind with Brahman. Consequently Mind must be contemplated as Self.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next satra.

SÛTRA IV. 1. 4.

न प्रतीके न हि ॥ ४। १।४॥

म Na, not. महोदो Pratike, in the symbols such as the mind, &c. म Na, not. दि Hi, because,

4. Brahman is not to be contemplated as Self in the symbols like manas, etc., for the symbol is not God.—485.

COMMENTARY.

In symbols like mind, ether, etc., one should not put the idea of Self because a symbol can never become God. It is always the seat of God and not God. As in the Bhagavata Purana we find':—

कं वायुमितं सक्षिकं महीन्व ज्योतींचि सस्वानि दिशा हुमादीन्। सरित् समुद्राक्ष हरेः शरीरं यत् किन्य मृतं प्रवमेदनन्यः ॥

The other, air, fire, water, and the earth as well as the colectial lights, creatures, directions, trees, rivers, and seas, all these are the body of the Lord Hari. In fact, all that exists is his body. Let him, therefore, bow down to Him alone as existing in these.

Why does the Sruti then say meditate "Brahman is Mind," meditate "Brahman is Akada?" In these passages the nominative case must be construed in the locative. The sentence must be interpreted as "meditate Brahman is in the Mind," meditate "Brahman is in the Akada."

Adhikarana IV.

In the preceding sutras the author prohibits contemplating the symbols as Self and has enjoined that Isvara or the Lord Hari may be contemplated as Self. Now he discusses the question about Isvara and Brahman.

(Doubt).—Should the Lord Hari be contemplated as Brahman? The texts which show the identity of Iwara with Brahman are the subject-matter of discussion in this connection. Such as Ayam vai Harayah, &c.

(Parcapakea).—The Lord (Isvara) should not be contemplated upon as Brahman because in preceding texts it has been said: "He should be meditated upon as Self only and not as Brahman."

(Siddhanta). - This view is set aside in the next satra.

BÛTRA IV. 1. 5.

महादृष्टिरुत्कर्षात् ॥ ४।१।४॥

superiority. Brahma-dristih, the view of Brahman. susaid Utkarpat, on account of superiority.

5. The Lord (Îśvara) should be meditated upon as Brahman, because such meditation is the most exalted.—486.

Just as the Isvara is contemplated upon as the Self, so must He be always meditated upon as Brahman. (The three terms Atman, Isvara and Brahman are identical). Why should this be so? Utkarat. Because of the exalted state, because Lord being the store-house of endless auspicious attributes. Such a contemplation is perfectly justified with regard to Him, and is an exalted sort of meditation. The Sruti also (Brih. Up., II. 5. 19) says the same:

सदेशक्रमापूर्वमनप्रमनस्यस्थाक्षमयमालम अक्ष सर्वादुन्दिखदुशासनम् ॥१९॥
This âtman is Brahman, Omnipresent and Omniscient. This is the teaching of the Upanipads. This text above that the Lord is to be meditated upon as âtman as well as Brahman.

"He (the Lord) became like unto every form, and this meant to reveal the (true) form of him (the Åtman). Indra (the Lord) appears multiform through the Mayas (appearances) for his horses (senses) are yoked, hundreds and ten. "This (Åtman) is the horses, this (Åtman) is the ten, and the thousands, many and endless. This is the Brahman, without cause and without effect, without anything inside or 'outside this Self is Brahman, Omnipresent and Omniscient. This is the teaching (of the Upanisads)."

The same fact is reiterated in other places also such as Atha kasmāt uchyate Brahma, etc.

Adhikarana V.

In the Rig Veda (X. 90), Purusa Sukta we have the following :— कहमा मनसा जातस्वश्चनः स्थोऽजायत ।

भोत्राव वायुक्ष प्राचम मुजावप्रिरजायत ।।

"From His mind was produced the Moon, from His eyes was born the Sun : from His ears, the Air and Breath, and from His mouth was produced the Fire."

Here the eyes, &c., of the Lord are conceived as causes generating the Sun, Air, &c.

(Doubt).—Should one contemplate on the eyes, &c., of the Lord as the cause of Sun, &c., or should one not?

(Parvapakea).—Such contemplation should not be made, because His eyes, &c., are very soft and tender as lotus: and the contemplation on them as generators of sun, &c., is against this; and would give rise to the notion of their being very harsh and rough.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set as de in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA ÍV. 1. 6.

मादिलादिमतयश्वाङ्ग उपपत्तेः ॥ ४ । १ । ६ ॥

चारित-चारि Aditya-adi, about the sun and the others. ज्या Matayah, ideas. च Cha, and. च Aûge, in the parts, or limbs, or limbs, व्यवसार Upapatteh, that being proved. or that being reasonable.

6. The ideas of sun and the rest (originating from his eyes, etc.), should be made with regard to the limbs of the Lord, because of its reasonableness.—487.

COMMENTARY.

The word "cha" in the sûtra is employed in order to set aside the Pûrvapakşa. The contemplation on the eyes, &c., of the Lord as the generator of the sun, &c., is a valid contemplation, and such notion does not detract from the mildness of the Lord. Why do we say so? Because it is reasonable. Such a contemplation exalts the glory of the Lord. The Lord is magnified when we think of His eyes, &c., as the producers of the sun, &c. Though they are exceedingly mild and soft, yet they are the generators of such strong and hard objects as the sun, &c.: this must be believed, because the Revelation says so, and because it is a transcendental mystery.

Adhikarana VI.

In the Svetāsvatara we read as follows (II. 8):-

विकातं काप्य समं शरीरं ह्दीक्यियाचि मनसा संनिक्ष्य । ब्रह्मोडुपेन प्रतरेत विकारकोतांसि सर्वाचि भयावहानि ॥ ८ ॥

Let a wise man hold his body with its three erect parts (chest, Leck and head) even, and turn his senses with the mind towards the heart, he will then in the boat of Brahman cross all the torrents which cause fear.

(Doubt).—This description of the posture is enjoined by the Revelation. The question arises: Is this posture compulsory in every japa or recitation or is it optional?

(Pârvapakşa).—The recitation of Om is a mental process. No particular bodily postures are absolutely necessary for the due carrying on of any mental process. Therefore, the Asana (posture) taught in the above Sruti is not compulsory.

(Siddhanta). - This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 1. 7.

श्रासीनः सम्भवात् ॥ ४ । १ । ७ ॥

वासीना Astnah, sitting. सम्मवात् Sambhavat, on account of possibility.

7. (Let him recite the name of the Lord Hari) in a sitting posture, (for prayer is) possible in that posture only.

—488.

COMMENTARY.

The Lord Hari should be meditated upon by the devotee, in a sitting posture. Why? Because meditation is possible only when one is sitting.

It is not possible when one is lying down at full length, or is standing or is walking. Meditation is possible only when one is quietly seated.

Moreover in the Svetatvatara Up. I. 3, we read :-

ते भ्यानयागानुगता चपस्यन्वेचात्मशक्तिः स्वगुवैनिगृहाम् । यः कारवानि निवि-कानि तानि काकात्मयुकान्यवितित्रत्येकः ॥ ३ ॥

"The sages, devoted to meditation and concentration, have seen the power belonging to God Himself, hidden in its own qualities (gupa). He, being one, superintends all those causes, time, self, and the rest."

This declares that those who yearn to know God should perform meditation (Dhyana). Now Dhyana can be performed only by him who is in a sitting posture and not in any other state. The next sûtra makes it still more clear.

SÛTRA IV- 1, 8.

ध्यानाच ॥ ४।१।८॥

unique Dhyanat, because of the concentrated meditation. Tha, and,

8. And because meditation is also possible in a sitting posture only,—489.

COMMENTARY.

Dhyana or meditation is thinking on one subject continuously, without the inrush of ideas incongruous with the subject of thought. Such meditation is possible in a sitting posture only, and not while lying down or standing, etc. Therefore, a sitting posture should be adopted both for prayers as well as for meditation.

SUTRA IV. 1. 9.

ध्रचलत्वञ्चापेक्ष्य ॥ ४ । १ । ६ ॥

व्यवस्थ्य Achalatvam, motionlessness, steadiness. व Cha, and, indeed, क्येक्स Apeksya, referring to.

9. And because the Sruti has reference to motionlessness as a condition of Dhyâna.—490.

COMMENTARY.

The word Cha in the sûtra has the force of indeed only. In the Chhandogya Upanişad, the root Dhyâya is employed in the sense of motionlessness. This shows that Dhyâna has the essential quality of motionlessness. Thus in Chh. Up., VII. 6. 1, we have the verb Dhyâyati used in the sense of motionlessness.

श्यानं वाय चित्ताव्भूया श्यायतीव पृथिती श्यायतीवान्तरिक्षं श्यायतीव शौर्ध्या-यन्तीवारी श्यायन्तीव पर्वता श्यायन्तीव देवमनुष्यात्तसाच इह मनुष्याकां महत्तां

त्राज्यकरित ज्यानापादाध्यक्षा इवैष ते अवस्त्वय वैश्वयाः करुदिनः पिशुना उपवादिनस्तैत्र्य वै प्रमवा ज्यानापादाध्यक्षा इवैष ते अवस्ति ज्यानमुपास्स्वेति ॥ १ ॥

"Dhysna is better than Chitta. The earth is in meditation, as it were, and thus also the sky, the intersediate region, the Heaven, the Water, the Mountains and Divine Men. Therefore, those who among men have obtained greatness here, on earth, seem to have obtained a portion of Dhysna. While small and vulgar people are always quarrelling, backbiting and abusing each other, great men seem to have obtained a portion of the gift of Dhysna. Meditate on Brahman in Dhysna."

From this indicatory mark also, we learn that meditation should be done in a sitting posture. In secular language also we use the word Dhyayati in the same sense, as in the sentence Dhyayati kantam prositaramant the wife thinks deeply or sitting in reverie thinking over her husband gone on a distant journey

SÛTRA IV. 1. 10.

स्मरन्ति च ॥ ४ । १ । १० ॥

emply Smaranti, it is mentioned in the Smritis. Tha, and.

10. And the Smritis also teach the same (that meditation must be performed in a sitting posture).—491.

COMMENTARY.

Thus in the Glta, VI. 11. 13, we have the following:-

शुची देशे प्रतिष्ठात्य सिरमासनमातनः । नात्युच्छितं नातिनीचं चेळाजिनकुशोचरम् ॥

In a pure place, established on a fixed seat of his own, neither very much raised nor very low, made of a cloth, a black antelope skin, and kuşa grass, one over the other.

तचैकामं मनः कृत्वा यतिक्वेन्द्रियक्तियः। उपविद्यासने युम्ज्याचोगमात्मविद्युद्धये ॥ १२ ॥

There, having made the mind one-pointed, with thought and the functions of the senses subdued, steady on his seat, he should practise Yoga for the purification of the self.

समं कायतिरोप्रीषं घारयज्ञच्छं स्तरः। सम्प्रेश्य नासिकाग्रं स्वं विद्यासानवलोकयन्॥ १३॥

Holding the body, head, and neck erect, immoveably steady, looking fixedly at the point of the nose, with unseeing gaze.

The above verses of the Gita also teach that the persons meditating should practise the motionlessness of their bodily limbs and sense-organs. Such a motionlessness cannot take place without the sitting posture. Therefore, the meditation must be performed in a sitting posture. And the above verses specifically mention this posture by using the words Upavidya asane, sitting on a seat, &c.

Adhikarana VII.

With regard to the Bri. Ar. Upanisad (IV. 5. 6. and other texts to the same effect) which declare that "the Self is to be seen, to be heard, to be constantly throught over and to be meditated upon," which have already been mentioned before, here arises another point for discussion.

(Doubt).—In this form of meditation and prayer, is there any condition of direction, locality and time or is there no such condition?

(Parvapaksa.)—In all Vaidic ritual and upssans we find particular direction, etc., mentioned. Such as the Sandhya facing east, just before the sunrise on the bank of a river, etc. Since Vaidic rituals lay down these conditions of prayers, and the Vedantic meditation and prayers being in no way different from the Vaidic Sandhya, the conditions of direction, time and locality must apply to it also.

(Siddhanta). - This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 1. 11.

यत्रैकामतातत्राविशेषात् ॥ ४ । १ । ११ ॥

वन Yatra, where. एकामता, Ekagrata, the concentration of mind. तन Tatra, there. वावियात् Avisesat, it not being specially mentioned.

11. Whenever there takes place one-pointedness of the mind, there let the meditation be performed; because there are no such conditions laid down with regard to this meditation, as there are laid down with regard to the Vaidic Sandhyâ.—492.

COMMENTARY.

In whatever direction, place or time there takes place the concentration of the mind, then and there let the man meditate on the Lord Hari, for there is no restrictive rule regarding it. Why? Avisesat, because no specific condition is laid down with regard to such meditation, contrary to what is laid down with regard to Sandhya. In the Varâha Purâna also we find:—

> तमेव देशं सेवेत तं कालं तामविक्तिम्। तानेव भागान् सेवेत मना यत्र प्रसीदित ॥ निह देशादिभिः कश्चिद् विशेषः समुदीरितः। मनः प्रसादनायं हि देशकालादिकिन्तनम् ॥

"That place, time and condition one must resort to which are favourable for mental concentration. He should resort to that place only, seize that hour only, place himself in that condition only, see those comforts only, which are favourable to securing serenity of mind. For by time, place, etc., there is no peculiarity said to be wrought in meditation, but all enquiry about time, place, etc., is meant for making the mind serene."

Says an objector—but the Upanieads themselves record such specific rules. How can you say that that there are no such rules? For example, the Svet. Up. II. 10. lays down the following rules:—

समे धुर्चै। शर्कराविश्वालुकाविवर्जिते शब्दज्ञकाभयाविमिः । मनेप्रतुक्ति न तु वक्षपीयने गुडानिवाताभयवे प्रवेशक्येत् ॥ १० ॥

"Let him perform his exercises in a place, level, pure, free from pebbles, fire, and dust, delightful by its sounds, its water and bowers, not painful to the eye, and full of shelters and caves."

The Scriptures, moreover, say that sacred places of pligrimages are causes of release.

True. Places are of great help in concentration, provided there be no distracting elements there; but those very sacred places of pligrimages become obstructions to meditation, if there are distractions there. Hence the best test of the place is that which the mind finds favourable; and hence the Sruti says "Mano'nukule," where the mind feels favourable.

Adhikarana VIII.

In the Prasna Upanisad, V. 1, we have the following:— स वे। हैतद् अगक्त्र मनुष्येषु प्रायक्षान्तमोकारमभिष्यायीत

Next Saibya Satyakâma asked him: "O Master, what world does he conquer by such (meditation) who amongst men unceasingly meditates on Onkâra, up to his death."

So also in the Nrisimha Tapani Upanisad (II. 4) we have :-

यं सर्वे देवा नमन्ति मुमुसवा न्यावादिनस्य

"Whom all the devas bow down to and all the Would-be-Free and the Free (Brahman-established)."

In another passage (Tatt. Up. III. 10-5):-

पतत् साम गायबास्ते।

"They sit down, and sing this Sama."

So also तक्किकाः परमं पदं सदा पश्यन्ति सूरयः -(Rig Veda.)

"The Wise ones always see that highest abode of Visnu."

Here we find a mention of the worship made to the Lord Hari, not only up to one's attaining Mukti, but even after getting freedom.

(Doubt).—Must the worship of the Lord be done only up to Mukti, or continued even after getting Freedom?

Prirrapaksa.—The opponent says that since the object of all prayers and worship is to get freedom, there is no necessity of continuing the worship of the Lord, after one has obtained freedom.

(Siddhanta).-This view is rebutted in the next sutra.

SÛTRA IV. 1.12.

श्राप्रायणात्त्रजापि हि दृष्टम् ॥ ४ । १ । १२ ॥

शासकार Aprayanat, till the salvation (Moksa). तथ Tatra, there, in salvation. आर्थ Api, even. द्वि Hi, because. द्वस्य Dristam, is seen in the Sruti.

12. (The worship of the Lord should be done) up to the time of getting salvation and also thereafter; because it is so seen in the Revelation.—493.

COMMENTARY.

The worship of the Lord should be done up to Prayana or Mukti: and "thereafter also," i.e., after getting Moksa also. Why? Because it is so seen in the Srutis. The Sruti texts have already been quoted above.

Note—Thus the Nrisimha Tapani Text given above says "the Mumuksus (seekers of Moksa) and the Brahma-vådins (who are established already in Brahman, namely, who have become free) worship the Lord." The UT has the sense of "being established." Thus the Free as well as the Would-be-Free both worship the Lord.

In addition to the texts already quoted, we have the following text of the Sauparna Śruti:—

सर्वदैनमुपासीत याब्द्रिमुक्ति । मुक्ता प्रपि ग्रेनमुपासते ।

"Let one worship Him always till he gets freedom. Verily the Free ones also worship Him."

This shows that the Lord must be worshipped both before getting Freedom and after getting it.

As regards the objection, that the Muktas need not worship because there is no injunction to that effect, and because there is no fruit in such worship, we say: true. There is no injunction to the effect "Let the Freed Souls also worship the Lord." Yet, such souls are irresistibly drawn to worship the Lord, because He is so beautiful and attractive. The force of His beauty compels adoration. Just as a person suffering from biliousness is cured by eating sugar; but he continues eating sugar even after such cure, not because he has any disease, but because the sugar is sweet, so is the case with the Muktas.

Thus it is demonstrated that the worshipping the Lord is an everlasting act of the souls both free and bound.

Adhikarana IX.

Having thus discussed in the preceding sections, the various means of acquiring Divine Wisdom (Vidya), the author now enters into a discussion as to the fruits of knowledge.

(Vijaya).—In the Chhandogya Up., IV. 14. 3, we have the following: यथा पुष्करप्रज्ञा आपे। न निरुष्यन प्यमेषिकि पापं कर्म न निरुष्यन इति

वरीत में मगवानिति तस्मै होवाच ॥

"As water does not cling to a lotus leaf, so no sinful act clings to one who knows Him thus! He said: "Sir, tell me" He said then to him.

So also in the same (V. 24. 8) it is said:

तचयेषीकात्कमत्री मोतं प्रवृथेतैष्ध हास्य सर्वे पोप्मानः प्रवृथन्ते य पतदेषं विद्वानप्रिहोत्रं जुहोति ॥ ३॥

"As the tuft of the Isika reed entering into the fire is quickly reduced to ashes, thus indeed are burnt all his sins, who knowing the Lord, thus offers an Agnihotra."

(Doubt).—Now arises the doubt, must the consequences of the two kinds of evil deeds, namely, those called the Sanchita (the stored up) and the Kriyamana (the deeds in the course of doing be exhausted by suffering their results, or do these two become destroyed and non-adhering respectively, through the majesty of the Divine Wisdom?

Note.—The Kriyamānas beceme loosened, i.e., their effects do not cling to the man: the man passes through these Karmas as the lotus leaf through water unentangled by them.

The Sanchita Karmas are burnt up. Such has been said to be the power of Vidya.

"(Pûrvapakşa).—Neither the Kriyamâna Karınas are loosened, nor the Sañchita Karınas burnt up by Vidyâ. The law of causation is inexorable: as says the well-known verse:—

नासुकः शीयते कर्म कस्पकेाटिशतैरापः। सबस्यमेव भाकस्यं इतं कर्म शुभाशभम्॥

"The Karma is never exhausted or weakened in its force even after a lapse of hundreds of millions of eons. It is exhausted only when its consequences are suffered. Verily one must suffer the consequences of his acts, whether they be good or bad.

Therefore, these two kinds of Karmas (Kriyamana and the Sanchita) are to be exhausted by suffering only.

This being the law, the texts that say that the Divine Wisdom destroys all Karmas, must be understood to glorify the wise and should not be taken to be literally ture. They are arthavadas or glorificatory passages.

(Siddhanta)—The next satra refutes this view.

SÛTRA'IV. 1. 18.

तद्धिगमउत्तरपूर्वाघयोरभ्छेषविनाशौ तद्वव्यपदेशात् ।

are Tad, of him. within Adhigame, knowledge being attained. were Uttara, of the latter i.e., of what is being done, we Purva, of the former, i.e., of what is stored up. सम्बो: Aghayoh, of the sins. सम्बेस Asleşa, non-clinging. दिनाची Vinasau, and destruction. तर् Tad, that. व्यवस्थाह, Vyapadesat, being declared.

13. On obtaining that (Vidyâ) there take place the non-clinging of the works done in the present life, and destruction of the works stored up which were done in the past life. Because this is so declared (in the Upanisads)—494.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tad adhigame" means the attainment of that, namely, of Brahman which here means Brahma Vidya. When this Brahma Vidya is attained, then there result two-fold effects:—All sins which are committed in the present life lose their power of clinging to the man; while all sins which were committed in the past life and which constitute the Sanchita Karmas are totally destroyed. Why? Because it is so declared in the Scriptures. The two texts declaring these have already been quoted above. They clearly show that no sins done in the present life cling to the man, because he is like a lotus leaf in water, while his all past sins are burnt up like Istka reed. We cannot explain away or restrict the plain meaning of Sruti texts like these. As regards the verses which say that no Karma is destroyed, but by producing its effects, that holds good in the case of ordinary men who have not obtained Brahma Vidya, and who are in ignorance.

Adhikarana X.

In the Bri. Ar. Up. (IV. 4. 22) it is said :-

उद्दे वैते न तरत इत्यतः पापमकरवमित्यतः कल्यावमकरवतित्युमे उ देवैच पते तरित नैनं कताकवे तपतः ॥

"Him (who knows), these two do not overcome, whether he says that for some reason he has done evil, or for some reason he has done good, he overcomes both, and neither what he has done, nor what he has omitted to do, burns (affects) him."

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt. The above text mentions that good and bad deeds are both crossed over. The question arises, does the same law hold good with regard to the virtuous deeds as it does with regard to the evil deeds of sin. In other words: Are the Saüchita good deeds totally burnt up, like reeds, and the good deeds done in the present life cease to cling to the man. Just as it was the case with regard to past and present sine.

(Pârvapakea).—The Pûrvapakein maintains that the good deeds (whether Kriyamâna or Sañchita) are not destroyed on the origination of Vidya, because they being works done in accordance with the scriptural commands, do not conflict with the Divine Wisdom or Vidya, and therefore, they co-exist to the Vidya and are to be exhausted by enjoying their rewards in higher worlds. Therefore, it is not a correct saying that as soon as Vidya originates the man gets Mukti. For, if he has unexhausted good works; he must pass through heaven worlds, &c.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÚTRA IV. 1, 14.

इतरस्याप्येवमश्लेषः पाते तु ॥ ४ । १ । १४ ॥

ह्यास्य Itarasya, of the other, i.e., of good deeds. यापि Api, also. एवर् Evam, thus. यान्त्रेय: Aéleşaḥ, non-clinging (and destruction). पासे Pate, after the destruction, fall, or death. यू Tu, but, indeed.

14. The same is the case with the other (namely, the good deeds); the stored-up good deeds are destroyed and the good deeds done in the present life do not cling to the man. He verily gets Mukti on the falling off of his Prârabdha Karmas.—495.

COMMENTARY.

With regard to the other, namely, the good works whether they be Sanchita or stored-up, or whether they be Kriyamana being done in the present life, the rule is the same as with regard to sinful works. Vidya produces her two-fold effects with regard to good works also. She burns up the store of good works and does not allow the good deeds done in the present life to cling to the man. No doubt, good deeds are works done in conformity with the law of the Vedas; but it cannot be said that, therefore. they are not in conflict with Vidya. They are opposed to Vidya, in this much that their result is to produce heavenly joy and Svargic bliss; while the fruit of Vidya is release; and as Svarga and Mukti can not co-exist together; therefore Punya, though Vaidic, is opposed to Vidya. And as a matter of fact, the so-called Punyam is after all not so pure as people think it to be. In the Scriptures, the Punyam accruing from Vaidic works is considered as ain after all. In the eye of a Vedantin, all good works are Pâpam. In fact, in the Chhâudogya Upanişad (VIII. 4.1) the term Pâpam is applied to good deeds (Sukritam) in the same way as it is applied to evil deeds (Duskritam). Both Sukrita and Duskrita are evils, which are left behind when the man gets Mukti.

चय य घाला स सेतुर्षिष्विरेषां क्षेत्रानामसंभेदाय नैतर्छ। सेतुमहाराचे तरते। न चरा न मृत्युनं शोको न सुकृतं न दुष्कृतछ। सर्वे पाप्मानाजी निवर्तन्तेऽपहतपाप्मा क्षेत्र महाक्षेत्रकः ॥ १ ॥

"This Self is a Bridge (refuge) and a support, so that these worlds (may be kept in their proper places and) may not clash with each other. Night and day do not pass that Bridge, nor old age, nor death, nor grief, nor the good deeds, nor the evil deeds (of men). All evils turn back from Him, because He is free from all evils. He is Brahman, the Great Refuge."

Consequently in the Glta (IV+37) it is stated that all actions, whether good or bad, are destroyed when knowledge is obtained. The word Sarvakarmani used there is a generic term and includes good deeds also.

यथैषांसि समिजोऽग्निर्भक्षासासुब्तेऽर्ज्जु । बानाग्निः सर्वकर्माचि भक्तसासुब्ते तथा ॥ ३७ ॥

"As the burning fire reduces fuel to ashes, O Arjuna, so doth the fire of wisdom reduce all actions to ashes."

Therefore, it has been established that the two kinds of Punyam also, like the two kinds of sins, are respectively destroyed, and made unclinging. The Sûtrakâra further adds Pâpe tu. The word "tu" has the force of verily. Verily on the destruction of the Prârabdha Karmas, the man gets Mukti. Therefore, the saying that on the origination of Vidyâ a man gets Mukti is not a void statement.

Adhikarana XI.

When through Vidys or Divine Wisdom there are destroyed both sorts of Sanchita Karmas, namely, the good as well as the bad Karmas; then at that very moment, it must reasonably follow that the body of the man should fall off from him, because the body is the effect of such Karmas; and when the Karmas are destroyed, the body naturally falls off. If this be so, then anyone who gets the Divine knowledge, must immediately pass out of this world, and so the teaching of the Divine knowledge by the knowers of Brahman becomes an impossibility. The present adhikarana is commenced in order to remove this doubt.

The stored-up good and evil deeds are of two sorts, one which has commenced its fruition in this world, and the other which has not commenced to produce its effects.

(Doubt):---Are both these kinds of Sanchita Karmas, namely, the Arabdha-phala and the Anarabdha-phala destroyed by Vidya, or only the Anarabdha-phala Karmas are destroyed?

(Pûrvapakea).—In the Bri. Ar. Up. (IV. 4. 22.) already quoted above, it is said that both these are destroyed. There is no exception mentioned there in favour of the Karmas whose effect has already commenced; and as the action of Vidya is everywhere uniform (like the action of fire on every kind of dry grass) therefore, both sorts of Sanchita Karmas, mature as well immature, are destroyed by Vidya.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 1. 15.

म्रनारब्धकार्ये एव तु पूर्वे तदवधेः ॥ ४ । १ । १४ ॥

सनारकप-कार्वे Anarabdha-karye, the effects of which have not yet begun. इव Eva, only. तु Tu, but. पूर्वे Purve, in the case of the former or stored good deeds and sins. तत् Tad, that. सबध: Avadheh, being the duration of time.

15. But only the immature Karmas of the former lives, namely, those Karmas whose effect has not yet begun, are destroyed by knowledge; because that is the limit of the life of the Jūānin; (namely) the limit of the life of the wise is the period over which his former Karmas which have begun to produce their effects extend.—496.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" in the sûtra is used in order to remove the doubt raised by the Pûrvapakşin. The word "pûrve" or "former works" mean accumulated good and evil works of the time prior to the present life. The word anârabdha-kârye" means those works whose fruit has not commenced to originate. Only this latter kind of Sañchita work is destroyed and not that kind of Sañchita work whose effects have already begun to manifest. Why so? Tad avadheh, because that is the limit. In the Chh. Up. (VÎ. 14. 2) it has been said that the man lives on even after the acquiring of the knowledge, if his Prârabdha Karmas are not exhausted. The Śruti says:—"For him there is delay only as long as he is not delivered from the body." In the Bhägavata Purâna, in the address of the Śrutis to the Lord, we find the following (Bhag., X. 87. 40):

त्वद्वगमी न वेचि मवदुत्यशुमाशुमयार् गुजविगुजान्ययास्तर्हि देहभृताम्ब गिरः।

"He who has realised Thee, does not perceive that good and bad effects are produced by Thee, on account of the virtue and vice generated by the man in his past, because he is not conscious of the commands and prohibitions of Scripture regarding good and bad deed affecting all embodied beings. (Secause thou willest it so.)

This shows that it is the will of the Lord, that the man who has obtained the Divine Wisdom, should go on living in this body, so long as his Prarabdha Karmas are not exhausted.

Note.—But the great difference in his life before the origination of Vidya and in his life after the origination of such Vidya consists in this; that before such origination, he feels the good and bad effect of his Karmas, but after the origination of such Vidya, his centre of consciousness being fixed in the Lord, he is so much absorbed in the Lord, that he never perceives the effects of these Karmas.

To summarise. Vidyå is verily supremely powerful. She destroys effectually, without leaving any remainder, all Karmas just as a well-lit fire reduces to ashes all sorts of fuel. Though this we learn from the books and must believe it also, yet we see on the other hand, that divinely illumined sages, full masters of Divine Wisdom, are living on this earth and their bodies do not fall down as soon as they get Divine Wisdom. We further see that they teach others and are not inactive, consequently, we must admit that it is the will of the Lord that such men should continue to live, in order to spread his knowledge and the knowledge of Theosophy (Brahma-vidyå) among mankind. This does not detract from the glory of Vidyå (Divine Wisdom). The Vidyå has the power of burning up all Karmas including the Prårabdha, but she does not do so, because her power with regard to the Prårabdha is countermanded by the will of the Lord, just as the power of the fire to burn everything, may be suspended by the stronger power of mantras and jewels. Thus there is no harm if Vidyå, under the command of the Lord, does not burn up the Prårabdha Karmas.

"Some raise another objection. They say Vidya cannot originate but through the body which is the result of the Prarabdha Karmas. Their argument is:—'The origination of knowledge cannot take place without dependence on an aggregate of works whose effects have already begun to operate, and when this dependence has once been entered into, we must, as in the case of the potter's wheel, wait until the motion of that which once has begun to move, comes to an end, there being nothing to obstruct it in the interim. As when the force which moves the wheel is exhausted, the wheel stops moving of itself, so also when the fruit is fully manifested, the Karmas that produce the fruit are destroyed and not before that."

To this objection we reply that this is not so. Knowledge is the most powerful of all forces. She destroys all Karmas from their very root. She can destroy even the energy that moves the potter's wheel, namely, the Prârabdha Karmas that makes this body to live; but she does not do so through the will of the Lord. Nothing can resist her irresistible course, but the will of the Lord. As a potter's wheel in motion may be instantly put to rest, by placing upon it a heavier stone than the wheel with its momentum, and the wheel would cease to move, so Vidyâ is like that heavy stone, which can stop the motion of the wheel of Prârabdha Karma even. That she does not do so, is in deference to the will of the Lord, and not because she has not the power. Therefore, the statement that Divine knowledge (Vidyâ) can destroy all Karmas is absolutely correct.

Adhikarana XII.

The statement that the past good deeds of a Wise One are destroyed by Vidyå, logically leads to the conclusion that the effects of all the obligatory duties (Nitya Karmas) are also destroyed, just as the effects of Kamya Karmas (religious rites performed for the sake of getting some desired object). This deduction is not, however, correct; and the present section is commenced to establish this fact. The proposition of the Br. Ar., IV. 4. 22,—" both the good and evil works are destroyed"—leads to a fresh doubt.

(Doubt).—Does the Vidya destroy the effects of Nitya Karmas like fire sacrifice, &c., in the same way as she destroys the effects of Kamya karmas?

(Pûrvapakşa).—She destroys the Nitya-Karmas also, because it is the attribute inherent in Vidyâ to destroy all Karmas: for the essential power of a substance can never be lost.

(Siddhanta).—This view is refuted in the next satra.

SUTRA. IV. 1. 16.

म्रप्तिष्टोत्रादि तु तत्कार्यायैव तद्दर्शनातु ॥१।१।१६॥

कारिया-सारि Agnihotra-adi, the daily fire-offering. &c. च Tu, but, indeed. सम् Tat, in the form of that (i.e., knowledge). सावाय Karyaya, to the effect of getting the fruit. एवं Eva, even. तम् Tat, That. रचनाम् Daraanat, because of being seen.

16. But the daily fire sacrifice and the rest, produce Vidyâ as their effect; because it is so seen.—497.

COMMENTARY.

The word "tu" is employed in the sutra to remove the doubt. daily fire sacrifice and the rest, performed prior to the origination of Vidya, produce their fruit in the shape of Vidya herself. Why? "because it is so seen." Namely, the Scripture states that the Vidya is produced by these Nitya Karmas. Such as, Br. Ar. (iv. 4.2?) तमेर्व वेदादetc. "Him they know through the study of the Vedas, through sacrifices, alms, austerities," &c. The right meaning, therefore, of the sûtra iv. 1. 14, is that Vidya distroys all past good works, done prior to her origination, provided such works are not Nitya Karmas or obligatory works. The scriptures do not contemplate the destruction of the Nitya works, for Vidya herself is their fruit. The word "destruction" is not employed in connection with the scorching up of the paddy grains, etc., when a house is burnt and which thus become incapable of being sown. When a house is buint down, the seed-grains kept in it may be scorched and incapable of any fruit, but we do not say that the grains are destroyed. So that Nitya Karmas cannot be said to be destroyed.

No doubt, there are some Nitya Karmas, which are quesi-kamya: that is to say, which produce not only Vidya, but lead the performer to Svarga, etc., also. Thus the Br. Ar text when leading "by the performance of Nitya works, one goes to the region of the Pitris," shows that the Nitya Karmas have the heaven-producing power also. This heaven-leading power of the Nitya Karmas is however destroyed, as soon as the Vidya originates.

Adhikarana XIII.

[The vicarious atonement]

It has been shown above that the Prarabdha good and bad Karmas of the illumined sage, remain in their force, through the mere will of the Lord, who wishes that such illumined sages should remain on earth, in order to teach mankind, by spreading knowledge and instruction. Though this is a general rule, yet there is an exception to it in the case of some nirapeksa devotees who, as soon as they get Vidya, enter into Mukti; because their prarabdha good and bad deeds are immediately destroyed, without causing them to experience their fruit. (This is an exception, and the Lord in their case does not wish that they should remain behind on earth to teach mankind.)

(Visaya).—In the Kausitaki Upanisad (1.4.; in describing the passage of the soul it is written:—

तं पञ्चशतान्यप्सरसां प्रतिधावन्ति शतं मालाहस्ताः शतमाञ्जनहस्ताः शतं चृक्षहस्ताः शतं वासोहस्ताः शतं क्षणहस्तास्तं ब्रह्मालंकारेणालंकुर्वन्ति स ब्रह्मालंकारे- खलंकृतो ब्रह्म विद्वान् ब्रह्मेवाभिष्मैति स आगच्छत्यारं हृदं तन्मनसात्येति तमृत्वा संप्रतिविद्या मजन्ति स आगच्छति मृह्यतंन्येष्टिहास्तेऽस्मादपद्रवन्ति स आगच्छति विश्जां नदीं ता मनसैवात्येति तत्सुकृतवुष्कृते धृतुते तस्य प्रिया हातयः सुकृतमुपयन्त्यप्रिया हुष्कृतम् ॥ ४ ॥

Him approach five hundred celestial damsels, one hundred carrying scented powders like safron, turmeric, etc., in their hands, one hundred carrying dresses in their hands, one hundred carrying fruits, one hundred carrying various ornaments, and a hundred carrying garlands. They adorn him with ornaments befitting Brahma himself. The soul thus adorned with Brahma-ornaments and knowing Brahman, sees everywhere Brahman. He approaches the lake called, Ara, which he crosses with the boat of Mind. (But those who do not know Brahman cannot cross this lake and are drowned in it, like the voyagers in the sea when their ship is wrecked). The knower of Brahman then approaches the Hours, called the sacrificial destroying. They run away from him, as soon as he reaches them. Then he comes to the river called Vijava and crosses it by mind alone. He shakes off his good and evil deeds. His beloved relatives obtain the good, his unbeloved relatives the evil he has done.

Similarly the Satyayanins read:-

तस्य पुत्रा दायमुपयन्ति, सुद्दः साधुकृत्यां, द्विषन्तः पापकृत्याम् ॥

(Doubt).—The above shows that the good and evil deeds, which constitute the Prârâbdha of the Brahmavit, are also destroyed, without experiencing their fruit. But the question arises, Is it possible that the Prârabdha Karmas may be destroyed in the case of any person?

(Pûrvapakşa).—The Pûrvapakşin maintains that the Prârabdha Karmas are never destroyed, in the case of any person, unless the man suffers their consequences. They are destroyed, only by the man undergoing the suffering for the evil he has done, and enjoying the fruits of the good deeds, he has performed. Vidyâ cannot destroy Prârabdha.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

8ÛTRA. IV. 1. 17.

श्रतोन्यापि ह्येकेषामुभयोः ॥ ४ । १ । १७ ॥

श्वः Atah, than this (declaration of the Śruti), than this (text which declares that the Prarabdha remains active through the Will of the Lord. पुरुष Anya, (the declaration of the Śruti) other than that, namely, the Śrutis like the "lotus leaf in water," "burning of Iṣtkā reeds." दि Hi, because. एकेंद्राय Ekeşâm, (in the branch) of some: in some Śākhās. इन्हेंद्राः Ubhayoḥ, of both (the good and the evil deed that is commenced), the Prarabdha of good and evil.

17. (In the case of some Nirapekṣa devotees, there takes place a non-clinging) of both (sorts of Prârabdhas, whether good or evil), because in some (Sâkhâs, like those of the Kauṣitakins and Sâṭyâyanins), there is also a declaration other than (that of the Chhândogya, VI. 14. 2.)—498.

COMMENTARY.

In the case of some Nirapeksas, however, who are extremely ardent lovers of God and are solely devoted to Brahman, there takes place the separation of both kinds of Prârabdha Karmas, namely, the Prârabdha of good and the Prârabdha of evil deeds; and they have not to suffer the consequences of their Prârabdha. In other words, in the case of some Nirapeksas, the Prârabdha is shaken off without their undergoing the enjoyment of that Prârabdha. The reason for this is that the declaration "the Prârabdha remains active in the case of the Jñanin because it is the wish of the Lord that it should so remain" is modified by the counter declaration, as we find it in certain Sâkhâs, such as those of the Kausitakins and the Sâtyâyenins. Thus the two Śr. tis "His beloved relatives obtain the good, his unbeloved relatives the evil he has done," and "His sons obtain inheritance, his friends the good, his enemies the evil that he has done"—show that the Prârabdha is detached in the case of some. The sense is this, there are certain Śruti texts which declare that Karmas are destroyed either by knowledge or by suffering. While the texts above given show that the karma is not destroyed by knowledge, but that it goes to the friends or foes of the knower of Brahman. The conflict of Srutis, therefore, must be reconciled by giving them different scopes. This Sruti regarding the Karmas going to friend or foe, does not relate to Kanya Karmas. Because in the Sûtras (IV. 1. 13 and IV. 1. 14) it has been shown that all Karmas except the Prarabdha, all good and evil deeds are destroyed by knowledge, while in the case of evil deeds there is no element of Kamyatva. [No one enunciates such a desire (Kama) "Let me do such and such evil deed, with the desire of suffering such and such hell-fire." Evil deeds, therefore, can never be said to be Kâmya.]

Note.—The conflict of Srutis arises thus. Two texts declare that the knower of Brahman performs works without the work clinging to him like a lotus leaf in water (Chh. Up., IV. 14. 3.) and all stored up works are destroyed as the fire burns up Isika reeds (Chh., V. 24. 3). These two texts of the Chh. Up. declare that Karma is destroyed by knowledge; while the text," there is delay for him so long as he does not die," (Chh. VI. 14. 2.) shows that Karma is destroyed by suffering. These three texts, two showing that Karma is destroyed by knowledge, and the third showing that it is destroyed by suffering only, must be reconciled with this fourth text which declares vicarious sufferings and enjoyments. How the karmas of one man can be suffered or enjoyed by another man? How can the good or evil deeds of a Jāānin be suffered or enjoyed by his friends and foes? This is the problem propounded for solution.

This special Adhikarana teaches that the Lord bestows the good results of the good Prarabdha deeds of the Jñanin on the friends of such Jñanin, and puts the evil results of the evil Prarabdha deeds on the enemies of such Jñanin, and bring such Jñanin at once towards him, because he is impatient to see the Lord, the supremely beloved; and he is not able to suffer the pangs of separation from Him any longer.

Thus the rule made by the Lord that the Prarabdha Karmas are destroyed only by enjoyment is not broken, for the Prarabdha Karmas of the Jnanin are enjoyed by his friends and foes. This vicarious enjoyment thus upholds the justice of the Lord and the unchanging nature of His laws.

But, says an objector, good and evil deeds are formless, and are not like physical ornaments, etc. that they may be given away to anybody, it is not, therefore, proper to say that a friend gets the good deeds, and the enemy gets the bad deeds. Moreover it is open to another objection, namely, why should another man enjoy the fruit of deeds not done by nim? To this objection, we reply, that the Lord is omnipotent, and has full power to do against the law. Therefore, in the case of some extremely yearning souls, there takes place detachment from Prandbha

Karmas, and such Karmas are attracted by other persons: and exhaust their force on them.

In the next sûtra, the doubt how the Prarabdha Karmas of the Nirapeksa devotees can go to another person is answered.

SÚTRA IV. 1. 18.

यदेव विद्ययेतिष्ठि ॥ ४ । १ । १८ ॥

वय-प्य Yad-eva, whatever. विश्वक Vidyaya, by knowledge. श्री Iti, so. वि

18. The text "whatever he does with knowledge" intimates that the Prârabdha Karmas may go to another.—499.

COMMENTARY.

The text of the Chh. Up. "Yadeva vidyaya (I. 1. 10)" shows that works done with Vidya are very potent, even when such Vidya is not the highest Brahma Vidya, but is only knowledge related to Jiva (human soul). Since the power of Vidya, whether of Brahman or of Human soul, is divine in her nature, and irresistible in her energy, it follows that through the grace of this Vidya, even the Prarabdha Karmas may be destroyed, without undergoing their suffering, through the command of the Lord Nothing is too wonderful in the case of Vidya.

What does then follow from this? The conclusion is mentioned in the last sûtra.

BÛTRA IV. 1. 19.

भोगेन त्वितरेच्चपवित्वाऽच सम्पचते ॥ ४ । १ । १६ ॥

ज्ञातीन Bhogena, with the enjoyments (all heavenly joys). तु Tu, but. इतरे Itare, the other two (the gross and the subtle bodies). चुपबिस्त Kṣapayitvā, giving up. चय Atha, then. सम्बद्धां Sampadyate, obtains, joins.

19. Having given up (the gross and subtle bodies), he joins in the enjoyment (of all divine bliss along with the Lord).—500.

COMMENTARY.

The Nirapeksa devotee having obtained Vidya, transcends the other two, Itare, namely, he throws off the other two bodies called the Sthula (gross) and Sûksma (subtle). He gets the body of the companions of the Lord, namely, the divine body called the Parsada-vapub. Having obtained this body, he gets the power of enjoying, along with the Lord, all the bliss which the Lord enjoys. Then is realised in him literally and truly, the meaning of the Sruti (Tait Up., II. 1. 1) "He enjoys all blessing, at one with the omniscient Brahman." This is the highest stage reached by the soul.

SECOND PADA.

मन्त्राद् यस्य पराभृताः पराभृतादया प्रहाः । नर्यन्ति स्वलसत् तृष्यः स कृष्यः रारखं मम ॥

May that Krisna, the Lover of His devotees, be my refuge, by reciting whose sacred name are vanquished and totally destroyed the mighty obsessing elements of the senses and vitality.

Adhikarana I.

In the present Påda, the author discusses the method of the soul's leaving the body, at the time of death, in the case of a Jñanin; as a preliminary to his describing the devayana path in the next chapter. In the Chh. Up. (VI. 8. 6.) we have the following:—

ग्रस्य सोम्य पुरुषस्य प्रयते। वाङ्मनसि संपद्यते मनः प्रावे प्रावस्तेजसि तेजः परस्यां देवतायाश्च स य प्रवाजिका॥ ६॥

When the soul of this person goes forth, the Speech is merged in Mind, the Mind in Breath, the Breath in Fire, Fire in the Highest God.

(Doubt).—A doubt arises here; whether the above passage means to teach that only the function of Speech is merged in mind, or whether the Speech itself, together with its function, is merged in the mind?

(Pārvapakṣa).—The Purvapakṣin maintains that the function of Speech only is merged in the mind, because there is not found the nature of Speech in mind, and because the Speech and the other senses function under the control of mind.

(Siddhânta).—This view is set aside in the next sûtra. SÛTRA IV. 2. 1.

वाङ्मनसिदर्शनाच्छब्दाश्च ॥ ४ । २ । १ ॥

वाक Vak, Speech. ननसि Manasi, in the mind. वर्षनात् Daráanat, because of the Sastric declaration. शक्तत् Sabdat, because of the word of the Vedas. च Cha, and.

1. Speech (itself together with its function is merged) in the mind, because it is so seen, and because there is a Scriptural statement.—501.

COMMENTARY.

The speech enters the mind organically as well as functionally. Why? When the Speech ceases, the activity of mind is seen.

Note.—When the external Speech is stopped, there goes on the mental Speech. This proves that not only the organ of Speech, but its function also are present in mind. This is a natural fact of psychology. Moreover it is a matter of observation that while the function of speech comes to an end, the mind still continues to act.

Moreover there is the express statement of the Chh. Up. "Van manasi sampadyate," the speech merges in the mind. This also shows that the speech, organically and functionally, enters the mind. Any other explanation would be against the spirit of the above text. The sense is this, that there is no proof by which we can find the Speech in the mind existing merely functionally; we have no proof that the function only merges in mind and not the organ of speech.

An objector says, but mind does not possess the nature of speech. and so we cannot say that Speech itself has merged in the mind, but all that we can say is that only the function of speech has entered the mind. It is something like fire and water. The nature of water is not that of fire. but we see that fire does enter water functionally, though not organically. For water can become heated by fire, by the merging of the function of the fire in water, though the fire itself does not enter the water. To this objection we reply, it is not so. The speech only combines with mind (in a mechanical mixture like that of milk and water), and does not become Laya in mind (as water is said to become Laya in air, when its constituent parts, oxygen and hydrogen, become separated and enter into air. It is like the water entering into air, in the form of vapour and not that of Laya in air, in the form of separated gases.) The sense is this, that though the mind and speech are intrinsically different (as water and air), yet there is the union of these two at the time of death, like the vapour entering into the air.

BÛTRA IV. 2. 2.

श्रतः एव सर्वारयनु ॥ ४ । २ । २ ॥

श्रत: Ataḥ, इप Eva, for this very reason. सर्वाचि Sarvaṇi, all (the senses ). अनु Anu, after.

2. And for this very reason, all (the other sense-organs) merge in the mind, after (the merging of speech).

—502.

COMMENTARY.

In the above text of the Chhândogya Upanisad, there is mention of the merger of only speech in the mind. Lest one should fall into the error of thinking that other sense-organs like hearing, &c., do not merge in mind, the present sûtra declares that they also merge in mind, and not in anything else: but subsequent to the merging of speech.

It is to be understood that since the speech unites with the mind only, and not with fire (though there are some texts to that effect also such as B<sub>I</sub>. Up., III. 2. 13.) it follows that all the other sense-organs unite also in the mind. But all do not simultaneously enter into the mind, they follow after the entrance of speech. As we find in the Prasna Upanisad (III. 9.):—

तेजा ह बाब उदानसामादुपशान्ततेजाः ॥ पुनर्भवमिन्दियर्भनसि संपद्यमानैः ॥ ९ ॥ यंचित्तस्तेनैव प्राचमायाति

The Cosmic Fire verily is Udâna. (It helps the Udâna in man), therefore, when a person becomes exhausted of energy, he goes to another birth, with his sense-faculties merged in the mind.

Similarly, in the same Upaniead (IV. 2) we find:--

तस्मै स द्वाबाब ॥ यथा गार्ग्य मरीबयोऽर्कस्यास्तं गच्छतः सर्वा पतस्मिस्तेजा-मब्द्रस्य पकीमबन्ति ॥ ताः पुनःपुनव्दयतः प्रचरन्त्येवं द्व वै तत्सर्वं परे देवे मनस्येकी-मबति ॥

He said to him "As, O Gargya! all the rays of the sun when going to set, become one in that orb of light, and on his rising again they again spread out in all directions, so verily these all Devas become one in that High Divinity, the mind."

These two texts clearly show that all the sense-organs enter into the mind and not into anything else.

Adhikarana II.

Now the author considers the same text of the Chh. Up. (VI. 6. 1.) which says that the Manas enters the Prana (the Mind enters the Breath).

(Doubt).—After the sense-organs have entered the Mind, at the time of death, does the Mind go to the Prans or to the Moon.

(Pûrvapakea).—The opponent says the mind enters the Moon, for the Bri. Ar. text (III. 2. 13 already given at page 429 ante), shows that Mind enters the Moon.

(Siddhanta).—This view is controverted in the next sutra.

8ÛTRA IV. 2. 8.

तन्मनः प्राग्यउत्तरातु ॥ ४ । २ । ३ ॥

तत् Tad, that, नगः, Manah, mind. जावे Prane, in the Prana, breath. उत्पात् Uttarat, from the subsequent clause.

3. That mind (in which all the sense-organs have entered, merges) in Breath (Prâna) because of the subsequent clause (of the Chh. Up., VI. 6. 1).—503.

COMMENTARY.

The word "that" means that in which all the sense-organs have entered. The mind, along with all the sense-organs, enters into the Prans. Why? Because the Chhandogya text (VI. 6. 1.) says "Manah prane" (the mind enters the Breath). And this sentence immediately follows the clause "the speech merges in the mind."

But, says an objector, How do you then explain the text of the Bri. Up. (III. 2. 13.), which says that the mind of the person dying enters the Moon! If the mind enters the Breath, then this text of the Bri. Upanisad see p. 429) will find no scope. To this we reply that the venerable author of the sûtras, Lord Bådaråyana Himself has reconciled this apparent conflict, in his sûtra, III. 1. 4:—

"If it be said that the scriptural text mentions also the going of the various senses into various elements, like fire, etc., and therefore, the senses do not accompany the Soul, when it goes out of the body, to this we reply, that the going of the senses to the elements is metaphorical only.

Therefore, when the Bri Ar. Up. says that the mind enters the Moon, it is to be taken in a metaphorical sense.

Adhikarana III.

Now the author considers the statement of the same passage of the Chh. Upanisad (VI. 6. 1.) "Pranas tejasi" (the breath enters the fire.)

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, whether this Prana in which has entered mind with all the sense-organs, merges into Tejas (cosmic fire), or does this Prana merge into the Jiva (individual soul).

(Pārvapakṣa).—The opponent maintains the view that Prāṇa merges in Tejas, because the text of the Chh. Up. is definite on that point. Where there is a definite statement, it is wrong to assume anything else.

(Siddhanta).—This view is controverted in the next sutra.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 4.

सोऽध्यचे तदुपगमाविभ्यः ॥ ४ । २ । ४ ॥

श्वः Sah, that (Prana, life, or breath). प्रकार Adhyakse, in the president, the Jiva, the individual soul. तर्-स्थगन-साहिन्यः Tad-upagama-adibhyah, because of the statements about the going of the life to the individual soul, with all the senses.

4. He (Prâna) enters the ruler (the individual Soul); because of the statements as to his coming to the soul, (found in Bri. Ar. Up., IV. 3. 38).—504.

COMMENTARY.

That Prana merges into the Adhyaksa or the presiding deity of the body and the senses, namely, the human soul itself. Why do we say so? Because of the following statement of the Bri. Ar. Up. (IV. 3. 38).

तद्यया राजानं प्रयियासन्तमुष्ठाः प्रत्येनसः स्तप्रामस्योऽभिसमायन्त्येवमेवेममास्ना-नमन्तकाछे सर्वे प्राचा चभिसमायन्ति यत्रैतवृष्ट्योच्छासी मवति ॥ ३८ ॥ "And as bodyguards, warriors, charioteers, and commanders of armies gather round a king who intends to go out on a march, thus do all the Pranas gather round the Soul, at the time of death (and march along with it), when a man is thus going to expire."

This shows that the Prana, along with all the sense-organs, goes to the Jiva.

Nor is there any conflict in this view with the statement of the Chh. Up. (VI 6. 1.) that the Prana merges in Tejas. Prana, after having joined with the Jiva goes into the Tejas and thus that statement also becomes valid. It is just like saying "the river Yamuna goes into the Sea," meaning thereby that the Yamuna, uniting with the Ganges, goes into the sea.

Adhikarana IV.

Now is to be considered the statement of the entrance into the Tejas by the Soul.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, does the individual Soul, joined by the Prana, take up its abode in the Tejas or in the collective elements?

(Pûrvapakṣa).—The opponent maintains the view that the Prâṇa, having entered into the individual soul, merges into the Tejas, because of the definite statement "Prâṇas tejasi," "the Jîva enters in Tejas." The word Prâṇa here should be explained as meaning the Jìva in which the Prâṇa has entered.

(Siddhânta).—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 5.

भूतेषु तच्छूतेः ॥ ४ । २ । ४ ॥

मृत्यु, Bhûteşu, in the elements. तद् Tad, about that. मुत: Śruteḥ, there being a Vedic statement.

5. (The individual Soul, with Prâna, merges into) the elements, because there is a scriptural statement to that effect.—505.

COMMENTARY.

The individual soul enters into the five elements and not merely in the tejas. Because in the Bri. Ar. Up. the Jiva is described as entering into all the elements, Ether Air, Tejas, Water, &c., (Bri. Ar. Up., IV. 4. 5).

स वा श्रयमात्मा व्या विद्वानमया मनामयः प्राथमयक्षश्चर्मयः भोत्रमयः पृथिवी-मय श्रापानया वायुमय श्राकाशमयस्तेजामयाऽतेजामयः काममये।ऽकाममयः कोश्रमयाऽको-श्रमया श्रममयोश्यममयः सर्वमयत्त्रयदैतदिदम्मयोऽदे।मय इति यथाकारी यथाश्वारी तथा भवति साञ्जकारी साञ्जर्भवति कपकारी पापा भवति पुष्यः पुष्येन कर्माखा सवति पापः

पापेन ॥ स्रथा करवाहुः काममय पवार्य पुरुष इति स यथाकामा भवति तत्कतुर्भेवति यत्कतुर्भवति तत्कमं कृषते यत्कमं कृषते तद्भिसम्पर्यते ॥ ५ ॥

"That Self is indeed Brahman, consisting of knowledge, mind, life, sight, hearing, earth, water, wind, ether, light and no light, desire and no desire, anger and no anger, right or wrong, and all things. Now as a man is like this or like that, according as he acts and according as he behaves, so will he be:—a man of good acts will become good, a man of bad acts, bad. He becomes pure by pure deeds, bad by bad deeds."

"And here they say that a person consists of desires, and as is his desire, so is his will; and as is his will, so is his deed; and whatever deed he does, that he will reap."

The above Sruti clearly declares that the Jiva is not only Tejomaya (consisting of light), but Âkâsamaya, Vâyumaya, &c. In fact, it consists of all elements.

Moreover the next sûtra strengthens this argument.

sotra iv. 2 e. नैकस्मिन्दर्शयतोहि ॥ ४ । २ । ६ ॥

न, Na, not. व्यक्तिन्, Ekasmin, in one. वर्णवतः Daráayatah, they both (the question and the answer) show. दि, Hi, because.

6. The individual soul does not enter in one element only, because the question and the answer both declare it to the contrary.—506.

COMMENTARY.

It should not be considered that the Jiva is merged in the single element of Tejas only. Because the contrary is mentioned in the question and answer between Svetaketu and Pravahana in the Chh. Up. (Adhyaya V, Khandas 3-10, see pages 422-425 ante). This fact has been established by the author of the sutras in his previous sutra, III. 1. 1 (page 426). Similarly, the merging of the Prana into various elements, like Tejas and the rest, is not directly, but in conjunction with the individual soul, and this is the fact established by the previous sutras.

Adhikarana V.

Now another question arises with regard to the above text of the Chh. Up. (VI. 8. 6) which was the subject of consideration in the preceding six sûtras.

(Doubt).—The doubt that arises here is the following:—Does the soul of the wise, as well as that of the person who does not know Brahman, follow this particular method of going out of the body, or is it confined only to the soul of the man who does not know Brahman.

(Pûrvapakea).—The Pûrvapakein maintains that the ignorant only go out by the method previously described, for the wise do not follow this method of departure, as is shown in the following Sruti of the Bri. Ar. Up. (1V. 4. 7.)

यदा सर्वे प्रमुख्यन्ते कामा येऽस्य हदि भिताः ॥ चय मर्खोऽस्तो भवत्यच ब्रह्म समस्त्रत इति ॥

When all those worldly desires that cling to the Antahkarana are entirely given up (and spiritual desires sprin; up) then the mortal becomes immortal, then he enjoys here Brahman.

{This verse describes the state attained through the special grace of God. It looks very much like a state of physical immortality or Jivan-mukti}.

The word Atra in the above verse shows, that the wise man enjoys the immortality here, in this very life; and does not require to go out of the body, in order to enjoy the bliss of Mukti.

(Siddhânta).—'This view is set aside in the next sûtra. sûtra IV. 2.7.

समाना चास्रुत्युपक्रमारमृतत्वं चानुपोष्य ॥ ४ । २ । ७ ॥

सनामा Samana, common. च Cha, indeed. सास्ति Āsriti, proceeding further, up to the way. उपज्ञात Upakramat, before beginning. अनुत्रस्य Amritatvam, immortality. च Cha, and. सनुभूष्य Anuposya, without burning, without dissolution.

7. Indeed common (to him who knows and him who does not know) (is the departure) up to the beginning of the way; and the immortality (of Br. Up., IV. 4. 7) is (a metaphorical one) without having burned (the connection with the body).—507

Of the two "Cha's" to be found in the above sûtra the first has the force of indeed. He who does not know and he who knows, have both this in common, that their method of going out is the same, upto the point from which the path commences. In other words, up to the soul's entering into the arteries through which it has to go out. Of course, there is difference at the time of entering and onward, when they have once entered these arteries. He who does not know (Ajña) has to enter one of the hundred arteries that proceed from the heart downwards. But he who knows (Vijña) goes out by that artery which is one hundred and first and which rises from the heart and pierces the crown of the head. Thus the Chh. Up. declares (VIII. 6. 6):—

हातं वैका च हदयस्य नाडास्तासां मूर्धानमभिनिम्वतेका । तयार्थमायचस्रतत्व-मेति विव्यक्तम्या डत्कमचे भवन्युत्कमचे भवन्ति ॥ ६॥

6. There are a hundred and one vessels of the heart, and the chief of them (proceeding from the heart) pierces through the head. By that one going upwards, he obtains deathlessness. The others are for the purpose of carrying the soul to diverse other lokas.

[It is only when the soul passes out of the Brahma Nadî that there is Release].

It is about this passage of the soul through the coronal artery that the mention is made also in the Bri. Ar. Up. (IV 4. 2.)

तस्य हैतस्य हृद्यस्यामं प्रचोतते तेन प्रचोतेनैष चात्मा निकामित बश्चुहो वा मूर्जो बाङ्येभ्यो वा शरीरवेशेभ्यः ॥

"The point of his heart becomes lighted up, and by that light the Self departs, either through the eye, or through the skull or through other places of the body."

This going out through the skull, mentioned in the above passage, contemplates the case of the one who knows (Vijña), while he who does not know (Vijña) goes out through other passages, such as eyes, ears etc. As regards the Bri Âr. text (IV. 4. 7.) declaring that he who knows gets the immortality even here; that applies to the wise man (Vijña) who has still connection with the body, and whose such connection has not been burnt up and dissolved. The immortality referred to in the Bri. Âr. (IV. 4. 7.) denotes, therefore, the destruction of earlier sins and the non-clinging of later acts, which come to him who knows the Lord.

The above is further explained in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 8.

तदापीतेः संसारब्यपदेशात् ॥ ४ । २ । ८ ॥

तपू Tad, that (immortality). चापीते: Aptteh till he has acquired direct knowledge or union with Brahman. संसार Samsara, as Samsara. व्यवदेशान् Vyapadesat, the state being named.

8. That (immortality mentioned in Bri. År., IV. 4. 7., refers to this sinlessness of the saint) because the Scripture teaches that the condition of the Samsâra lasts (up to the time of the realisation of Brahman).—508.

COMMENTARY.

The "immortality" mentioned above refers to this condition of sinlessness, belonging to him who knows (Vijña), but whose connection with the body has not yet been dissolved. Why do we say so? Because up to attaining Brahman, the texts describe Samsara state. Up to the time of the realisation of Brahman, tho man is in Samsara, the characteristic of which is connection with the body. The realisation or direct vision of Brahman takes place only when the man reaches, through Devâyana path, the highest heaven of Brahman called the Samvyoma. And this never takes place before the dissolution of the soul's connection with the body.

BÙTRA IV. 2. 9.

सुक्ष्मप्रमाणतश्च तथोपलब्धेः ॥ ४ । २ । ६ ॥

9. And the subtle body still persists, because of an authority of the Scripture, and because the existence of the body is actually observed even in the higher planes.—509.

COMMENTARY.

The connection with a body (whether gross or subtle) is not dissolved, so long as the Vidvån (the man who knows) exists in this world (whether the world be physical or any higher and subtler plane). That which constitutes his subtle body still persists and goes with the man, after his throwing off his physical body. Why? Because there is an authority to that effect in the scriptures. In the Kausitaki Upanisad (I. 3.) there is a colloquy with the Moon and others held by the departed soul of the Vidvån. From this conversation we infer that some sort of body must persist, at that stage, to enable the soul to hold conversation with the Moon and others. For it is a matter of observation, that no conversation can be held without a body. Therefore, when the Bri. År. (IV. 4-7) states that he becomes immortal even here, it means that sort of immortality which every sinless man enjoys, even without the dissolution of his connection with a body.

80TRA IV. 2. 10.

नोपमर्देनातः॥ ४।२।१०॥

न Na, not. उपन्देन Upamardena, in the way of destruction of bondage. सत: Atah, because of this reason.

10. Hence the text of the Bri. År. Up. should not be taken to teach the destruction of the connection of the physical body. -- 510.

COMMENTARY.

It thus appears that the text of the Bri. År. (IV. 4. 7) cannot teach that sort of immortality which consists in the destruction of connections with a body. It teaches immortality of mental peace, enjoyed by all good men.

SÖTRA IV. 2. 11.

तस्यैवचोपपत्तेरूष्मा ॥ ४ । २ । ११

सस्य Tasya, of that very (subtle body.) एव Eva, verily. च Cha, and, उपपन्ति: Upapatteh, it being possible. इस्ता Ûşmâ, the heat. 11. And to that very subtle body belongs the warmth (which is perceived on touch), because that is reasonable.—511.

COMMENTARY.

The warmth which is observed on touching the gross body, before the man dies, belongs really to the subtle body, and is an attribute of the subtle body, and not of the gross body. Why? Because it is only reasonable. So long as the subtle body is in the physical body, we perceive that the latter is hot, but when there takes place the separation of the subtle from the gross, we do not perceive this warmth in the gross body. Therefore, the presence or the absence of the warmth of the gross body, depends on its connection or disconnection with the subtle body. Therefore, it is reasonable to hold that the warmth belongs to the subtle body, and not to the gross body. The word cha, in the sûtra, indicates that this is an additional reason for holding that the Vidvân also goes out of the body, at the time of death. Because in the case of the Vidvân also, we find that at the time of death, his body becomes cold, indicating that he also goes out of the body, accompanied by the subtle body.

In the next sûtra the author himself raises a doubt and then answers it.

BÛTRA IV. 2. 12.

प्रतिषेधाविति चेन्न शारीरात् ॥ ४ । २ । १२ ॥

मतिवेषात् Pratisedhat, on account of the denial. इति Iti, so. चेत् Chet, if. न Na, not. शारीपात् Sarirat, because departure from the embodied soul (is prohibited.)

12. If it be said that he who knows does not go out of the body, on account of the prohibition, then we reply, that it is not so; because the prohibition refers to the going out of the Prânas from the embodied soul.—512.

COMMENTARY.

It is objected that the Vidvan does not go out of the body, because there is a prohibition to that effect in Bri. At. (IV. 4. 6):—

श्रयाकामयमाना ये। ज्ञामा निष्काम श्राप्तकाम श्राप्तकामा न तस्य श्राप्त उत्का-मन्ति व्याय सन् व्याप्येति ।

"But as to the man who does not desire, who, not desiring, free from desires, is satisfied in his desires, or desires the Self only, his vital spirits do not depart elsewhere, being like Brahman, he goes to Brahman."

The above verse shows, by using the word Tasya Prauah that the lifebreath of him, who knows, do not go out. To this objection we reply that the above sentence does not say, "Na tasya Prana dehât utkramanti," [his life-breaths do not go out of the body (dehat)] but it really means, "Na tasya Prana sârirât utkramanti" (his life-breaths do not go out from the soul). (Sarirat means soul, or that which has a body.) Therefore, the prohibition is to the going out from the soul, and not from the body. For as a matter of fact, it is observed, that the life-breaths of the Vidvan even go out of the body.

SÛTRA. IV. 2. 18.

स्पष्टोद्येकेषाम् ॥ ४ । २ । १३ ॥

13. And because it is clear according to some recensions.—513.

COMMENTARY.

There is no scope for controversy in this matter. Because "Na tasya Prana utkramanti" is the reading in the Kanva recension of the Bri. Ar. Upanisad; but in another recension, namely, those of the Madhyandinas, the reading is "Na tasmat Prana utkramanti," "from him the life-breaths do not go out." The word Tasmat, meaning "from him," is a very clear term, and leaves no room for doubt that the prohibition applies to the going out of the Prana from the soul. The Bri. Ar. text means that the Prana of the wise man never leave the soul. It does not mean that they never leave the body. The next sentence "Atraiva samavaliyante" means "these Pranas merge indeed in that." The word Atra, "in that," means in Brahman, the object of attainment.

(Objection).—In the previous section of the Bri. År. in the dialogue between Årtabhåga and Yåjñavalkya, there is also a statement that the Prånås do not pass out of the body. The objector says, how do you explain that statement? We give the passage here below:—(Bri. År., III. 2,10 & 11).

याज्ञवरूपेति देशाच यदिव्छं सर्वं सृत्योरकं का स्किता वस्ता सृत्युरक्ष-मित्यप्तिर्वे सृत्युः सोऽपामक्षमप पुनर्सृ त्युं जयति ॥ १० ॥ याज्ञवरूपेति देशाच यत्राव्यं पुक्तो ज्ञियत व्यक्षात्माकाः क्राम्म्त्यादे। ३ नेति नेति देशाच याज्ञवरूपेऽत्रेव समक्ती-वन्ते स वच्छ्रयत्यादमायत्याद्माते। सृतः दोते ॥ ११ ॥

- "Yājāwalkya," he said "everything is the food of death. What then is the delty to whom death is food?"
  - "Fire (Agni) is death, and that is the food of water. Death is conquered again."
- "Yājāavalkya" he said, "when such a person (a sage) dies, do the vital breaths (Prāṇas) move out of him or No?" "No," replied Yājāavalkya, "they are gathered up in him, he swells, he is inflated, and thus inflated, the dead lies at rest."

The above is the Kanva reading. The sense of the question is this. Artablaga asked Yajdavalkya, "when this God-knowing man dies, then do his life-breaths (Pranas) go out from this (Asmat), namely, from this body." In other words, "does he go out along with the Pranas from the coronal artery, from the crown of the head, or does he remain in the body so long as it does not fall off and then goes away." To this question, Yajdavalkya replies, that the Pranas of such a sage remain in the body, so long as the body does not fall off. Such a sage remains in the body, and his body swells up, being inflated with the external air. Thus inflated, the dead man lies at rest. Thus experiencing the Pranabha fruit in the shape of the swollen, inflated body, the sage leaves such body to his sons and kinsmen and gets Mukti at once. This is the difficult text propounded for solution to those who maintain the view that the Pranas of the sage always leave the body.

The reply to this is that the above text mentions a very exceptional case, the case of those ardent, impatient, lovers of God. Such persons do not pass through the above process of death, the Lord Hari himself stands near them at the time of death, and freeing them from the body, takes them at once with him to his home. The pranas, of course, in such a case do not follow the soul. They remain behind in the body.

The followers of Advaitam explain the above text in the following way:—This non-departure of the Prâna from the body refers to the case of those who worship the unqualified Brahman.

But that explanation is wrong. Because there are no such words in the above text to indicate that it applies to those who meditate on unqualified Brahman. Secondly we have already demonstrated that unqualified Brahman is a fiction.

The whole argument of the Advaitins is thus given by Sankaracharya in his commentary on (IV. 2. 18):—

"The assertion that also the soul of him who knows Brahman departs from the body, because the denial states the soul (not the body) to be the point of departure, cannot be unheld. For we observe that in the sacred text of some there is a clear denial of a denseture, the starting-point of which is the body. The text meant at first records the question asked by Artabhaga. "When this man dies, do the vital spirits depart from him or not?" then embraces the alternative of non-departure, in the words, No. replied Yājñavalkya; thereupon anticipating the objection that a man cannot be dead as long as his vital spirits have not departed, teaches the resolution of the pranas in the body "in that very same place they are merged; and finally, in confirmation thereof, remarks, "he swells, he is inflated, inflated the dead man lies." This last clause states that swelling, &c., affect the subject under discussion, vis., that from which the departure takes place (the "tasmat of the former clause," which subject is, in this last clause, referred to by means of the word "Re." Now swelling and so on can belong to the body only, not to the embodied soul. And owing to its equality thereto also the passages "from him the vital spirit do not depart; "in that very same place they are resolved (have to be taken as denying a departure starting from the body, although the chief subject of the passage is the embodied soul. This may be done by the embodied soul and the body being viewed as non-different. In this way we have to explain the passage if read with the fifth case,"

SÛTRA IV. 2. 14.

स्मर्यते च ॥ ४।२।१४॥

Smaryate, it is mentioned in the Smritis. Tha, and.

14. Smriti also declares the same—514.

COMMENTARY.

In a Smriti (Yājñavalkya Smriti, III. 167) there is a declaration that the soul of the Vidvan departs by means of the coronal artery through the head.

ऊर्दमेकः स्वितस्तेषां या मित्वा सूर्यमञ्जलम् । इद्यक्षेत्रकमतिकम्य तेन याति परा गतिम् ॥

"Of those, one is situated above, which pierces the disc of the sun and passes beyond the world of Brahman, by way of that, the soul reaches the highest goal."

Thus the Sruti and Smriti establish the proposition that the wise also depart from the body, accompanied by the Pranas.

Adhikarana VI.

It has been mentioned above that the individual soul accompanied by the Prâna and the group of sense-organs merges into the subtle elements like heat and the rest at the time of departure. It has further been established that this is the method of departure even of him who knows. Now a new doubt is raised.

(Noubt).—The Prânas like the speech and the rest together with their vehicles, the subtle elements, belonging to the wise sage, merge in their respective causes like fire, &c., or in the Supreme Self.

(Parvapaksa).—The Pürvapaksin maintains that the organs of the Pranas merge in their respective causes and not in the Supreme Self because of the text, "Yatrasya purusasya" shows that the Pranas and the senses merge in their causes. We give the passage below (Bri. Ar., III. 2 13.):—

याइवल्क्येति होवाच यत्रास्य पुरुषस्य मृतस्याग्निं बागण्येति वार्त प्रावध्यश्चरा-दित्यं मनधन्द्रं दिशः भोत्रं पृथिवीधः शरीरमाकाशमात्मीषधीक्षेमानि वनस्पतीन्केशा स्रव्यु होहिनं च रेतथा निधीयते कायं तदा पुरुषा भवतीत्याहर सोम्य हस्तमार्तमागावा-मेवैतस्य वेदिष्याचा न नावेतत् स जन शति ता होत्कस्य मन्त्रयांचकाते ता ह यद्चतुः कर्म हैव तंत्र्चतुर्थ यत्प्रशाशक्षतुः कर्म हैव तत्प्रशाशक्षततुः पुष्या व पुष्येन कर्मचा भवति पापः पापेनेति ततो ह जारत्कारच द्यार्तमाग उपरश्चम ॥ १३॥

"Yijnavalkya," he said, "when the speech of this dead person enters into the fire, breath into the air, the eye into the sun, the mind into the moon, the hearing into space, into the earth the body, into the ether the self, into the shrubs the hairs of the body, into the trees the hairs of the head, when the blood and the seed are deposited in the water, where is then that person?" Yajfavalkya said "Take my hand, my friend."

"We two alone shall know of this; let this question of ours not be (discussed) in public." Then these two went out and argued, and what they said was Karman (work) what they praised was Karman," vis., that a man becomes good by good work, and bad by bad work. After that Jaratkarva Artabhaga held his peace."

The above shows distinctly that the senses resolve into their causes, the elements.

(SiddhAnta). - This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 15.

तानि परे तथाद्याष्ट्र ॥ ४ । २ । १५ ॥

साचि Tani, those (the Tejas, and the speech, &c., denoted by them.) के Pare, in the highest Brahman. त्या Tatha, thus: दि Hi, because, आप Åha, says.

15. These (fire and the rest together with the senses) merge in the highest, because the Sruti declares it to be so. —515.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chh. Upanisad (VI. 8. 6.) is said "Tejah parasyâm devetayâm," the tejas in the highest divinity. The word Tejas here includes all the sense-organs, like speech and the rest, together with the Prânas. These merge in Brahman who is the Âtman of all. Because he is the material cause of everything. Why do we say so? Because the above Chh. text "Tejah parâsyam," is a very distinct declaration that the Tejas and the prânas with the senses and their vehicles merge in the highest.

As regard the Bri. År. text (III. 2. 13.) it is to be explained in a metaphorical sense, as has already been mentioned by the author in sûtra III. 1. 40), page 429. For as a matter of fact, no one ever sees the hairs of the body entering into the shrubs or the hairs of the head entering into the trees. The whole of the above Bri. År. passage is a figurative statement.

Adhikarana VII.

Now the author raises another doubt regarding the same topic.

(Doubt).—There has been mentioned before that the Prana and other life-elements of the sage merge in the Supreme Self. Is that merging, a combination by juxta-position, as in the preceding instances of the merging of speech in mind, &c.; or is it a merging by unity of nature, as in the case of the rivers flowing into the sea (Mund., III. 2.8). In other words, do these permanent atoms retain their specific characters when they merge in the Supreme Self or do they become resolved into a homogeneous mass, with the Root of Matter, which constitutes the Achit-Sakti of Brahman.

(Parvapakea).—The Pûrvapakein maintains that these permanent atoms retain their specific characters, even when they are merged in Brahman: and that for two reasons. First, because this is in harmony with the preceding cases of merging. When the permanent atoms of speech, sight, hearing, &c., enter Manas, they do not lose their specific nature; similarly, when the mental atom, in company with the five other atoms of speech, &c., merges in Prâns, it retains its separate nature, why should then Prâna and the rest when they enter into the Supreme Self, (or rather into that aspect of Brahman which is the Achit-Sakti) lose their identities. Secondly, there is no specific statement in the Sruti that they lose their identity. Therefore, it is a merging by way of combination and not identity.

(Siddhânta).—This view is refuted in the nextsûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 2, 16.

म्रविभागो वचनात् ॥ २ । १६ ॥

श्रविज्ञान: Avibhāgaḥ, there is no division or separation. वचनास् Vachanāt, on account of the statement.

16. (The merging of the permanent atoms of Prana and the rest is by way of identity. for) there is no separation, as is stated by an authoritative text.—516.

COMMENTARY.

The merging of the Prana and the rest in the Supreme Self, or rather in that aspect of Him which is Achit-Sakti called Tamas—the Great Darkness, the Root of Matter—is by way of non-separation, that is to say, by way of identity. (The Prana and the permanent atoms are resolved into this Root matter, losing their specific molecular nature). How do we know this? Vachanât—because of a text. In the Prasna Upanişad, VI. 5 we have the following:—

स यथेमा नद्यः स्यम्दमानाः समुद्रायकाः समुद्रं प्राप्यास्तं गच्छन्ति भिद्येते तासां नामक्ये समुद्र इत्येवं प्रोच्यते । पवमेवास्य परिद्रपट्टिमाः वेडहाकसाः पुरुवायकाः पुरुवं प्राप्यास्तं गच्छन्ति भिद्येते तासां नामक्ये पुरुव इत्येवं प्रोच्यते स पवा मकस्रोऽसृतो भवति तदेव स्होकः ॥ ५ ॥

5. As these rapid ocean-going rivers, on reaching the ocean, go to rest, lose their name and form, and are said "they are in the ecean;" so indeed of the Great Beholder, these sixteen Puruga going Principles, on reaching the Puruga, go to rest, losing their name and form, and men say, "They are in the bosom of the Lord,"—He then becomes above all Principles, and the immortal. About it is this verse.—

The above verse shows that the sixteen Kalâs or portions of the body of the soul merge in the Supreme Self, called here the Purusa or the person. [The sixteen Kalâs (permanent parts) are the eleven sense-organs and the five Tanmâtras: or the eleven sense-organs and the five Prâṇas]. It further mentions that they lose their name and form. When these permanent atoms (called sixteen Kalâs) are thus merged in the Root-Matter aspect of Brahman, then the Jiva becomes akalâ or partless, permanent-atom-less, then he becomes immortal. So long as these atoms (Kalâs) retain their name and form, their distinctive nature, the man does not gain immortality.

The sense is this. The subtle body of the sage when he leaves the dense body, though no longer having the power to ensuare the sage in its meshes, yet follows him in his journey towards heaven, for it is burnt up by Vidya, like the burnt up piece of coal, which retains the form of coal but is a mass of ashes. But when the sage goes beyond the cosmic Egg, then this semblance of the subtle body, which was following him so long also falls away from him at the last moment, when the eighth covering of the Egg, the covering of the Pure Prakriti (or the Root Matter) is pierced by the soul. Here the subtle body drops down and is resolved into the matter of the Pure Prakriti. This is the meaning of the symbol that the soul bathes in the river called Viraja or Rajas-less. After this bath, the soul leaving behind the subtle body in the river Viraja, (like the Pilgrim in the famous allegory of Bunyan leaving his burden) proceeds in all its pristine purity, in the Body called Brahma-Vapuli -the Body-Divine created by the mere Will of the Lord, and away from all taints of Prakriti, unites with Brahman, and enjoys the Bliss of Heaven.

Adhikarana VIII.

Now the author commences a new topic, in order to show the difference in the methods of going out of body, in the case of the sage and of one who does not know. He had promised to show this difference in a preceding sûtra, and he now goes to fulfill that promise. In the Chh. Up. (VIII. 6. 6.) as well as in the Katha (VII. 6.) there was a mention of hundred and one arteries by which the soul goes out. The wise go out by the hundred and first artery (the Susumna).

(Doubt).-Now arises the doubt: Is it right to make this restrictive rule that the wise alone go out by the hundred and first artery, while the ignorant leave the body, by any one of the remaining hundred arteries.

(Pârvapakea).—The opponent maintains the view that there can be no such restrictive rule. Because, in the first place, the arteries are very minute; secondly, they are very numerous; and thirdly, they are very difficult of distinction by the soul of the dying. Therefore, whether the man be a sage or an ordinary ignorant person, at the time of death his soul cannot distinguish the proper artery by which it should go out. In fact, the words of the verse "Tayorddham âyan ampitatvam eti" show that by going upwards by anyone of these arteries, the man gets immortality. Therefore, it is not necessary that the man should go out by the hundred and first artery only, but that he may go out by anyone of these arteries; provided that he goes upwards, and not horizontally or downwards.

(Siddhants).—This view is refuted by the author in the next sutra.

तदोकोऽप्रज्वननं तत्प्रकाशितद्वारोविचा सामर्घ्यासच्छेषग-त्यनुस्मृतियोगाच द्वार्वानु ग्रद्दीतः शताधिकया ॥४ । २ । १७॥

त्य Tat, of that, of the soul in which have entered the permanent atoms of speech and the rest कोल: Okah, abode, the heart. व्यान्यका Agra-jvalanam, lighting up of the point, the upper portion of the heart becomes illumined. त्य Tat, by Him, by the Lord dwelling in the heart. व्याक्ति Prakasita, illumined, shown. त्या: Dvarah, the door, the root from which the hundred and first artery has its origin. विद्या-वायव्या Vidya-samarthyat, by the power of its knowledge. त्या Tat, that, that knowledge. त्या प्रव्याक्ति ए the element. त्या Gati, path, the way, the carrying by the Devas called Ativahika on the various stages of that path. व्यवस्था बेवाइ Anusmriti-yogat, because of the application of remembrance. प Cha, and. त्या Harda, (the Lord) who abides in the Heart. व्यवस्था: Anugrihitah, being savoured by, being assisted by. व्यवस्थितव्य Sata-adhikaya, by the one hundred and first artery.

17. Then there takes place a lighting up of the point of His abode, and by the door so illumined by Him, the soul departs through the hundred and first artery, by virtue of the power of his wisdom and by the application of the memory of the path which results from such wisdom, and through the favour of the Lord in the heart.—517.

COMMENTARY.

The wise goes out by the artery called Susumn's, which is the hundred and first artery. Nor does this artery remain undistinguishable by him. Because as soon as the soul, at the time of departing from the body. has withdrawn into itself, all the permanent atoms, beginning with speech up to Prana, there takes place a sudden lighting up of the whole region of the heart, and the soul can at once see the Susumna artery, by which it has to go out. It does so primarily, through the favour of the Lord of the heart, and secondarily, by the power of the Vidya, that it had acquired. and by vitue of the memory of the path, by which it has to travel, knowing from his Vidya (knowledge), that the path of Devayana is one, on which there are various devas, who carry the soul from stage to stage. This memory of the teaching, which was theoretical up to that time, comes to his help at that critical moment. Nor is the word knowledge or "Vidya" of this sûtra, the dry theoretical knowledge, it is knowledge coupled with devotion. A result or Sesa of this Vidya is the memory of the Ativahika devas, who help the soul, to accomplish this journey. It is through the help of these three, namely, through the favour of the Lord Hari dwelling in the heart, through the might of Vidya (devotional knowledge), and through the memory of the Ativahika Devas, that the soul of the wise experiences no difficulty in selecting the proper arters of the heart by which to go out, specially when the whole heart is glowing with the light of the Lord.

Note.—This lighting up of the point of the heart takes place in the case of all souls, whether they be wise or ignorant, but the wise alone can select the Suşumnā artery and not the ignorant.

When the wise soul is thus helped by the Lord of the heart and by his devotion and the memory, then in that glowing light, the Lord points out to the soul, as it were, the hundred and first artery, by which it should go out. Thus the soul comes to know that artery, and goes out by it. This is the path by which the wise go out.

. Adhikarana IX.

In the Chh. Upanisad (VIII. 6. 5) we have the following:-

ग्रथ यत्रैतव्स्माच्छरिरावुक्तामस्ययैतैरेव रहिमभिक्रच माक्रमते स प्रेमिति वा होह्रामीयते स यावत्सिय्येन्मनस्तावदादित्यं गच्छत्येतह्ये कलु छोक्द्रारं विदुषा प्रपदन निरोधोऽविदुषाम् ॥ ५ ॥

तदेष मुशेकः शतक्ष्वका च. इदयस्य नाड्यस्तासां मूर्जानमभिनिःस्तैका तयाज्य-

मायज्ञमृतत्वमेति विष्वङ्ङन्या उत्कमचे भवन्युत्कमचे भवन्ति ॥ ६ ॥

"But when he departs from this body, then he departs upwards by those very rays: or he goes out while meditating on Om. And while his mind is failing, he is going to the sun. For the sun is the door of the world. Those who know, walk in; those who do not know, are shut out." "There is this verse; There are a hundred and one arteries of the heart; one of them penetrates the crown of the head, moving upwards by it a man reaches the immortal; the others serve for departing in different directions, yea, in different directions.

The above verses show that the soul coming out by the coronal artery, follows the rays of the sun and thus reaches the disk of the sun. The words in the original are "Etair eva rasmibhir".—by these very rays.

(Doubt).—Now arises the doubt, that a man dying in the day time can follow the rays of the sun and go to the solar disk. The question is, does the soul of the wise man, who dies in the night, also follow the ray, when there are no rays to follow?

(Pârvapakşa).—The Pûrvapakşin maintains, that there being no rays of the sun at the night time; only that wise man who dies in the day time, can follow the rays and not otherwise. The wise, therefore, must die at a time, when the sun is shining.

(Siddhanta)-This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 18.

रश्म्यनुसारी ॥ ४ । २ । १८ ॥

रश्नि Rasmi, the rays, श्रनुसारी Anusari, following.

18. The wise follows the rays of the sun (whether he dies in day or in night)—518.

COMMENTARY

Whether the wise dies by day or by night, at whatever time he dies, he follows the rays of the sun and goes on those rays to the solar disk. This we say because the Scripture nowhere says that only by dying during the daytime, the soul can follow the rays of the sun and not otherwise.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 19.

निशिनेति चेन्न संबन्धस्य यावदेहुभावित्वाहरीयति च ॥४।२।१६॥

निश्चि Nisi, at night. न Na, not. इति Iti, so. चेह Chet, if. सम्बन्धस्य Sambandhasya, of the relation. बावस् Yavad, as long as देश Deha, the body exists. आपिस्ताल् Bhavitvat, because of the existence. वर्णवाति Darsayati, the Sastras show च Cha, and.

19. If it be objected that one dying in the night cannot follow the rays of the sun, we reply it is not so. Because the connection between the rays and the body persists as long as the body lasts. Scripture also declares this.—519.

COMMENTARY.

If it be objected that a person dying at night cannot follow the rays of the sun, because there is an absence of such rays then, we reply it is not so. Why? Because the connection of the solar rays with the human body is a permanent one, so long as the soul remains in the body. The days and nights may revolve, but this connection of the human ravs (aura) with the solar rays, continues; and it is not a fact that the connection is cut off during the night. Therefore, at whatever time a man dies, the rays being there, the soul can go by it to the solar disk. proof of this connection of the rays of the sun with those of the body is furnished by the fact that bodily heat is perceived both in the winter and in the summer, both in the night and in the day. If the connection were cut off, then owing to the coldness of the winter, there should be no heat in the body. But the bodily heat is perceived not only in summer nights but also in the wintry nights. Nor is this a mere inferential proposition, based upon reasoning alone, but there is scriptural authority for it also. Therefore the sûtra says "darsayati cha." " and scripture also declares this." In the Chh. Upanisad we find it stated in VII. 6. 2, the following:-

तद्यया महापय चातत उमैा प्रामै। गण्डतीमञ्चामुञ्जैवमेवैता चावित्यस्य रहमय उमैा क्षेत्रकै। गण्डन्तीमञ्जा मुञ्जामुष्मादावित्यात्प्रतायन्ते ता चासु नाडीचु छता चाम्यो नाडीभ्यः प्रतायन्ते तेंऽमुष्मिचावित्ये सत्ताः ॥ २ ॥

"As a very long highway goes to two places, to one at the beginning, and to another at the end, so do the rays of the sun go to both worlds, to this one and to the other. They start from the sun and enter into those arteries; they start from those arteries and enter into the sun."

There is another Sruti also to the same effect:

संस्था वा पते रदमयमा नास्त्रमा, नैयां विभागा यावदिवं शरीरं, सत पतैः पद्यत्येतेस्त्रमते पतैः प्रवर्षते ।

These rays and the arteries are verily connected together, and they are newer separated so long as this body is alive. Therefore, through these he sees, through these he goes out, through these he enters into different undertakings.

Therefore, it is an established rule, that the wise follow the rays of the sun, whether they die by night or by day.

Adhikarana X.

Now is discussed a new topic.

(Doubt).—Does the man who knows, get the fruit of Vidyá if he happens to die during the southern progress of the sun or does he not?

(Pûrvapakea).—The opponent maintains the view that the northern progress is the path leading to Brahmaloka, described in both the Sruti and the Schriti. Moreover, we see instances of persons like Bhtsma and others, who waited for the northern progress of the sun for leaving their bodies. Therefore, the sage who dies during the southern progress of the sun does not get to the Brahma world.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

श्चतश्चायनेऽपि विचियो ॥ ४।२।२०॥

SÛTRA IV. 2. 20.

चतः Ataḥ, for this very reason. च Cha, and. चारि Api, also. चले Ayane, in the (southern) progress of the sun. विश्वे Dakṣiṇe, in the southern.

20. For the same reason the sage dying during the southern progress of the sun gets to Brahma world.—520.

COMMENTARY.

"For the same reason" namely, there being absence of partial fruition of Vidya and the exhaustion of obstructive acts by her. Vidya cannot have partial fruit. It must produce its entire result Moreover. it has the power of removing the effect of all obstructive works. For these two reasons also, the sage dying during the southern progress of the sun gets verily the fruit of Vidya and the Pûrvapakşa is consequently not valid. Moreover it will be mentioned further on that the words " northern progress of the sun" do not mean any time, but denote the name of the Ativahika Devas, whose function it is to conduct the soul forward. As regards the case of Bhişma, who put off his death until the beginning of the northern progress, it was because he had got the boon from this father of dying at will, and so he did not die during the southern progress of the sun. Or it may be explained on the ground that Bhisma wanted to promote pious faith and practice and so put off his death until the northern progress of the sun. Therefore, his case is not to the point.

Says an objector; but the Gita is against you. It clearly says in (VIII. 23-27) that if a man wants to get Mukti, he must regulate the time of his death, so that he may die during the northern progress of the sun.

यत्र काले त्वनावृत्तिमावृत्तिः चैव योगिनः। प्रयाता यान्ति तं कालं वस्यामि भरतपैम ॥ २३ ॥

That time wherein going forth Yog's return not, and also that wherein going forth they return, that time shall I declare to thee, O Prince of the Bharatas.

धूमा रात्रिस्तया कृष्यः वण्मासा दक्षिवायनम् । तत्र चानुस्रसं ज्योतिर्योगी प्राप्य निवर्तते ॥ २५ ॥

Smoke, night-time, the dark fortnight also, the six months of the southern path—then the Yogi, obtaining the moonlight, returneth.

शुक्कक्ष्य गती होते जगतः शाश्यते मते । एकया यात्यमावृत्तिमन्ययाऽऽवर्तते पुनः ॥ २६ ॥

Light and darkness, these are thought to be the world's everlasting paths; by the one he goeth who returned not, by the other he who returned again.

नैते स्ती पार्थ जानन्यागी मुद्यति कश्चन । तस्मात्सर्वेषु काछेषु यागयुको भवार्जुन ॥ २७ ॥

Knowing these paths, O Partha, the Yogi is nowise perplexed. Therefore in all times be firm in yoga, O Arjuna.

Here the topic has the subject of time as its commencement, and time being the principal topic which the Lord propounds to teach, we infer that the words day, fortnight, month, etc., are time denoting words and are not the names of Devas and that dying during that time leads to Mukti. The above passage further shows that dying during the night or during the southern porgress of the sun does not lead to Mukti. This doubt is removed by the author in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 2. 21.

योगिनः प्रतिस्मर्यते स्मार्ते चैते ॥ ४ । २ । २१ ॥

विश्वास Yogmah, those devoted to the Brahman. मृति Prati, about. स्वीत Smaryate, is remembered. स्वात Smarte, the two that are worth remembering, dual case. प Cha, and. एते Ete, these.

21. The above text mentions with regard to the Yogins, that these two paths ought to be remembered, (it does not say that a Yogi must die in the one path and not in the other).—521.

COMMENTARY.

The above passage of the Gita only proclaims this fact to Yogins, who are persons devoted to Brahman, that they must remember that the path of the Moon is inferior to the path of the Light. It further tells them that these two paths are worthy of remembrance. It says "knowing these paths, O Partha, the Yogi is no wise perplexed." The above passage, therefore, does not state an injunction for the sage to select special time of death. Moreover, it is wrong to say that the topic begins with the mention of time, and that since the opening sentence refers to time therefore, these words must be taken as meaning time. As a matter of fact the passage opens with the word "fire," and "fire" and "smoke" cannot be called time-names. It is impossible, therefore, to take these words as meaning time. Consequently "fire," "smoke," &c., mean here the Ativahika Devas called "fire," "smoke," etc. That they are Ativahika Devas is mentioned by Bådaråyana himself in his sûtra, IV. 3. 4.

As to the following statement:-

दिवा च गुक्कपसम्ब रचरायबमेद च । मुमुचेता प्रशस्तानि विपरीतन्तु गर्हितम् ॥

The day time, the bright fortnight, and the northern progress of the sun are stated to be the approved times for a man to die, while the times contrary to these are not approved.

This refers to the case of those who have not got wisdom. For an ignorant man the day time, &c., is the best. But he who has got Vidya may verily leave his body at any time, during any season, and surely he will reach the Lord Hari.

THIRD PADA.

यः स्वमातिपयं देवः सेवनामासते। अदेशत्। प्राप्यं च स्वपदं प्रेयान् ममासा श्यामसुन्दरः॥

May that Lord Krisna be the object of my love who is satisfied easily even with the show of devotion, and thus satisfied, shows the soul the path to His abode and the goal it must reach.

Adhikarana I.

In this Pâda are going to be determined the Path which leads to the world of Brahman, and the Goal which is Brahman itself. In the Chh. Up. (IV. 15) we have the following:—

य प्षे। असि पुरुषे। हृश्यत एष आत्मेति होवा बैतद्मृतमभयमेतहृद्धो ति तद्यद्यायां समस्पिवेदिकं वा सिञ्चनित वर्तमंती एव गच्छति ॥ १ ॥ एतर्छ संयद्धाम हृत्याचस्त

एतेन प्रतिपद्यमाना हमं मानवमावतं नार्वतन्ते नार्वतन्ते ॥ ६ ॥ इति पञ्चव द्याः

॥ १५ ॥

"(He said: This Person who is seen in the eye is the Self (called Vámana). This is the Immortal, the Fearless. This is Brahman. Nothing clings to this. Because (such a person resides in the eye) therefore if any one drops melted butter or water on it, it runs away on both sides (and does not cling to the eye).

The wise call Him the Samyadvāma (the Most Beautiful), because all objects of beauty enter into Him. All beautiful objects enter into Him who knows Him thus.

He verily is called Vamani (the Giver of beauty) because He alone gives beauty to all. He who knows Him thus gives beauty to all beings inferior to himself.

He is also Bhāmani (the Resplendent) for He shines in all worlds. He who knows this thus, shines in all worlds.

Now when such persons die, whether (their relations) perform their death ceremonies or not, they go to the plane of the Ray, from the Ray-plane to the Day-plane, from the Day-plane to the Bright-fornightly plane, from the Bright-fornighty plane to the Northern Six-monthly plane, from the Northern six-monthly plane to the Annual plane, then to the sun; from the Solar plane to the Lunar plane, from the Lunar plane to the plane of Lightning. There a Not-human Person approaches them. He leads them to Brahman. This is the path gnarded by the Devas, the path that leads to Brahman. Those who proceed on that path, do not return to this round of humanity, yea they do not return.

This shows that "archis" is the first stage on the path. But we have a different account in the Kausittaki Upanisad (I. 3.) where Agni is mentioned as the first stage—

स पतं देवयानं पन्यानमापचाप्रिक्षेकमागच्छति स वायुक्षेकं स वदवक्षेकं स बाहित्यक्षेकं स इन्द्रक्षेकं स प्रजापतिकाकं स इन्द्रक्षेत्रके ॥

He (at the time of death), having reached the path of the gods, comes to the world of Agni, to the world of Vâyu, to the world of Varuna, to the world of Indra, to the world of Prajápati, to the world of Brahman.

Then there is a third passage in the Bri. Ar. Up. (V. 10) which shows that Vâyu is the first stage on the Devâyana path:—

यदा वै पुरुषा इस्माङ्कोकात्मेति स बायुमागर्स्कात तस्मै स तत्र विजिहीते यथा रथ बक्तस्य कं तेन स ऊर्ज्य बाक्रमते स बादिलमावस्कृति तस्मै स तत्र विजिहीते यथा छम्बरस्य कं तेन स ऊर्ज्य बाक्रमते स बन्दमसमागच्छति तस्मै स तत्र विजिहीते यथा दुम्बुमेः कं तेन स उर्ज्य बाक्रमते स लेकमागस्कर्यशोक्रमहिमं तस्मिन्वसित शाञ्चतीः समाः ॥ १ ॥ इति द्शमं ब्राह्मसम् ॥ १० ॥

When the person goes away from this world he comes to the wind. Then the wind makes room for him like the hole of a carriage wheel, and through it he mounts higher. He comes to the sun. Then the sun makes room for him, like the hole of a Lambara, and through it he mounts higher. He comes to the moon. Then the moon makes room for him, like the hole of a drum, and through it he mounts higher, and arrives at the world where there is no sorrow. There he dwells for eternal years.

While the Mundaka Upanisad (II. 11.) mentions the sun as the first stage on the path:—

तपःश्रद्धे ये श्रूपवसन्त्यरण्ये शान्ता विद्वांसो भैशवर्या चरन्तः ॥ स्येद्वारेख ते विरजाः प्रयान्ति यत्रामृतः स पुरुषा श्रम्ययास्मा ॥ ११ ॥

11. But those who practise meditation and contemplation, in a retired place, tranquil, wise and living on alms, reach through the help of the sun, being free from Rajas, that immortal Person whose essence is unchanging.

And there are other accounts also in other scriptures.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, is the road to Brahman world one, or are they many (one of which being the road beginning with Archis as mentioned in the Chh. Up.)

(Pārvapakea).—The opponent maintains the view that since the roads describe different nature, and because every one says this is the only road, therefore the roads must be different.

(Siddhanta).—The next satra disposes of this view.

BÛTRA IV. 8. 1.

म्रर्चिरादिनातस्त्रथितेः ॥ ४ । ३ । १ ॥

1. The first stage on the Devayana path is Archis, because that is well-known—522.

COMMENTARY.

Every sage goes to the world of Brahman by the path in which Archis is the first. Why do we say so? Because it is well known. In other passages of the Upanişad, also, whenever Devâyâna is described, it commences with Archis. Thus in the Chh. Up. (V. 10. 1) we find Archis mentioned as the first stage of the path.

तच इत्यं विदुर्ये बेमेऽरण्ये भद्धा तप इत्युपासते तैऽर्श्विषमिमसंमबन्यर्थिषे। श्रद्धा चापूर्यमावपक्षमापूर्यमावपक्षाचान्यदुद्ध्यक्षेति मासाध्यसान् ॥ १ ॥ मासेम्यः संबत्सरधः संवत्सरधः संवत्सरधः संवत्सरधः संवत्सरधः वत्समसो विद्युतं तत्युक्षे मानवः स पनानद्धा गमयत्येष वेवयानः ॥

"Those who know this thus, and those who perform works of faith and hardship (altruistically) in some secluded pleasant place go (after death) to Archis, from Archis to day, from day to the light half of the moon, from the light half of the moon to the six months when the sun goes to the north, from the six months when the sun goes to the north to the year, from the year to the sun, from the sun to the moon, from the moon to the lightning. There is the person, the servant of God (Manu) be leads them to Brahman. This is the path of the Devas."

The above passage occurs in the Vidya of the five fires of the Chh. Up. It, therefore, shows that even the worshippers of other Vidyas also go by the path beginning with Archis. In the Brahmatarka also we find the same.

हावेच मागौँ प्रथितावर्षिराविविपश्चिताम् । धुमादिः कर्मिनाम्बेच सर्ववेदविनिकेयातः ॥

'There are only two paths well established and well known; that which commences with Light for the passage of the wise and that which commences with smoke for the passage of those who perform (sacrificial) acts.

This being so whenever a different path is mentioned, there also we must supply the deficiency from other texts, in the same way as we did in the case of the attributes of the Lord, for though the subject matter may be different, the Vidyå is one. Therefore, all texts must be construed as commencing with Archirâdi, otherwise there would be split in the sentence.

Adhikarana.

Now the author, in order to show that the stages of Vayu, etc. mentioned in other texts, are to be combined with Archis, begins a new stars. In the Kauşitski passage given above, we have it stated that "he comes to the world of Agni, to the world of Vayu &c." The whole passage is repeated below. (Kau. Up. I. 3.):—

"He (at the time of death) having reached the path of the gods, comes to the world of Agni, to the world of Vayu, to the world of Varuna, to the world of Indra, to the world of Prajapati, to the world of Brahman."

(Doubt.)—Here arises the doubt, should the stages of Vâyu and the rest mentioned above, be inserted in the Archirâdi path, or should they not.

(Parcapakea).—The opponent holds the view that they should not be so inserted, because they are read in certain order, and because no option is allowed to make any such addition.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is controverted in the next sutra.

Note.—The three texts, one from the Chh. Up., one from the Kauşitaki Up. and the third from the Bri. Up., began the description of the path with three different words, "Archis," "Agni" and "Vâyu." In order to harmonise them, it is shown that the path really commences with Archis; and Agni and Sûrya are but different modes of Archis, while Vâyu also comes in on the path, but at a later stage. To understand the discussion, we may anticipate matters and say that there are twelve (or according to another calculation) thirteen stages on the path. After the soul has entered the coronal artery it successively passes (or rather is conducted by the Devas of) the following stages:—

- 1. Archis, the Deva of light.
- 2. Dinam, the Deva of day.
- 3. Suklapakṣam, the Deva of the Bright-fortnight.
- 4. Uttarayanam, the Deva of the northern progress of the sun.
- 5. Samvatearam, the Deva of the year.
- Devalokam, the world of the Devas: (the same as Vayuloka, according to some.)
- 7. Vayu, the world of Vayu.
- 8. Adityam, the world of the sun.
- 9. Chandram, the world of the moon.
- 10. Vidyut, the world of lightning.
- 11. Varunam, the world of water.
- 12. Indram, the world of Indra.
- 13. Prajapati, the world of Prajapati or of the four-faced Brahma.

No single passage of the Upanisad gives all these thirteen stages; but they are arrived at by collating different passages scattered in various Upanisads. This is what the author of the sûtras has done.

SÛTRA. IV. 8. 2.

वायुमब्दादविशेषविशेषाभ्याम् ॥ ४ । ३ । २ ॥

बाह्य Vayum, the Vayu, or the wind, सम्बाद Abdad, before entering into the great Sun. (Abda, a year, hence the Sun and Great Sun, the Lord). विशेष Avidesa, owing to non-specification. विशेषा-वास् Videsabhyam, and owing to specification.

2. The stage of Vâyu comes after the Year, because there are non-specification and specification.—523.

COMMENTARY.

In the path beginning with Archis, the stage of Vayu is to be inserted after the Samvatsaram, and before the Aditya. Why? Because there is no specification in the Kausitaki Upanisad, it is merely said "he comes to the world of Agni, he comes to the world of Vâyu." There is no specification where this VAyu world comes in. The Sruti merely says "He comes to this world, he comes to that world," without mentioning any "order of succession." But the passage of the Bri Ar. Up. (V. 10) gives specific succession. It shows that the world of Vâyu comes, before the world of the sun, for it says "When a person goes away from this world, he comes to Vâyu. The Vâyu makes room for him, like the hole of a carriage wheel and through it he mounts higher, he comes to the sun." Thus while the Kausttaki Upanisad gives no specification where the Vavuloka comes in, and the Bri. Ar. gives the specification that it comes in before the sun, so combining the non-specification of the one. with the specification of the other, we place Vayuloka before the world of the sun. This being so, the passage in the Bri. Ar. which says that from the months he goes to the Devaloka and from the Devaloka he goes to the Adityaloka should be interpreted in accordance with the above. The Devaloka there must be interpreted as meaning the world of The text of the Bri. Ar. Up. is to be found in VI. 2. 15:-

ते य प्रवमेतद्विदुर्ये बामी ग्ररण्ये श्रद्धां स्वयमुपासते तेऽर्विरिमसंमवन्त्वर्षिवे। ऽहरह जापूर्यमावपसमापूर्यमावपसाचान्वणमासानुदङ्डादित्व प्रति मासेभ्यो देवलेकं देवलेकाकादादित्यमादित्वाद्वेयुतं तान्वैयुतान्युरुवे। मानस प्रत्य व्यवलेकान् गमयति तेषु

"Those who thus know this (even Grihasthas), and those who in the forest worship faith and the True (Brahman Hiranyagarbha), go to light (Archia), from light to day, from day to the increasing half, from the increasing half to the six months when the sun goes to the north, from those six months to the world of the Devas (Devaloka), from the world of the Devas to the sun, from the sun to the place of lightning. When they have thus reached the place of lightning, a spirit comes near them, and leads them to the worlds of the Brahman. In these worlds of Brahman they dwell exalted for ages. There is no returning for them."

The Devaloka mentioned in the above passage of the Bri. Ar. Up. should be understood as meaning the Vâyuloka. Because we have a text saying:—"That which is Vâyu is indeed the home of the Devas." Therefore Vâyu being the home of the Devas, is Devaloka.

But others say that Devaloka itself is a stage on the path and it comes after the Samvatsara and before the Vâyuloka. This Devaloka is not to be inserted between the six months and the year, because the Uttarâyana naturally leads to the year, and their connection is well-known. Therefore the Devaloka and the Vâyuloka are both to be inserted after the Samvatsaram and before the Aditya.

Now the author discusses the following verse of the Kausttaki Upanisad. (I. 3) already given before:—

"He comes to the world of Varupa, to the world of Indra, to the world of Prajapati."

(Doubt).—Whether the Varunaloka mentioned in the above, is to be inserted in the Devayana path beginning with Archis and if it is a stage in this Archiradi path, where does it come in? Is it to be inserted in this series? If so, where?

(Pûrvapakea).—The Pûrvapakein maintains that Varunaloka is not to be inserted as a stage on the Archirâdi path, because there is nothing in the text to indicate where this is to be inserted.

(Siddhanta).—The right view however is, that the world of Varuna is to be inserted after the world of Lightning, because Lightning and water are intimately connected. And this is shown in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. S. S.

तिडतोऽधिवरुणः सम्बन्धात् ॥ १ । ३ । ३ ॥

वरित: Taditah, of the lightning. चापि Adhi, above, वहवा: Varuņah, Varuņa, सम्बन्धाव Sambandhât, this being the relation.

3. The world of Varuna is above that of Lightning, because of the intimate connection between them.—524.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chh Up. (IV. 15. 5) already quoted before, it was said that from the plane of moon, he goes to the plane of lightning. It is after this plane of lightning mentioned there, that the plane of Varuna is to be inserted. Why so? Because lightning is connected with water, as we see that after lightning, it generally rains. There is a Sruti also to the effect that when the quick lightnings play in the bosom of clouds, accompanied by the deep sound of thunder, then the waters fall and people say "it lightens, it thunders, it will rain."

The connection of Varuna, the king of waters, with lightnings is a well-known connection.

Above the world of Varuna are to be placed the worlds of Indra and Prajapati, because there is no other place where to insert them, and because the text of the Kauşîtaki Upanişad has read them in that order.

Thus on the Archirâdi path, beginning with Archis and ending with Prajâpati, there are twelve stages, if Devaloka be considered the same as Vâyuloka, or thirteen stages, if it be considered a separate loka. This is the well-known Devayâna path.

Adhikarana IV.

Having discussed the various names "Archis" and the rest, the author now takes up the question as to what are really these "Archis, etc."

(Doubt).—Are they landmarks on the path, or are they persons standing on the path and watching it, or are they conductors of the wise sage to the heavenly world?

(Parvapakṣa).—The opponent maintains the view that the light (Archis), etc., are landmarks, because the text shows that they are landmarks. As in worldly life, a path is described to a man by certain landmarks, such as "in going to such and such a city, you will first come across a river, then a hill, then a village where a large number of cows are kept," &c.; so the descriptions in the Upaniṣads are mere landmarks, showing what are the various things which the soul comes across, on its way heavenwards. Or the word "light" and the rest, may mean certain individuals, bearing those names, because the text gives the names expressly.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

SÛTRA IV. 8. 4.

श्रातिवाहिकास्तिष्ठिङ्गातु ॥ ४ । ३ । ४ ॥

चातिचादिकाः Ativahikaḥ, conductors, ati=best, √vah=carry. तह् Tat, that. बिहान् Lingat, being indicated.

4. The words Archis and the rest are the names of the Âtivâhika Devas or conductors of the soul, because of the indicatory mark in the text.—525.

COMMENTARY.

The Archis and the rest are divinities, appointed by the Supreme Person, to conduct the soul along the stages of the path. They are neither landmarks, nor individuals. Why? Because of the indications contained in the Chh. Up. itself. That they are conductors, leading the soul, we find from that passage of the Chh. Up. where after describing lightning, it says "There is a person not human, he leads them to Brahman." Here the last person called the Amanava Purusa is expressly stated as the person who leads or conducts the soul to Brahman. He, therefore, is expressly an Ativahika or a conducting divinity. Therefore, the others mentioned in the same series with him, are also to be understood to be Ativahikas or conductors—each one of them conducting the soul a stage forward. Thus there are thirteen Ativahika Devas or conducting divinities.

The next sutra further strengthens the view that these are neither landmarks nor indivduals, but conductors only.

Note.—The last person is called "not human," implying thereby that the beings mentioned before are "human." Are they the different grades of human Invisible helpers of the modern Theosophists?

BÛTRA IV. 8. 5.

उभय व्यामोहात्तत्सिद्धेः ॥ ४ । ३ । ४ ॥

इत्रम Ubhaya, in both. व्यानोद्दात् Vyamohat, owing to the confused, untenable तृत Tat, that. शिक्षे: Siddheh, being established.

5. That they are conductors is established on the ground of both other alternatives being (untenable, since) confused.—526.

COMMENTARY.

Those who die in the night time cannot have connection with the day, etc., and consequently they cannot have connection with light or Archis etc. Therefore archis and the rest cannot be the landmarks, more so as they are not fixed. Moreover light and the rest being unintelligent objects and incapable of being guides, cannot be individuals. Since both these views are open to objections, it follows that the third view, namely, that they are conducting divinities, is the right view, as established by the Scriptures.

Note.—A man dying in the night time cannot have connection with the day, so if "day" be a landmark, then to such a man it is no landmark. Similarly, if a man dies in the day time of the new-moon day, he can have no connection with the moon, because there is no moon visible then. To such a man the "moon" cannot be a landmark. Moreover, landmarks are permanent immoveable things, while these are constantly changing, so they cannot be landmarks. Nor can they be persons, because they are unintelligent objects. Therefore, they must be taken in the sense of conducting divinities.

Adhikarana V.

(Doubt).—The question next to be answered is, whether the Amanava Purusa, the Not-human Being appointed by the Supreme Person, comes down to the plane of Archis, to carry the soul of the devotees upwards, or does he come down only upto the plane of Vidyut (Lightning)?

(Pûrvapakşa).—The opponent holds the view, that since there are instances of the messengers of the Lord coming down even up to the Physical plane, to carry the souls of persons like Ajâmila, and the rest, to heaven, it is natural to suppose that the non-human conductor comes down as a rule, up to the plane of Archis. In fact, this messenger of the Lord welcomes the soul at the very entrance, as soon as it goes out of the physical and steps into the non-physical.

(Siddhanta).—This view is refuted in the next sutra.

BÛTRA IV. 8. 6.

वेद्युतेनेव ततस्तच्छूतेः ॥ ४ । ३ । ६ ॥

विद्याल Vaidyutena, by that (not-human person) who has reached the lightning. एव Eva, indeed. त्रतः Tatab, then, after one has reached Lightning. त्यू Tat, for that. भूते: Sruteh, because of the Vedic text.

6. (When the soul has reached "Lightning") then (it is carried to Brahman) by the (Amanava Purusa) who comes down to "Lightning" (to receive it). Because such is the Sruti-527.

COMMENTARY.

"Then" namely, after the soul has reached Lightning, the sage is carried to Brahman by "Vaidyuta," namely, by the messenger of the Lord who has come down to the Lightning. Why do we say so? Because of the Sruti text. In the Chh. Up., IV. 15. 5, it is expressly said that the souls go from the moon to the lightning: and then a not-human person takes them to Brahman. No doubt, between the plane of lightning and Brahman there are three planes of Varuna, Indra and Prajapati. But these three help this Amanava Purusa, who comes down to Lightning, and thus they also take part, though in a subordinate way, in carrying the soul.

Note.—When the soul reaches the plane of Lightning, the messenger of the Lord somes down to conduct the soul. Varuna, Indra and Prajapati also help such messenger.

This is the general method. There are exceptions to it, as we find in the case of Ajâmila, when the messengers of the Lord came down to earth even, to receive the soul of that dead sinner. But that is not the rule.

Adhikarana VI.

Having thus described the road, the author now intends to describe the goal to which the road leads.

(Visaya).—The Chh. Up, IV. 15. 5, says "this not-human person carries them to Brahman." On this text, the author first gives the opinion of the sage Bâdari.

(Doubt).—Does this not-human person lead the souls to the Supreme Brahman? Or to the effected Brahman, i.e., the four-faced Brahma.

(Parrapaksa).—The opponent maintains the view that the word "Brahman" principally denotes the Supreme Brahman, and not the effected Brahman. The Scripture also says that the sage who comes by the Suşumna artery, gets immortality. Therefore the word Brahman used in the Chh. Up. (V. 15. 5.) must mean the Supreme Brahman, and no inferior Being.

(Siddhanta).—This view, however, is not the opinion of the sage Badari, as is shown in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA. IV. 8. 7.

कार्यं बादरिरस्यगत्युपपत्तेः ॥ ४ । ३ । ७ ॥

कार्वज् Karyam, the effect, बाबरि: Badarih, Badari holds. ब्रस्य Asya, of this (effect) गति Gati, of going. ब्यूपने: Upapatteh, being possible.

7. According to the sage Bâdari, the Amânava Puruşa leads the souls to the effected Brahman; because such Brahman alone can possibly be the goal.—528.

COMMENTARY.

The sage Bâdari opines that the Amânava Purusa carries the souls only to the four-faced Brahmâ, the Kârya Brahman, the effected Brahman. Why? Because this Kârya Brahman, being a personal and limited entity, can become very well the goal of a path. The Supreme Brahman being sverywhere, in every place, cannot be said to be the goal of anybody.

SUTRA IV. 3. 8.

8. And because there is a specification as regards the Brahman (showing that Brahmâ) is the goal.—529.

COMMENTARY.

In the Chh. Up. (VIII. 14. 1.) it is expressly mentioned that the soul comes to the home of Prajapati, the specific mention of the word

Vesma (hall or home) as well as the name Prajapati shows that the effected Brahman (the four-faced Brahma) is the goal, to which the souls are carried by the not-human messengers of the Lord.

9. But that designation of Mukti is given when a man reaches the Brahmâ-world, because that is a form of Sâmtpya Mukti.—530.

COMMENTARY.

In the Bri. Ar. Up. (VI. 2.15), we have:—

तान्वेयुतान्युक्वो मानस यत्य म्हाक्रीकान् गमयति तेषु महाक्रीकेषु पराः परावती क्सन्ति तेषां न युक्तावृत्तिः ॥ १५ ॥

"When they have thus reached the place of lightning, a spirit comes near them, and leads them to the worlds of the (conditioned) Brahman. In these worlds of Brahman they dwell exalted for ages. There is no returning for them."

The non-return mentioned here is not absolute Mukti, but release at the time when the four-faced himself gets Mukti. The wise sage goes to the four-faced Brahmâ and remains in his world till the latter gets Mukti. And thus there is no return, for he enters into the Supreme Brahman when Brahmâ enters in him. When is that time of the entering of the Brahmâ into the Supreme? The next sûtra gives an answer to this.

BÛTRA IV. 3, 10.

10. When the effected world passes away, together with its ruler, the souls go from the four-faced Brahmâ to the Supreme, because the Scripture uses the word Supreme.—531.

COMMENTARY.

When this effected world, beginning with the physical plane up to the world of four-faced Brahma, and called the cosmic egg, passes away; then the souls, which were dwelling in the world of Brahma, go along with Brahmâ, to Him who is beyond the four-faced, namely, to the Supreme Brahman. The reason of this going along with the four-faced is that there is a scriptural declaration to that effect. In the Tait. Up. (III. 1. 1.) it is said that "the knower of Brahman attains the highest," and it is further said therein that such "a knower enjoys all blessings at one with the omniscient Brahman (Saha Brahmanâ)." The word Brahman of this Tait. Up. (II. 1.) means the four-faced Brahmâ, and it further shows that the liberated spirits get final Mukti, along with the four-faced Brahmâ (Saha Brahmanâ).

BÛTRA IV. 8: 11.

स्पृतेश ॥ ४ । ३ । ११ ॥

स्तरे: Smriteh, on account of the statement of the Smriti. च Cha, and.

11. From the Smriti also (the same mode of releas is learned)—532.

COMMENTARY.

Thus the following text of a Smriti also shows the same :-

ब्रह्मक सहते सर्वे संमाते मतिसंबरे । प्रस्थान्ते कृतात्मानः प्रविद्यन्ति परं पदम् ॥

"All these (souls who had reached the Satya Leka by being the Saniştha devotees of the Lord), enter, on the expiry of Brahms, when the period of great dissolution comes near, along with Brahms, into the Highest Abode of the Supreme—all those devotees whose minds are fixed on the Lord."

Thus the Siddhanta teaching of the sage Badari is that all Sanistha devotees are conducted by the Devas called Archis and the rest, to the abode of the four-faced Brahma, namely, to the Satya-Loka, the plane of Hiranyagarbha. The author next gives the opinion of Jaimini.

Adhikarna VII.

12. The sage Jaimini opines (that the Not-human Person leads the souls) (of those only who meditate on the Supreme Brahman) to the Supreme, because the word "Brahman" primarily means the Supreme Brahman.—533.

COMMENTARY.

The sage Jaimini holds the view that the messenger of the Lord leads the souls up to the Supreme Brahman and not only up to the region of Hiranyagarbha. Why? Because the neuter word "Brahman" has the primary designation of "Supreme Brahman," and not Brahmâ (which is mesculine).

Nor is this an unanswerable objection that the Supreme Brahman being all-pervading cannot be the goal of any movement. Reaching the Supreme Brahman really means that the devotees become denuded of all conditioning adjuncts and realise Him. The Lord Himself has declared such a state to be the meaning of the phrase "reaching the Supreme." Though the Lord is all-pervading yet it is His wish that His devotees must come to Him through the Path of Archis, &c., to His abode called the Great Void. This is a glory of the Lord.

SÚTRA IV. 8. 18.

वरानीच ॥ ४ । ३ । १३ ॥

13. And it is so seen in the Scriptures also—534.

In the Dahara Vidyå of the Chhândogya Upanişad it is stated (VIII. 12. 3):—

चय य पर संत्रसाराञ्जान्डरीरात् समुत्याय

"This serene being having risen from the body, having reached the highest light, manifests itself in its own shape."

This also declares that the soul passing through the coronal artery, reaches the Highest Brahman. The goal there also is the Supreme, because all the attributes of immortality, &c., are ascribed to Him. The goal in the Dabara Vidyâ journey is not doubtful at all. It is the Supreme Brahman. It is made clearer still by the statement that the goer (the soul) "manifests itself in its own shape, having reached the highest light." These statements would not be appropriate if the goal were the effected Brahman, i.e., the four-faced Brahma. Moreover the Prakarana or the chapter dealing with the journey of the soul is not of effected Brahman but of the Supreme Brahman. The journey of the soul occurs in a contest dealing with the Highest Brahman. The soul's journey is meutioned in the Katha Up. also. There also the object reached is the Highest Brahman, because of the phrases "like he reaches immortality," "it is beyond all Dharmas and Adharmas."

Further, the next sûtra gives an additional reason.

14. And the sage does not intentionally desire to reach the effected Brahman (and not the Highest)—535.

COMMENTARY.

No eage puts it as the aim of his devotion to go to the lower plane of Brahmå, when he knows that he can go to the higher. The Brahmå's world is not the Purusartha, the goal of humanity. That goal is the Highest Brahman, and that whatever is the aim, that he reaches, on the maxim of Yathå Kratuḥ (Chh-ândogya Up. III. 14.)

The Siddhanta view of Jaimini, therefore, is that the Amanava Purusa leads the worshippers of the Lord to the Lord Himself—Him who is the Highest Person.

Now the author gives his own opinion.

Adhikarana. VIII.

COMMENTARY.

The worshippers of Name and the rest are called the Pratikaalambana or those who depend upon a symbol. Devotees other than the Pratika-Alambanas, such as the Sanieths, Pariniethitas and the Nirapeksas are worshippers of non-symbolic Brahman and are called Aprattka-alambana. The Amanava Purusa leads these worshippers of Brahman without any symbol, to the Supreme Lord. This is the opinion of Bådaråyana, the author of these sûtras. He does not accept the view either of Jaimini or of Bådari, namely, (1) that this not-human being leads the souls of those only who worship the Supreme, or (2) who worship the effected Brahman. Because in both these views there arises conflict with the text. In the first view, namely, that of Bådari, the conflict arises with the words Paramjyotis (Chh. Up., VIII. 12. 3.) That passage declares "that arising from this body it approaches the highest light." Now if the Muktas reach only the effected Brahman (the four-faced Brahma), then it could not be said that they had reached the highest light. In the second view, namely, that of Jaimini who holds that the worshippers of Supreme only, are carried by the divinities, last of which is the not-human person, the conflict would be with that text of the Chh. Up. (V. 10.) which declares that the worshippers of the five-fires also go by the Archirâdi path. Now those who meditate on Panchagni Vidya are not meditating on the Supreme. But the text says that they also go by the path of light.

Note.—The two passages of the Chhd. Up. (VIII. 12. 3) and (V. 10.), are given below for facility of reference:—

"Thus does that serene being, arising from this body, appear in its own form, as soon as it has approached the highest light."

"Those who know this (even though they still be Grihasthas, householders) and those who in the forest follow faith and austerities (the Vanaprasthas, and of the parivrajakas who do not yet know the Highest Brahman), go to light (Archis), from light to day, from day to the light half of the moon, from the light half of the moon to the six months when the sun goes to the north, from the six months to the year, then to the sun, from the sun to the moon, from the moon to the lightning. There is a person not human. He leads them to Brahman (Brahma).

To avoid these two-fold contradictions Bådårayana takes the middle course, and says that all worshippers of Brahman without any symbol, go by the path of light.

His second reason is based upon the famous maxim contained in the Chh. III. 14. "According to what his thought is in this world, so will he be when he has departed this life." This is called Tatkratuh maxim. A man who thinks of the Supreme, and meditates on the Supreme must go to the Supreme after death. But the worshippers of Name and the rest, as described in the Chh. Up. (VII. 1. 3) and the remaining Khandas, namely; those who meditate on Name as Brahman, on Speech as Brahman, on Mind as Brahman, etc., do no not go by the Archirâdi path to the Supreme, because they do not meditate on the Supreme, but on names, speech etc. The element of thought (Kratuh) which determines the goal of after-life is absent in them. On the other hand, they worship name, etc., namely, ecience of words, etc., and so reach perfection in words, etc. Their reward is described in the same Upanişad Chh. (VII. 1. 5).

'He who meditates on the name as Brahman, is, as it were, lord and master as far as the name reaches.'

And so on with the other worshippers.

The case of those who meditate on the Panchagni (five fires) is however different. They go by the Archiradi path to Satyaloka, because their meditation is primarily connected with the Self, and not with any symbol. The fires there are not symbols of anything, but the Self of the worshipping devotee. Though the worshippers of Panchagni have not realised the Supreme Brahman, and cannot at once, therefore, reach the Supreme Brahman on their death, they still go to Satyaloka, and in that Loka they are taught the true doctrine of Brahman, and by such knowledge they reach Brahman. In sûtra, I. 3. 26, lord Bâdarâyana has declared his opinion, that even the denizens of the higher worlds are entitled to meditate on Brahman, and do so meditate. If the worshippers of the five fires did not ultimately reach the Supreme Brahman, then the statement that "they never return" would not be correct with regard to them.

Adhikarana IX.

Now the author teaches that as regards certain Nirapeksas the Lord Himself comes to take them to His abode and does not leave that task to any of His messengers.

(Vigaya).—In the Gopala Parva Tapani we have the following:-

यतव् विष्याः परमं पदं ये नित्योयुक्ताः संयजनी न कामात् । तेवामसी गोपकपः प्रयक्तात् प्रकाशयेवात्मपदं तदेव ॥ ग्रोकारेबाम्तरितं या जपति गाबिम्बस्य पंचपदं मतुं तम् । तस्येवासी वर्शयेवात्मकपं तसान् मुमुख्यस्यसेन् नित्यशानये ॥

 They who constantly harmonised and without heedlessness fully worship the Supreme state of Vişşu, not with the desire of getting rewards, to them that Cow-herd-shaped One verily then carefully reveals his own state.

2. He who repeats silently this five-syllabled prayer of Govinda with the word Om preceding it, him verily that Lord Himself shows His own Form, therefore, let the seeker of freedom always recite this mantra in order to get eternal peace.

(Doubt).—Are the Nirapekşa worshippers of the Lord carried also by the Âtivâhika divinities to the Lord, or are they carried by the Lord Himself.

(Purvapakea).-The opponent maintains the view that the Lord

Himself carries no one. The scriptures mention only two paths, the path of the Devas and the path of the Pitris. All knowers of Brahman have to go by the path of light, and are to be carried by the divinities of that path. The scripture also declares that the Lord is the causal agent in everything, for He never directly does anything. His agents work out His will.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next satra.

SÛTRA IV. 8. 16.

विशेषम् Videșam, difference. च Cha, and. वर्षमित Dai sayati, the acripture declares.

16. And the Scripture itself shows the special case with regard to some Nirapeksas.—537.

COMMENTARY.

The general rule is no doubt that the conducting divinities carry all the knowers of Brahman to Brahman. But with regard to those Nirapekea devotees who are extremely ardent, and much suffering in their yearning, in their case the Lord Himself comes to fetch them to Himself; because He Himself feels impatient to bring such souls at once to Him. This is a special case only. The scripture also shows this. The two verses of the Gopala Tapani quoted above are an authority for this proposition.

In the GitA also (XII. 6. and 7.) we find that the Lord Himself comes to carry His ardent devotees to Himself.

ये तु सर्वाचि कर्माचि मनि संन्यस्य मस्पराः । चनन्येनैव येगोन मां च्यायन्त उपासते ॥ ६ ॥

Those verily who, renouncing all actions in Me and intent on Me, wership meditating on Me, with whole-hearted Yoga.

तेषामइं समुद्धतां मृखुसंसारसागरात्। भवामि न विरात्यार्थः मय्यावेद्यितवेतसाम् ॥ ७ ॥

These I speedily lift up from the ocean of death and existence, O Partha, their minds being fixed on Me.

The word "Cha" "and" used in the satra means by implication that as soon as such devotees die and shake off final hody or Linga Deha, the Lord gives them the celestial or Aprakritic body at once. These devotees get rid of their Linga Deha along with their physical body, at the time of death. Other devotees have to remain in their Linga Deha for some time after death.

Nor is it correct to say that there are only two paths and no third, and that all the knowers of Brahman must pass over the road of Archirâdi, to the abode of the Lord. For in the Varâha Purâha we have the following:—

नयामि परमं सानं अर्थिरादिगतिं विना । गरुडस्कम्भमाराप्य यथेष्क्रमनिवारितः॥

I bring him seated on the shoulder of Garuda, without hiserance and according to my own will, to my Supreme abode, by a path other than that of Archiradi.

Therefore, what the author has said is perfectly correct. The above passage is to be found at the end of the Varâha Purâna.

FOURTH PANDA.

चकैतवे भक्तिसवेऽतुरस्यम् स्वमेवयः सेवकसात् करोति । तताऽतिमावं मुदितः स वेवः, सदा चिदानन्वतृत्विमेत् ॥

Let that God, whose body consists of intelligence and bliss, give us always contentment. He who is always pleased with the guideless love of his devotees, and in return who offers Himself as the servant of his devotees, and being thus gratified by their devotion, gratifies all their desires.

Adhikarana I.—The form of the Souls in Mukti.

In this chapter is determined the enjoyment of lordliness and the rest which the freed souls experience, as well as the nature of such souls. In the Chh. Up. is heard the following (VIII. 12. 3.):—

प्रवमेवैच संमसादे। उसाच्छिरात्समृत्याय परं ज्योतिकपसंपद्य स्वेन क्रपेबामिनिष्य-द्यते स उत्तमः पुरुषः स तत्र पर्येति असन्कीडन्दममाबः सीमिर्वा यानैर्वा बातिमिर्वा नेापजन्य सरिवद्धः शरीर्थः स यथा प्रयोग्य साबरवे युक्त प्रवमेवायमिकाञ्छरीरे प्रावेश युक्तः ॥ ३ ॥

"He through whose grace this released soul, arising from his last body, and having approached the Highest Light, is restored to his own form is the Highest Person. The Mukta moves about there laughing, playing, and rejoicing, with women, with carriages, with other Muktas of his own period or of the past Kalpas. (So great is his ecstasy) that he does not remember even the person standing near him, nor even his own body. And as a charioteer is appointed by his master to drive the carriage, just so is the Prana appointed to drive this chariot of the body.

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt, does the soul, in getting Mukti, get a shape and body which is a result accomplished, and which is to be brought about then as, for example, the body of a Deva; or that it only manifests its own natural character. In other words, what is the meaning of the phrase "svena rûpeṇa abhiniṣpadyate," "appears in his true form"? Does this "appearance in true form" mean getting a new body, like that of the messengers of Viṣṇu, or manifesting its own nature?

(Parvapaksa).—The opponent maintains the view that the soul assumes a new body, to be brought about then. Because the meaning of the word 'abhinispatti' is accomplishment, so the body is one which the soul accomplishes or makes. If it were otherwise, then the above word would have no meaning at all; and the scriptural texts relating to release would declare what was of no advantage to man. If the word "abhinispatti" meant "manifestation of one sown natural character," then since this natural character already exists in man, it cannot be said to be something accomplished, and it can be of no advantage to man. Therefore, the phr "manifests itself in its own form" means that he assumes a new body, to be brought about then.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 1.

सम्पद्माविर्भावः स्वेनशब्दात् ॥ ४ । ४ । १ । ॥

सम्पद Sampadya, of the person who has reached Brahman. आवियाँपः Avirbhavah, manifestation, क्षेत्र Svena, "by one's own," सम्बाह Sabdat, inferred from the word.

1. The phrase 'accomplishing one's own form,' means manifestation in one's real form, because the word Svena, "in its own," indicates that.—538.

COMMENTARY.

When the soul approaches the Highest Light, through the force of its devotion, accompanied by knowledge and dispassion, then there is release for it from the chain of Karma, and there is manifestation in it of the eight-fold superior qualities, which from latency come into manifestation then. It is then said that there has taken place the manifestation of its natural character. This particular condition, characterised by the rise of one's natural condition to the surface is called Svarûpa abhinispatti. Why? Because the word Svena in the above text requires this explanation. This word is an adjective qualifying the word Rups in the above. If the soul assumed a new body, then this word would have no force. Because, even without that, it would be clear that the new body belonged to the soul. The other meaning of Svens would be "belonging to it" and Rûpens would mean "in a form belonging to it." This would be purely a useless expression, for the body, which the soul takes, must ipso facto belong to it. Mereover the word Nispatti does not always mean accomplishment, but manifestation also. As in the phrase "Idam ekam sunispannam."

To the objection that the soul's own true nature is something eternally accomplished, and hence the manifestation of that nature cannot be the end of man (Purusartha) we reply; true, it is the eternal nature of the soul that manifests in Mukti. And yet such manifestation cannot be said to be useless, because the very object and end of all human exertion is to bring about this manifestation. Consequently all such efforts are not useless because they subserve the purpose of bringing about this manifestation. The School of Patanjali holds the view that the mere cessation of pain which arises through the super-imposition of Prakriti, constitutes the well-being of the soul which has approached the Highest Light, and that Nispatti is nothing more than this condition of the Self-luminous, pure intelligence. This however is not the Vedanta view. The "release" of the Vedanta is not a state of negation, not a state in which there is merely an absence of all sufferings caused by Prakriti, but it is a positive state of enjoyment of bliss, as we find in the Tait. Up. (II. 7) "For having tasted a flavour of the Supreme, he experiences bliss." This shows that in the state of Mukti there is experiencing of intense bliss and not merely a cessation of pain.

But, how do we know that approaching the Highest Light is Mukti? To this question the next sûtra gives a reply.

Note,—To understand the argument fully it is necessary to know the context of the whole passage of the Chhânlogya Up. in which the above text of "approaching the Highest Light" occurs. One must read the whole of the history of the teaching given by Prajapati to Indra and Virochana as we find in the Chh. Upanisad. (VIII, 7 to 12). It is in these Khandas from 7-12 that Prajapati teaches the nature of the soul in the waking state as well in the dreaming and dreamless sleep. When, however, Indra is not satisfied with these partial truths, Prajapati finally promises "I shall explain him further to you, and nothing more than this." In fulfilment of this promise, he teaches the condition of the soul in Mukti.

SUTRA IV. 4. 2.

मुक्तः प्रतिज्ञानात् ॥ ४ । ४ । ३ ॥

इन्ह: Muktab, the liberated one. जतिज्ञानाज् Pratijñanat, on account of the promise.

2. Manifestation in its own form mentioned in Chh. Up. (VIII. 12. 3) is the condition of the Mukta, because that is what Prajapati has promised to teach in the opening part of the Upanişad.—539.

COMMENTARY.

It is verily the Mukta who manifests itself in its own form. Why? Because of the promise. In the opening sentence (VIII. 7. 1.) Brahmâ describes the condition of the Mukta Jiva thus:—

"The Self which is free from sin, free from old age, free from death and grief, from hunger and thirst, which desires nothing but what it ought to desire, and imagines nothing but what it ought to imagine, that it is which we must search out, that it is which we must try to understand. He who has searched out that Self and understands it, obtains all worlds and all desires."

This shows the condition of the Mukta Jiva, and Prajapati promises to teach Indra this Mukta condition, by saying "I shall explain the true Self further to you." This promise is given several times. It is first given when Indra, dissatisfied with the waking Self, comes back to Prajapati. again to be taught, and Prajapati says (VIII. 9. 3) "I shall explain it further to you. Live with me another thirty-two years" Then he explains to him the Self in dream, and when Indra is not satisfied with that, he teaches him the Self in dreamless sleep; and when Indra is not satisfied with that even, Prajapati at last describes to him the true Self, free from all the three conditions of waking, etc., and teaches the condition of the Self in the state of Mukti in these terms:

"Maghavat, this body is mortal and always held by death. It is the abode of that Self which is immortal and without body. When in the body (by thinking this body is I and I am this body) the Self is held by pleasure and pain. So long as he is in the body, he cannot get free from pleasure and pain. But when he is free of the body (when he knows himself different from the body), then neither pleasure nor pain touches him.

"The wind is without body, the cloud, lighting, and thunder are without body, (without hands, feet, &c). Now as these arising from this heavenly ether (space), appear in their own form, as soon as they have approached the highest light.

"Thus does that serene being, arising from this body, appear in its own form, as soon as it approaches the Highest Light. He (in that state) is the highest person (Uttama pāruṣa). He moves about there laughing (or eating), playing, and rejoicing (in his mind), be it with women, carriages, or relatives, never minding that body into which he was born."

This final teaching of Prajapati is in accordance with his final promise given in (VIII. 11. 3), where he says "I shall explain the true Self further to you and nothing more than this." Thus, because of this promise, the teaching about "the Self appearing in its own form" must relate to the condition of the Muktas. Therefore, Mukti is indeed the manifestation of one's own form, which consists in remaining in one's own natural condition, free from the body, &c., which are produced through the effect of Karmas. This bodiless condition, free from pleasure and pain, is Mukti.

This condition is described in the text as coming subsequent to the approaching of the soul the Highest Light. After the Highest Light is reached, there appears this manifestation.

(Doubt).—But on this point a further doubt is raised. What is this Highest Light? Is it the solar orb, for light generally means the sun, or is it the Supreme Brahman?

(Phreapakea).—The opponent maintains the view that the Highest Light refers here to the solar orb. Because in the Mundaka Up. it is said that it is after reaching the sun that one gets Mukti. The present passage also says that it is after reaching the Highest Light that one manifests his own nature. Therefore, the Highest Light of the Chhândogys passage is the solar orb mentioned by the Mundaka Up., I. 11. And it is the same solar orb which comes as the Adityaloka in the Archirâdi path already mentioned before.

(Siddhanta). - This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 2.

म्रात्मा प्रकरणात् ॥ १ । १ । ३ ॥

mier Atma, soul. serene Prakaranat, on account of the subject-matter.

3. The Atman is that "Highest Light;" because of the context.—540.

COMMENTARY.

That "Highest Light" mentioned in the Chh. Up. is indeed the Âtman (the Supreme Self), and not the Solar sphere, because the topic under discussion, where that passage occurs, refers to the Supreme. Though the word Jyotih is a common term, meaning both the sun and Brahman, yet this word here, on account of the topic under discussion, denotes the Supreme Self. As in the sentence "Devo janati me manah," the word Deva is used in the sense of "You." The sentence means "you know my mind."

The word Atman, in this stara, refers to an All-pervading substance whose essential form is knowledge and bliss. The word Atman is derived from the root /at meaning "to go continuously, to obtain and to illumine." Thus Atman means that which illumines, secondly, that which is reached by the free souls, third, that which is all-pervading. So it applies both to the human soul as well as to the Supreme Lord. It has several meanings, like the word "Upanisad." And this entity Atman must be admitted to be a person. Because the description of it, given in the passage under discussion is that of a person, it is called there "Utama Puruşa," the Supreme. (See Chh. Up., VIII. 12.3).

Therefore, the Highest Light, which the freed soul attains to, is this Uttama Puruşa, the Supreme Person, the Lord Hari: and is not the solar sphere.

Adhikarana II.—The soul of the Mukta is united with the Lord.

On this very subject, another doubt is raised.

(Doubt).—Does the freed soul, on reaching this Highest Light, which resides in the town called Samvyoma, the great void, dwell in the same plane with the Great Light, or dwell in union with it? In other words, does it remain, in the state of Mukti, separate from the Lord, though in the same sphere in which the Lord dwells, or is it united with the Lord? Or to use the technical phrase of the books of theology and theosophy, is the Mukti Salokya (residence in the same heaven with the Deity), or Sayujya (intimate union with the Deity), (absorption into the Deity)?

(Parvapaksa).—The pûrvapaksin maintains the view that the Mukti is a Sâlokya one. As when a person enters the city of a king, he remains in the same place where the king lives, but is not absorbed in the king; so the freed soul, when it enters the city of the Lord, does not get absorbed into the Lord, but remains separate from Him, though in the same locality with Him.

(Siddhânta). -This view is refuted in the next sûtra.

वारिमानेन Avibhagena, by non division, by union. हुइन्बास् Dristatvat, being seen in the scriptures.

4. The freed soul exists in a state of non-separation from the Lord, because of a Scriptural text.—541.

COMMENTARY.

When the soul has reached the Highest Light, it remains in a state of non-division from that Light, in a state of absorption in that Light. Why? Because it is so seen in the Scripture. In the Mundaka Up. (III. 2. 8) we have the following statement:—

"As the flowing rivers disappear in the sea, losing their name and their form, thus a wise man, freed from name and form, goes to the Divine Person, who is greater than the great."

The word Sâyujya means intimate union, as we find it used in the following passage of the Mahânârâyana Up. (XXV. 1):—

य वर्ष विद्वानुदगयने प्रमीयते देवानामेष महिमावं गत्वादिखस्य सायुज्यं गच्छ-त्यथं या दक्षिके प्रमीयते पितृकामेष महिमानं गत्वा चन्द्रमसः सायुज्यं सक्कोक-तामामोत्यं ता वै सूर्याचन्द्रमसोमहिमाना माझके विद्वानभिजयति तकावृज्यके महिमान-मामोति तकावृज्यके महिमानम् ॥ ८० ॥

"The wise one, who knowing it thus, dies during the northern progress of the sun, attaining to the glory of the gods (i.e., going by the Archirâdi Devâyana path) gets Sâyujya with the sun. But he who dies during the southern progress of the sun, attaining indeed the glory of the Pitris (going by the Pitriyâna path), obtains the Sâyujya with the moon, in the world of the moon. The wise knower of Brahman conquers these two paths, that of the Sun and the Moon, and because of this (conquest), he obtains the glory of Brahman, yea the glory of Brahman."

But if Sâyujya be the only from of Mukti, what becomes then of the other three forms, for the Scriptures describe four kinds of Mukti, i.e., Sâlokya, (residence in the same sphere with the Deity), Sârşti, (possessing the same power, station or rank as the Deity), Sâmtpya (proximity to the Deity), and Sâyujya? To this we reply, that the other three kinds of Mukti are but modes of Sâyujya. The Sâyujya Mukti includes all those.

If Sayujya be the constant state of union with the Lord, then, how is it that soul feels the sentiment of separation from the Lord, in the state called Viraha. The soul which is in constant union with the Lord, is incapable of feeling this sentiment of Viraha. But the books describe, that in the highest heaven even, this sentiment is felt; and the Mukta souls appear, now and then, as if lamenting their separation from the Lord. To this we reply, that even while feeling this sentiment, which though painful is yet pleasant, the freed souls feel their union with the Lord internally, for the Lord is never absent from their hearts; and because they are in the world of the Lord called Mahima, and the world of the Lord has been shown to be identical with the Lord. Therefore, the Mukta Jivas, dwelling in Vaikuntha, are in three-fold union with the Lord, namely, they are in the world of the Lord, which is the Lord Himself; secondly, the Lord is in them, so they can never be unconscious of the presence of the Lord; and thirdly, they are in union with an external form of the Lord. It is this separation from the external form of the Lord, that gives rise to the sentiment of Viraha, in the heaven world.

The illustration of the rivers entering the sea, cannot be utilised in maintaining the doctrine of absolute identity with the Lord. The Mukts Jivas, though in intimate union with the Lord, are not identical with the Lord. Though we say, in ordinary parlance, when one water enters another water, that it has become one, yet we know all the while, that the two waters are different internally. If they were not so, then there would be no increase in the bulk of water.

Note.—When a cup of water is put into a reservoir of water, the water which was in the cup does not cease to exist, does not become identical with the other water, because it adds so much water to the reservior, and increases its bulk by that quantity. Thus in the Katha Up. (IV. 15) it is said;—

"As pure water poured into pure water becomes like that, O Gautama, so the Atmā of the Muni, who knows, becomes like that (with Brahman)."

Similarly, in the Skanda Parapa also it is said that the union of water with water does not mean absolute identity, but intimate connection.

Adhikarana III.—The attributes of the Mukta Soul.

Now the author is going to determine what are the blessings which the freed soul enjoys. But before doing that, it is necessary to determine the divine attributes such as true resolve, (the instantaneous fulfilment of every wish that the soul entertains), and qualities like the same; and the soul's getting a body of celestial texture. For these are the causes, that bring about the enjoyment of blessings. Therefore, the author begins with the determination of the attributes, which the soul shows forth.

(Doubt).—When the soul reaches the Highest Light, does it manifest itself with certain group of attributes, or is it merely pure intelligence? Or is it both pure intelligence, plus other attributes, because there is no necessary contradiction between them?

(Pûrvapakşa).—As a Pûrvapakşa, the author gives first the opinion of the sage Jaimini.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 5.

5. According to Jaimini, the freed soul manifests with all the attributes given by Brahman, because of the reference and the rest, (as contained in other passages of the Upanisad).—542.

COMMENTARY.

The word "Brâhma" of the Sûtra means, accomplished or completed by the Brahman. [It is a word formed by the affix we An, under Pâṇini (IV. 2. 68).] The Mukta appears with the divinely given attributes, mentioned in the Chh. Up. (VIII. 7.1) beginning with "who is free from sins," and ending with "whose will is true." These are the eight Gunas or qualities, which he then possesses. Namely, (1) he is free from sins, (2) free from old age, (3) free from death, (4) free from grief, (5) free from hunger, (6) free from thirst, (7) he has desires which are instantly realised, and (8), a will which accomplishes its resolution spontaneously.

Why do we say so? Because of the reference and the rest. In the above passage of the Chh. Up. (VIII. 7.1.) Prajapati suggests that freed souls also come to possess the eight attributes of Atman, which he has proclaimed so widely: and which reaches the cars of the Devas in heaven, and the Asuras in the nether world.

The words "and the rest" will of the Sûtra indicate that the soul not only possessed these eight attributes, but that it acts in the way mentioned in the same Upanicad.

"The Mukta moves about there laughing, playing, and rejoicing, with women, with carriages, with other Muktas of his own period or of the past Ealpas. (So great is his ecutary) that he does not remember even the person standing near him, nor even his own body."

Therefore, Jaimini is of opinion that the Mukta soul manifests these eight-fold attributes and acts as mentioned in this Upanişad. In support of his view there is a Smriti passage also:—

यथा न हियते ज्योत्सा

Yatha na hriyate jyotsnâ, etc. (?).

As a Pûrvapakşa, the author next gives the opinion of Audulomi, who holds the opinion that the Mukta soul possesses only one attribute, namely, that of pure intelligence.

BÛTRA IV. 4.16.

6. The Mukta Jiva, when it has entered into the All-intelligence, manifests merely as that (intelligence); because (of the statement that it is) essentially that alone, thus opines Audulomi.—543.

COMMENTARY.

The Mukta, whose nescience has been burnt away by meditation on Brahman, when it enters into Brahman, whose essence is intelligence, manifests as intelligence only. Why? Because there is a statement that intelligence is its essential and only form. In the Bri. Ar. (IV. 5.13) we have the following:—

स यथा सैन्धवधनोऽनन्तरोऽबाद्याः इत्जो रसधन पवैषं वा धरेऽयमासाऽनन्तरोऽ बाद्याः इत्जाः मद्यानधन पवैतेम्यो भूतेम्यः समुत्याय तान्येबानुविनद्द्यति न प्रेत्य संज्ञाऽ-स्त्रीत्वरे प्रवीमीति देशवाच याद्यवस्त्यः ॥ १३॥

"As a mass of salt has neither inside nor outside, but is altogether a mass of taste, thus indeed has that Self neither inside nor outside, but is altogether a mass of knowledge, and having risen out from these elements, vanishes again in them. When he has departed, there is no more knowledge (name), I say, O Maitreyi, thus spoke Yajfavalkya.

This passage shows that intelligence only constitutes the true being of the soul. Thus we know that the essential nature of the Jiva is intelligence, pure and simple, unqualified by any attributes. According to Audulomi, therefore, the Chh. text attributing sinlessness and the rest to the soul is to be interpreted as not meaning to predicate of it further positive qualities, but only to exclude all those qualities which depend on Avidyâ or nescience, such as change, pleasure, pain, and so on.

After thus giving the opinion of Jaimini and of Audulomi, the author gives next his own opinion.

SÛTRA IV. 4.7.

एवमप्युपन्यासात्पूर्वभावादविरोधं बादरायणः ४ । ४ । ७ ॥

प्यम् Evam, thus, धाप Api, even: though the soul be mere intelligence. इप्यासास् Upanyasat, because of the suggestion, reference: authority of the words of Prajapati. पूर्व Pûrva, of the former (i.e., Jaimini). आसान् Bhavat, on account of the existence (of the statement). धारितेषम् Avirodham, non-contradiction. बार्यायम्: Badarayaṇaḥ, Badarayaṇa, (thinks).

COMMENTARY.

Though the essential nature of the soul be pure intelligence, as proved by Audulomi, yet there is no contradiction, if the eight qualities also exist in it. This is the opinion of the Lord Bâdarâyana. Because of the authority. The statement made by Prajapati is an authority for holding that the former opinion held by Jaimini is right: since those qualities also exist in the soul. The settled conclusion, therefore, is that since the Srutis give unqualified both these statements.the Brihadâranyaka mentioning that the soul is pure intelligence, and the Chhândogya that it has the eight qualities-and since both these statements are of equal authority, the nature of the freed soul consists of both these sets of qualities. Bâdarâyana approves the view that the soul is "even a mass of intelligence"—that is, unqualified intelligence only. For though it be unqualified (Nirguna) intelligence only, vet there is no contradiction, when it is said to possess the eight qualities The word eva "only" used in the Bri. Ar. ( serange ca ). "a mass of intelligence only"—does not prevent the soul possessing other attributes also. For the above passage of Br. Ar. purports to exclude all and every kind of irrationality (Jadatva) from the soul and to teach that the self is 'self-luminous. Though the Jiva be thus self-luminous, pure intelligence, there is no contradiction if it possesses the eight qualities, known from another equally authoritative text. Thus though a solid salt-crystal be a mass of mere taste, and nothing but taste, yet it has a form, hardness, etc., also, and these qualities do not contradict its being a mass of taste.

Therefore, it follows, that in Mukti, the Jiva manifests as pure intelligence, endowed by the Lord with the eight qualities.

Adhikarana V.—The Mukta is a satya-sankalpa.

Now the author discusses the question of the Mukta being a Satya-Sankalpa, one whose will spontaneously becomes resolved into the accomplished act.

(Vieaya.)—In the Chh. Up. (VIII. 12. 3) it is stated "He moves about there, laughing, playing, rejoicing, be it with women, or chariots, or relatives."

(Doubt).—Here arises the doubt. Does the soul's meeting with the relatives and the rest presuppose an effort on its part, or does it come about by its mere willing?

(Ptrospakes).—The opponent maintains the view that there is effort on the part of the soul. For in this world, even such great persons as kings &c., who are said to be Satys-satkalpas (those whose wishes are never frustrated but ever accomplished), have to exert in order to have their wishes realised. Therefore, the Muktas meet with their relatives by willing, accompanied by some effort to get the will realised.

(Siddhanta).—This opinion is refuted in the next sutra.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 8.

सङ्गल्पादेव तच्छूतः ॥ ४ । ४ । ८ ॥

श्रीतान्त्र, Sankalpad, by the will. इप, Eva, indeed. तसू, Tat, about it. श्रुते: Sruteh, there being a scriptural statement.

8. (The Muktas meet their relatives and the rest) by their mere will: because of the text of the Sruti.—545.

COMMENTARY.

The Mukta meets his relatives and the rest by his mere will. Why? Because the Revelation says so. For in the same Chb. Up. in a previous passage (VIII. 2. 1) the Scripture says:—

स यदि पितृकीककामा भवति संकल्पादेवास्य पितरः समुचिङ्कति तेन पितृ-केकिन संपक्षो महीकते ॥ १ ॥

"Thus he who desires the world of the fathers, by his mere will, the fathers come to receive him, and having obtained the world of the fathers, he is happy."

Thus this previous passage shows that the meeting with relatives, &c., takes place by mere will, and by no other effort. If any other effort was also necessary, then the particle "Eva," "mere," would become useless. Though there was similarly the word 'Eva' in the description of the soul as "mere mass of intelligence" (NATANA 44), yet there we added the eight qualities, because of the complementary text of the Prajapati's declaration. But there is no such complementary passage with regard to Satya-sankalpa, which would require us to hold that some other attributes must be added here also; and that the will does not accomplish itself, but requires something èlse.

But this kind of Mukti, in which one's own expansion of power is the predominant element, is not liked by those who are the true servants of the Lord, and have tasted the sweets of service. They look down upon this sort of Mukti. This explains also those texts which deprecate such Mukti.

Adhikarana VI.—The Mukta is under the control of no one, but the Lord.

Now, though the Mukta is one whose wish is ever true (Satya-san-kalpa), yet he is dependent on the Lord and on the Lord alone. The author shows this fact in the next sûtra.

(Doub).—Is the Mukta under the governance of anyone other than the Supreme Person or not?

(Parvapakea).—He is under the governance of Beings other than the Supreme Person. Just as the man who goes to the palace of a king comes under the control of the officials of the king, so also the Mukta who has entered the home of the Lord, comes under the jurisdiction of the companions of the Lord.

(Siddhanta).—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

8ÛTRA IV 4. 9.

भ्रतप्व चानन्याधिपतिः ॥ ४ । ४ । ६ ॥

चैत्र: Ataḥ, for this reason. इत् Eva, indeed. च Cha, and. चनन्यचित्रतिः, Ananya-adhipatiḥ, having no other master (except God).

9. And for this reason, indeed, he has no other Master.—546.

COMMENTARY.

"For this reason," namely, because of the manifestation in the Freed Soul, of the attributes of True-Resolve, &c., through the grace of the Supreme Person, the Mukta has no master over him. That is to say, he has no ruler over him except the Supreme Person Himself. He shines forth and sports about, dependent on the Supreme alone. Were he under the control of any other person, then his case would not differ from one being in the bondage of the Samsara, though that bondage may be of a different sort. Though the True-Resolve possessed by the Mukta Jiva is the essential nature of the Soul, yet it has become manifest owing to his meditation on the Supreme Person. Hence He out of compassion constantly gives joy to His protege-joy which is endless and infinite. That the Lord gives joy to the Freed will be shown further on under Sûtra IV. 4. 20. and the rest. The Mukta also is equally happy in getting the privilege of eternally serving the Lord of eternal bliss and Protector of His proteges. The Jiva being a portion (amés) of the Lord, his agency and enjoyment all depend upon the Lord. This has already been shown previously.

The sûtra is explained in another way also by some. "For this reason," namely, because he becomes a Satya-Sankalpa, one whose wishes spontaneously realise themselves, the Mukta "has no other master," is not under the law, rises above all commands and prohibitions of Sâstras. Were he still under the rule of the law, his trueness of resolve would become obstructed thereby. [No one who is under the law, can be said to have a Free-Will or Satya-Sankalpa].

Adhikarana VII.

Now the author shows that the Mukta gets a new Divine body.

(Doubt).—There arises the following doubt. Has the Mukta who has approached the Highest Bight got any body, or has he not? Or has he a body whenever he desires to have one? Or can he not get any body?

(Parvapakea).—On this point, the author first gives the opinion of Bådari.

SÛTRA. IV. 4. 10.

स्रभावे बादरिराह द्येवम् ॥ ४ । १० ॥

चनारे Abhave, as regards the absence. बाहरि: Badarih, Badari. चाह Aha, says. हि Hi, because (of the Chhandogya, VIII. 12. 1). एरह Evam, thus.

10. Bâdari (opines that the Mukta Jiva) has no body, because thus the Scripture declares.—547.

COMMENTARY.

Bâdari holds that there is an absence of body with regard to the freed. The body is always the outcome of one's good or bad or mixed Karmas. It is Adrista-made. In the state of Release, all Karmas being destroyed, there exists no Adrista, so there is no possibility of the origination of a body. Why? Because the Scripture declares thus: because the text of the Chhândogya, VIII. 12. 1, says so.

मधनमत्ये वा इव्ध्यं द्वारित्माचं मृत्युना तदस्यामृतस्याद्वारित्सात्मोऽविद्वानमाची वै सद्वारीरः जियाप्रियाभ्यां न वै सद्वारीरस्य सतः जियाप्रिययोरपद्वतिरस्त्यद्वारीरं वाव सन्तं न प्रियाप्रिये स्पृदातः ॥ १ ॥ चद्वारीरो वायुर्ध्यं विद्युत्सान्विकुरद्वारीराज्येतानि तद्य-वैतान्यमुन्धादाकादात्समुत्याय परं ज्योतिवपसंपद्य स्वेन स्वेन क्ष्येकाभिनिज्यद्यने॥२॥ एकभिवेच संप्रकादीऽकाष्ट्रपरित्समुत्याय परं ज्योतिव पसंपद्यस्वेन क्षयेकाभिनिज्यद्यते स उत्तमः पुत्रकः स तत्र पर्येति अक्षन्त्रीवन्तमावः स्वीभिर्वा यानैवां द्वातिभिर्वा नेप्यन्तः स्वर्वाद्युश्चः स तत्र पर्येति अक्षन्त्रीवन्तमावः स्वीभिर्वा यानैवां द्वातिभिर्वा नेप्यन्तः ॥ १ ॥

"Maghavat, this body is mortal and always held by death. It is the abode of that Self which is immortal and without body. When in the body the Self is held by pleasure and pain. So long as he is in the body, he cannot get free from pleasure and pain. But when he is free of the body, then neither pleasure nor pain touches him.

"The wind is without body, the cloud, lightning and thunder are without body. Now as these, arising from this heavenly ether (space), appear in their own form, as soon as they have approached the Highest Light.

"Thus does that serene being, arising from this body, appear in its own form as soon as it has approached the Righest Light. He is the highest person (Uttam Purnsha.) He moves about there laughing (or eating), playing and rejoicing (in his mind), be it with women, carriages, or relatives, never minding that body into which he was born.

The above passage in the first verse shows that wherever there is a body, there must be pain. It, therefore, says further on "when the soul goes out of the body," &c., then it is above all pain, &c. Thus the Chhândogys Up. clearly says that the soul in the state of Mukti is bodiless.

The Bhagavata Purina also says:-

देदेनियासुदीनानां वैकुळपुरवासिनाम्।

"The dwellers of the city of Valkustha, devoid of life-breaths, sense-organs and body."

This is the opinion of the sage Badari. The author next quotes the opinion of Jaimini.

SUTRA 1V. 4. 11.

षाइ क्षेवं जैमिनिर्विकस्पामननात् ॥ ४ । ४ । ११ ॥

चार Aha, says. दि Hi, because एवन् Evam, thus वैतिनि : Jaiminih, Jaimini. दिखान : Vikalpa, option. चाननवार Amananāt, by thinking abou mentioning.

11. Jamini holds that, because the Scripture declares thus, therefore the Mukta has a body, as the passage declaring the optional possession of many bodies.—548.

COMMENTARY.

Jaimini holds the view that the Mukta has a body. Why? Because of the declaration of option in the scripture. In the Chh. Up., VII 26. 2, where the Bhûmâ Vidyâ is described, there is the following:—

तदेव स्रोको न पश्चे सुर्खुं पश्यति न रागं नेति दुःबताछ सर्वछ इ पश्यः पश्यति सर्वमामोति सर्वश इति स पक्ष्या भवति त्रिया भवति प्रक्रया सत्तया नवधा वैव पुन-स्वैकाश्या स्वतः शतं च दश वैकम्म सहकाचि च विछशति ॥ २ ॥

"There is this verse, 'The Released does not see death, nor illness, nor pain. The Released sees everything and obtains everything everywhere.

"He is one, he becomes three, he becomes five, he becomes seven, he becomes nine, then again he is called the eleventh, and hundred and ten and one thousand and twenty.

The above shows that the soul can assume various bodies simultaneously, and as the soul is atomic in its essential form, its becoming many can be only by its assuming diverse bodies.

Nor can it be said that the above description of the Chh. Up. is not a fact, but an Arthavâda. Because the description comes under the topic of Release, and is a bare statement of truth, not a figurative expression. This being so, the statement of the Chh. Up. (VIII. 12. 1) regarding the soul being bodiless, in the state of Mukti, means that it has no body dependent upon Adrista or Karmas. That the soul has a body, not of Prâkritik matter but of celestial essence, is proved by the Smriti text also: Vasanti yatra purusâh sarve Vaikuntha murtayah, "where dwell released souls, all having celestial bodies (Vaikuntha Murti)."

Now the author gives his own opinion in contradistinction to that of Badari and Jaimini.

SÛTRA. IV. 4.12.

द्वादशाद्ववदुभयविधं बादरायगोऽतः ॥ ४ । ४ । १२ ॥

सुरस Dvadaśa, twelve. सुरस् Âhavat, like days ; just as the twelve days sacrifice. सम्बन्धिय Ubhayavidham, of both kinds. स्वर्शस्यः Bādarāyaṇaḥ, Bādarāyaṇa (thinks). सह :, Ataḥ for this very reason.

12. For this reason, Bâdarâyana holds that Muktas are of both kinds (they are both bodiless and have bodies), just as the twelve days' sacrifice (is both an Ahina and a Sattra).—539.

COMMENTARY.

"For this reason," because the Mukta is one whose wish becomes spontaneously realised; therefore, the lord Badarayana coines that the Mukta has both these natures: because the Scripture describes him in both these ways. In other words he maintains that the Mukta is both bodiless as well as has a body. It is like the twelve days' sactifice which becomes a sattra on the wish of the Yajamana, when it is looked upon as a sacrifice having many Yajamanas, and becomes an Ahina when it is looked upon as having a single Yajamana. As this Dvadadaha ceremony becomes a Sattra, or an Ahina on the mere will of the Yajamana (whether he joins others with him or not), so these Mukta souls have a body or have not a body, on their mere will. The real truth is this that the Muktas, through the force of Brahma-vidya, have torn off all corporal vestures, and have become Satya-sankalpas or beings whos mere will is action. Of these Muktas, there is a class who wish to have a body and they assume a body by the force of their mere will. And with regard to these is the verse of the Chh. Up. (VII. 26. 2) "he becomes one, he becomes three, he becomes five," etc. But those who have no desire to assume a body, do not get a body, and with regard to them the verse, VIII. 12. 1. of the Chh. Up. becomes appropriate. and it is said that he is without a body.

Those Muktas, who through their celestial bodies (the Brahmic bodies) always wish to carry out the will of the Supreme Brahman, manifest in their acts the Chit Sakti of the Lord, and with that fakti they work simultaneously in different places. The Muktas always possess this Chit Sakti, and always follow the will of the Lord.

In the Bri. Ar. (II. 4. 14) it is said:—

यत्र हि हैतमिव भवति तदितर इतरं जिज्ञति तदितर इतरं पद्यति तदितर इतरंश श्रक्षति तदितर इतरंश श्रक्षति तदितर इतरं मजुते तदितर इतरं विज्ञानाति यत्र वा अस्य सर्व-मासीवासूत्तरकेन के जिज्ञे चल्केन के पद्येचलकेन कथ श्रक्षवाचलकेन कमिवदेचत् केन के मजीत तत् केन के विज्ञानीयात् ॥ १४ ॥

"For when there is as it were duality, then one sees the other, one smells the other, one hears the other, one salutes the other, one perceives the other, one knows the other, but when the Self only becomes all this for the Mukta, how should he smell another, how should he see another, how should he see another, how should he perceive another, how should he perceive another, how should he perceive another, how should he know another?"

The above verse shows that when, in the state of Mukti, the Supreme Self has become the direct worker through the Mukta Jiva, when Hari pervades the Mukta Jiva, with his form of bliss, intelligence and all-pervadingness, and when He has become, as it were, all the sense-organs of the Mukta Jiva, his eyes, ears, etc., then how should such a Mukta Jiva see another, and with what he should see another, etc. Verily through the energy of Hari Himself, he sees Hari, through the sense-organs which themselves are Hari. Thus the Mukta sees Hari with the organs which are Hari and the life-energy which is Hari. Hence the Sruti says "when the Self only has become all this for the Mukta, how should he smell another, how should he see another, how should he hear another," etc.

This idea is more explicitly expressed in the Sruti of the Madhyandinâyanas which is to the following effect.

स वा प्रच महानिष्ठ इदं शरीरमर्त्यमतिस्त्रय महाभिसम्पद्य महाका प्रस्पति महाका श्रुकाति महाकेवेदं सर्वमनुभवति ।

That Brahmani, tha putting off this mortal body, and having reached Brahman, sees through Brahman, hears through Brahman, yea perceives everything through Brahman.

The Smriti also says the same:--"where dwell these spirits all of them having celestial bodies."

This Sankalpa or will, which blooms out in the Mukta, is to be cultivated from the very time of his earliest practice, and must be understood to be the same will, which he was cultivating during his period of Sadhana. Because the Śruti says "Yathâ kratuḥ," "as a man wills in this life, so he gets in the next." In fact, the Mukta even before he gets the state of Mukti, has been constantly willing "May I walk through the feet of Viṣṇu, or rather I am walking through the feet of Viṣṇu, I am seeing through the eyes of Viṣṇu," etc. Since this had been his aspiration, even before Mukti, it becomes realised in the state of Mukti.

Adhikarana VIII.—The Mukta enjoys objects is not quiescent.

In the preceding Sûtras have been described the attributes which the Mukta possesses, in order to enjoy heavenly blessings, and his getting a divine body through which he enjoys them. That there are enjoyments to be experienced in Mukti, we find established by texts like the following of the Tait. Up. (II. 1. 1.):—

साअवते सर्वान् कामान् सह आका।

"He enjoys all objects of desire along with Brahman."

Now the author mentions that this enjoyment may be problematic and hence arises the following doubt.

(Doubt).—Is it possible that a Mukta may have enjoyments or is it not possible?

(Pitroapakea).—The Pürvapakein maintains, that since the Muktá is devoid of body and sense-organs, it is not possible for him to enjoy any object. If it be said that being a Yogin, he has the creative power of making a body for himself in order to enjoy objects, to this we reply, that being full of divine ecstacy and bliss, he will have no hankering for sensations, and will not create a body to enjoy external objects. The Mukta, therefore, does not enjoy objects of desire.

(Siddhanta). - This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 18.

तन्वभावेसन्ध्यवदुपपरोः ॥ ४ । ४ । १३ ।

ततु Tanu, of the body. चनारे Abhave, in the absence. सम्बद्ध Sandhyavad just as in a dream, Sandhya means dream. उपयो: Upapatteh, it being possible.

13. Even in the absence of a body, the Mukta enjoys objects as in state of dream; because of the reasonableness of such enjoyments.—550.

COMMENTARY.

The enjoyment is not impossible, even in the absence of a (self-created) body. As in the condition of dream (where the objects of enjoyment and the subtle bodies through which those objects are enjoyed are created by the Lord Himself), so in the state of Mukti; (though the Mukta may not desire any such enjoyment, the Lord out of His fullness bestows such enjoyments on him). Therefore, as in a dream, where there is no body, but still enjoyment, so in the state of Mukti, there is enjoyment even without the body.

Of course, when the Mukta creates a body, then his enjoyment is more full and intense. As is mentioned in the next sûtra.

8ÛTRA IV. 4. 14.

भावे जामद्रत्॥ १। १। ११॥

आहे Bhave, in the existence of (the body). आवास Jagradvat, just as in the waking state,

14. When there is a body (then the enjoyment is more intense) as in the waking state.—551.

COMMENTARY.

When there is a body, then the enjoyment is, of course, as full as in the waking state. As to the objection of the Pürvapakşin, that the objects of enjoyment have no attraction for the Mukta, it is perfectly correct. But as these objects, like sentiments arising on the experiencing of a work of true art, are looked upon by the Mukta as gifts of God, his Prasida, he does not discard them, but on the contrary accepts them eagerly. Hence the objection is not valid. As the Lord Hari Himzelf is ever full and self-satisfied, yet enjoys the offerings made to Him by His devotees, in order to satisfy the wish of His devotees; and the desire for enjoyment of the Lord is but a response to the wish of His devotees; so there arises a desire in the Mukta even, to enjoy the objects of desire as the sacred gift of the Lord, as His Prasada; and this is indeed not an ordinary desire but Bhakti. And it should be so understood.

Adhikarana IX.—The Mukta is Omniscient.

The author now shows that the Mukta is omniscient.

(Visaya).—In the Chh. Up. (VII. 26. 2, see sutra IV. 4, II. 1.) We have the following:—

"The released soul does not see death, nor illness, nor pain. The released sees everything and obtains everything, everywhere."

This shows that the released has knowledge of every object.

(Doubt).—Is it possible that the released should possess such omniscience or is it not?

(Pārvapakṣa).—The Pārvapakṣin maintains that the released soul has no omniscience, because the scripture says that it is embraced by the Prājāa Self, Bri. Ār. (IV. 3. 21).

तहा चस्येतवृतिष्क्रन्या चपहतपाच्माऽमयॐ क्रपंतचया प्रियया क्रिया संपरिष्यको न बाह्यं किंचन वेद नान्तरमेवमेवायं पुक्तः प्राव्हे नात्मना संपरिष्यको न बाह्यं किंचन वेद नान्तरं तहा चस्येतदासकाममात्मकाममकामॐ क्रपॐ शोक्रान्तरम् ॥ २१ ॥

"This indeed is his (true) form, free from desires, free from evil, free from fear. Now as a man, when embraced by a beloved wife, knows nothing that is without, nothing that is within, thus this person, when embraced by the intelligent (Prajfia) Self, knows nothing that is without, nothing that is within. This indeed is his (true) form in which his wishes are fulfilled, in which the Self (only) is his wish, in which no wish is felt, free from any sorrow."

(Siddhanta). -- This view is set aside in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 15.

प्रदीपवदावेशस्त्रचाड्डि दर्शयति ॥ ४ । ४ । १५ ॥

वरीपवर Pradipavat, just as in the case of a lamp. पारेष: Âveśah, entering. तथा Tatha, thus. दि Hi, because. वर्षचारी Darśayati, declares (the scripture).

15. The pervasion (of the soul of the Mukta in every object, and his thus knowing every object), is like that of a lamp; because the scripture declares it to be so.—552.

COMMENTARY

As a lamp, though remaining in one place, enters into many places through its rays, so the Mukta enters into many objects through the spreading out of its Prajūā (the aura of consciousness). To this effect is the Sruti of the Svetāsvatara. Up. (IV. 18).

यदातमसान दिवा न रामिनं सम चासच्छित एव केवसः । तदशरं तत्सवितुर्व-रेज्यं प्रशा च तकात्मस्ता पुराची ॥ १८॥

"When the light has risen, there is no day, no night, neither existence nor non-existence, Siva the blessed alone is there. That is the eternal, the adorable light of Savitri, and the ancient wisdom of tha Jiva (Prajña) proceeded from That (Lord Rari)."

The above shows that "tasmat,"—"from Him," from the Lord Hari, the ancient wisdom of the Jiva, so long under obscuration, spreads forth then.

Says an objector: It is not reasonable to hold that the Jiva becomes omniscient in the state of Mukti. The Br. Up. (IV. 3. 21 ants) says the Jiva is then in the embrace of the Lord and is unconscious of every discrete knowledge. The next sûtra gives a reply to this objection, and explains that verse.

BÛTRA IV. 4. 16.

खाप्ययसम्पर्योरन्यतरापेक्ष्यमाविष्कृतंष्टि ॥ ४ । ४ । १६ ॥

स्थापम Svapyaya, deep sleep. सम्प्रकीः Sampattyoh, and union: the death-swoon. The moment just before the departure of soul from the body is called Sampatti. सम्बद्ध Anyatara, either, any one of the two. स्वेश्वय Apeksyam, to be referred, having regard to. साविकाल Âvişkritam, manifest: declared. दि Hi, because.

16. (That verse of the Br. Up., IV 3. 21) refers to either the state of deep sleep or to the state of death swoon (it does not refer to the condition of the Mukta); because the scripture has made it clear.—553.

COMMENTARY.

The above Br. Up. text is not enough to prohibit the possession of discrete consciousness by the Mukta, because it has reference either to the condition of deep sleep or of death swoon. In the Chhandogya Up. (VI. 8. 1) the word Svapiti is thus explained:—Svam apito bhavati tasmad enam Svapiti ity achaksate: svam hy apito bhavati: "He has reached the Self (sva), therefore, they say Svapiti (he sleeps), because he has gone to his self (Sva)." Further in the same section (VI. 8. 6) it says "when the man departs, speech merges in the mind, the mind in breath, &c." Thus the scripture describes the states of deep sleep and death (Sampatti) as states of unconsciousness. On the other han l, it reveals the state of Mukti as that of all-knowledge. In the same Chhandogya Up. (VIII. II. 1.) Indra addressing Prajapati thus deprecates the condition of deep sleep:—"In truth he thus does not know himself that he is I, nor does he know anything exists. He is gone, as if to utter annihilation. I see no good in this." Thus showing the utter unconsciousness of the Jiva in deep sleep, the same Sruti, in the speech of Prajapati, describes the state of Mukti, unlike that of deep sleep, as a state of most vivid consciousness, in these words (VIII. 12. 5.):—"He, the Self, seeing these pleasures through his divine eye, i.e., the mind, rejoices. The Devas who are in the world of Brahman meditate on that. Therefore all worlds belong to them and all desires."

Thus the Chhândogya Up, clearly draws a distinction between the deep sleep and death which is that of unconsciousness, and the state of Mukti which is a state of exalted consciousness. The word 'annihilation' used in the above means 'non-perception of any object.'

Thus it is proved that the released soul is Omniscient.

Adhikarana X.—But the Mukta cannot create a world.

In the Chh. Up. we have the following (VIII. 1. 6.):-

तय इहात्मानमनदुविय अञ्जल्पेतारुश्च सत्वान् कामारुशेवारु सर्वेषु केकिय-कामचारा भवत्यय य इहात्मानमदुविय अञ्जल्पेतारुश्च सत्यान् कामारुसीवारु सर्वेषु केकिषु कामचारा भवति ॥ ६ ॥

"Those who depart from hence without having discovered the Self and those true desires, for them there is no freedom in all the worlds. But those who depart from heate, after having discovered the Self and those true desires, for them there is freedom in all the worlds."

As an example of Kâmacharya or freedom in all the worlds, the same Upanisad mentions (VIII. 2. 1, &c):—

स य दि पितृक्षेत्रकामा भवति संकत्पादेवास्य पितरः समुचिड्डांन्त तेन पितृक्षेत्रकेन संपन्नो महीयते ॥ १ ॥ यथ यदि मातृक्षेत्रकामा भवति संकरपादेवास्य मातरः समु-चिड्डांन्त तेन मातृक्षेत्रकेन संपन्नो महीयते ॥ २ ॥

&quot;Thus he who desires the world of the fathers, by his mere will the fathers come to receive him, and having obtained the world of the fathers, he is happy."

&quot;And he who desires the world of the mothers, by his mere will the mothers receive him, and having obtained the world of the mothers, he is happy."

(Ptrvapak;a).—Since the Mukta has reached the highest equality with the Lord (Mundaka Up., III. 1. 3), and since the scriptures mention that the Mukta has the power of realising all his thoughts (Sattya-sankalpa), he must have the power also of creating the universe.

(Siddhanta.)—This view is set aside in the next sutra.

17. (The Mukta has all powers) with the exception of creating the universe; because the context and the non-proximity (debar any other view).—554.

COMMENTARY.

The Mukta no doubt creates the Pitriloka and Mâtriloka, etc., as we learn from the Chh. Up. (VIII. 2. 1. &c); but his creation has this limitation, that it is a local creation only, different from the creation of the Supreme Brahman, who creates the whole universe, consisting of spirit and matter, sustains it and dissolves it back into Himself. This power belongs to Brahman alone and to no Mukta Jiva, as we find from the Tait. Up. (III. 1. 1.)

भृगुर्वे वार्ध्यः ॥ वदयं पितरमुपलसार ॥ वधीद् भगवे। ब्रह्मेति ॥ तस्मा पत्त्यो-बाब ॥ व्यमं प्रायं बक्षुः भोत्रं मने। बाबमिति ॥ तॐ देश्वाब ॥ यते। वा इमानि मृतानि जायन्ते ॥ येन जातानि जीवन्ति ॥ यत्प्रयन्त्यभिसंबिद्यन्ति ॥ तक्किकासस्य ॥ तक्क्ष्मेति ॥

"Bhrigu Varuni went to his father Varuna, saying: "Sir, teach me Brahman." He told him this, vis., Food, breath, the eye, the ear, mind, speech.

"Then he said again to him: 'That from whence these beings are born, that by which when born, they live, that into which they enter at their death, try to know that. That is Brahman."

With the exception of Jagatvyâpara, the released soul has every other power. How do we know this? From the leading subject-matter and from non-proximity. The leading subject-matter in the above passage of the Taitt. Up., is Supreme Brahman. The son asks his father to teach him Brahman, and the father defines Brahman as "that from whence these beings are born, etc." The topic there is of Brahman and not the released soul. Nor can the released soul, by any method of attraction and imitation, get this power of world creation. In fact, that Upanisad in II. 6. 1, expressly says:—

चसानेव स मवति ॥ चसाइक्षेति वेद वेत् ॥ चस्ति इक्षेत् ॥ सामाने तते। विदरिति ॥

"He who knows Brahman as non-existing, becomes himself non-existing. He who knows the Brahman as existing, him we know himself as existing."

Moreover, the Mukta being not the subject matter under discussion in the immediate proximity of the Tait. verse, he cannot be said to acquire this power of world-creation by any means. If it were otherwise, then the author of the sûtra would not have defined Brahman as he does in I. 1. 2, as the Creator of the universe, for all definitions presuppose some special individual attributes.

Moreover, if every Mukta became a God, with the god-like power of creation, then there would be many gods in this universe, and instead of this being a cosmos, it would be a chaos. Therefore, the Mukta is not equal to God, and has not the power of world-creation.

Says an objector, but Taitt. Up. and Chh. Up. both declare that a released soul becomes the object of adoration to the Devas even, and since they teach that he possesses such lordliness, it is natural to suppose that he has the power of world-creation. Thus Taitt. Up., 1. 5. 3, says:—Sarve asmai deva balim Avahanti, "(all Devas bring offerings to him.)" So also the Chh. Up., 7. 25. 2, says. Sa svaråd bhavati tasya sarveşu lokeşu kāmachāro bhavati." (He becomes a self-ruler, he moves in all the worlds according to his wishes.)

This objection is raised in the first half of the next Sûtra, and answered therein in the next half.

SÛTRA IV. 4. 18.

प्रत्यच्रोपदेशान्नेति चेन्नाधिकारिकमग्ड स्योक्तेः॥४।४।१८॥

श्रास्त्र Pratyakea, direct. उपरेशास् Upaderat, on account of (direct) teaching. श्रा Na, not. पृति lti, so. चेस् Chet, if. श्रा Na not. चाधिकारिक Ådhikarika, those entrusted with the special function, a world-ruler, office-bearer, like Brahma, &c. स्वाद्यस्य Mandalasya, spheres (i.e., of those abiding in the spheres, of those entrusted with the special functions.

18. If it be objected that this is not so, because there is direct scriptural teaching (to the effect that a Mukta becomes a world-creator), we reply, it is not so: because those texts declare (that the Mukta enjoys pleasures) in the spheres of world-rulers.—555.

COMM: NTARY.

If an objector say "the Sruti itself directly teaches that the Mukta can create a world; and so it is not proper to deny to him the power of world-creation," we reply to him thus "The texts are wrongly interpreted by you. They refer to the power of every Mukta, to go to the spheres of cosmic rulers like Brahma and the rest: and there enjoy all the pleasures of those spheres, through the kind permission of the Supreme Ruler." Thus the Muktas, like the Kumaras, Narada and the rest, have unobstructed power of movement in every sphere, and this is what is meant by the word "Kâmachârs," "freedom of movement." The rulers of those spheres moreover, honor such august visitors with all reverential offerings; and this is what is meant by the phrase "sarve devâ balim asmai âvahanti" -all Devas bring offerings to him. Those two texts are not an authority for holding that a Mukta can be a world-creator. They merely show that a Mukta participates, through the most merciful kindness of the Lord, in all enjoyments to be found in those phenomenal spheres which declare His glory.

Says an objector—if a Mukta enjoys all the pleasures to be found in the various worlds of phenomena, then he is no higher than an ordinary world-current-driven soul (Samsari Jiva), for all phenomenal pleasures have an end. The next sûtra answers this objection.

BÛTRA IV. 4. 19.

विकारावर्ति च तथाद्दिस्यितमाद्द्र ॥ ४ । ४ । १६ ॥

विकार Vikara, in the wordly life: the changing. सपति Avarti, not existing: Vikara-avarti=Brahman, that in which change does not exist. प Cha, and. तथा Tatha, of that kind. हि Hi, because. स्थितिक Sthitim, abiding, position. पाह Aha, says.

19. (The Mukta ever abides in) That who is changeless, because the Sruti also has declared such abiding.—556.

COMMENTARY.

"The changing" is this world of phenomena, for it is the six-fold modification, which every being in this world undergoes. That which does not exist in the changing is called Vikâra-avarti. It is the changeless Brahman and the abode of Brahman, which also possesses all the attributes of Brahman. The Mukta dwells in all spheres, fully knowing all the laws that govern those spheres, and all the attributes and nature of the Loid, who has created those spheres. Through the might of his Vidyâ, he knows both the nature and the attributes of the Lord, free from the twofold covering. Thus the dwelling of the Mukta in these spheres, differs from the dwelling of the Samsari Jivas in them. "The Sruti also has declared such abiding." Thus the Kath. Up., V. 1. declares:—

पुरमेकावृत्राह्मारमञस्याकक्रवेतसः ॥ चतुत्राय न शोवति विभुक्तमः विभुक्यत पत्रह्ने तत् ॥ १ ॥

There is a town with eleven gates belonging to the unborn Brahman, whose thoughts are never crooked. He who meditates on Rim (in the lotus of the heart) grieves no more, and being liberated (from Avidya which covers the essential nature of Brahman) becomes free (from the Maya which veils the attributes of the Lord.) This is that.

The above verse shows that the sage becomes free from the two-fold veils and being then free, he comes face to face with the Lord, and ever remains enjoying the highest end of man.

This covering or veil is really no covering on the face of the Lord: it is like the clouds covering the sun. As a matter of fact, the clouds do not cover the sun, but it is from the point of view of the observer on earth that the clouds appear to cover the sun. Similarly, these two coverings of the Lord (the Swarûpa Âvarikâ and the Guṇa Âvarikâ) are not real coverings, existing in Brahman, but veils existing between the Jiva and Brahman, and existing in the vision of the Jiva alone and not in Brahman.

This we find clearly stated in the Bhagawata Purana:—विकल्पमानया वस्य सातुमीसापयेऽमुया । विमोदिता विकल्पने ममाद्दमितितु वियः ॥

The men of perverse intellect deluded by this Mâyâ of the Lord, which stands shamelessly within the scope of their vision (putting a veil on it) mistakenly assert this is "mine" this is "I."

For as the cloud cannot really cover the sun, so this shameless Maya cannot cover the Lord, but only throws a glamour on the vision of the befooled man.

Says an objector:—Since the highest end of man is to realise the essential nature of the soul, as intelligence and bliss, and as possessing the attributes of true resolve (Satya Sankalpa) and the rest, where is the necessity of making further efforts to know God? To know the Self is enough.

This objection is answered in the next sûtra

SÛTRA IV. 4, 20.

दर्शयतरचैवं प्रत्यचानुमाने ॥ ४। ४। २०॥

वर्षाचनः Daráayatah, they both show. च Cha, and. वृषक् Evam, thus. क्रमच, Pratyakan, direct knowledge: Śruti, चतुन्तने, Anumane, and inference; Smriti.

20. The Revelation and Tradition also show it thus. —557.

COMMENTARY.

Though the Mukta Jiva is as described above (namely, is intelligence, bliss, will-power, &c.), yet in its own nature it is not endowed with infinite bliss (or infinite knowledge, &c.): because it is atomic in size. (It is by its falling into the infinite ocean) of Brahman, that it acquires measureless bliss. This is shown both by the Revelation as well as by Tradition. Thus the Taitt. Up., II. 7, Rasam hy eva ayam labdhvâ ânandî bhavati: "indeed by getting this Flavour, he becomes blessed." So also in the Gitâ, XIV. 27:—

्प्रतिष्ठाञ्चमसृतस्याच्यस्य च । । धर्मस्य सुचस्यैकान्तिकस्य च ॥ २७ ॥

For I am the abode of the ETERNAL, and of the indestructible nectar of immortality, of immemorial righteousness, and of unending bliss.

The word 'Cha' in the sûtra indicates that we may also apply the analogical reasoning here. As a poor man becomes rich when he takes refuge with a rich person and becomes his favourite, so the Jiva essentially atomic, becomes infinite through the infinity of the Lord.

But, says an objector: Does not the following text show that the Released gets the highest similarity with God? And if the Released is similar to God, it is by virtue of his own self that he becomes god-like, what is the necessity of a God then? The following verse of the Mund. Up., III. 1. 3, shows this similarity:—

यश् पर्यः पर्यते स्कमवर्षे कर्तारमीशं पुरुषं अद्ययोनिम् ॥ तदा विद्वान्युव्यपापे विश्य निरञ्जनः परमं साम्यमुपैति ॥ ३ ॥

"When the seer sees the brilliant maker and Lord of the would as the Person in whom Brahma has his source, then he becomes wise, and shaking off good and evil, he reaches the highest similarity, free from passions."

'Objection'). No doubt, the soul is spoken of as atomic, but that is merely a figure of speech, in order to facilitate the understanding of it. The Buddhi is atomic and its attribute is wrongly ascribed to the Jiva who is really Vibhu or all-pervading.

This objection is answered in the next sûtra.

SÛTRA. IV. 4. 21.

भोगमाससाम्यनिङ्गाचु च ॥ ४ । ४ । २१ ॥

স্থান, Bhoga, enjoyment. স্বাস্থ্য, Matra, only. আন্তর, Samya, eqality. বিস্নুত্ত্ ngat, on account of indication. স্ব Cha, only. স্ব, Na, not. This word is to be read into the aphorism by drawing it from IV. 4. 18, 21. The similarity of the Jiva with Brahman is in the matter of enjoyment only: because of the indication of the Srati.—558.

COMMENTARY.

The word Cha "and" has the force of only here. The word 'not' is to be read into the Sûtra, from Sûtra IV. 4. 18: and though its Anuvritti was not current in the two sûtras immediately following it, it is current in it, by the maxim of "frog-jump." The Taitt. Up., II. 1. 1. "He reaches all objects of desires together with (saha, the all-knowing Brahman," indicates that the Mukta is equal to God in matters of enjoyment only: because from the indicatory hint given there, the sense of the passage is not that the Mukta is essentially and absolutely equal to the Lord.

In a previous sûtra (II. 3. 19, p. 355) it has been proved that the soul is really and not metaphorically atomic, and so this objection that the soul is all-pervading has already been answered.

In that sûtra, the essential form of soul is determined, in the present sûtra, the author of the treatise shows that the Jiva and Brahman have equality only in the matter of enjoyment, but they are different in their essential nature—the one is atomic, the other is all-pervading, &c. This inequality, moreover, is real and not fictitious.

Adhikarana XI.—The Mukta is eternally free and never returns.

Now the author commences the topic that the Mukta is everywhere in the proximity of Brahman.

(Viçaya).—All the texts describing the attainment of the world of the Lord by the free, are Viçaya texts here.

(Doubt).—There arises this doubt. Is this Mukti, which consists in reaching the Lord, permanent or temporal?

(Ptrospakes).—Since this release consists in reaching a particular world or Loka, and there is no distinction between Lokas, so far as their phenomenal nature is concerned, whether it be Svarga-Loka or Vaikunthaloka; and from every Loka there is a possibility of fall; so the Mukti is not eternal.

(Siddhanta).—This view is refuted in the next sûtra.

म्रनावृत्तिः राज्यादनावृत्तिः राज्यात् ॥ ४ । ४ । २२ ॥

श्वनावृत्तिः, Anavrittib, no return. शब्दान् , Sabdat, on account of the scriptural statement. श्वनावृत्तिः, Anavrittib, no return. शब्दान् Sabdat, on account of the scriptural statement;

22. There is no return (to Samsara for the Mukta) because of the word of God; yea there is no return, because of the word of God.—559.

COMMENTARY.

He who has reached the world of the Lord, by devotion to Him, accompanied by a knowledge of His qualities, never comes back from it to Samsârs. Why? Because of the Word. Because there is this scriptural statement in the Chhândogya Upanisad (IV 15.6):—

स प्नान्तदा गमयत्वेष देवपयो व्यापय पतेन प्रतिपद्यमाना इमं मानवमावर्तः नावर्तन्ते नावर्तन्ते ॥ ६ ॥

"He leads them to Brahman. This is the path of the Devas, the path that leads to Brahman. Those who proceed on that path do not return to the life of man, yes, they do not return."

To the same effect is the following verse of the Chhândogya Up. (ViII. 15.1):—

स बास्वेषं वर्तयन्यावदायुषं अद्यक्षेत्रममिसंपद्यते न च पुनरावर्तते न च पुनरा-वर्तते न च पुनरावर्तते ॥ १ ॥

He verily thus passing his life, attains on death, the world of Brahman, and never returns therefrom, yea, never returns therefrom.

To the same point is the following Smriti text: -

मामुपेत्य पुनर्जन्म तुःकास्वयमशास्वतम् । नाम् वन्ति महात्मानः संसिद्धिः परमा नताः ॥ १५ ॥

Having come to Me, these Mahatmas come not again to birth, the place of pain, non-eternal; they have gone to the highest bliss.

चाम्यसुवनाङ्गोकाः पुनरावर्तिने।उद्वर्ष । मामुपेख तु कैतिय पुनर्जन्म न विचर्त ॥ १६ ॥

The worlds, beginning with the world of Brahma, they come and go, O Arjuna' but he who cometh unto me, O Kaunteya, he knoweth birth no more. (Gitâ, XVIII, 15, 16).

Nor indeed can it be feared that the Supreme Lord, the blessed Hari, will ever wish to throw down from his world, His servant, the Mukts, or that the Mukts would ever wish to leave his Beloved. For has not the Lord said in the Gitâ (VII. 17):—"I am supremely dear to the wise and he is dear to me." Or does not the Bhâgavata Purâna also say, "Sadhavo hridayam mahyam sâdhûnâm hridayam tu aham," "I am the heart of the Sâdhus, and the Sâdhus are verily my heart." Thus there is excess of reciprocal love between the two, leaving no room for any such doubts, unworthy both of the Lord and His Devotee. Also in the Bhigavats Purâpa, we have the following:—

ये दारागारपुत्रासान् प्राचान् विचित्रमं परम् । दित्वा मा शरवं याताः कयं तांस्तकः मुस्सदे ॥ वातास्मा पुरुषः कृष्यपादम्बं न मुख्यति । मुकस्यव परिद्वोशः पान्यः स्वशरवं यथा ॥

Those who leaving aside wives, sons, houses, lives and riches sought shelter in me, how can I allow myself to desert them?

A clean-souled man never leaves the feet of Sri Krisna, just as a traveller who has reached his home after undergoing all sorts of trouble, does not leave it.

Thus, on the one hand, the Lord has the strong determination not to leave his devotees and, on the other hand, his devotees have an equally strong love for Him, which does not allow them to leave Him.

To sum up, the Lord never abandons His own extremely beloved children, who are a fragment of his own essence, after having brought them to His home, and after having washed away their ignorance, which had caused them to turn their face from the Lord. More so when it is remembered that the promises of the Lord are ever true, that His resolutions are never frustrated, that He is an ocean of protecting kindness for all those who take shelter under Him, and that He is the Lord of all. Such a being will never renounce his devotees, who have abandoned everything.

The Jiva also, on the other hand, whose quest was ever happiness, and who had constantly been deluded by a show of it in the shape of wives, children, etc., and who had passed innumerable lives in the pursuit of these false pleasures, will not leave that infinity of true joy and wisdom, the best friend and master, the most merciful, when he has found Him through the grace of the good teacher and through the arising of his good fortune. The soul, when it has once found its origin, never has any desire left for things other than the Lord and follows Him alone and never wishes to be away from Him. This is not a question for logical arguments, it is a matter learnt through the scriptures alone and must be so believed, whose sole authorities are the scriptures.

The repetition of the sûtra indicates that the book has come to an end.

APPENDIX 1.

THE ORIGIN OF BHAKTI DOCTRINE.

The doctrine of Bhakti has given rise to many theories with regard to its origin. Several European authors are of opinion that this doctrine is borrowed by the Indians from Christanity. There is nothing improbable intrinsically in this theory. Christian colonists were in India long before the rise of Madhvacharya and Ramanuja. The following quotation from Mr. Kennedy's notes in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for April 1907, shows how Christianity could have affected Hinduism:—

"On the North-West frontier we find an entirely different state of things. Bactria was the home of all persecuted sects. To it fied the Manicheans, the Mazdakites, the Christians, whenever the whim of the monarch or the pressure of the Magi or the relations with home prompted Sassanian kings to persecute their subjects. Christianity was planted at a very early period in Bactria and flourished there greatly. Bardaisan, the great Syrian Gnostic, who died in 228 A.D., expressly mentions the Christian communities of Bactria and Persia. 'John, the Persian, Bishop of the church of Persian and Great India,' attended the Nicene Council in $25 A.D. The Bishop of Herat was present at a Council held by the Katholikos in 424 A.D. Christianity spread among the White Huns in the fifth century, and they had a Bishop of their own by the middle of the sixth. Some 60 years later Chosroes II transported a vast number of Christian captives taken in the Roman wars to Seistan. In the seventh century Merv became the seat of Metropolitan Archbishop, and not only Nestorians but Jacobites had their own bishops throughout all those regions. India was surrounded on the North-West frontier by a ring of Christian communities, many of them allied in blood to the barbarous tribes from Contral Asia which were then invading Iudia, and ready to adopt the first tolerable religion presented to them."

Mathura, the home of Krishna's worship, was peopled by the Gurjars in the fifth century, and it is said that these Gurjars brought the Ruchi Bhakti doctrine of Christianity into India, from Bactria. The whole of this is very ably summrised by Mr. Kennedy in his paper on the "child Krishna, Christianity, and the Gurjars" in the October No. of the J. R. A. S. for 1907. The following quotation from it will show his point of view:—

"We are now in a position to make certain inference. (1) The earliest settlements of the Gurjars were in the extreme north-west of the Panjab. Their physique, their traditions and the present distribution of the clan point to this conclusion, and it is no less certain that the Southern Gurjars came from the North, probably byway of Rajputana. (2) The Gurjars suddenly appear in the middle of the sixth century as a great and powerful clan, dispersed over a wide area, and founding important states. The Greek historians, the Mahabharata, and other sources have made us well acquainted with the tribes of the North-Western Panjab. The sudden appearance among them of a people so great and powerful as the Gurjars can only be explained on the hypothesis of a foreign migration. These Gurjars, who worshipped neither Siva nor Buddha, cannot have been of India origin, and their sun-worship, their waggons, and to some extent their polyandry, all point to Central Asia. (8) As the two most important Gurjar states date from the first half of the sixth century, the Gurjars must have entered India somewhat earlier; in other words, they must have come with the Hunas. In common with the Hunas they worshipped the sun, the kings who warred against the Hunas were the enemies of the Gurjars; and the princes of Gurjardesa were feudatories of the Shahi kings of Gandhara, who were of Turki, if not of Hunic, origin. There is a close connection between the Gurjars and the Hunas.

"If then, the Scythian nomads of Braj were Gurjaras, as the evidence would suggest, it is easy to see how they might have acquired some tincture of Christianity, either from their neighbours in Central Asia or from their connection with Christians among the Hunas. The Christian stories of the Nativity passed readily into the mediseval Buddhism of Central Asia, they are popular among hindus of the present day, who know nothing else of Christianity and reminiscences of the Christmas festival still linger among some of the Berber tribes of North Africa. It is no idle fancy, therefore, to suppose that the Northern nomads who roamed through the woods of Braj, brought with them a child-god, a Christian legend, and Christmas feetival; and in a city of lax Buddhists and eager Hindus this germ sufficed for the birth of a new if hybrid divinity. The priests who accompanied the nomads would readily invent or lend themselves to the invention, of a cult which promised them speedy advancement to the full-blown rank of Brahman. For although the mass of the Gurjars, as of the White Huns, was barbarian, yet there is plenty of evidence to show that among the upper classes there was a knowledge of letters and considerable civilisation. The new god was a god of divine childhood and of love. In Buddhism the idea of love has ranged from universal benevolence towards men and animals down through every stage of the scale to the grossest licentiousness; and Mathura was not free from such exhibitions, as its sculptures testify. Probably the nomads who brought the new god to Mathura knew little of Christianity except the stories of the infancy. They brought them to a Buddhist city where they would find a ready acceptance. But by the beginning of the sixth century the Buddhism of Mathura was on the wane, and Hinduism was in the ascendant. The name of the new god sounded in the ears of Hindus like that of the elder Krishna, whom the popular epic had exalted to the highest rank : the new god, like the elder Krishna, was an incarnation of the Most High; and so the youthful Krishna was born who was destined, in the course of centuries, to surpass all his older rivals in the ardour of his devotees and the multitude of his worshippers."

This view of Mr. Kennedy is controverted by Mr Keith in J. R. A. S. for January 1908. He there shows that Krisna is already a divinity and worshipped as such in the days of Mahâbhāsya, which was composed some two centuries B.C. That book refers to the killing of Kamsa by Krisna and thus the story of the childhood of Krisna is older than Christian Nativity. I make the following quotation from that article:—

"As evidence for the early date of the identification of Krishna and Visnu, it is useless to quote the Epic as long as doubts of a serious character exist as to its date. But we have the evidence of Patanjall, which though not conclusive, deserves fuller consideration than it has received from Mr. Kennedy. In discussing Panini, iv. 2. 98, Patanjall distinctly says that Vasudeva is a samina of the Bhagvant, and Weber himself admits that, on the analogy of Sivabhagavata, while the passage does not prove that Krishna is identical with Visnu, it does show that he was already far more than a Kastriya and was a higher divine creature. But, later on, Weber with his usual candour, makes admission. In discussing the evidence afforded by the Mahabhasya for the early existence of the drama he notices the fact that the two legends mentioned as the subjects of representation are the Balibandha and the Kamsavadha, and he points out that, as the first of these subjects is undoubtedly taken from the legend of Visnu, it is probably necessary to assume that already Visnu and Krisna stood in a close relationship. There seems indeed, no ground whatever to deny that they were already identified and that this was the case is indicated by the fact that the Mahabhasya tells us that in the Kamsavadha the Granthikas divided themselves into two parties, the one followers of Kansa, the other followers of Krisna, and that the former were kalamukhah and the latter raktamukhah. Weber was naturally puzzled to find that Krisna's friends were red in colour, but the whole thing explains itself when we regard the contest as one of the many old nature rituals where two parties join in mimic strife, the one striving to rescue, the other to capture the sun. Such a ritual, in all probability, was the source of the drama in Greece, and traces of it are to be found in England. The supporters of Krisna, as identified with the sun, Visnu, naturally wear the red colour of the luminary as an act of sympathetic magic."

While the controversy about the origin of the Bhakti religion is in this state, it is not possible to come to any definite conclusion, one way or the other. But there are some facts which emerge out of this controversy. which appear to be beyond the scope of legitimate doubt, and which may be taken as well proved. One of them is that there were several persons bearing the name of Krisna in Indian tradition, and their histories have become coalesced into one by a process well-known to students of history. This Krisna of the Maliabharata war, the statesman and philosopher. seems to be a different person from the child of Yasoda, the Darling of Gokula. It is not only the European scholars who have come to this conclusion, but Śrî Madhvacharya, the founder of the Dvaita School of Vedânta, has come to a somewhat similar conclusion. In his commentary on the Chhandogya Upanisad, he states that there were two Krisnas, both curiously having a mother called Devaki. I quote the following from his commentary (See Sacred Books of the Hindus, Chhândogya Upanişad, page 242).

- "There was an avatara of the Lord called Mahidasa, just as an avatara was called Krisna. Now curiously enough, both these names occur in this Upanisad. Mahidasa in this chapter, and Krisna Dovaki-putra in the next chapter. These, however, do not refer to the avataras, but to different persons."
- "The Mahidasa of this chapter is a different person and so also is the Krisna of the next chapter. The Mahidasa here is an Aitareya, and Krisna Devakiputra is not the avatara Sri Krisna. Similarly, the Kapila mentioned in this Upanisad is different from the avatara of that name."
- "Says an objector:—But this is rather arbitrary. Had there been merely similarity of names, you might have said they were different persons, from the avatara of those names. But the similarity extends further than this, Mahidasa, the Avatara, was the son Itara, and so the Mahidasa here is also called the son of Itara, for Aitareya means he whose mother is Itara. Similarly, the avatara Krisna was the son of Devaki, and the Krisna of the Upanisad here is also called the son of Devaki. Similarly, Kapila, the avatara had a disciple called Asuri, and the Kapila of the Upanisad has also a disciple called Asuri. These coincidences are, to say the least, very curious." To this the Commentator replies:—

"These three persons had performed high and strict penance in ancient times, and had obtained a boon from Brahma, the Paramesthin, to this effect, that two of them should get the names of the avataras, in their next lives, and the names of their mothers should also be the same as the names of the mothers of Visnu. While Kapila asked the boon that his disciples and disciples of his disciples should have the same names as the disciples, etc., of the avatara Kapila. They further asked that their names should be immortalised by being recorded in the Vodas. Brahma, the Grand Sire of all creatures, granted this boon to them. Therefore, it is that these three well-known Risis bear not only the names of divine incarnations, but the names of their mothers and disciples, etc., are also similar." In the Kalika Purana also we find the same account of this curious coincidence:—

"Mahidasa, the son of Itara, mentioned in the Bnavricha Upanisad, is the Lord Visnu Rimself directly: while there was another Mahidasa, son of Itara, who was a sage. Similarly, Krisna called Vasudeva is the Supreme Spirit Himself; while there was another person called Krisna Devaki-putra mentioned in the Upanisad. Kapila called Vasudeva is the Lord Narayana Himself, while Kapila is the name of a sage also, and whose pupils were also called Asuri, etc. The sage Mahidasa lived for 116 years by learning the secret doctrine taught in the Upanisad; the sage Krisna Devaki-putra was the disciple of Ghora Angiras, the sage Kapila was the founder of the perverse doctrine (atheistic Sankhya). These three obtained boon from Brahma the Paramesthin, and thus came to possess names similar to those of the avataras, and became famous by realising their desires and enjoyed happiness." Thus in the Kalika.

It is clear, therefore, that the worship of the child Krisna is a new phase, grafted on the ancient Krisna cult and brought from outside: either from the Christians of the North-Western Provinces (Bactria) or from the Nestorian monks who had settled in the Western coast of India; and near whose monastery of St. Thome, Ramanuj was born, and received his education.

The worship of the infant Krisna is considered pre-eminently the worship of the Supreme Lord. All other avataras are considered as partial, while the child Krisna, suckling at the breast of mother Yasoda is considered to be the perfect avatara. Thus Baladeva at page 387 says:—

"It is only in the Lord Kṛiṣṇa, the infant sucking at the breast of mother Yasoda, that we find the perfect manifestation of all the six attributes which constitute the Godhead, such for example, supreme love for all humanity or an object of supreme love for all humanity, the maker of the supremely sweet heavenly music which turns the head of even the wisest Gods like Brahma and the rest, the possessor of the most ravishing and beautiful form which enchants all who behold it, and immeasureable compassion and the rest."

But the traces of Christian influence are not so marked in the system of Ramanuja as in that of Madhva. Madhva boldly arrogates to himself the character of being the incarnation of Prana (the Christ principle of Christianity). Prana is the first begotten of God (Prathamah Prana), he is the son of God (Hareh sutah), he is the great Mediator and Saviour of all Jivas. No one has seen the father, but through the son: no one sees Hari but through Prana.

All these cannot be explained by the theory of chance and coincidences. To all fair-minded persons the conclusion would be clear, that the teachings of Christ had some influence, though very faint, at least, on the development of Madhva system; and its branch the Chaitanyaism which latter was certainly acted upon by Islam.

Nor need this conclusion jar upon the religious susceptibilities of our countrymen. For truth is no respecter of persons, and if the search for truth leads one to unsought for conclusions, it should be welcomed rather than hated. In the realm of truth, there should be no patriotic bias or caste prejudice. Nations of the world have borrowed many truths from India, and India need not be ashamed, if she in her turn has borrowed some truths from other nations. There is no discredit in borrowing; - the vital question is what has India done with such borrowing? A spiritual nation alone can borrow spiritual truths: nations in a state of barbaric ignorance are incapable of borrowing or assimilating such truths. It is, therefore, the glory of India that she has so assimilated the Christian truths that they have entered into the very fabric of her constitution, and moulded the character of her saints. The Christ said "If thine eye offends thee, pluck it out," and the Indian saint Vilvamangala carries this teaching into practice, by voluntarily making himself blind, because he had looked with amorous gaze on a woman. The Christ said "If thou art smitten on thy right cheek, turn thy left cheek." And a Hindu saint actually does so. The teachings of the Christ, therefore, have produced their best fruits in India; and the Indians are, therefore, often better Christians, than many a so-called Christian of the West. following five points quoted by Dr. Grierson brings out this fact most clearly:-

- (1) A saint teaches that initiation means "born again." The person who is taught misunderstands him and takes the words literally.
  - (2) Another saint, when smitten on one cheek, turns the other.
- (3) Another looks after a woman to lust after her, considers that his eye offends him, and blinds himself.
- (4) Another considers that his right hand offends him, so he cuts it off and casts it from him.
- (5) The incarnate God is referred to as having on one occasion washed the feet of His servants. This is specially interesting, for the Mahabharat legend is that He washed the feet of Brahmanas. The author distorts the old legend by changing Brahmanas to saints or disciples.

I have set forth above the views of Dr. Grierson and Mr. Kennedy in some detail, but the arguments adduced by these learned persons have been dealt with by the translator of the Bhaktiratnavalt in this series, and I need not repeat his arguments here, in order to show that the Bhakti doctrine was not borrowed from Christianity, but was as old as the worship of the Vasudeva in India. Bhakti, no doubt, is an indigenous growth of India, and has been placed above all doubts by the discovery of the inscription on the flagstaff of Garuda dedicated to Vasudeva, which bears the date of the second century before Christ. it fairly may be urged, on behalf of the opposite view, that the worship of the Child-God is something new in Hinduism, and requires to be explained. It is this Infant, that is considered as the fullest Avatâra: and unless passages are produced from the ancient Indian literature to show the worship of the child Krisna, the position of Mr. Kennedy appears for the present unanswered. No doubt, Mr. Keith in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for January 1908, page 169, has tried to meet the argument of Mr. Kennedy but the rejoinder of Mr. Kennedy in the April issue of the Journal is worth perusing.

The child worship or the worship of God as Gopâla, is not universal throughout India, and is confined to certain parts of it only, and there is nothing impossible in the view advocated by Mr. Kennedy, that this form of Bhakti called Ruchi Bhakti is not the ancient Indian Bhakti taught in the Gttâ and Upanisads, but is a later accretion.

Nor is this without analogy in modern Hinduism. No one can doubt for a moment that the word Nārāyaṇa is a very ancient term for God in Sanskrit literature and the worship of Nārāyaṇa is certainly anterior to the coming of Islam in India. But I doubt whether there is any intelligent Hindu scholar who would deny that the worship of Satya Nārāyaṇa and the Kathā or legend related regarding Him are not influenced by Mahomedanism: and that the whole of the Satya Nārāyaṇa's worship is not taken or adapted from Islam. Similarly, the word "Brahman" is very old in Hindu literature, but no one doubts for a moment that the modern form of the worship of Brahman, as seen in the sect of Keshab Chandra Sen, is taken from the Christian liturgy with appropriate modifications. No wonder, therefore, that the ancient Aryan worship of Vāsudeva was modified into the modern Gopāla worship by contact with the early Christians.

Let me not be, however, misunderstood on this point. I do not hold that it has been established conclusively that Gopâla worship has been borrowed from Christianity, but I maintain that the reasons in favour of such borrowing are stronger than those against it. This conclusion does not touch the larger issue as to the origin of Bhakti—for bhakti or loving devotion is not a thing that can be borrowed by one nation from another. Bhakti is as much natural to man as jñâna or karma. They are God given qualities. But though Bhakti is natural to man, its particular aspect as Gopâla worship may well have been taken from some outside source. In fact, the statues of Yadodâ holding Krisna in her lap resemble so very much with the Madonna holding the Infant Jesus that one is struck with the strange coincidence. It is the glory of Hinduism that it has assimilated the religions of various people and made them its own; and it need not be a matter for wonder if Hinduism has been influenced by the Avatâra of Bethlehem.

APPENDIX II.

The teachings given by Chaitanya have been summarised in the small pamplilet called Prameya Ratnâvalî by Baladeva Vidyâbhûşana. This school admits five principles or tattvas, namely, (1) Isvara or God, (2) Jîva or Soul, (3) Prakriti or Matter, (4) Kâla or Time, and (5) Karma or Action.

It teaches also nine Prameyas or propositions established by proper proofs. They are:—

- (1) God is the highest substance.
- (2) He is known through all the Revelations.
- (3) The world is real.
- (4) The differences are real.
- (5) The souls are real.
- (6) There are various grades of souls.
- (7) Release is the attainment of God.
- (8) Its cause is the worship of God.
- (9) Proofs are three, perception, inference and authority.

We give a translation of this short treatise here, hoping that it will give a better idea of the doctrines of this school than any summary.

PRAMEYA RATNÂVALÎ BY BALDEVA VIDYÂBHÛŞAŅA.

INTRODUCTORY.

Sri Baladeva Vidyabhūşana, after composing his commentary on Brahma Sūtras, under the direct inspiration of the lord Govinda, styled it Govinda Bhūşya. Thereupon he composed this short treatise, and in order to its successful termination, he recites the following verse or auspiciousness:—

PARA. T.

जयित भीगोविन्दो गोपीनायः स मदनगोपासः । वस्यामि यस्य कृपया ममेयरज्ञावस्य स्थाम् ॥

1. Let Sri Govinda, the Lord of Gopis, the Protector of the universe, the Giver of joy to His devotees, be ever victorious. Through his grace I shall describe briefly the various categories or Prameyas.—1.

Note.—This verse has a double meaning, Govinda, Gopinatha, and Madanagopala are three deities whose temples are famous in Brindavana. The next verse also is a prayer to the same effect.

PARA. II.

भक्तचाभासेनापि तेाचं द्घाने । धर्माध्यसे विश्वनिस्तारि नाझि ॥ निस्तानन्दाद्वैत वैतन्यद्वपे । तस्वे तस्मिन् निस्तमस्तां रतिर्नः ॥ २ ॥

2. Let our hearts be ever inclined towards that (Triune) Lord, whose essential form is intelligence (Chaitanya), eternal bliss (Nityananda), and peerlessness (Advaita). He is satisfied with the Jivas, if they show the slightest semblance of love towards Him. He is the Lord and Establisher of Justice, and the mere utterance of His name saves all souls in this universe.—2.

Note.—This verse also has a double meaning. It recites the three great Avatáras of the Kali age, who were contemporaries, namely. Chaitanya, the Avatára of Kriana, Nityananda, the incarration of Sankarana, and Advaita, the Avatára of Siva. In the next verse the author salutes the original founder of this sect, namely, Anandatirtha, better known as Madhvacharya.

PARA. III.

मानन्दतीर्थनामा सुक्रमयघामा यतिर्जीयात्। संसारार्थवतरिकं यमिह जनाः कीर्चयन्ति बुघाः ॥ ३ ॥

3. Let that ascetic be ever victorious, whose name is Anandatīrtha, who is the abode of joy, who is the ship to cross the ocean of transmigratory existence, and whom the wise ever praise in this world.—3.

Note.—In the next verse the author shows the necessity of remembering the succession of teachers through whom the particular doctrine comes into the world.

PARA. IV.

भवति विचिन्त्या विदुषा निरवकरा गुरुपरम्परा नित्यम् । एकान्तित्वं सिष्यति ययोदयति येन हरिताषः ॥ ४ ॥

4. The free-from-all-faults should constantly meditate on the faultiess succession of teachers, because by such meditation is obtained the one-pointedness of devotion, and there arises the grace of the Lord Hari on the man.—4.

Note.—About this are the following verses of Padma Purana.

PARA. V.

यदुक्तं पश्चपुराखे ।

सम्प्रदाय विद्वीना ये मन्त्रास्ते विफला मताः।

श्रतः कलौ भविष्यन्ति चत्वारः सम्प्रदायिनः ॥

श्रीब्रह्मरुद्रसनका वैष्णवाः चितिपावनाः।

चत्वारस्ते कर्लो भाव्या ह्युत्कले पुरुषोत्तमात् ॥ ५ ॥

As is said in the Padma Purana :-

5. The Mantras which are without any Sampradâya (which do not belong to any schools), are considered fruitless. Hence in the Kali age there will arise four founders of schools, namely, Srî, Brahmâ, Rudra and Sanaka. All these are Vaisnavas, sanctifying the earth, and will arise from the Supreme Person in Utkala, in the Kali age.—5.

Note.—These were the four founders of the four schools of Vaianavism. The Vianu mantras, found in the works of any of these four, have the power of conferring salvation; but not so, if found anywhere else. The ancient law is that every pupil must have a Guru, who belongs in direct apostolic succession, to any of these four. Therefore, a Vianu mantra, not belonging to any Sampradiya cannot produce any effect, though recited for a long time. The next verse names the four human representatives, through whom the abovementioned four divinities established their sects.

PARA. VI.

रामानुजं श्रीः स्वीचके मध्वाचार्यं चतुर्मुखः । श्रीविष्णुस्वामिनं रुद्रो निम्बादिखं चतुः सनः ॥ ६ ॥

6. Sri inspired (made her own) Râmânuja, the four-faced Brahmâ inspired Madhvâchârya, Rudra inspired Viṣṇu Swâmi, and the four Kumâras, Sanaka and the rest, inspired Nimbâditya.—6.

PARA. VII.

तत्र स्वग्रहपरमरा यथा।

The author next mentions the line of his own Gurus in the following verses :-

श्रीकृष्णब्रह्मदेविषादरायणसंज्ञकान् ।
श्रीमध्वश्रीपद्मनाभश्रीमन् नृष्ट्दिमाधवान् ॥
श्रक्षोभ्यजयतीर्घश्रीज्ञानिसन्धुदयानिधीन् ।
श्रीविद्यानिधि राजेन्द्र जयधर्मान् क्रमाद्वयम् ॥
पुरुषोत्तम ब्रह्मायय व्यासतीर्घाश्च सस्तुमः ।
ततो लक्ष्मीपतिं श्रीमन्माधवेन्द्रञ्च भक्तितः ॥
तच्छिष्यान् श्रीश्वराद्वेत नित्यानन्दान् जगद्गुरून् ।
देवमीश्वरिष्यं श्रीचैतन्यञ्च भजामद्दे ।
श्रीकृष्णप्रेमदानेन येन निस्तारितं जगत् ॥ ७ ॥ इति ॥

7. The first Guru is Lord Sri Krisna, whose disciple was Brahmâ, whose disciple was the divine sage Nârada, and whose disciple was Bâdarâyana, whose disciple was Madhva, whose disciple was Padmanâbha, whose disciple was Nrihari, whose disciple was Mâdhava, whose disciple was Akṣobhya, whose disciple was Jayatīrtha, whose disciple was Jñânasindhu, whose disciple was Dayânidhi, whose disciple was Vidyânidhi, whose disciple was Râjendra, whose disciple was Jayadharma, whose disciple was Puruṣottama, whose disciple was Brahmanya, whose disciple was Vyâsatīrtha. We pray to these all in succession. The disciple of Vyâsatīrtha was Lakṣmīpati, whose disciple was Mâdhavendra, who had three disciples; namely İśvarâchârya, Advaitâchârya and Nityânanda, all these are world-teachers. We bow to all these. We bow also, with adoration, to Lord Chaitanya, the refulgent, who was the disciple of Iśvarâchârya, and who saved the world, by showering on it the love of Lord Kṛiṣṇa.—7.

Note.—Though there is a great gap of thousands of years between Bådaråyana and Madhva, yet the latter is said to be the disciple of the former. The tradition says that once Madhvachārya and Sankarāchārya were disputing as to the truth of the various doctrines, surrounded by thousands of learned men, at the Manikarnikā Ghat, Benares. So absorbed were they in their disputations that they went on arguing, for days and nights together, without taking food and rest. Then all saw in heaven Vyšsa himself as blue as the sky, proclaiming that Madhva's exposition was in accordance with his doctrine and not that of Sankara.

Chaitanya is thus the disciple of livaracharya who was the disciple of Madhavendra.

This leaves no doubt that the Chaitanya Sampradaya of Bengal is a lineal descendant of the famous school of Madhya.

PARA, VIII.

श्रध प्रमेयाण्युद्दिश्यन्ते ।

श्री मध्व प्राष्ट्र विष्णुं परतममीललाम्नायवेद्यञ्च विश्वं सत्यं भेदञ्च जीवान् दृरिचरणजुषस्तारतम्यञ्च तेषाम् ॥ मोचं विष्ण्वंत्रिलाभं तदमलभजनं तस्य द्वेतुं प्रमाणम् प्रत्यचादित्रयञ्चेत्युपदिशति दृरिः कृष्णचैतन्यचन्द्रः ॥ ८ ॥

8. Now are described the categories Sri Madhva has said that Lord Visnu is the highest substance, and is to be known through all the revelations, that the universe is real and so also are real the differences that exist therein; that the Jivas are all servants of the Lord and are real, and so also are real the differences that exist between them. That salvation (Moksa) consists in obtaining the feet of Viṣnu; that the cause of getting this release is worshipping Him with purity of heart, without desiring fruit, and that the proofs are three—perception, inference and sacred testimony. Thus teaches Hari, Lord Kriṣna Chaitanya.—8.

Note.—The above verse recites the well-known nine categories or truths of this sect.

They may be thus shown:—

- (1) God is the highest substance.
- (2) He is known through the Revelations.
- (8) The world is real.
- (4) The differences are real.
- (5) The souls are real.
- (6) There are various grades of souls.
- (7) Release is the attainment of God.
- (8) Its cause is the worship of God,
- (9) Proofs are three, perception, inference and authority.

FIRST PRAMEYA.

PARA. IX.

The Supremacy of Vignu.

तत्र श्रीविष्काः परतमत्वम् । यथाश्रीगै।पाछोपनिषदि ।

Thus in the Gopála Půrva Tápani Upanişad we have the following as to the supremacy of Vişnu:—

तस्मात् कृष्ण एव परोदेवस्तं ध्यायेत् तं रसेत् तं भजेत्तं यजेन् । इति ।

Therefore, Krisna is indeed the highest God; let one meditate upon Him, let one recite His name constantly, let one serve Him constantly and adore Him always.

इवेताम्बतरापनिषदि च :--

Similarly, in the Svetasvatara Up. (l. 11) we have the following:-

ज्ञात्वा देवं सर्व्वपाशापद्दानिः चीगोः क्लेशेर्जन्ममृत्युप्रद्दाणिः। तस्याऽभिष्यानात्तृतीयं देद्दभेदे विश्वेश्वर्यं केवल श्राप्तकामः॥ ॥ इति॥ When that God is known, all fetters fall off, sufferings are destroyed and births and deaths cease. From meditating on Him there arises, on the dissolution of the (linga) body, the third state, that of universal lordship and isolation from (all trace of matter) and he becomes fully satisfied.

Note.—The third state arises when the Moon-world and the Brahma-world are transcended, and the man becomes free from his subtle body and reaches the world of Vianu.

In the next verse of the same Upanisad it is said :-

एतज्ज्ञेयं नित्यमेवात्मसंस्थं नातःपरं वेदित्व्यं हि किञ्चित् ॥ इति च ॥

This which rests eternally within the self should be known and beyond this not anything has to be known.

भीगीतासु च।

So also in the Gita (VII. 7) we have the following:-

मत्तः परतरं नान्यस्किंचिवस्ति धनंजय । ( मिय सर्विमिवं प्रोतं सूत्रे मियागणा इव ) इति ॥

There is naught whatsoever higher than I, O Dhananjaya. All this is threaded on Me, as rows of pearls on a string.—9.

PARA. X.

हेतुत्वाद् विभुचैतन्यानन्दत्वादि ग्रणाश्रयात् । नित्यनक्ष्म्यादिमत्वाच् च क्रुप्णः परतमो मतः॥ १०॥

10. Since He is the primordial cause, since He is the abode of all attributes like all-pervadingness, intelligence bliss, and the rest; and since He possesses eternally energies like Lakami and the rest, therefore Krisna is considered the Highest God.—10.

PARA. XL.

On this subject of His being the Universal cause, the Svettévataras (V. 4-5) say :-

(सर्वा दिश ऊर्व्ध्वमधश्च तिर्च्यक् प्रकाशयन् भ्राजते यद्द-नड्वान् ) एवं स देवे भगवान् वरेण्यो योनिस्वभावानिधितष्ठ-त्येकः ॥ ४ ॥ यद्य स्वभावं पचित विश्वयोनिः पाच्यांश्च सर्वान् परिणामयेचः । ( सर्वमेतद्विश्वमधितिष्ठत्येको गुणांश्च सर्वान् विनियोजयेचः ) ॥ ४ ॥

As the car of the sun shines, lighting up all quarters above, below, and across, thus does that God, who is one (Highest of all) and hence adorable, rule over all that has the nature of being the cause (of the world, such as Pradhâna, Mahat and the rest).

He being one, rules over all and everything so that the universal germ (Prakriti) ripens its nature (becomes modified into Mahat, etc.), diversifies all natures that can be ripened, and determines all qualities.

विश्ववैतन्यानन्त्रतं, यथा काठके।

As regards Ris all-pervadingness, intelligence and bliss, in the Katha Up. (II. 21) we have the following:—

भ्रशरीर७ शरीरेष्वनवस्येष्ववस्थितम् । महान्तं विभुमात्मानं मत्वा धीरो न शोचति ॥ इति ॥

(The wise who knows the Self, as bodiless within the the bodies, as unchanging among unchanging things), as great and OMNIPRESENT, does never grieve.

Note.—The above verse however mentions the ombipresence of God, it does not mention His intelligence and blissful nature. The word åtman, however, is used in the above verse, and etymologically it means the goal of the wise. Since the wise reach the intelligent and blissful God, hence those attributes also are included in this verse. This is shown in the next verse.

विज्ञानसुस्वरूपत्वमात्मग्रञ्चेन योज्यते । ज्ञनेन मुक्तगम्यत्वं व्युत्परोरिति तदिवः ॥

By the word ATMAN is understood the intelligence and blissfulness of God, because the wise say that Atman is derived from Ata, 'to obtain;' and it means He who is obtained by the Muktas (and it is well-known that the Muktas reach bliss and intelligence).

Note.—There is an express text also declaring God to be intelligence and bliss.

वाजसनेयनभादः।

In the Bri. Ar. Up. (111. 9. 28) the Vajasaneyins read the following:-

विज्ञानमानन्वं ब्रह्म रातिर्वातुः परायगं तिष्ठमानस्य तद्विव इति ॥ २८ ॥

'Brahman, who is knowledge and bliss, He is the principal, both to him who gives gifts, and also to him who stands firm, and knows.'

भीगापाकीपनिषदि च।

So also in the Gopála Půrva Tápani Up, we find God described as intelligence and bliss in express terms:—

तमेकं गोविन्दं सिचदानन्दविग्रहम् । इति ।

That one Govinda whose form is existence, know-ledge and bliss.

Note.—But how can then a being, who is pure intelligence and bliss, have a form? This question is answered in the next verse.

PARA. XII.

भूर्तत्वं प्रतिपत्तव्यं चित्तसुखस्यैव रागवत् । विज्ञानघनशब्दादि कीर्त्तानाच् चापि तस्य तत् । वेह्रवेहिभिदा नास्तीत्येतेनैवोपदर्शितम् ॥

12. The Lord, though intelligence and bliss, must be supposed to have a form also; just as music has a form perceptible only to the trained ears of a musician. Moreover the word 'ghana,' as Vijūānaghana, Ānandaghana, is applied to the Lord, which also shows that He has a body. But there is this difference between Him and other embodied beings, that in His case, His very body is spirit, and there is no distinction of the body and the embodied with regard to Him.

Note.—In the case of the Lord, intelligence is not only the attribute of the Lord but it constitutes His very body and hence He is called Vijfianaghana, intelligence solidified, intelligence incarnate, Anandaghana, bliss solidified. But how can an entity which has a body be all-pervading? This is answered in the next paragraph. In the printed Bengali edition of the Prameya Ratnavali, the quotation is said to be from the Mundaka Upanişad. It is, however a mistake, the passage occurs in the Svetåsvatara Upanişad.

PARA. XIII.

मृत्तंस्येव विभुत्वं यथा मुच्छके।

In the Svetasvatara (III. 9) we have the following statement showing that the all-pervadingness is an attribute of the form of God.

वृत्त इव स्तब्धो दिवि तिष्ठत्येकस्तेनेदं पूर्णं पुरुषेण सर्वम् ॥

That one exists in heaven and stands there upright as a tree; by that Person all this is pervaded.

Note.—That one Lord Hari exists in heaven, bowed to by all but bending to none, like a straight tree that knows no bowing. Here the word "person" coupled in with the expression "dwelling in heaven" shows that the Lord has a form. The next sentence "by this all is pervaded" shows that the Lord, though having a form is still all-pervading.

युस्थोऽपि निखिलव्यापीत्याख्यानान् मूर्तिमान् विभुः । युगपद् ध्यातृवृन्देषु साचात्काराच् च तावृशः ॥

Though dwelling in heaven, the expression "He pervades all" shows that the Lord is both all-pervading, as well as having a form, simultaneously. Because of this it is possible for Him to appear simultaneously to all, who meditate on Him, in whatever region of the universe they may be, and who all see Him in one and the same form.

Note—The next quotation from the Bhagavata Purana also indicates that the very embodied form of siri Krisna is all-pervading, though it appeared like an ordinary human form to His mother and others.

PARA. XIV.

भी दशमे 🗷।

In the tenth Skandha of the Bhagavata Purana we have the following:-

न चान्तर्न बहिर्यस्य न पूर्व नापि चापरम् । पूर्वापरं बहिश्चान्तर्जगतो यो जगञ्च यः ॥ तं मत्वात्मजमव्यक्तं मर्त्याबङ्गमधोक्षजम् । गोपिकोळुखले राम्ना बबन्ध प्राकृतं यथा ॥ इति ॥ "He who has neither inside nor outside, neither front nor back, but who is simultaneously both inside and outside of the world, in its front and in its back, yea who is the world itself; Him considering as her son, as a mortal child, Him the unchangeable and Immutable, the cowherdess (Yaśodâ) bound by a cord, as if He was an ordinary infant."

भी गीतासु 🗷 ॥

In the Gits also (IX, verses 4 & 5) we have the following:-

मया ततिमदं सर्वं जगवव्यक्तमूर्तिना । मत्स्थानि सर्वभूतानि न चाहं तेष्ववस्थितः ॥ न च मत्स्थानि भूतानि पश्य मे योगमैश्वरम् । भूतमृत्र च भृतस्थो ममात्मा भूतभावनः ॥

By Me all this world is pervaded in My unmanifested aspect, all beings have root in Me, I am not rooted in them.

Nor have beings their root in Me, behold, My sovereign Yoga. The support of beings, yet not rooted in beings, My Self their efficient cause.

The word Yoga in the above verse means the energy (Sakti) of the Lord, as is explained in the following:-

भ्रनन्त्या शक्तिरस्तीशे योगशब्देन योच्यते । विरोधभिक्षका सा स्यादिति तस्वविदां मतम् ॥

There is an infinite energy (Sakti) in the Lord, to which the term Yoga is applied and in the opinion of the knowers of truth, "Yoga" means here this power of the Lord which reconciles all contradictions, and makes impossibles possible.

Note.—"With My subjective form dwelling in the inmost recesses of all, I pervade this universe; all beings "have root in Me," because I support them all. "I am not rooted in them," because they do not support me. Nor do I support these beings, as the water is supported in a jar; but they are supported by Me, as the moon in the sky, by the mere force of My will. And hence I say nor have these beings root in Me."

This is possible through my sovereign Yoga, through My limitless energy or Sakti."

The word Yoga here is derived from Yujyate durghatesu Karyesu anena, That by which one can perform the most impossible feats.

PARA. XV.

Note.—In para. 10 it was said that Śri Kriqna is the highest, because He possesses intelligence, bliss and the rest. The author now explains what is meant by the phrase " and the rest" (âdi) in Anandatvâdi. It includes Omniscience, Blissfulness, Masterfulness, Friendliness, Teachership, Savjourhood, and Beauty.

बादिना सर्वहत्वम् । यथा मुन्दके ॥

By the phrase "and the rest" is meant omiscience, as we find in the Mundaka Upanisad (I. 1. 9):—

यः सर्वज्ञः सर्ववित् । इति ।

He who is all-knowing and all-acquiring.

The phrase "and the rest" also means the blissfulness as we find in the Tait. Up. (II. 4. 1).

ग्रानन्त्रतं च, तैत्तरीयके।

It also includes blissfulness, as in the Taittiriya Upaniçad :-

श्रानन्दं ब्रह्मणो विद्वान् न बिभेति कुतश्चन ॥ इति ॥

Knowing the bliss of Brahman, he is never afraid.

ममुख्यस्य बानदत्व माचकत्वानि च, व्वेताभातर भता ॥

It also includes masterhood, friendliness, teachership and saviourhood, as we find in the Svetasvatara texts (III. 17, IV. 18 and VI. 16).

सर्वस्य प्रभुमीशानं सर्वस्य शरणं सुद्धत् ॥ इति ॥

The Master of all, the Ruler of all, the refuge (of all), and the friend (of all).—(Svet. III. 17).

प्रज्ञा च तस्मात् प्रस्तुता पुराणी ॥ इति ॥

(Thus worshipped by the Jîvas) there flows forth from Him the ancient primordial wisdom (which is the essential attribute of Jîvas, but which is beclouded so long as the Jîvas do not turn their face towards the Lord.)—(Svet. IV. 18).

संसारबन्धस्थिति मोचहेतुः ॥ इति च ॥

He is the cause of the bondage, the existence and the liberation of the world.

माचर्यञ्च भीगोपाक्षोपनिषदि ।

This phrase "and the rest" includes also sweetness and beautifulness, as we find in the Gopéla Up.:—

सत् पुराडरीकनयनं मेथाभं त्रेशुताम्बरम् । द्विभुजं मोनमुद्रात्यं वनमानिनमीश्वरम् ॥ इति ॥

("Meditate on) the Lord as having eyes like fullblown white lotus, a body of the (blue) colour of clouds, garments of lightning, with two arms, and adorned with the symbol of silence, and having a garland round his neck, which is made up of all the spheres of the heavenly orbs."

- (Gopála Pûrva Tápani, p. 185 of the Anandásrama series).

PARA. XVI.

Note.—In the preceding sections it has been said that the Lord has the attributes of all-pervadingness, intelligence, bliss, omniscience, blissfulness, masterfulness, friendliness, teachership, saviourhood and beautifulness. Now arises the question, Are these attributes of the Lord Hari separate from him or not? They cannot be separate from him for the Sruti says (Katha Up. IV. 14) "He who sees the quality of the Lord as separate from the Lord runs down quickly to darkness." Nor can they be non-separate from the Lord, because the Lord is said to be Nirguna or without attribute. This point is raised and answered in the following verse:—

न भिन्ना धर्म्मिणो धर्म्मा भेदभानं विशेषतः । यस्मात् कालः सर्व्वदास्तीत्यादिधी विदुषामपि ॥

The attributes are not separate from the substance possessing these attributes. Though there is no difference between the quality and the thing qualified, yet owing to a peculiar condition (Viśeṣa) there is an appearance of difference. Just as Time, though one, is spoken of as having many parts, and even the wise use phrases like "the Time always exists."

Note.—The discussion on this point in the Vedinta Sûtra (III. 2. 31) makes this clear.

The two (the Lord and His attributes) are spoken of separately—though they are essentially one—just as the water and its waves are spoken of separately as two, though it is all one water. The difference arises from this Visega. Therefore the Lord who is ever joy and bliss, is said to be joyful and blissful and to have a body of all delight. All these qualities of the Lord are eternal, and consequently that body of the Lord is also eternal. Though there is no distinction (Visega strictly so called) here between the quality and the qualified, yet for conventional purposes such a (Visega) distinction is recognised and spoken of as such. If this conventional (Visega) distinction be not admitted, then the sentences like the following would also become absurd (for they are really tautologies when logically analysed):—"The being exists," "the time always exists," "the space is everywhere," All these sentences are logical tautologies, but they are of constant use and good as conventions. Nor can it be said that such a usage is erroneous and is based upon delusion. For the phrase "the Beness exists" conveys as true an information as the sentence "the jar exists." For there is no subsequent experience which sublates this knowledge. Nor is the sentence "the Beness exists," is a superimposition or a figurative speech like "Devadatta is a lion." For we can never may of Be-ness that it does not exist, as we can say of "Devadatta" that he is not a lion. Nor can it be said that such a usage is a natural one, though there is no concrete content of any substance in these sentences like "the Be-ness exists." The very fact that such usage is natural shows that in these sentences also there is a Vicesa. The existence of such Visesa is suggested by the illustration of the water following down a hill. The man who makes a distinction between the Lord and His attributes goes down to darkness, like the water that falls on a mountain top. In that verse there is a prohibition of all difference between the Lord and Ris attributes which are described there. In the absence of such conventional difference, there cannot be the possibility of the relationship of quality and qualified, merely because there are many qualities. The category called Visesa (the specific attribute) therefore exists, even here, though it is not here separate from the substance, but still has a particular function of its own. Nor is it open to the objection of regressus in infinitum that a Visega must have a Visega of its own, and so ou. For we have said above, that the Visesa here though not separable from the substance (i.e., the Lord) has a function of its own with regard to that substance. Therefore, the existence of Visesa is proved here also, as it is an invariable concomitant of the substance to which it appertains.

PARA. XVII.

पवमुक्तं नारदपञ्चरात्रे ।

निर्वोषपूर्णाग्रणविष्रह स्रात्मतन्त्रो-निश्चेतनात्मक-शरीरग्रणेश्चहीनः । स्रानन्दमात्रकरपादमुखोदरादिः सर्वत्र च खगतभेदविवर्जितात्मा ॥ इति ॥

Thus it is said in the Narada Paficharatra:-

"The Lord is an entity having perfect and faultless qualities. He is the Âtman, the Self and free from all the attributes of the body consisting of insentient matter. He too has a body, hands, face, stomach, &c., but all of pure bliss (not of matter). The Âtman is everywhere and always devoid of internal differences also."

PARA. XVIII.

मय भिष क्सीक्तम् । यथा विष्युत्तके । नित्येव सा जगन्माता विष्णोः श्रीरनपायिनी । यथा सर्वगतो विष्णुस्तयेवेयं द्विजोत्तम ॥ Now is shown the eternal union of the Lord with Lakemi (See verse 10). In Vippu Purapa (I. 8, 15) it is thus said:—

"That mother of the world Sri is the eternal energy of Visnu and is indissolubly united with the Lord. As Visnu is all-pervading, so is she also, O! best of the twice-born.

विष्णोः स्युः राक्तयस्तिस्रस्तासु या कीर्तिता परा। सेव श्री स्तवभिन्नेति प्राष्ट्र शिष्यान् प्रभुर्मेहान् ॥

There are three energies (Sakti) of Visnu, among them that which is praised as the highest is verily Sri, and she is not different from the Lord. Thus taught the Great Teacher Mahâprabhu (Chaitanya) to his disciples.

Note.—According to one view Lakami is a Nitys Mukta Jiva or a soul belonging to the class of the eternally free. In that view, she cannot be said to be identical with Vianu. But according to the teaching of Lord Gauranga, fri is identical with Vianu and never separate from Him. And as an authority, reference is made to the above verse of the Vianu Purana. As regards the statement that Lakami is separate from Vianu, that applies to the case of certain eternally free Jivas, overshadowed by the spirit of Lakami, and thus those Jivas are called also Lakami. But it is a secondary use of the word Lakami. Primarily she is the highest aspect of the Lord Vianu himself, the great mother of the world, and not any Jiva.

But what is the authority that Vispu has three energies? The next verse answers that:—

तत्र त्रिशक्तिर्विप्तुः , यथा श्वेताभ्वतदेःपनिषदि ।

परास्य शक्तिविविधेव श्रूयते स्वभाविकी ज्ञानबलिकया च ॥

As regards Visnu possessing three Saktis or energies we have the following statement in the Svetasvatara Up. (VI. 8):—

His high power is revealed as manifold and innate, the power of intelligence (Jūana-Sakti), the power of strength (Bala-Sakti) and the power of action (Kriya Sakti).

Note.—Jāāna-šakti is called also Samvit, or consciousness. The Bala-šakti is called also Sandhini, that which brings about union of atoms. The Kriyá-cakti is called also Hiādini or the delight-giving power. All these powers are Svabhāviki or mnate in the Lord, as the power of burning is innate in fire.

प्रधानचेत्रज्ञपतिर्शुणेशः । इति च ।

He is the Lord of matter (Pradhana) and of spirits, Keetrajaa) and He is the ruler of all gunas.

Note.—In the Vispu Purana it is mentioned that the nighest energy of the Lord called Para-Sakti is not subordinate to time but transcends it. And the Lord though a of separate from the highest energy, is yet said to be the Lord of Laksmi, in a metaphorical sense only, as will be shown in the subsequent verses.

भी विप्तुपुरावे च ।

विष्णुशक्तिः परा प्रोक्ता चेत्रज्ञाख्या तथापरा । स्रविद्याकर्म्भसंज्ञान्या तृतीया शक्तिरिष्यते ॥ इति ॥

In the Vignu Parana it is thus mentioned :-

The Viṣṇu-Sakti is called Parâ, the Aparâ Sakti is called Kṣetrajña, and the third Sakti is that which is called Avidyâ and Karma, the energy found in matter.

Note.—In other words, the divine energy of the Lord is called Para-Sakti, the energy found in the Jivas or soul energy is Apara-Sakti, and the energy found in matter is called Avidya-Sakti.

In the same Vignu Purana (I. 9.44) is to be found the authority that Sri is the Para-Sakti not separate from Vignu:—

कनाकाष्टानिमेषादि कानसूत्रस्य गोचरे । यस्य शक्तिने शुद्धस्य प्रसीदतु स नो हरिः ॥

Whose highest energy called the Parâ-Sakti is not within the scope of minutes and hours or any other division of time. May that pure Hari be propitious to us.

प्रोच्यते परमेशो यः यः शुद्धोप्युपचारतः । प्रसीदतु स नो विष्णुरात्मा यः सर्व्वदेष्टिनाम् ॥ इति ॥

He who is called Paramesa (the Lord of the highest Lakṣmi, Para, highest, Mâ, meaning Lakṣmi, and Isa, the Lord) who though pure and non-separate from this Paramâ or highest energy, but is yet called figuratively the Lord of Paramâ. May that Viṣnu, who is the Self of all embodied beings, be propitious to us.

Note.—This Paramā or Parā-Sakti is threefold, as is to be found in that very Viṣṇu Purāṇa (I. 12, 69.) :—

इसारिनी सन्धिनी सम्बत् खय्येका सर्व्वसंश्रये। इारतापकरी मिश्रा खिय नो ग्रणवर्जिते॥ इति॥

In Thee, refuge of all, exists this one power which is threefold, namely, Hlâdini (bliss-giving), Sandhini (existence-giving), or all-pervading and all-combining; and Samvit (or consciousness). In Thee, devoid of all Gunas, the energies of matter do not exist such as the energy called Sattva causing pleasure, the energy of Rajas causing pain or the combined threefold Gunas called Mâyâ.

एकोपि विष्णुरेकापि नक्ष्मीस्तवनपायिनी । स्वितस्त्रेषंडुभिवेंशैषंडुरित्यभिषीयते ॥

Visnu is one indeed; and indeed one is also Laksmi, his eternal consort; they become many because they assume various forms through their essential power.

तत्रैकत्वे सत्येव विच्वार्वहुत्वं , यथा श्रीगापाक्षापनिवदि ।

The Lord Visnu though a unity in reality, also becomes manifold, as we find in the Goptia Upanisad:—

एको वशी सर्वगः कृष्ण ईस्य एकोऽपि सन् बहुधा यो विभाति । तं पीठस्यं येऽनुभजन्ति धीरास्तेषां सुखं शाश्वतं नेतरेषाम् ॥

There is one ruler, all-pervading, the Lord Krisna, the adored of all and though one, shines forth as many, the wise who worship Him as seated in the throne of the heart, enjoy eternal happiness, but not so the others.

Note.—The various forms of Vispu are the Avatiras like the fish, the torpoise, etc. As Vispu though one has many forms, similarly, Laksmi though one has many forms, as we find in the following verse of the Sveta Up. VI. 8:—

प्रथ छक्त्यास्तव् यथा।

परास्य शक्तिर्विविधैव भूयते ॥ इत्यादि ।

His Parâ-Sakti is described as manifold.

Note.-Lakemi, the Pars-takti of Vienu, appears as Janaki, Rukmini, etc.

Note.—Though every Avatéra, whether that of Vienu or of Lakemi, is ever full and has the whole of Vienu or Lakemi in it, yet some Avatéra is called complete and others partial, owing to the manifestation through it of all the attributes or only some attributes

पूर्तिः सार्वितकी यद्यप्यविशेषा तथापि हि । तारतम्यं च तच्छक्ति व्यक्त्यव्यक्तिकृतं भवेत् ॥ तम विष्याः सार्वितिकी पूर्वि वथा वाजसनेवके ।

Though every Avatâra is full without any distinction or difference, yet the distinction between one Avatâra and the other, is made on account of partial or full manifestation of the powers.

As regards the fullness of all the Avataras of Visnu, we have the following text of the Bri. År. Up.:—

ॐ पूर्णमदः पूर्णमिदं पूर्णात्पूर्णमुवच्यते ॥ पूर्णस्य पूर्णमा-वाय पूर्णमेवावशिष्यते ॥ इति ॥

That (the roct of all Avatâras) is full, this (the visible Avatâra) is also full, from that full this full emanates. Taking away this full from that full, the full still remains behind.

महाबराहेच ॥

In the Mahavaraha Purapa it is said :-

सर्वे नित्याः शाश्वताश्च देहा स्तस्य परमात्मनः । हानोपादानरहिता नैव प्रकृतिजाः कचित् ॥ परमानन्दसन्दोहा ज्ञानमात्राश्च सर्वतः । सर्वे सर्वयुगैः पूर्णाः सर्वदोषविवर्जिताः ॥ इति ॥

The bodies of the Supreme Self assumed as Avatâras are all everlasting and beginningless. They are free from increase and decrease, and do not consist of Prâkritic matter. They are all forms of supreme bliss and intelligence, and full of perfect attributes and free from all defects.

Note.—For a fuller description, see page 387 of the Vedanta Sûtras. As every Avatara of Vișņu is Pûrņa, so also every Avatara of Lakşmî.

श्रय भ्रियः सा यथा भीविष्हुपुरावे ॥

As regards the Avatara of Laksmi we find it thus described in the Visnu l'urans (I. 9 140 and 141):—

PARA XXII.

Now as regards Sri. She (also takes avatāras corresponding to those of Viṣṇu), as in the Viṣṇu Purāṇa (I. 9. 140—145).

एवं यथा जगन्स्वामी देवदेवो जनार्दनः । श्रवतारं करोत्येष तथा श्रीस् तत् सहायिनी ॥ १ ॥ पुनश्च पद्मादुद्भृता आदित्योऽभृद् यदा हरिः । यदा च भागवो रामस्, तदाभृद् धरणी स्वियम् ॥ २ ॥

राघवत्वेऽभवत् सीता, रुक्मिणी कृष्णजन्मनि । भ्रन्येषु चावतारेषु, विष्णोरेषा सद्दायिनी ॥ ३ ॥ देवत्वे देवदेष्ट्रेयं, मानुषत्वे च मानुषी । विष्णोर्देष्टानुरूपां वे, करोत्येषात्मनस्तनुम् ॥ ४ ॥ इति ॥ स्यात् स्वरूपसती पूर्तिरिद्देक्यादिति विन्मतम् ॥

As this Lord of the world, the God of all gods, the punisher of all sinners, takes an avatâra, so also does Sri, His helpmate, take an avatâra corresponding to His. Thus when Hari assumed the Âditya form, she came out of the lotus, as Kamalâ; when He assumed the Bhârgava avatâra (Parśurâma) she took the form of Dharani; when he became Râghava (Ramachandra) she became Sitâ: when He appeared as Kriṣṇa, she appeared as Rukmini. Similarly in other avatâras also, she is always the helpmate of Viṣṇu. When he assumes a Deva form, she takes the form of a Devi; when he appears as a man, she appears as a woman; verily she changes her body corresponding to the change assumed by the body of Viṣṇu.

Thus, in the opinion of the wise, all avataras are essentially non-different and every one of them is perfect and full.

PARA XXIII. चय तथापि तारतस्यम् ।

तम भी विष्कास्तद् यथा भागवते।

As regards this apparent difference in the avataras of Vianu, we have in the Bhagavata Purana:—

एते चांशकलाः पुंसः कृष्णस्तु भगवान् स्वयम् ॥ इति ॥

These avatâras are the partial manifestations of the Supreme person, but the Lord Sri Krisna is the Bhagavan Himself.

PARA XXIV.

सय सियस्तर्यथा पुरुषरेषित्यामधर्षोत्रनिष्रि । "गाकुसक्ये मायुरमब्दले" इत्युपक्रम्य, "हे पास्र्वे बन्दाबसी राधिका व" इत्यमिषाय प्रव "यस्या वंहो सम्मोर्डुगाँदिका शक्तिः ॥ इति ॥

As regards the avatara of Lakemi, we have it stated in the Atharva Upaniesd that there is difference in her avataras asso. Beginning with "in the region of Mathura called Gokula," etc., the text goes on to say "the two sides of Vianu are Chandravali and Radhika" and then it mentions the lower avataras, by saying "Lakemi, Durga and the rest are her partial avataras."

गीतमीयतन्त्रे च ।

Similarly in the Gautamiya Tantra we have :-

वेवी कृष्णमयी प्रोक्ता राधिका परवेवता । सर्वनक्ष्मीमयी सर्वकान्तिः संमोहिनी परा ॥ इति ॥

Râdhikâ is said to be the highest deity, the Goddess full of Krisna; all Laksmis are her avatâras, she is their source, she is full of all prosperity and every beauty; and is the enchanter of all.

PARA XXV.

The abode of Vienu is also eternal.

यथ निल्पामलम् वादिशन्तत्।

The word "adi" in the phrase Nitya-Lakami-adi matvat shows that the abode of Visnu is also eternal. Thus in the Chh. Up. (VII. 24. 1):—

स भगवः कस्मिन् प्रतिष्ठितः । स्वे महिन्नि ॥ इति ॥

विवये पुरे द्वोव संव्योम्न्यात्मा प्रतिष्ठितः ॥ इति ॥

In whom does He abide? In His own glory. So also in the Mundaka Up. (11. 2.7) it is stated:

"In the divine city, in the great void, abides this Self."

PE T

So also in the Rig Veda (I. 154. 6) we have the following:-

तावांवास्तुन्युरमसिगमध्येयत्रगावोभूरिशृङ्का भ्रयासः । भ्रत्राहृतदुरुगायस्य वृष्णः परमं परमवभाति भूरि ॥

Ta, them; Vam, for the sake of you two, namely, Radhika and Krisna. Vastūni, houses; Gamadhyai, to reach the goal; for the going of you two;

Usmasi, we desire; Yatra, where; Gavah, cows; Bhūri śringah, long-horned; Ayasah, exist or go about, or exist giving prosperity. Atra, there. Aha, verily; Tat, that; Urugayasya, widely praised. Vṛiṣṇaḥ, of the bull, of Viṣṇu, the showerer of every desire; Pramam, sublimest; padam, abode; Avabhāti, shines; bhūri, much.

Fain would we go unto Your dwelling-places where there are many-horned and nimble oxen. For mightily, there, shincth down upon us the widely-striding Vişnu's sublimest mansion.

We desire to go to those Abodes of you two, where there are many long-horned cows and oxen, and where brightly shines the Supreme Abode of that widely praised Showerer (of all prosperity).

PARA XXVI.

भी गेापालापनिषदि च।

So also in the Gopala Upenigad, it is thus written :-

तासां मध्ये साचाइहा गोपालपुरीहि ॥ इति ॥

Among these seven cities, Mathurâ, the City of Gopâla, is verily Brahman, as if made visible.

जितन्ते स्तोत्रे च।

So also in the Jitanta Stotra it is written :-

लोकं वेकुगठनामानं दिव्यषाड्गुगयसंयुतम् । श्रवेष्णवानामप्राप्यं गुणत्रयविवर्जितम् ॥ नित्यसिद्धेः समाकीर्णं तन्मयेः पाञ्चकालिकेः । सभाप्रासादसंयुक्तं वनेश्चोपवनेः ग्रुभम् ॥ वापीकूपतड़ागेश्च वृच्चषग्डैः सुमगिडतम् । श्रप्राकृतम् सुरैर्वन्यमयुतार्कसमप्रभम् ॥ इति ॥

The region called Vaikuntha, adorned with the divine six attributes, but devoid of the three attributes of matter, is not to be reached by the ungodly. It is full of those persons, who are devoted to the five duties (Abhigamana, Upâdâna, Ijyâ, Adhyayana and Samâdhi): who are eternally perfect and devoted to the Lord. There are many courtyards and palaces in that divine city. and many an auspicious forest, garden, well. tank, trees and the rest.

Devas constantly worship this non-prakritic city (which is Brahman itself), and which is refulgent with the light of myriads of suns.

म्बासंहितायाच्य ।

So also in the Brahma S. mhita.

संइक्षपत्रं कमलं गोकुलाख्यं महत् परम् । तत्कर्णिकारं तद्धाम तरनन्तांश सम्भवम् ॥ इति ॥

The great abode of Lord, called Gokula, is a thousand-petalled lotus; in the middle of these petals is the abode of the Lord, and which is manifested by His aspect called Ananta (Saikarsana).

PARA XXVII.

Note.—How is it that the abode of Hari, which is beyond the sphere of Prakriti, is identified here with Mathura, an earthly city. How can this Mathura be the undecaying city of the Lord? This doubt is answered in the next two verses.

प्रपश्चे खात्मकं लोकमवतार्य्य महेश्वरः । द्याविर्भवति तत्रेति मतं ब्रह्मादिशब्दतः ॥ गोविन्दे सचिवानन्दे नरदारकता यथा । द्यक्रैनिरूप्यते तद्वद्वाम्नि प्राकृतता किल ॥ २७ ॥

The Supreme Lord brings down on this earth His divine city, which is His own Self, and then He manifests Himself in that city; and this is the meaning of the phrase "Mathurâ is Brahman itself."

As the ignorant imagine the Lord Govinda, who is pure existence, intelligence and bliss, to be a man and to have assumed really the form of a human child: similarly, Mathurâ, the abode of the Lord, is considered by the ignorant to be an earthly-city, while it is really the abode of the Lord.

PARA XXVIII.

यथ नित्यकीकत्वस्य । तथाहि भूतिः ।

Now the eternal sportiveness of the Lord is being described. In the Br. Ar. Up. it is said:

यद्गतं भवस भविष्यस् ॥ इति ॥

He who is the past, the present and the future (and whose work or Lilâ is eternal).

एको देवो नित्यनीनानुरक्तो भक्तं व्यापी भक्तइचन्तरास्मा ॥ इति च ॥

The one God, immersed in eternal sport, pervading all His Bhaktas, remains in their hearts as their very-self.

स्वतित्व। जन्म कर्म्म च मे दिव्यमेवं यो वेसि तत्त्वतः। त्यत्वा देष्टं पुनर्जन्म नैति मामेति सोऽर्जुन॥ ६॥

So also in the Smritis (Gita IV. 9):-

"He who thus knoweth My divine birth and action, in its essence, having abandoned the body, cometh not to birth again, but cometh unto Me, O Arjuna."

PARA XXIX.

Note.—Admitted that the sport of the Lord is eternal, as proved by the texts quoted above, but how do you support this theory by reason? Every work or action presupposes a point of time when it springs; the duration through which it lasts, and the point of time when it comes to an end. Row can any action then be called eternal? Anything which has a beginning and an end is temporary. The answer to this objection is given in the next verse.

रूपानन्त्याजनानन्त्याद्वामानन्त्याद्य कर्म्म तत्। नित्यं स्यात् तदभेदाचेत्युदितं तस्ववित्तमेः॥

Since the forms of the Lord are infinite, since the companions of the Lord are also infinite, and since His abodes are also infinite, it follows necessarily that every act of the Lord must be eternal, because it is not different from these. This is the opinion of those who know the truth.

Note.—Since the Lord has infinity of forms, any act done by one form, is repeated in succession by other forms, and thus the action becomes eternal. Because in the infinite succession of forms, the action is being repeated in same place or other by some of these forms. Since all the avataras of the Lord are identical and non-different, the drama enacted by one avatara is repeated by all the other, and in the infinite succession of avataras the act must be also infinite. Some vague conception of the eternal activity of the Lord, and the existence through eternity of every act of the Lord, done in any incarnation, such as playing with the cowherds of Mathuri, or preaching to the fishermen of Galillee must also be eternal, can be understood from the behaviour of light rays. Any picture in light is theoretically eternal. The rays of light carry the picture for ever and ever, to the infinite depths of space. Thus the picture of Dalhi Coronation Durbar exists even to-day in the rays of light, which are carrying that picture in space. A little mathematical calculation will tell one at what particular point of space, that picture will be found to-day.

इति प्रमेवरज्ञावस्थाम् भगवत्तारतस्थप्रकरकं प्रवर्गं प्रमेवम् ॥

Here ends the first proposition, namely, that the Lord is the most high and supreme.

PROPOSITION SECOND.

ग्रथाविकाद्वाय वेदायम् । यथा श्री-गापाकापनिवदि ।

Now as to the Lord's being the subject-matter taught in Scripture, we have the following in the Gopála Upaniçad:—

योऽसी सर्वेवेवेगीयते ॥ इति ॥

He who is sung in all the Vedas is verily Lord Krisna.

बादके व ॥

So also in the Katha Upanişad (II. 15):-

सर्वे वेदा यत्पदमामनन्ति तपाश्रसि सर्वाणि च यद्वदन्ति ॥ ( यदिच्छन्तो ब्रह्मचर्यं चरन्ति तत्ते पदश्व संप्रद्वेण ब्रवीम्योमि-त्येतत् ) इति ॥

"Whose form and essential nature all the Vedas declare, and in order to attain Whom they prescribe austerities (desiring to know Whom the great ones perform Brahmacharya, that Symbol I will briefly tell thee, it is Om)."

PARA II.

श्री हरिवंशे च।

So also in Hari Vansa :--

वेदे रामायणे चैव पुराणे भारते तथा।

म्रावावन्ते च मध्ये च इरिः सर्वत्र गीयते ॥ इति ॥

In the Vedas, in the Râmâyana and so also in the Purânas and Mahâbhárata as well, is sung verily everywhere Lord Hari, in the beginning, in the middle and in the end.

साचात् परम्पराभ्याम् वेदा गायन्ति माधवं सर्वे । वेदान्ताः किल साचाद् श्रपरे तेभ्यः परम्परया ॥

Directly or indirectly, all the Vedas sing the praise of the Lord Madhava; the Upanisad portions of the Vedas sing His praise directly, the other portions of the Vedas sing it indirectly.

PARA III.

Note.—But, says an objector, how can God be known through words? Does not the Tait. Up. (II. 4.1) say "Yato vachonivariante apprapya manasa saha, from whom all speech, with the mind turns away unable to reach Him." How can then God be known through words? This doubt is answered in the next verse

कचित् कचिदवाच्यत्वं यद् वेदेषु विलोक्यते । "काल्स्न्येंन वाच्यं न भवेद्" इति स्यात् तत्र संगतिः ॥ श्रन्यथा तु तदारम्भो व्यर्थः स्यादिति मे मतिः ॥

Those passages of the Vedas, where we find that God is sometime described as inexpressible by words, are to be explained as inexpressible in His entirety. God cannot be fully expressed by words. Such must be the meaning of those passages; otherwise, the very teaching of the Vedas would become useless, when they try to describe Brahman. This is my opinion. Why should men try to study Vedas, if God were totally inexpressible by words?

PARA IV.

शब्द प्रशृतिहेतुनाम् जात्यादीनामभावतः। ब्रह्मनिर्धर्मकं वाच्यं नैवेत्यादुर्विपश्चितः ॥

The wise say Brahman is inexpressible, because it has not the attributes of species (quality, action, and name) and consequently it does not come within the scope of objects which words can express.

PARA V.

सर्वैः शब्दैरवाच्ये तु नचणा न भवेदतः । नक्ष्यञ्च न भवेद् धर्महीनं ब्रह्मोति मे मतम् ॥

But if Brahman is totally inexpressible by words (as you say in the above verse), since He is inexpressible by all words, and since there is no word that can express Him, it follows that Brahman cannot be suggested by any word by Lakṣaṇâ: (for Lakṣaṇâ or suggestive implication can apply to those objects which are expressible by words). Therefore, in my opinion Brahman, as conceived by you, O Advaitin, namely, an object without any attribute, can never be the Laksya or the implied suggested object of the Vedas.

Note.—The Advaitin's view is that Brahman is totally inexpressible by words, and that the words of the Vedas only point to Brahman by way of suggestion or Lakşani. In this view Brahman becomes the Lakşan, the object suggested by the Vedas. But the Bhakti view is that Brahman is not the Lakşan of the Vedas, but is directly described by the Vedas.

इति प्रमेयरकाबन्याम् हितीयं प्रमेयम् ॥

Here ends the Second Proposition of Prameya Ratnávali.

PROPOSITION THIRD.

PARA I.

ग्रथ विश्वसंत्यत्वम् ।

Now as to the reality of the universe.

स्वशक्त्या सृष्टवान् विष्णुर्यथार्थं सर्व्वविज्ञगत् । इत्युक्तेः सत्यमेवैतदेराग्याधमसद्भचः॥

The all-knowing Visnu has created with His sakti this world, as a reality (and not as an illusion). Therefore, the world is verily real. The statement, that the world is an illusion, means that one should not rely too much on the world, but should treat it with Vairâgya or dispassion

तथाहि, श्वेताश्वतरापनिषदि ।

य एको वर्णो बहुधा शक्तियोगाद्वर्णाननेकान्निहितार्थो दधाति। विचैति चान्ते विश्वमादौ स देवः स ने। बुद्धा शुभया संयुनकुः॥

Thus it is written in the Sveta Up. (IV. 1):-

"He, the Sun, without any colour, who with set purpose by means of His power (Sakti) produces endless colours, in whom all this comes together in the beginning, and comes asunder in the end; may He, the God, endow us with good thoughts."

श्रीविष्युपावे च। एकदेश स्थितस्याग्नेज्योंत्स्ना विस्तारिणी यथा । परस्य ब्रह्मणः शक्तिस्तथेदमखिलं जगत् ॥ इति ॥

So also in the Vişnu Purana.:-

As of fire, though placed in one locality, the rays spread out in all directions; so of the Supreme Brahman, the energy (Sakti) spreads out throughout the whole world.

ईशावास्यापनिषदि।

So also in the laavasya Up., verse 8:-

स पर्यगाच्छुक्रमकायमव्रणमस्नाविरश्च शुक्तमपापविद्धम् । कविर्मनीषी परिभूः स्वयंभूर्याचातच्यतोऽर्घान्व्यवशाच्छारवतीभ्यः समाभ्यः ॥ ष्ठ: Saḥ, he, the Adhikārin who meditates on the Self thus. प्रश्नेता Paryagât, attained. शुक्रम Sukram, free from sorrow. श्रकावम् Akāyam (क्षिम्परिवृश्तिम) incorporeal, without the subtle body. श्रकाविरम् Asnāviram, eternal and full. सम्बन्ध Avraņam, sinews-less, without muscles, without the dense body. श्रुवा Suddham, the purifier. श्रमापिश्रम् Apāpaviddham, untouched by evil, untouched by karma-effects, good or bad. श्रवः Kaviḥ, the seer, the knower or seer of all, the wise, the ommiscient. मनीपी Mantst, the ruler of mind, or the controller of Manas and Intelligences like Brahma, &c. परिष्: Paribhūḥ, omnipresent, all-existent, all-controller, overessence, conqueror of all passions, the best of all. १९वस्थः Swayambhūḥ self-existent, self reliant. श्रायात्मकः Yāthātathyathaḥ, in its full and proper sense, really and truly, and not as an illusion. सर्वाय Arthān, things. श्रव्याय Vyadadhāt, disposed, ordained. राज्यातिषः Sāsvatī-bhyaḥ, through eternal or recurring. सन्त्राय: Samābhyaḥ, years, ages.

He attains the Lord, Who is free from grief, free from subtle body, free from smallness, free from dense body, the purifier, not tainted by sin. He creates the objects (like mahat, &c.) really and truly, from eternity. He is wise and omniscient, the Ruler of all intelligences, the Best of all and Self-dependent.

PARA IL

भी विष्तुपुरावे च ।

So also in the Vienu Purana:-

तवेतवस्तयं नित्यं जगन्मुनिवराखिलम् । स्नाविर्भावतिरोभाव जन्म नाशविकल्पवतः ॥ इति ॥

O best of the sages, this whole universe (consisting of Îsvara, Jîvas and Prakriti) is imperishable and eternal. (The portions of Iśvara) incarnate on earth and then disappear, while Jîvas and Prakriti also get modifications of birth and death.

PARA III.

महाभारते 🗷 ।

So also in the Mahabharata:-

ब्रह्म सत्यं तपः सत्यं सत्यं चैव प्रजापतिः । सत्याञ्जूतानि जातानि सत्यं भूतमयं जगत् ॥ इति ॥

Brahman is a reality, austerity is a reality, Prajâpati is a reality, all creatures have come out of the real, hence the world is full of reality and truth (the world is not unreal).

PARA IV.

म्रात्मा वा इरमित्यारो वननीनविष्ठक्रवत् । सस्वं विश्वस्यमन्तव्यमित्युक्तं वेदवेदिभिः॥

The text of the Sruti "Atman alone verily was in the beginning"—Ait. I. 1. (does not mean that nothing else than Atman existed then, but the souls and Prakriti also existed merged in Atman in Pralaya), just as the birds exist in a forest, when the dark night is over it (and we say there is nothing in this forest but the forest alone). Therefore this world must be understood to be a reality and not a falsehood. For this is the opinion of those who know the Vedas.

इति प्रमेयरकाषस्यां तृतीयं प्रमेयम् ।

Here ends the third proposition in the Prameya Ratnavali.

PROPOSITION FOURTH.

चय विष्युतो जीवानां मेदः ॥ तथादिः दवेताम्बतराः पठन्ति ।

Now is being treated that the Jivas are separate from Visnu. As it is read in the Eveta. Up. (1V. 6):-

द्रा सुपर्णा संयुजा संखाया समानं वृत्तं परिषक्ष्वजाते । तयोरन्यः पिप्पनं स्वाद्यस्यनशक्तन्यो स्रभिचाकशीति ॥

सुपार Dvå (dvau), two. सुपार Suparna (Suparnau), of handsome plumage or strong-winged birds, namely, the Jiva and the Jávara. सुपार Sayujá (Sayujáu), (rivals), always united, inseparable (friends). सुपार Sakháyá (Sakháyau), of equal name, friends. By Vedic license the dual affix au is replaced by a, in all these four words. सुपार Samánam, the same, the one. कु Vrikáam, the (Aávattha) tree (The body). परिषयाको Parişasvajáte, dwell upon, embrace, cling to, nestle. सुपार Tayob, of two (birds). सुपार सिपार Auyah, one (the Jiva). Pippalam, the fruit of the Aávattha tree, i. e., the effects of karmas generated by the body. रवाह Svádu, sweet: as if it was sweet. सिपार Atti, eats. The fruit is really bitter, but it eats it always as if it was sweet. Anasnan, not सुपार eating the non-essential portion of the fruits of good works and no portion of the fruits of evil deeds. सुपार Anyah, the other. सुपार सुपार Abhi-chákasíti, looks on, illumines all around.

Two birds of handsome plumage, inseparable friends, nestle on the same tree. The one of them eats the fruit, as if it was sweet, the other, without eating, illumines all around.

समाने वृत्ते पुरुषो निमग्नोऽनीराया शोचित मुद्यमानः । जुष्टं यदा पश्यत्यन्यमीरामस्य महिमानमिति वीतरोकः ॥२॥

Though seated on one and the same tree, the Jiva bewildered by the Divine Power sees not the Lord and so grieves. But when he sees the eternally worshipped Lord and his glory, as separate from himself, then he becomes free from grief (and fit for Mukti).

Note.—In interpreting a text there are certain maxims to be observed. One of those is laid down in the following verse:—

PARA II

उपक्रमोपसंद्वारावभ्यासोऽपूर्व्यता फलम् । अर्थवादोपपत्ती च लिङ्गं तात्पर्य्यनिर्णये ॥

"The beginning (upakrama), the conclusion (upasamhâra), the repetition (abhyâsa), peculiarity (apūrvatâ), the object (phalam), the explanation of purpose (arthavâda) and suitableness (upapatti) are the six indications, by means of which the purport of a doubtful text may be arrived at."

इति तात्पर्य्यकिङ्गानि षड्यान्यादुर्मनीषिणः । भेदे तानि प्रतीयन्ते तेनासी तस्य गोचरः ॥

These are the six tests mentioned by the wise, by the application of which the true purport of a text can be known. When applied to the Vedic text, they prove difference, hence difference is the object which the Sâstras purport to establish.

Note.—Now in these above two verses the Upakrama or the opening words are two birds (showing there is duality and not monism); the conclusion or Upakrama'ra is Anyam Isam, "the other who is the Lord" (which shows that the Lord is Anyam or different from Jiva) the repetition is "the Other looks on without eating;" and "when he sees the Other lord," the Apurvaté or peculiarity consists in this that the difference between man and God could not have been known, but through the istras, and this passage teaches such difference, a fact which could not have been known but through revelation. The object (phalam) is "his grief passes away." Arthivada is "He who knows his glory,' while suitableness is "one remains without eating."

PARA III.

किन्य मुख्यके।

So also in the Mundaka Up. (III. 1. 3.) we have the following:-

यदा पश्यः पश्यते रुक्मवर्णं कर्त्तारमीशं पुरुषं ब्रह्मयोनिम् । तदा विद्वान्पुर्यपापे विश्वय निरञ्जनः परमं साम्यमुपैति ॥

स्था Yada, when. प्रया Pasyah, seer, the Jiva, प्रवास Pasyate, sees. स्था Rukma, golden. Another reading is "rugma" formed from the root "ruj" स्वीप् Varnam, coloured. The golden-coloured Creator is the Lord. This is the color of His Aura. स्थारिष् Kartaram, the Creator (of the world). र्वाय Isam, the Lord. पुरुष्य Purusam, the Purusa, the person. सहा Brahma, the Brahma or Hiranyagarbha. विशेष Yonim, the cause, the source of Brahma. वृक्ष Tada, then. Fagra Vidvan, the wise, the Aparoksa Juanin. The Punya, virtue, good, and Pape, vice, evil. The good and evil. All punya is not destroyed by Juana, but only that punya which has not begun to manifest its fruit. The non-prarabdha. The punya is of two sorts: Kamya and non-Kamya. The kamya-punya (good deeds done with a particular desire) is of two sorts—that which has begun to manifest its fruit (prarabdia) and non-prarabdha. The latter only is destroyed. Vidnuya, shaking off, destroyed. Fatar Niranjanah, without Avidya. Paramam, the highest. Samyam, similiarity. The similiarity consisting in being free from grief, and possessing full joy. Upaiti, reaches, attains.

When the Jiva sees the golden coloured Creator and Lord, as the Person from whom Brahmâ comes out, then the wise, shaking off virtue and vice, and becoming free from Avidyâ, attains the highest similarity.

कारके स्र।

So also in the Katha Up. (II. 4. 15.):-

यथोदकं शुद्धे शुद्धमासिकं ताहगेव भवति । एवं मुनेविजानत भारमा भवति गौतम ॥

व्या स्वयं Yatha udakam, as water. युद्ध Suddhe, in the pure. युद्ध Suddham, pure. धारिक Åsiktam, poured (into). सार्क एव Tâdrik eva, like that (but not identically that; because we see that the bulk of the water is increased). अवास Bhavati, becomes. वर्ष Evam, so. दुन: Muneb, of the sage, the thinker. विश्वान्तः Vijñānatab, the knowing: the liberated चाला Âtms, the Self, (the Master, Vayu, four-faced like Viṣnu, but does not become identical with him.) अवास Bhavati, becomes. वीसन Gautama, O Gautama! i.e., O Nachiketas!

As pure water poured into pure water becomes like that, O Gautama, so the Âtma of the Muni, who knows, becomes like that (with Brahman).

भी गीतासु च।

So also in the Git4 (XIV. 2.):

इवं ज्ञानमुपाश्चित्य मम साधर्म्यमागताः । सर्गेऽपि नोपजायन्ते प्रलये न व्ययन्ति च ॥

Having taken refuge in this Wisdom and being assimilated to My own nature, they are not re-born even in the emanation of a universe, nor are disquieted in the dissolution.

प्यु मोचेऽपि भेदोक्तेः स्याद्रेदः पारमार्थिकः ॥

These texts declare difference between Jiva and God even when the Jiva has obtained Mukti. Hence it follows that the difference between man and God is an absolute reality, and not conventional only.

ब्रह्माहमेको जीवोऽस्मि नान्ये जीवा न चेश्वरः । भदविद्या कल्पितास्ते स्युरितीन्यञ्च दृषितम् ॥ म्रान्यद्या नित्य इत्यादि श्रुत्यद्यों नोपपद्यते ।

तथाडि कठाः पटन्ति ॥

The opinions of the Advaitins, who hold "I am Brahman," "I am the only Jiva that exists, there are no other Jivas or Isvara, they exist merely through my nescience or Avidyâ—" all such opinions, therefore, become refuted. If it were otherwise then the words like Nitya, etc., applied to the Jivas would become meaningless.

As we find in the following verse of the Katha Up. (II. 5. 13.):—

नित्योऽनित्यानां चेतनश्चेतनामामेको बहुमां यो विद्धाति कामान् । तमात्मस्यं येऽनुपश्यन्ति धीरास्तेषां शान्तिः शाश्वती नेतरेषाम् ॥

नित्य: Nityah, eternal. अनित्यानां Anityanam, among the eternals. [नित्यानाय Nityah Nityanam, the Eternal among the Eternals: The highest Eternal. Or who gives to the other eternals, their eternity]. चेतन: Chetanah, चेतनानां Chetananam, the thinker among all thinkers, or the highest consciousness among all consciousnesses (like Brahma, &c) who gives consciousness to all consciousnesses. एक: Ekah, the one. यहनां Bahunam, of many (consciousnesses) यः Yah, who. वियवानि आनाय Vidadhati kaman, fulfils the desire. ते आन्यानि अनुप्रकृति वीदाः Tam atmastham ye anupasyanti dhirah, the wise who perceive him within their self. तेना Teşam, of them. याजि: Santih, peace, happiness. Release, Mokṣa. यायानी Sasvati eternal: that in which there is no return to re-birth. न वृत्यानां Na itaresam, not of others.

The Eternal among the eternals, the Consciousness among all consciousnesses, the One who bestows the fruits of Karmas to many Jivas, the tranquil-minded ones who see him seated in their Âtmâ, get eternal happiness, but not the others.

PARA V.

पकरमादीश्वरान्नित्याचेतनात्ताहराा मिथः ।

मिचन्ते न वहवो जीवास्तेन भेदः सनातनः ॥ ४ ॥

From one eternal (Nitya) conscious Lord the many Jivas who are also eternal are shown to be separate in the above verse. Therefore, difference between Jiva and İśvara is eternal.—5.

PARA VI.

प्राणेकाधीनवृत्तित्वाद् वागादेः प्राणता यथा । तथा ब्रह्माधीनवृत्तेर्जगतो ब्रह्मतोच्यते ॥

As speech and other organs are also called Prana, because their functions are dependent upon that of the Prana alone, so the world is called Brahman sometimes, because all its functions are dependent upon Brahman.

तथाहि छान्दोग्ये पठ्यते।

Thus it is read in the Chh. Up. (V. 1. 15.):-

न वे वाचो न चर्चूं छिष न श्रोत्राणि न मनां छसीत्याचन्नते प्राणा इत्येवाचन्नते प्राणा होवेतानि सर्वाणि भवन्ति॥

The wise do not call them the Speeches, the Sights, the Hearings, the Minds but they call them Prânas. The Prâna verily is all these.—6.

PARA VII.

ब्रह्मव्याप्यत्वतः केश्चिज्जगदृह्मेति मन्यते ।

Some hold the opinion that inasmuch as the world is pervaded by Brahman, therefore, the world is Brahman.

यदुक्तं भीविष्युपुराचे ।

And in support of their opinion they quote the following verse of the Visna Parana:—

योऽयं तवागतो देव समीपं देवतागणः।

सत्यमेव जगत् स्तष्टा यतः सर्वगतो भवान् ॥ इति ॥७॥

"O Lord! This host of Devas that has come in Thy Presence is indeed Thou, because Thou, O Creator! pervadest all."—7.

PARA VIII.

प्रतिबिम्बपरिच्छेद पन्नो यो सकृतो परैः । विभुत्वा-विषयत्वाभ्यां तो विद्वक्रिनिराकृतो ॥ ८ ॥

The two theories, namely, those of reflection and of limitation, which are held by our opponents, are refuted by the fact that Brahman is all-pervading and not a material object.

Note.—The pure Advaitins hold the view that Brahman alone exists and that Jivas are nothing but Brahman, conditioned by some Upidhi or limited by adjunct. They hold that Brahman is like the sun, and the Jiva is like its reflection in water. If the Upidhi (water) be clear, then the reflection is clear, if it is turbid, the reflection is also turbid. This is called Pratibimba theory. The other theory is that Brahman is like the all-pervading space, while the Jiva is the same space limited by the adjunct of being enclosed in a jar. Therefore, the Ghatakasa (jar-space) is not separate from the space outside. It is the same. This is called Parichehheda or limitation theory. Both these theories are refuted in the part years.

Note.—Brahman being all-pervading, and consequently without any form it cannot cast any reflection. To cast a reflection it is necessary that the object reflected must be a limited one. The Pratibimba theory, therefore, is refuted by the Vibhutva or all-pervadingness of the Lord. Moreover the limitation theory is also invalid, because limitation can apply only to a material object. But Brahman, not being a material object, cannot be limited, therefore, the Parichehheda theory cannot also hold good. If Brahman were a material object, then of course it would be possible to cut him into parts like stones cut into different fragments.

PARA IX.

श्रद्धेतः ब्रह्मणो भिन्नमभिन्नं वा त्वयोच्यते । श्राचे द्वैतापत्तिरन्ते सिद्धसाधनता श्रुतेः ॥ ६ ॥

If the identity of Brahman with Jiva, which is called Advaita by you, O Advaitin! be true, then this Advaita must either be separate or non-separate from Brahman. If this Advaita is separate from Brahman (namely, if the theory of Advaita is something different), then there is duality, and you are open to the objection of being a Dvaitin. If it is non-separate from Brahman, then you are trying to establish something which is already established by Srutis and what is the use of again establishing it?

Note.—But, says an objector, How do you explain the text $4kfi chetah kevalo nirgunascha, he is witness, intelligence and attributeless. This text shows that Brahman is Nirguna, and your theory, that he is Saguna fails to the ground. This objection is answered in the next verse.

PARA X.

श्रनीकं निर्शुणं ब्रह्म प्रमाणाविषयत्वतः । श्रद्धेयविदुषां नैवेत्यृचिरे तत्त्ववादिनः ॥ १० ॥

The knowers of truth say that the wise should not believe that Brahman is Nirguna. This is a wrong statement, and has not any authority in its favour.

Note.—If Brahman is Nirguna then he can have no form, etc., and cannot be the subject of direct perception. So Pratyakşa Pramana cannot apply to him. If he is Nirguna then he cannot be the subject of inference also, for there is no middle term with which Brahman can be compared. So Anumana also fails. Similarly, revelation also which is the third Pramana cannot explain Brahman; for revelation is couched in words, and words can describe objects that belong to any species, possess certain attributes, are acted and reacted by certain agents and have certain names. But Brahman being Nirguna cannot be described by words. And hence revelation also is of no use.

इति प्रमेयरज्ञाबल्यां मेइसस्यत्वप्रकरचं चतुर्थं प्रमेयम् ॥

Here ends the Fourth Proposition of Prameys Ratnavali on the Difference is real.

PROPOSITION FIFTH.

वय जीवानां मनवद्दासत्वय् ॥

Now is being described that all Jivas are servants of God.

तथाहि श्वेतात्र्यतराः पडन्ति ॥

The Svetasvataras in their Upanisad (VI. 7.) read thus :-

तमीश्वराणां परमं महेश्वरं तं देवतानां परमं च देवतम्। पतिं पतीनां परमं परस्तात् विदाम देवं भुवनेशमीक्यम् ॥ इति ॥

Let us know that highest great Lord of Lords, the Highest Deity of deities, the Master of masters, the Highest above, as God, the Lord of the world, the adorable.—1.

PARA II.

स्यृतिश्व ॥

So also in the Smriti:-

ब्रह्मा शम्भुस्तयेवार्कश्चन्द्रमाश्च शतकतुः । एवमाद्यास्तयेवान्ये युक्ता वैष्णवतेजसा ॥ इत्याचा ॥

Brahmâ, Sambhu as well as the Sun, the Moon and Indra have their energy borrowed from that of Viṣṇu and so also all other Devas.

स ब्रह्मकाः सरुद्राश्च सेन्द्रा देवम् महर्षिभिः । स्रर्चयन्ति सुरश्चेष्ठं देवं नारायणं हरिः ॥ इत्याचा च ॥

All devas along with Brahmâ, Rudra, Indra, and great seers adore that God, Who is the best of all gods, called Nârâyana Hari.

पान्ने च जीवलक्षये ।

So also in the Pudma Purāṇa describing the Mukta Jîva, it is said :-

दासभूतो इरेरेव नान्यस्येव कदाचन ॥ इति ॥ २ ॥

They are slaves of Hari alone and verily of no one else.

इति प्रमेयरकाष्ट्यां भगवदृद्यसम्बद्धकर वं पंचमं प्रमेयम् ॥

Here ends the Fifth Proposition of Prameya Ratnávali called the dependence of all Jivas on the Lord.

PROPOSITION SIXTH.

षध जीवानां तारतम्यम् ।

Now as to the difference between Jivas inter ac.

PARA I.

भ्रणु वैतन्यरूपत्व ज्ञानित्वाचं विशेषतः । साम्ये सत्यपि जीवानां तारतम्यश्च साधनात् ॥ १ ॥

Though all Jivas are similar, and have no distinction among themselves, so far as they are all atomic, intelligent in their form, and cognising agents or being knowers; yet there is difference between them, owing to their Sâdhanâs or Karmas that they have performed.

Note.—Some Jivas, owing to their Karmas, get good births; others get bad births, owing to their bad Karmas. Similarly according to their different modes of Bhakti, there arise differences of enjoyment in the next world.

PART II.

तत्राज्ञस्यमुक्तं श्वेताभ्यतरैः।

In the Svet. Up, the atomic nature of the Jiva is thus mentioned (V. 9):-

वानाप्रशतभागस्य शतधा कल्पितस्य च । भागो जीवः स विज्ञेयः स चानन्त्याय कल्प्यते ॥ ६ ॥

That living soul is to be known as part of the hundredth part of the point of a hair, divided a hundred times, and yet it is to be infinite.

वैतन्यक्ष्यवं शानित्वादिकम्ब षट् प्रकृयाम्।

The Prasna Up. (IV 8.) shows that the Jiva is a conscious entity and is the cogniser, enjoyer and the agent.

एष हि द्रष्टा स्त्रष्टा श्रोता त्राता रसयिता मन्ता बोद्धा कर्ता विज्ञानात्मा पुरुषः । [स परेऽचरे श्रात्मनि संत्रतिष्ठते] ॥ ६॥

Verily he is the beholder, the toucher, the hearer, the smeller, the taster, the thinker, the determiner, the doer, the Vijūānātmā, the Puruṣa. [He (who knows this Puruṣa) becomes established in the Highest Self].

PARA III.

चादिना गुकेन देहस्यापित्यस्य श्रीगीतासः।

The word sdi (in the Jäänitvädi above) indicates that the soul though atomic, pervades the whole body by the rays of its quality of intelligence. As we find mentioned in the Gită (XIII. 84).

यथा प्रकारायत्येकः कृत्सं नोकिममं रिवः। चेतं चेत्री तथा कृत्सं प्रकारायति भारत॥ ३४॥

As the one sun illumines the whole earth, so the Lord of the Field illumineth the whole Field, O Bhârata.—(34).

बाद बैचे स्वकारः।

The Lord Badarayana, the author of the Vedanta Stira, says the same in (II. 2.24) :-

गुणाद्वा लोकवदिति ।

Or the soul may pervade the whole body, by its quality of intelligence, as the flame pervades the whole room by its rays.

गुजनित्यत्वमुक्तं पाजसमेविमिः।

In the Br. Ar. Up. (IV. 5. 14) is mentioned that the essential attributes of the soul are eternal.

'सा होवाच मेत्रेय्यत्रेव मा भगवान्मोहान्तमापीपिपन्न वा श्रहमिमं विजानामीति स होवाच न वा श्ररेऽहं मोहं व्रवीम श्रविनाशी वा श्ररेऽयमात्माऽनुच्छित्तिधर्मा ॥ १४ ॥

(Then Maitreyt said: 'Here, Sir, thou hast landed me in utter bewilderment. Indeed, I do not understand him.'

But he replied:—'O Maitreyi, I say nothing that is bewildering.) Verily, beloved, that Self is imperishable, and of an indestructible nature.

PARA IV.

एवं साम्येपि वैषम्यमेहिकं कर्माभिः स्फुटम् । प्राहुः पारत्रिकं तत्तु भक्तिभेदैः सुकोविदः ॥

Thus though all souls are similar, yet their dissimilarity in this world is on account of the differences of their Karmas. The wise say that their dissimilarity in the heaven is on account of their dissimilarity of Bhakti.

तयादि काषुमाः पठन्ति ।

As read the Kathumas (Chh. Up. III. 14.1):-

यथा ऋतुरस्मिँछोके पुरुषो भवति तथेतः प्रेस्य भवति स ऋतुं कुर्वीत ॥ १ ॥

As is his faith in this life, so will be his condition in the next after death. So let him generate full faith (in the Lord).

स्युतिश्व ।

So also is the following Smriti:-

यादृशी भावना यस्य सिद्धिभवति तावृशी।

As is one's thought (devotional attitude) so is his success in the next life.

शान्त्याचा रतिपर्य्यन्ता ये भावाः पञ्च कीर्त्तिताः। तैर्वेवं स्मरतां पुंसां तारतम्यं मिथो मतम्॥

The five sentiments beginning with Santa and ending with Rati are the causes which produce differences in the enjoyment of the Muktas. in the heaven world. With what particular emotion the Lord is worshipped with that sort of food is he meted out in the next.

Note.—The school of Chaitanya divides Bhakti into five degrees, each a little higher than the last: (1) Santya or tranquil meditation upon God, (2) Dasya, a condition of active service for God, (3) Sakhya, a feeling of personal friendship for God, (4) Vâtsalya, or love for God as between a child and parent; and (5) Mâdhurya, ardent devotion to God, the highest stage of emotional development.

इति प्रमेयरकावत्यां जीवतारतम्यत्रकरचं पद्रं प्रमेयम् ।

Here ends the Sixth Proposition.

PROPOSITION SEVENTH.

यय भीक्रप्यमातेर्मेश्रत्वम् । यया ॥

Now is mentioned that the condition of liberation consists in the attainment of the Lord Krispa.

Thus in the 8vet. Up. (I. 11) we have the following :--

ज्ञात्वा देवं सर्व्वपाशापद्वानिः । इत्यादि ॥

When that God is known, all fetters fall off (sufferings are destroyed, and birth and death cease).

So also in the Goptla Tapani Up., we have the following :-

एको वशी मर्वगः कृष्णः ईड्यः ॥ इत्यादि च ॥

The one controller, all-pervading Krisna must alone be worshipped. And similar other texts.

बहुधा बहुभिर्वेशैभीति कृष्णः खयं प्रभुः। तमिष्ट्वा तत् परे नित्य सुखं तिष्ठन्ति मोन्निणः॥

The Master Krisna himself shines, in manifold forms and figures, everywhere; by worshipping him, the freed souls dwell happily in His eternal abode.

इति प्रमेयरकावल्याम् भीकृष्यभारेर्मोक्तवमकरवं सप्तमं प्रमेयम् ॥

Here ends the seventh proposition on the subject that liberation consists in the attainment of Sri Krisna.

PROPOSITION EIGHTH.

प्रयेकान्तमकोर्मोक्षदेतुत्वम् ।

Now is mentioned that the one-pointed devotion is the cause of Mukti.

PARA I.

यथा श्रीगापाङतापन्याम् । As in the Gopsia Tapani Up., we have following :—

भक्तिरस्य भजनं तिवद्वामुत्रोपाधि नैरास्येनामुप्मिन् मनः कल्पनम्: पतदेव नैष्कर्म्यम् ॥ इति ॥

Devotion to this Sri Krisna is Bhajan or worship; itconsists in fixing one's mind in Him, without the desire of getting any fruit, in this world or in the next. Such a devotion is called Naiskarmyam or unselfish devotion.

Note.—Such devotion must be distinguished from the passive state of the Vairagyam of the Advaitins. Their Vairagya is also defined as non-desiring of the fruits in this world or in the next. But Bhakti differs from Vairagya by its more active qualities. It wants nothing but Krispa, and all objects of heaven or of earth cannot turn its heart from Him.

नारवपञ्चरात्रे व ॥

So also in the Nārada Paūcharātra we have the following :-

सर्वोपाधिविनिर्मुकं ततूपरत्वेन निर्मलम् । इषीकेन इषीकेश सेवनं भक्तिरुच्यते ॥ इति ॥ १ ॥

Being free from all Upâdhis, and worshipping the Lord of the senses, with every sense, with the utmost purity is called Bhakti.

PARA IV.

नवचा चैचा भवति । यदुक्तं भीमागवते ॥

This Bhakti is ninefold, as is mentioned in the Bhagavata. Purana (VII. 5-23 & 24.): --

श्रवणं कीर्तनं विष्णोः स्मरणं पावसेवनभ् । भ्रचेनं वन्दनं दास्यं सख्यम् भात्मनिवेदनम् ॥ इति पुंसार्पिता विष्णो भक्तिश्चेन् नवनश्वणा। क्रियते भगवत्यदा तन्मन्येऽधीतमुत्तमम् ॥ इति ॥

The following are the nine varieties in the path of de-(1) The hearing of the praise of the All-pervading

Being Visnu; (2) The chanting of his praise; (3) The remembering Him in meditation; (4) His personal service, i.e., to his symbolic image; (5) His worship performed by the offerings of water, flowers, fruits, &c.; (6) His salutation; (7) Placing oneself at His disposal; (8) His friendship, i.e., placing full trust in Him, as in a friend; (9) Consecration of self to Him. If one applies himself with this nine-fold devotion to Viṣṇu, having learnt it from his teacher, I consider it as the best lesson he has received from his master.

सत्सेवा ग्रुरुसेवा च देवभावेन चेद् भवेत्। तदेवा भगवद्भक्तिर्नभ्यते नान्यथा क्रचित्॥ २॥

When the service of the good and holy men, and that of one's own Guru, is done with love and reverence, thinking upon them, as if they were God personified, then, and then only, is obtained this Bhakti for the Lord, and not otherwise.

PARA III.

देवमावेन सत्सेवा यथा तैचिरीयके ॥

That good and holy men should be served with the same reverence as one pays to God is shown in the Tait. Up. (I. 11. 2):—

भ्रतिथिदेवो भव ॥ इति ॥

Let thy guest be to thee like unto a God.

Note.—The word "guest" here means that holy man who is a houseless wanderer.

तया तव्मकिर्यया भीमागवते ॥

So also in the Bhagavata Purana (VII. 5. 32) it is shown that by such service, Bhakti is obtained.

नेषां मतिस्तावदुरुक्षमांत्रिं स्पृशत्यनधोंपगमो यदर्थः । महीयसां पादरजोऽभिषेकं निष्किचनानां न वृणीत यावत् ॥ इति ॥

Till they do not purify themselves by ablution in the dust of the feet of great saints, who have taken the vow of poverty, their understanding will not comprehend the greatness of the feet of the Lord of Mighty Strides. And it is by this means that the evils of life are to be removed.

Note—"The Lord of Mighty Strides" is Vianu, who in his Vamana Avatara (Dwarf incarnation) encompassed the space between the Earth, Heaven, and Pâtâla by "His three steps."

PARA IV.

देवभावेन गुरुसेवा यथा तैसिरीयके॥

The service of the teacher must be done with full reverence, as one would serve his God, as is shown in the Tait. Up. (I. 11.2 :=

श्राचार्यदेवो भव ॥ इति ॥

Let thy teacher be to thee like unto a God.

इवेताम्बतरापनिषदि च ॥

To the same effect is the following verse of the Svet. Up. (VI. 28):-

यस्य देवे परा भक्तिर्यथा देवे तथा गुरौ । तस्यैते कथिता श्रर्थाः प्रकाशन्ते महात्मनः प्रकाशन्ते महात्मन इति ॥

If these truths have been told to a high-minded man, who feels the highest devotion for God, and for his Guru as for God, then they will shine forth, then they will shine forth indeed.

तया तद् भक्तियेषा भीभागवते ॥

So also in the Bhagavata Purana it is mentioned that by such devotion to Guru one gets Bhakti for the Lord.

तस्माद् गुरुं प्रपचेत जिज्ञासुः श्रेय उत्तमम् । शाब्दे परे च निष्णातं ब्रह्मग्युपसमाश्रयम् ॥ तत्र भागवतान् धर्मान् शिचेद् गुर्वात्मदेवतः ।

म्रमाययानुवृत्त्यांयेस् तुष्येवात्मात्मवो हरिः ॥ इति ॥ ४ ॥

Therefore let the seeker for Brahman (the highest good) approach a Guru who is a Master of all the Vedas (Sabda-Brahman) and who constantly dwells in the Supreme Brahman, in order to get Mukti. Therefore, let him take shelter of such a Guru, who has obtained calmness. There let him learn the Bhâgavata Dharmas, treating his Guru as his God, and serving Him without crookedness, for by such service, the Lord Hari is pleased, who has given His body and soul to His Bhaktas.

PARA V.

श्रवास पञ्च संस्कारो नब्ध द्विविधमक्तिकः । साचात कृत्य इर्रि तस्य धाम्नि नित्यं प्रमोदते ॥ ४ ॥

He, who is purified with the five sacraments and has got the two sorts of Bhaktis, he realises Hari and rejoices for ever in his abode.

PARA VI.

तथा पन्च संस्कारा यथा स्वता।

The five sacraments are thus mentioned in a Smriti (Padma Purana):-

तापः पुग्ह्रं तथा नाम मन्त्रो यागश्च पञ्चमः । श्रमीहि पञ्च संस्काराः परमैकान्तिहेतवः ॥ इति ॥

The five sacraments are: (1) heating or branding the body with symbols of Hari; (2) putting the caste mark or tilak; (3) giving the name of Hari to one's children, and naming himself also as a servant of Hari; (4) prayer; and (5) sacrifice,

These five Samskâras are verily conducive to one pointed devotion.

तापोऽत्र ततस्वकावि मुद्राभारणमुख्यते । तेनैव इरिनामावि मुद्रा चाप्युपलक्ष्यते ॥

The word 'tâpa' or 'heating,' means here putting on the body the marks of discus, etc., with heated metals. Besides branding, it includes also the writing of the name of Hari on one's body (with sandal paste and proper seals).

सा यथा स्मृता

As is mentioned in the following Smriti:-

इरिनामाचरेर्गात्रमङ्गयेषम्बनादिना । स स्रोकपावनो भूत्वा तस्य स्रोकमवाप्तुयात् ॥ इति ॥

Let him mark his body with sandalwood paste, with the syllables of the name of Hari. Such a person purifies the world (while alive, and after death) obtains the world of Hari.

पुगर् स्याद् ऊर्बपुगर् तच्छा से बहुविधं स्मृतम् । हरिमन्दिरतत्पादाकृत्यादि शुभावहम् ॥ नामात्र गदितं सांक्रहिरिमृत्यत्ववोधकम् । मन्त्रोऽष्टादशवर्णादिः स्रेष्टदेव वपुर्मतः ॥ शास्त्रामादिपूजा तु यागशब्देन कथ्यते । प्रमाणान्येषु दृश्यानि पुराणादिषु साधुमिः ॥ ६ ॥

The caste-mark must be a straight perpendicular line on the forehead and called Urdha-Pundram. The scriptures describe their various kinds. It may represent the temple of Hari and (is reminder to one that his body is the temple of the God). According to others it should be like the foot of Hari (showing that one is servant of God). The tilak is a most auspicious mark.

The "giving of the name," means that one must bear such a name, which should express "the servant of God" (such as Hari Das, etc). The Mantra must be the Vaisnava Mantra, consisting of eighteen syllables and the rest. It is considered to be the body of one's ista-deva. The word 'worship' or "Yâga" means the Pûjâ of Sâligrâma and the rest Holy men should find out from Purânas the detailed account and authorities for these five sacraments.

PARA VII.

नवधा भक्तिविधिरुचिपूर्वा द्रेधा भवेत् ; यया कृष्णः । भृत्वा स्वयं प्रसन्नो दवाति तत् तद् ईप्सितं धामः ॥७॥ The nine-fold Bhakti is of two sorts, namely, Vidhi Bhakti and Ruchi Bhakti. Through any one of these Lord Sri Krisna being pleased gives to His devotees all that they desire.

PARA VIII.

विधिनाभ्यर्च्यते देवश्चतुबाह्यादिरूपधृत् । रुच्यात्मकेन तेनासौ नृजिङ्गः परिपृज्यते ॥ ८ ॥

Through Vidhi Bhakti the God is worshipped as having a form with four (eight or ten arms). With Ruchi Bhakti, He is worshipped as a man (with two arms), such as the son of Yasodâ (or Kausalyâ).

Note.—The distinction between Ruchi Bhakti and Vidhi Bhakti is clearly brought out by this verse.

In Vidhi Bhakti, God is worshipped as something supremely great and above humanity. The very form, as having four, eight or ten arms, cuts Him off from the category of man. Such a Being may be an object of adoration with awe and fear, He can hardly be an object of that intense love, which man feels for man. Therefore, in Ruchi Bhakti, God is worshipped as man, and that also as an infant child suckling at the breast of Yasods or of Kausalys.

This Ruchi Bhakti is the subject of much controversy among the antiquarians. Some say that this child-worship is not the original Bhakti of India, but has been introduced here from Christianity.

PARA IX.

तुबस्यश्वरथधात्र्यादि पूजनं धामनिष्ठता । श्रक्रणोदयिबद्धस्तु संत्याज्यो दृरिवास्रः । जन्माष्टभ्यादिकं सूर्योदयिबद्धं परित्यजेत् ॥ ६ ॥

He should worship the Tulasi, the Asvattha, and the Dhâtri trees, and should try to dwell, as far as possible, in cities like Mathurâ and the rest. He should fast on the Lord's day called the eleventh day of the Moon. If this eleventh day of the Moon does not commence with the break of dawn (aruna-udaya) then he should reject it. Similarly, he should observe the birth-day festivity, which falls on the eighth day of the Moon. But if this Astami tithi does not commence with the sunrise, but afterwards, then it should be rejected; and the Nativity should be observed on the next day.

Note.—This observance of Ekâdasi and Janma Aştami is a peculiar feature of the Vaişpavas. If the Tithi does not commence with the dawn, but after that moment, then it is not observed on that day. Thus if at the time of two Mahartas before the sunrise there is Dasami for one hour, and then Ekâdasi, then the Vaispavas will not observe that day as Ekâdasi, but the next day. Similarly, if the Janma Aştami has Saptami at the time of sunrise, it should be rejected. The force is on the words Arupa (dawn) and Sârya (Sun): the rising of the dawn is generally one hour and a haif before that of the sun. In the case of Ekâdasi it must be seen whether at the time of the break of dawn, there is that tithi or not. If at that time the tithi is not Ekâdasi, but Dasami, then that day should be rejected: but in the case of other sacred days, such as Janma Aştami and the rest, dawn is not to be looked into, but the actual sunrise. If at the time of sunrise, there is not the proper tithi, then that day should not be observed as sacred, but the next day.

PARA X.

लोकसंग्रहमन्विच्छन् नित्यनैमित्तिकं बुधः । पतिष्ठितश्चरेत् कर्म भक्ति प्राधान्यमत्यजन् ॥ १०॥

Desirous of maintaining the social order, the wise devotee should observe regularly the obligatory and the optional duties, but always giving pre-eminence to Bhakti.

Note.—The Bhaktas are of three kinds: Svaniştha, Parinişthia and Nirapekşa. Among these the first must perform all the duties (excepting those which entail loss of life, such as animal sacrifices) of his Arramas, without desiring the fruit of those actions. He must observe all rituals. The last (Nirapekṣa) observes no ritual, his worship is mental, and he is always mentally devoted to the Lord. He being in no Asrama is bound by no rules of convention. The third Parinişthita being midway between these two, does not stand in need of performing ritualistic Karmas, but being a respectable member of society, he observes all the conventions of the society in order to maintain social order.

PARA XI.

दश नामापराधांस्तु यक्षतः परिवर्जयेत् ॥ ११ ॥

Let him avoid with care the ten sorts of blasphemy called Nama-aparadha or sins against the Name.

Note.—These tensins are the following: (1) Satam minds, speaking ill of holy men, (2) Meditating on Siva and others as independent deities, while worshipping Vişqu. That is to say, uttering the names of Siva and other deities with the idea of their independence in the presence of Vişqu. (3) Showing contempt to one's Guru or person whom one ought to revere, (4) Speaking ill of the Sruti (Revelation) and of other scriptures which are in accordance with such Srutis, (5) Thinking that the name of the Lord has not efficacy to remove all sins. In other words, disbelief in the efficacy of the sacred name and thinking that statements regarding such efficacy are merely eulogistic and not to be taken in their literal sense, (6) Trying to explain such statements regarding the efficacy of the name by other methods, (7) Believing in the efficacy of the name, but committing sins on the strength of such efficacy, thinking "Let me commit sins, I shall utter the name of the Lord and all sins will be washed away." This wilful commission of sins is bad, (8) Thinking that any other good works such as charities, pûjás, etc., can be equal to the utterance of the holy name. In other words, denying the pre-eminence of the name, (9) Teaching the name to a person who has no faith in it or who is actively opposed to it, (10) Not loving the name even after hearing its glory.

These are the ten sins against the name which the Bhaktas must avoid.

PARA XII.

कृष्णावातिपत्ना भक्तिरेकान्तात्राभिधीयते । ज्ञानवैराग्यपूर्वी सा फलं सद्यः प्रकाशते ॥ १२ ॥

Bhakti whose fruit is the attainment of Krisna is called here Ekânta Bhakti. When it is preceded by knowledge and dispassion, it at once produces its fruit.

Note.—The Ekinta Bhakti by herself is sufficient to lead to Mukti. But when it is accompanied by Jūžna and Vairāgya its action is quickened and Mukti is more quickly attained.

इति प्रमेयरकाबच्यां विद्युद्धभक्तेर्मृकिप्रवृत्वप्रकरकं चहमं प्रमेयम्।

Here ends the Eighth Proposition of the Prameya Ratnavali, in which it is shown that pure Bhakti is the giver of Mukti.

PROPOSITION NINTH.

षय प्रत्यकातुमानशब्दानां एव प्रमाबत्वम् 🛊

Now it is being shown that means of right knowledge are, perception, inference, and word only.

PARA I.

यया भीमागवते ।

It is thus said in the Bhagavata :-

श्रुतिः प्रत्यत्तम् ऐतिहाम् चतुमानम् चतुष्टयम् ॥ इति ॥ १ ॥

The means of right knowledge are four-fold, namely, revelation, perception, rumour and inference.

Note.—The Bhagavata Purana thus mentions four means of right knowledge. How do you then say that they are three only? This question is answered in the next paragraph.

PARA II.

प्रस्यक्तेऽन्तर्भवेद् यस्माद् ऐतिद्यं तेन देशिकः । प्रमाणं त्रिविधं प्राख्यत् तस मुख्या श्रुतिर्भवेत् ॥

Since Rumour is included in perception, therefore, the teacher has said that the means of right knowledge are three, among these Sruti is the highest.

Note.—Rumour is a form of perception and is included in perception. Thus "there dwells a ghost in this fig tree." This is a rumour. It must have originated with the person who saw the ghost, and gave currency to the statement. It may be that his perception was a hallucination; but all the same, every such statement is included in perception. The word "teacher" in the above paragraph means Madhvacharya. Manu also (XII. 105) has mentioned three Pramanas only.

"The three (kinds of evidence), Perception, Inference, and the (excred) Institutes, which comprise the tradition (of) many (schools), must be fully understood by him who desires perfect correctness with respect to the sacred law."

PARA III.

प्रत्यसम् श्रनुमानश्च यत् साचिव्येन शुद्धिमत् । मायामुग्डावलोकारो प्रत्यसं व्यभिचारियत्॥ श्रनुमा चाति भूमेऽद्रौ वृष्टिनिर्वापिताप्तिके । श्रतः प्रमाणं तत् तच् च स्वतंत्रं नैव सम्मतम् ॥ ३॥ Perception and inference (are subsidiary to the Word) because they are corrected by means of the Word. Perception is liable to become deceptive, as when one sees a magic head, etc. Similarly, inference is also liable to mistake, as when a fire is extinguished on a hill, through rain, and the smoke rises from such extinguished fire; but the inference that there is still fire on that hill will be erroneous, merely because there was smoke. Therefore, perception and inference are not independent means of right knowledge.

Note.—The highest means of right knowledge is the Word or the Valid Testimony or the opinion of experts. It is only statements made by them, whether such statements are embodied in a Revelation called the Word of God, or in books of science and art. The word of God-like men alone is the primary means of right knowledge. Every man's own perception and inference constitute only a very small and secondary means of right knowledge; and the knowledge so acquired forms only an infinitesimally small part of the whole store of his knowledge. One's own perception tells that the earth is flat, but the Sruti of science declares that the earth is round, and so perception gives way to the word of the expert. Similarly, it is a wrong inference, when one says that the sun moves from east to west. The right inference is, what the Sruti of science declares, that it is the motion of the earth on its axis, that causes the appearance of the motion of the sun in heaven. Hence Sabda or the Word is superior to sensuous perception and inference both.

DARA IV.

ब्रनुकूको मतस्तर्कः ग्रुष्कस्तु परिवर्जयेत् ॥ ४ ॥

The reasoning which supports the Sruti is the right argumentation, but the reasoning that tries to go against it, is a mere dry controversy and should be avoided.

Note.—The authority for this is to be found in the next paragraph.

PARA V.

तचारि वाजसनेयिनः ॥

Thus the Vajasaneyins (Br. Ar. II. 4. 5) say :-

स्रात्मा वा सरे द्रष्टव्यः भ्रोतव्यो मन्तव्यो निविष्यासिः तव्य ॥ इति ॥

Verily the Self (Hari) is to be seen (directly perceived, the method for which is that He is) to be heard (from the teachings given by a Vedic Guru). He is to be cogitated upon (by reasonings in accordance with the Vedas.) He is to be meditated upon.

काठकाः ॥

To the same effect is the text of the Kathakas (Katha Up. II. 9.) :-

नेषा तर्केण मतिरापनेया प्रोक्तान्येनेव सुज्ञानाय प्रेष्ठ । (यां त्वमापः सत्यधृतिर्वतासि त्वावृद्गो भूयाम्नचिकेतः प्रष्टा)॥

This belief which thou hast got, cannot be brought about, nor should it be destroyed by, argument (not based upon Vedas). When taught by the True Teacher, the Self becomes easily realised. (O dearest! strong is thy resolution. Inquirers like thee, O Nachiketas! are not many).

PARA VI.

स्मृतिम ॥

So also there is the following Smriti:

पूर्वापराविरोधेन कोऽत्रार्थोभिमतो भवेत्। इत्याचमूहनं तर्कः ग्रुष्कतर्कन्तु वर्जयेत् ॥ इति ॥ ६ ॥

Tarka or right argument is the reasoning that tries to find out the proper interpretation of a text, so that it may not conflict with what precedes it and what follows it. Any other argument is dry and vain argument, and should be avoided

नावेवविदुषां यस्मात् ब्रह्मधीरुपजायते । यञ्चौपनिषदं ब्रह्म तस्मान् मुख्या श्रुतिर्मता ॥

Since the non-knower of the Vedas cannot know Brahman and in them the Brahmic intuition does not originate, and since Brahman is said to be "Aupanişadam" or known through the Upanişads, hence the Sruti or Revelation is considered to be the principal means of right knowledge.

तथादि भृतिः 🛭

As an authority for the same are the following Srutis:

ना वेदविन् मनुते तं बृइन्तम् ॥ इति ॥

The non-knower of Vedas cannot conceive that Great one.

त्वोपनिषदं पुरुषं पृच्छामि ॥ इति च ॥ ७ ॥

I ask thee about the Aupanisadam Purusam, the person revealed by the Upanisads. (Br. Up. III. 9. 26.)

इति प्रमेयरकायस्याम् प्रमाजीयत् प्रकरकम् नवमं प्रमेयम् ॥

Here ends the Ninth Proposition, dealing with the three-foldmeans of right knowledge in Prameya-Ratnivall.

EPILOGUE.

Note.—The author now shows that the nine propositions proved by him in the preceding portion, are not invented by him, but were taught by the founder of this sect, namely by Madhvāchārya kimself.

पवनुकं माचा।

Thus it has been said by the ancients :-

श्रीमन् मन्त्रमते इरिः परतरस् सत्यं जगत् तस्त्रतो । भेदः जीवगणा इरेरनुचरा नीचोचभावं गताः ॥ मुक्तिर् नैजसुखानुभृतिर्, श्रमका भक्तिश्च तत् साधनम् । श्रकादि त्रितयं प्रमाणं, श्रीखनान्नायैकवेषो इरिः ॥

According to the doctrine of Madhva, Hari is the Supreme. The world is real, separateness is true, the individual souls are infinitely graded as superior and inferior, and are dependent on God, liberation is self-realisation consisting in the enjoyment of such bliss as remained latent in the soul. Pure Bhakti (devotion) is the means to this end. Perception, inference and testimony, are the sources of knowledge (measures of proof) (mundane and heavenly). Hari is knowable in the entirety of the Vedas and by Vedas alone."

Note—This verse which has traditionally come down from the time of 8rf Madkva sums up the nine Prameysa or propositions thus:

- (1) Harih paratarah, Hari is supreme.
- (3) Satyam jagat, the world is real.
- (8) Tattvatah bhedah, separateness is true.
- (4) Jiva-gant Harer anncharab, the individual souls are servants of God, and dependent on Rim.

- (5) Michocheha bhāvam gataḥ, and are graded as superior and inferior according to their karmas.
- (6) Muktir naija-sukha-anubhūtiķ, liberation is the experiencing of the bliss belonging to the essential form of the soul.
- (7) Amalé-bhaktiécha tat sédhanam; pure Bhakti (devotion) is the means to this end.
- (8) Akşâdi tritayam pramānam, perception (inference and testimony) are the three means of right knowledge.
- (8) Akhila-amnaya-eka Vedyoh Harih, Hari is to be known from the entirety of the Vedas, and all the Scriptures establish His existence and qualities.

भ्रानन्दतीर्थेरिषतानि यस्यां, प्रमेयरकानि नवैव सन्ति । प्रमेयरकाविकरावरेख , प्रधीमिरेषा दृवये निधेया ॥

This Prameya Ratnavall should be kept in their hearts with reverence by the wise, as it contains the nine gems (ratna) of propositions well proven (prameya), as they were composed by Ananda-tirtha (Sri Madhvâchârya).

नित्यं निवसतु इत्ये चैतन्यास्मा मुरारि नः । निरवचोर्निइतिमान् गजपतिरनुकम्पया यस्य ॥

Let MURARI whose self (âtman) is intelligence (CHAITAN-YA) ever dwell in our heart: through whose grace the Lord of elephants (GAJAPATI) became free from faults and full of happiness.

इति प्रमेयरकावकी पृत्तिमगात्।

Here ends Prameya Ratnávali.

Note.—The last verse has double meaning: it refers to Gajapati which is the name of the poet called Gopala Das, as well as the king of Orista called Pratapa Rudra. Gajapati also refers to the elephant attacked by the alligator and saved by Hari. There is play also on the word Chaitanya
